CANAL IS FAULTY.

Expert Avows Plans Are Wrong.

He Says Gatun Dam in Panama Ditch Cannot Be Built as Designed.

Thinks Clay Rock Will Stop Dredges and Jelly-like Silt Is Fatal.

Criticises Locks as Inadequate and System as Unfair and Tyrannical.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lindon Wallace Bates, who surveyed the Northern Pacific and Oregon Pacific, built the mammoth steam dredge "Beta" for the United States government, assisted in the enlargement of the Suez Canal, and is contracting engineer for the Galveston Raising Works, declares that the great Gatun dam in Panama cannot be built as designed.

He says the clay rock cannot be excavated with dredges as proposed; that estimates on the character of rock are mere guess work, being based on only four borings, and that the use of jelly-like silt from Simon Bay in dam construction will be fatal.

The locks, he says, are too small for even its needs.

He describes the contracting system as unfair and tyrannical, and says that it paves the way to wholesale stealing of the nation's funds.

PROPOSES NEW SCHEME.

He closes his argument as follows:

"A low impounding structure and lock at Mindi are easily possible and cheap. If constructed, they will enable the head on the Gatun dam to be reduced from eighty-five feet to twenty-nine feet, one isolated lock can be substituted for the perilous three, a most unique, commodious and splendid harbor can be constructed here, with fresh water within and salt water without, and a healthy site for a new city on American soil will be furnished.

"Ten million dollars will be saved by elimination of excavation due to diminishing the dam volume and cutting off the extra masonry needed to prop the lock flight.

"Can the commission summon the needed courage? De Lesseps once stood at the parting of the ways."

ITALY ASKS TO REDUCE TARIFF.

PROPOSES RECIPROCAL PLAN TO BEAR AND EAGLE.

Uncle Sam Scans Proposition to Open Way for Petroleum, but Decides That He Would Get Worst of Three-sided Bargain and Refuses Roman Overtures.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Italy has notified Russia and America of a proposed reduction of duty on petroleum, conditional on the corelative reduction of duties on the chief Italian imports to the two countries.

Russia unhesitatingly accepted Italy's terms, but America refused, suspecting that the reduction was solely for the benefit of Russia. Moreover, America, owing to the most favored nation clause in her treaty, is enabled to claim the same treatment as Russia independent of other agreements.

The reduction scheme is delayed while the claim that it benefits Russia exclusively is being considered.

CITIZENS SEIZE COAL.

Marching in Body They Take and Distribute Fuel, Then Compel Agent to Accept Payment.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUTTE (Mont.) Dec. 8.—A Miner special from Billings states that a squad of citizens this afternoon forcibly seized a carload of coal and distributed it in one-ton lots. In a body the squad then proceeded to the offices of the coal company and compelled the agent to receipt for the payment of the fuel. An alarming shortage of coal exists here and unless relief is soon forthcoming, other cars reaching this city are in danger of confiscation.

PURCHASES "FREE PRESS."

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—Control of the Detroit Free Press was purchased today by P. H. McMillan, Ed. Stair and H. Stephens of this city. Mr. McMillan is the youngest son of the late United States Senator James M. McMillan, and brother of W. C. McMillan, one of the leading Republican candidates for United States Senator.

ITALIAN ATTEMPTS FLIGHT.

With His Long-tailed Bird He Believes Problem of Aerial Navigation Is Solved.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ROME, Dec. 8.—Count Almerigo of Schio, who, since 1874, has been experimenting with airships, believes he has found the solution of aerial navigation. His new machine, which is in the shape of a ship, contains a fifty horse-power motor and a rudder ten yards square.

Besides this there is a kind of tail about thirty-five yards square, which may be used as a rudder, and at the end of this an arrow to keep the ship in balance. This airship, it is said, can remain in the air for five hours without recharging, attain a height of 3000 feet and a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. Experiments will soon be made with the machine.

ELECTION WAS A CRUSHER.

DEFEAT OF WILSON DISMAYS WALKING DELEGATES.

Francis Drake Has Gone to Oakland to Work for a Living—Declares That Is Will Take Labor Unionism Five Years to Recover from Wilson's Candidacy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Walking Delegate Francis Drake, erstwhile coworker with Tom Fennessy and Arthur Hay in Los Angeles, has arrived here, and says he has shaken the dust of Los Angeles off his feet for aye. He is disgusted with the defeat of Wilson. He really thought Wilson would be elected Mayor. He and many other labor union demagogues staked all their hopes on it. He will now go to work in Oakland. He says that Arthur Hay, financial agent of the International Typographical Union, will soon lose his job and will have no more money to spend, the I.T.U. being disgruntled at his administration of the "Times-Fighting Fund" without results. He adds that Hay threw his last throw in the Wilson fight, and lost. "It will be five years," said Drake today, "before unionism in Los Angeles will recover from the effects of the blow that Wilson's defeat gave the cause. I don't believe now that Los Angeles will ever be a labor union town. The city has gone to the bad. There is no chance for the unions there. The people are against them."

[The discouragement spoken of by Francis Drake, who has been the chief pillar of the Los Angeles Typographical Union, is general in union circles in this city. The typographical fanatics actually thought that Wilson would be elected. They had a barrel of money to spend—the annual assessment of the International Typographical Union to keep up the Los Angeles fight against The Times amounting to $25,000. Instead of devoting this money to "fighting The Times," the local financiers of the union have been spending it for booze, investing it in real estate for themselves and blowing it in for such idle purposes as the election expenses of Stanley Wilson. The rank and file of the typographical union are waking up. They are generally hard-working and honest men, who have been duped by such leaders and booze-fighters as Arthur Hay. They are pressing these squanderers of their hard-earned money for an accounting, and the exposures will disrupt the typographical union's camp. Drake is the first of the group of bloodsuckers to see the handwriting on the wall and several others have accompanied him in voluntary exile. It was a fortunate thing for Los Angeles that the rout of the Wilsonites in last Tuesday's election was so decisive.]

HEAVY DEFICIT IN NEW YORK.

IS $6,702,175 BELOW THE LEGAL REQUIREMENT.

Bank Statement Reveals Largest Shortage in Thirteen Years—Wall Street Hopeful Some Action Will Be Taken by Secretary of the Treasury—Slight Drop in Stocks.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The heaviest deficit below the legal requirement in the legal reserve of the associated banks of this city in thirteen years was disclosed by today's bank statement, the deficit amounting to $6,702,175, as against a surplus of $1,449,300 one week ago.

While it is not unusual for the bank statement to show that the banks hold less than the law requires them to keep in reserve, it is quite unusual for the deficit to be so large.

The largest previous deficit was on August 12, 1893, when the reserves were $16,500,000 short of the legal requirement.

That Wall street is hopeful that some action will be taken by the Secretary of the Treasury to relieve the money market was indicated by the movement of the stock market after the publication of the bank statement. Instead of a slump in stocks there was only a slight drop, which was checked in a few minutes.

The scarcity in money is attributed to several causes. There has been a steady drain to the West on account of crop movements, heavy dividends have been declared this month and unusually heavy speculation in mining stocks has helped to pump the banks dry.

FEAR FOR STEAMERS.

EX-SENATOR BROWN SHOT BY A WOMAN.

Prominent Utah Man Lying in a Critical Condition.

Assailant Follows Him to Washington City, Where She Shoots Him Down in His Apartments at the Hotel Raleigh—Claims He Was the Father of Her Two Children—Would-be Murderess Shows Little Concern.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SALT LAKE, (Utah) Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arthur Brown, shot in Washington today by Mrs. Anna Maddison Bradley, was one of the most brilliant members of the Western bar. Women and drink were his undoing.

Brown fell in love with Isabel Cameron, a niece of former Senator Don Cameron of Pennsylvania, who was clerk in a news stand in the Kalamazoo postoffice. This caused a domestic tempest, and the first Mrs. Brown went to his office and there attempted to kill him with a revolver. The bullet grazed him.

Brown came to Utah in 1876. Miss Cameron came here soon after. Mrs. Brown finally secured a divorce, with maintenance. Brown then married Miss Cameron, and they have a son, "Mac," who was a student last year at the University of Chicago, and whose marriage with a telephone girl there attracted some attention.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Former United States Senator Arthur Brown of Utah tonight lies in a critical condition in the Emergency Hospital with a pistol shot wound in the abdomen, inflicted by Mrs. Anna M. Bradley of Salt Lake, who arrived here today from that city.

The shooting occurred in Senator Brown's apartment in the Raleigh Hotel, where Mrs. Bradley also had registered under the name of "A. B. Brown." She was arrested.

Senator Brown was conveyed to the hospital, where he was immediately put upon the operating table. Two shots were fired, one grazing his left hand and the other entering the abdomen and lodging in the pelvic cavity.

After working over him for nearly two hours, the surgeons decided that, for the present at least, they would make no further attempt to find the bullet. It was stated tonight that while Senator Brown's condition is critical, there is reason to believe he may recover.

STORY OF SHOOTING.

Mrs. Bradley arrived shortly after noon. After being assigned to a room she immediately went to Senator Brown's apartment. There were no witnesses to the shooting, but a maid heard the shots and at once notified the management.

According to her statement tonight at the Police Station, where she talked freely with the newspaper men, Mrs. Bradley came to Washington to demand that Senator Brown marry her. She said that their relations were well known in Salt Lake.

"I asked him if he was going to do the right thing by me," she said, maintaining remarkable composure.

"In reply he put on his overcoat and started to leave the room, and I shot him. I abhor acts of this character, but in this case it was fully justified."

EXPRESSES NO SORROW.

While expressing no sorrow for her act, she declared that she was glad to know that Senator Brown might recover.

"I was practically penniless when I got here today," she said, "having only $1.25, and after paying the cabman all the money I had in the world was $1."

SISTER IN SALT LAKE.

She said she urged Senator Brown to marry her, that he had been instrumental in the divorce between her husband and herself, and that as his wife was dead he could do the "right thing" by her. This, she said, he refused to do.

Mrs. Bradley is a brunette, about 38 years old and frail. Her first act after being taken to the Police Station was to send for Senator Sutherland of Utah, who called on her tonight and had a long talk with her.

Senator Sutherland regretted being brought into the case, but said that Mrs. Bradley had sent for him because he was the only man here whom she knew. To him she unburdened herself and told the story of her relations with Senator Brown. She alleged that two of her children owe their parentage to Senator Brown, and that she had named one of them after him. Mrs. Bradley was reluctant to speak of her former husband, but questioning brought out the fact that he was living in Nevada with a second wife, by whom he has several children. Further questioning disclosed the fact that Mrs. Bradley for two years, from 1900 to 1902, had served as secretary to the State Republican Committee, and also at one time was editor of the official organ of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

She declared that she had a sister in the newspaper business in Salt Lake, but that she would not communicate with members of her family because she knew that they would come to her assistance. Up to a late hour tonight she had not obtained counsel.

Manager Theodore J. Talty of the Raleigh was notified of the shooting within two or three minutes after it occurred, and hurried to Senator Brown's room. He found Brown fully dressed, lying on the floor in the center of the room. Mrs. Bradley was standing near the dresser. She was attired in street costume, including her hat. One of her hands was gloved. Senator Brown, as Mr. Talty stooped over him to inquire what the matter was, feebly indicated Mrs. Bradley and remarked calmly "She shot me."

A hurried examination of the wounded man was made by Mr. Talty. In opening the coat and waistcoat, he discovered that a bullet had penetrated the abdomen. He sent for some brandy and poured it down Senator Brown's throat. The wounded man was growing rapidly weaker, and Mr. Talty directed a servant to summon the Emergency Hospital ambulance.

VICTIM IS CONSCIOUS.

Senator Brown, despite the shock of the wound, retained consciousness. He made no statement to Mr. Talty beyond the one indicating that he had been shot by Mrs. Bradley.

The woman continued in the room while Talty was attending to Senator Brown, but offered no assistance. Finally Mr. Talty ordered her to leave the room. She declined with absolute coolness.

"I will remain here," she said. "I am the mother of his two children."

Mr. Talty was too busy administering to Senator Brown to attempt to enforce his order, but in glancing about the room he discovered a revolver lying on the bureau. He put it into his pocket and later turned it over to the police. It was a 32-caliber weapon.

When arrested Mrs. Bradley made no resistance. She was asked for a statement of the incident, but referred all those who inquired to Senator Sutherland of Utah.

SEND FOR CHILDREN.

Late tonight M. S. Gunn of Helena, Mont, who came here with former Senator Brown, telegraphed Miss Alice G. Brown, a daughter, who is in Columbus, O., and Arthur Brown, Jr., a son, who is a student at Chicago University, to come to Washington at once. At midnight Senator Brown's condition was unchanged.

GRIDIRON CLUB HAS A HIGH-TIDE BANQUET.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—With the President and Vice-President of the United States, the Ambassadors from Italy, Great Britain, Russia and Japan, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Senators, Representatives in Congress, and many of the great captains of industry present, the twenty-third annual dinner of the Gridiron Club tonight at the New Willard marked the high tide of the club's achievements.

Satire, burlesque and straight comedy were the dominating notes in the most successful dinner this famous club of Washington correspondents has ever given.

There were sharp contrasts, the tribute to dead members of the club abutting closely upon a burlesque Cuban revolution and an examplification of what happens in the "lawn tennis cabinet," which meets with the President every day, Sundays excepted.

In the Cuban burlesque, a member of the club impersonated Gov. Magoon of Cuba. Sitting on a red-hot stove, he "held down the lid," while the club selected a cabinet for him composed of the "tame ducks," gentlemen who failed of election in November and club members impersonating William Randolph Hearst, who was nominated for Governor of the island; Babcock, Moody, McCleary and Gen. Grosvenor.

Moody was selected for the place of "trust buster or trust matador," the Cuban revolutionists insisting that he was not a "trust matador," but a "picador," the difference being that a matador kills, while the picador only teases.

Probably the strongest feature of the dinner was the gridiron "simple speller and dictionary," which was issued in the form of a booklet of some forty pages containing quaint spellings and cuts illustrating the definitions.

The initiation of two new members gave an opportunity for a quiet dig at the War Department for the discharge of three colored companies of the Twenty-fifth Infantry at Brownsville, Tex.

Among the guests were Secretaries Hitchcock, Shaw, Taft and Wilson, and United States Senators Aldrich, Blackburn, Crane, Foraker, Heyburn, Kittredge, Scott, Spooner and Tillman; Representatives Babcock, Dawes, Esch, Gill, Grosvenor, Littauer, Loudenslager, Lowden, McCleary, Parsons, Sherman, Sullivan Towne and Weeks; Assistant Secretary of State Bacon, John Barrett, Minister to Colombo; Oscar S. Strauss, New York; Lieut.-Gen. Corbin, Charles G. Dawes, Chicago; Stuyvesant Fish, New York; David R. Francis, St. Louis; James R. Garfield, John W. Gates, New York; Perry Bemont, New York; John H. Edwards, Edward H. Harriman, William Loeb, Jr., secretary to the President; Willis L. Moore, chief of the Weather Bureau; Paul Morton, New York; Albert Shaw, Review of Reviews, New York; W. D. Purdy, Assistant Attorney General; Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission; H. St. George Tucker, president of the Jamestown Exposition; Frank A. Vanderlip, New York, and Timothy L. Woodruff, New York.

Samuel G. Blythe of the New York World was elected president; Charles A. Boynton of the Associated Press was elected chairman of the Executive Committee.

ST. PAUL BUILDS TO SLOPE AT SEATTLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The first official announcement of the route to be taken by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad in its extension to the Pacific Coast was made today. It has been known that this was the purpose of a recent large bond issue and that the plan had been under contemplation for a long period, but today's announcement makes the fact of the extension a certainty.

The long addition to the line of the present system starts at Glenham, S. D., and runs a winding course through the States of Montana, Idaho and Washington, terminating at Seattle.

Grading already has been completed and track laid from Glenham to a point about twenty-six miles west of the Missouri River, the crossing being made on a temporary pile bridge.

It is expected that the construction work will be completed to Butte, Mont., by January 1, 1908, and to the Coast a year later.

From Glenham to Butte the line runs almost directly west, but from Butte the route takes a northwestern course to St. Regis, Idaho, where the westerly direction is resumed.

At the Columbia River the line begins a parallel course with the Northern Pacific to Seattle and Tacoma.

The bridge work necessary for the construction of the new line is one of its most important features. The Columbia River will be crossed by a bridge of fifteen spans, having a total length of 2750 feet, exclusive of the steel trestle approaches, 1000 feet in length at each end.

The passage through the Bitter Root Mountain range, west of Saltese, Mont., is made by means of a tunnel 8500 feet in length.

JAPANESE PUT EUROPE ON PINS.

CONTINENT WORRIED BY MIKADO'S MILITARY PLANS.

Even London Adds to the Scare in Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg by Publishing That Lloyd's Is Not Insuring Against Another War With Russia Next Year.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Japan is the "bete noir" of continental Europe. However just or unjust it may be, widespread distrust in Japan exists, and Roosevelt's glowing eulogy of the Japanese nation and his story is not appreciated outside of London. Everywhere else the ambitions of the Mikado are subjects of suspicious comment.

Berlin, St. Petersburg and Paris are the principal centers of this feeling, but London has given some excuse for it in an announcement by English papers that Lloyds underwriters are not insuring against war between Japan and Russia next year, and are asking a very high rate, five guineas per centum.

What has especially impressed the capitals of the continent is the news of the extraordinary military activity in Japan, where the war ministry is planning a field force of 750,000 men, and there are well-founded reports of the drilling of Chinese troops in Manchuria by Japanese officers on a wide scale.

WANTS TO BUY LONDON "TIMES."

Proprietor of Penny Paper Hopes to Secure Shares When "Thunderer" Changes Stock Basis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An application made in the Court of Chancery yesterday to enable the London Times to be converted into a limited liability company appears to have been done purely for business reasons. The Times has for some years been a private company, but if it is to be converted into a limited liability company, the conduct of its affairs and the transfer of shares, when they are sold or bequeathed will be made easier and simpler.

The change, however, opens up another possibility. It is pretty well known that the proprietor of one of the leading half-penny papers in London, has long been anxious to acquire the Times. He has found it impossible heretofore to buy the interests of the existing proprietors, but if the shares of the Times go into the market in the ordinary way, it is quite possible that he may be able to accomplish his object, though it is stipulated in the articles in the new company that Arthur Walker is to remain sole director.

Japanese-American agreement now pending are:

United States to have school questions decided in courts.

It is expected this decision will be against Japan, but it is advisable to obtain decision.

Japan consents to see that immigration laws are more strictly observed.

Japan will at proper time take such steps as necessary to discourage immigration across Pacific.

The United States will continue to discourage discrimination against Japanese in line with the President's message.

The administration is impressed by the situation in Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At last there seems to be an explanation of the confusion surrounding the adjustment of the diplomatic difficulties with Japan, caused by the segregation of Japanese pupils in the San Francisco schools.

It is learned today that an understanding has been reached with Japan, but that it is not in the form of a treaty and will not take that form. This information comes from credible Japanese sources.

The United States government has undertaken to obtain from the courts a construction of the treaty of 1894 upon the Japanese contention for educational facilities with, and among American pupils.

Japan will take administrative steps to restrict labor immigration to the United States. Viscount Aoki has conveyed to President Roosevelt assurances of Japan's willingness to pursue this policy. What form the restriction will take is not yet made known here.

It is believed that the decision of the school question will be against Japan, but what the decision is it will be arrived at after a full hearing.

CONFESS THEIR SINS PUBLICLY.

ERRING COUPLE PROMISE TO LIVE DOWN FAULTS.

Church Worker and Young Woman Who Do Wrong Make Public Avowal of Their Fall Before Deacons and Accept Punishment of Expulsion.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOULDER (Colo.) Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. William J. Baird, prominent physician, Y.M.C.A. worker and Baptist church member confessed last night to the deacons of the church and many members, his immoral relations with Miss Jessie Cherry, after she had confessed her sins to the deacons.

Both were expelled. Baird is a divorced man, but will not tell the cause of the separation.

Recently Miss Cherry said she must ease her conscience by confessing her sin. He approved her course, and agreed to do the same. Both say they will remain here, and live down the scandal.

HASTENS MAIL SERVICE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The management of the Rock Island will try to induce the government to save about $100,000 in transfer of transcontinental mails at Chicago.

With this end in view, the Rock Island will put a new train into service next Sunday, which will be purely a mail train, and which will leave Chicago at 8:10 p.m., and arrive in Omaha at 7:30 a.m.

This train will make connection with the Pennsylvania and Lake Shore's heaviest mail trains at Englewood.

GREATER AND GREATER YET.

This issue of The Sunday Times is the monarch—the largest in volume and containing the most advertising of any regular edition ever published by The Times. It consists of 152 pages, including about 580 columns of advertising. It is the biggest newspaper, with the most advertising printed in the wide world. The circulation of The Times is steadily climbing and the issue for today is about six thousand copies above the corresponding Sunday of 1905. The circulation of no one of its local contemporaries approaches it; and this one issue contains 50 per cent. more advertising than either of the evening papers in Los Angeles ever published in a whole week and double the amount printed by either of its morning competitors. Such surpassing prosperity and popularity account for the attacks on The Times and its owners by certain green-eyed, small-bore sheets, morning, evening and weekly.

CITRUS SHOW BIG SUCCESS.

Fine Exhibits Noted at the Tulare County Fair.

Orange Belt There Like the San Gabriel Valley.

Some of It Is a Reminder of Rubidoux Canyon.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The initial annual Tulare Countyq Citrus Fair closed here tonight, crowned with success. In the quality and extent of its exhibits of citrus fruits, in the geographical distribution over the thermal belt of the county, and in the faith it inspired in the future of the orange and the lemon north of the Tehachepi Mountains, it again clearly emphasized the great diversity of climates and soils which prevail in the various parts of California.

Coming into the citrus-growing sections of this county via Visalia, the visitor from Southern California is strongly reminded of portions of the San Gabriel Valley and the country in which the Riverside and Redlands citrus belts find their highest perfection, by reason of a great similarity in climate, contour of the landscape, and the character of the soil. Here stretches a bit of hillside reminding one of Rubidoux Cañon; there a view of gentle sloping hillside suggestive of the country back of Ontario, and again an orchard scene bringing to mind the groves of the upper San Gabriel Valley. For the most part, the soil is a heavy sandy loam in the valleys running to a dry bog to the higher elevations.

The growth and development of the trees has demonstrated its adaptability to the orange. The water supply is ample, and secured either by pumping or by diverting the flow of the mountain streams from the Sierra Nevadas. As yet the trees are free from insect pest, and the fruit of high average quality. The acreage at present in bearing is about 3000 acres, and the total acreage now out is something like 8000. The total output of fruit this season was 2000 cars. The elevation is much lower than that of the groves of the south, the average being about 400 to 1000 feet, while in Southern California the best fruit is produced at elevations from 700 to 1800 feet. Among citrus experts the opinion is expressed that the thermal belts of Central California are not only an unknown quantity, but of great extent.

UNIFORMITY OF FRUIT.

The one pronounced feature of this citrus exhibit that impresses the optimistic grower from the south, is the uniform quality of the fruit. For the most part it all averages high. The oranges are of good size, heavy, smooth-skinned, of good flavor, unusually juicy, and free from insect pests. The same applies to the quality in lemons, limes and pomelos. The exhibits of kid-glove varieties was rather meager, due to their being a little out of season; the same applies to Valencia lates, of which there is but quite an acreage.

In arrangement of fruit this exhibit followed closely on the lines of fairs held in the past in Los Angeles—a system that lends itself to spectacular and massive effects rather than to showing the best quality of the individual fruits. In decorative effect the exhibitor showed a commendable partialty to festooning and greenery, which was greatly enhanced by a judicious use of the electric light and here and there a bit of color effect with bunting. As a whole, the effect was strongly suggestive of one of the old-time citrus fairs in Los Angeles, Riverside, and other points. There was also a goodly showing of deciduous fruits (not in competition,) striking features of which were apples, persimmons, pomegranates, etc.

LIST OF WINNERS.

The report of the Committee of Awards, as made by the judges today, says:

For the best display of citrus fruits from any locality in Tulare county:

First to Porterville.

Second to Lemon Cove.

Third to Exeter.

Highly recommended, Worth.

Very highly commended, Piano.

Reserve, Tule River district and Globe.

Grand special for artistic display, Lindsay.

In making these awards, we have been governed by the following con-Worth were indeed reflective of all that is best in an enlightened citrus culture, and are to be highly commended.

The most strikingly individual display both in conception and execution was that of Lindsay, which made of it an effort worthy of special mention from an artistic point of view, hence we recommend that this exhibit be awarded a special premium by your honorable body for originality and striking effect. It was not only unique and individual, but the varieties it showed, together with quality, combined to make it an attraction worthy of special mention.

For best display of citrus fruits by any one grower in Tulare county:

First, H. M. Hathaway.

Second, N. H. Grant.

Third, C. Talbot.

For the best display of oranges, all varieties, by one grower in Tulare county. No entries.

For best display of lemons, all varieties, by any one grower in Tulare county:

siderations, given in their numerical importance and alloting to each count a scale of twenty points:

1. Quality of fruit.
2. Number of varieties.
3. Fruit arrangement.
4. Decorations consisting of festooning and greenery.
5. Decorations other than greenery.

We are prone to believe that this plan awarded the honors where they really belong, and reflects in the broadest sense the judgment of all who are familiar with the economic importance of good citrus fruits to the State of California. In this connection, however, we desire to call attention to the fact that the exhibits, considering the season, were of uniform high quality, and that the dividing line between the several awards did not vary more than a few points. LIVESTOCK, TOO.

There was also held in conjunction with the citrus fair in an adjoining building an exhibition of general livestock and poultry, which contained some notable features. Two herds of cattle, one of Holsteins and one of Herefords, were especially strong. The showing of saddle and driving horses, French coach, Percheron and Belgium breeds was quite as strong as anything usually gathered in the South. The street parade of thoroughbred stock called out a large number of spectators from the surrounding towns.

The poultry exhibit was strongest in the American and Mediterranean classes, the predominating breeds being the Plymouth Rocks and Leghorns. The English and Asiatic classes came next, with a fair sprinkling of other breeds. Something like a dozen bronze turkeys and a few varieties of ducks and pigeons comprised the salient features of the poultry exhibition.

CONFISCATING CARS OF COAL.

RAILROADS SEIZE IT IN ORDER TO RUN TRAINS.

Fuel Famine in North Dakota Is Assuming Serious Proportions. Law Permits Common Carriers to Take It Wherever Found—Trains May Be Abandoned.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MINOT (N. D.) Dec. 8.—The fuel famine in Northwestern North Dakota has assumed serious proportions. The transcontinental lines passing through Minot are compelled to confiscate coal held by local dealers in order to keep trains running. The Great Northern today confiscated several cars.

Under the law the common carrier has a right to take the coal wherever he can get it by making proper compensation.

It is said that several stations between Minot and Williston have scarcely enough coal to keep the passenger trains running and the result is that some of the trains are likely to be abandoned. The Soo road is experiencing the same difficulty.

ONEI RUNS ASHORE.

GRAND MORAIS (Mich.) Dec. 8.—The passenger steamer Onei of Port Huron, Mich., belonging to the Northern Navigation Company, ran ashore today on Lake Superior during a storm, one mile and a half from White Fish Point. Wrecking tugs have been sent to her assistance from Sault Sainte Marie.

RIVER TUBE COMPLETE.

Manhattan and Brooklyn Now Connected by Sub-River Tunnel.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Manhattan and Brooklyn boroughs were connected under the East River today by the piercing of the last section which separated the ends of the north tube of the tunnel of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit extension, 75 feet beneath the surface of the river.

The East River tunnel extends from the Battery to Joralmon street, Brooklyn. It will form part of the subway rapid transit system from Kings Bridge to Brooklyn. Electric cars of the Long Island Railroad will also run through the tunnel.

CHURCH AND STATE PART.

Acute Religious Crisis Now Facing Paris.

Placards Posted Urge Catholic Resistance.

Pope's Decision Complicates Affairs Gravely.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Three days hence the church and state separation law will go into effect in Paris, and on December 12 and 13, it will be discussed in the various departments, according to the time when copies of the official journal containing the notice of the promulgation of the law reach them.

The government is facing the situation with calmness, but the prospect of an acute religious crisis has suddenly been increased by what appears to be an authoritative announcement made by the Croix, the clerical organ, that word has just arrived from Rome that the Pope absolutely forbids Catholics, bishops, cures or parishioners to make application to hold religious services under the public meeting law of 1881, as proposed by the government. The Croix stated that this interdicts the single annual application which Minister of Public Works Briand had announced as sufficient.

The Journal des Debats says the Pope used these words:

"I am like the father of a family—I cannot permit outsiders to enter my house and regulate the interests of my children without consulting me."

If such is the final decision of the Vatican the situation will be greatly complicated, as it is likely to be interpreted by the clericals as a final summons not to yield an inch, and also may arouse violence by interperates who are also placarding Paris with appeals to the Catholics to resist.

The prefect of the Seine has posted notices throughout the city, informing all families that after December 11, they must apply to the mayors of their district for the funeral trapping used in the churches.

M. Briand has prohibited the collection of fees by cures for marriages or funerals.

GERMAN TAKES INTERNATIONAL.

WINS IN WHIRLWIND FINISH FROM CLOSE FIELD.

"Bobby" Walthour Beats French Champion in Ten-Mile Motor Contest While Serried Masses of Fans Yell Themselves Hoarse Over His Victory.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a margin so wide that there can remain no doubt as to superiority on a small track, "Bobby" Walthour, champion pace follower of the world, beat Paul Guignard, a Frenchman, and holder of the world's record of 59 miles, 30 yards in an hour, by six and one-half laps in a ten-mile motor-paced race in Madison Square Garden tonight. Twelve thousand fans packed into the big building, yelled themselves hoarse throughout the race, which came as a fitting climax to a card of five other whirlwind events.

Only second in interest to Walthour's victory was the astonishing result of the international ten-mile open, in which were entered twenty-four starters, in the six-day race which starts Monday morning at one minute past midnight.

At the start of the third lap from the finish, Rutt, who had been trailing in fourth position, suddenly jumped out from the pole and up on to the bank like a shot out of a gun. As if the other three were standing still, he sprinted away from them and opened up a gap of a quarter of a lap with ease.

Clark, the Australian, passed Root, who evidently was tired, and started after the flying German. Mettling was the last man. The four riders entered the last stretch and finished in that order. It is the first time since 1899 that a foreigner has won the annual professional race.

OFFICIALS SUBPOENAED.

Managers in Fourteen Standard Oil Companies Must Face Circuit Court in Missouri.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Dec. 8.—Officials of fourteen constituent companies of the Standard Oil Company in Pennsylvania have been subpoenaed to appear before the United States Circuit Court of Eastern Missouri on the first Monday of January in the proceedings instituted by the government against the Standard Oil Company, John D. Rockefeller and H. H. Rogers and seventy-three constituent companies.

FREIGHT BLOCKADE.

PORTLAND (Or.) Dec. 8.—The Oregonian says:

Serious congestion of freight in Portland terminals seems imminent. Over 1100 cars stand in the yards, while hundreds more are awaiting their turn to be unloaded.

These are lined up on sidings along the Northern Pacific tracks between Portland and Soble and in the East Side yards of the allied Harriman lines. Probably never before in the history of the city have the terminal companies' tracks been so blocked.

PITH OF NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Another cold wave was started for Chicago tonight from Medicine Hat that will send the temperature down to where it was yesterday, 10 deg. above zero, if not lower. Still another storm is coming from the Texas Panhandle that will bring snow. These are the conditions predicted for Chicago's Sunday and Monday weather. The cold wave of Friday drifted east and gave to Chicago a rising temperature today that reached 42 deg. maximum, in the afternoon. The minimum was 23 deg. BLACKMAILING HINTED.

If Dr. Benjamin Harris, who was shot five times Friday by A. C. Campbell of Antigo, Wis., in the Stock Exchange building, should recover, the story which will develop in the divorce suit of Campbell against his wife probably will be sufficiently sensational to convince Campbell of the entire innocence of Mrs. Campbell.

A dispatch from Antigo today hinted that the charges against Dr. Harris and Mrs. Campbell were due to blackmailers, and today's developments tend to prove the correctness of the dispatch.

When the Campbell divorce comes into court, there will be many sensations. It will be shown that a demand was made upon one of the Campbell family for a big sum of money—one report says $25,000—with the alternative of a public charge of immorality.

This effort to hold up the family was frustrated, and then in revenge for the failure to secure the fortune desired, the plot, resulting in the proceedings by Campbell, was hatched.

FEDERATION FUNDS "SHY."

The Federation of Labor, which countenanced the violence of the teamsters' strike and sought to paralyze the industries of Chicago, has again been forced to show its hand in the Shea case. If Shea and his confederates are to continue to have the benefit of advice of counsel, more funds must be immediately available. It remains for the Federation of Labor to supply these funds.

The sum originally devoted to this purpose is being rapidly exhausted. Counsel, it is understood, are now being paid by the day. Desperate shifts are being resorted to by the federation to swell the defense fund. At a recent meeting a special committee was appointed to solicit money to keep Shea and his confederates out of the penitentiary, if possible.

Meantime, evidence whose cumulative force is making its impression on the jury—evidence of petty graft, of violence, of contempt for law and order—is being piled up by the State.

SENSATIONS SPRUNG.

Sensations are piling up in advance of the divorce hearing next week of Dr. Jerome Egbert against his wife, Mrs. Marion Thornton Egbert, who came from Bombay to contest the case. Dr. Egbert today made public a letter written him by his wife while he was in India and she living at a Chicago hotel, describing luncheons and theater parties in which she figured with "Prof. John Manly of the University of Chicago;" Hon. James Powell, described as a former United States Senator, and a "Chicago politician who controls 20,000 votes." The implied flirtations caused Dr. Egbert's hasty return to America. At the University of Chicago tonight it was said that Prof. Manly had left the city temporarily.

MILLIONAIRE DIVORCED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SIOUX FALLS (S. D.) Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Alfred Dupont, millionaire and vice-president of the Dupont Powder Company, who has been a resident of Sioux Falls for the past eight months, was granted a divorce at Deadwood, December 5. He was granted an absolute divorce from his wife on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment.

STORM DOES MUCH DAMAGE.

TERRIFIC WINDS CRIPPLE ALL WIRE SERVICE.

British Columbia Railroads, Telegraph and Telephone Lines Completely Demoralized by Heavy Night Gales—Big Downpour of Rain Accompanies Hurricane.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Dec. 7.—Great damage was done by last night's storm in the interior and along the coast, according to meagre advices received from outside points.

On account of the fact that both of the telegraph and telephone systems are demoralized, it is impossible to secure accurate information, but it is believed that the loss will be large. The city of Vancouver weathered the storm almost without loss.

The Canadian Pacific's telegraph system is hard hit in the vicinity of Yale. It is reported that miles of wires are down along the track in the vicinity of that point. A severe sleet storm swept down the Great Cañon of the Fraser, and forced on by a rushing gale of wind, swept wires down like silk threads before the combined elements of destruction.

Early this morning all the linemen it was possible to secure were rushed to Yale, and they are at work in an endeavor to repair the wreck.

Nanaimo has been cut off from communication with the mainland. The submarine cable runs on the floor of the gulf from Vancouver to Departure Bay, a distance of three miles from Nanaimo, and as a general thing during storm troubles, it is possible to reach Nanaimo. However, on this occasion the wires between Departure Bay and Nanaimo were carried away. It is expected that they will be up some time this afternoon.

The British Columbia Telephone Company suffered to a considerable extent on its outside service, but W. H. Kent, superintendent, said that within the city very little damage had been reported. The wires to the south went down at Clover Valley, a point six miles this side of Blaine. This shut off all communication with Vancouver Island points as well as with Bellingham, Seattle and other points to the south.

KENTWOOD (La.) Dec. 8.—Bernard Day, a gambler and illicit whisky dealer, was shot and killed, and Town Marshal Clay Shaw of Kentwood was seriously wounded on the streets here today during a pistol battle following the attempt of the officer to arrest Day.

Marshal Shaw, after receiving a pistol bullet in the right leg, dropped to his knee and shot Day.

A society of church ladies were holding a meeting in a building near by at the time and stray bullets grazed several of the women.

Day eloped two days ago with Miss Bertha Hurst, a prominent young lady.

STRENGTH COMES

Not From What You Eat, But From What You Digest.

Most people eat most foods without discrimination—it matters little what. Few stop to think what that food does for them. This is the first turn on the road to dyspepsia. Reckless disregard of the proper choice of foods, rapid eating and improper mastication, are the unquestioned causes of all stomach disorders from the slight ache to the malignant cancer.

There is nothing more revolting than a dyspeptic stomach—a very vat for putrefaction, sending forth its poison throughout the entire system, depressing the brain, befouling the breath, souring the taste, deadening the muscles, incapacitating the liver and kidneys for their work, debilitating the heart, choking the lungs and clogging the bowels.

All of these disagreeable and dangerous conditions are due to the improper digestion of food and the consequent assimilation of poison. What else can be expected? If the food lies in the stomach, if the system is constipated, fermentation is the natural outcome. It shows itself in sour watery risings, belchings, heartburn and painful breathing.

There is only one way to relieve this condition. If the stomach refuses to digest your food put something into it that will. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing but digestives. They are not a medicine. They work when the stomach will not.

Each tablet contains enough pepsin, diastase, golden seal and other digestive elements to reduce 3000 grains of ordinary food to the proper consistency for assimilation into the blood.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are absolutely pure. There is nothing harmful in them as shown in their endorsement by 4000 physicians in the United States and Canada.

Ask your family physician his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and if he is honest toward you he will state positively that they will cure your stomach trouble whatever it may be, unless you have waited too long and have allowed your disorder to develop into cancer.

Act today and begin to end your suffering. A free trial package will be sent to your address upon request. The 50 cent size packages are for sale at your druggist's. F. A. Stuart Co., 67 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

CUTS THROAT OF A SINGER.

Former Tivoli Opera Woman Is the Victim.

Attacked in Her Room by a Man Named Slattey.

Injuries Serious, and May Prove Fatal.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Z. Mogan, a former member of the Tivoli opera chorus, was attacked tonight in her room at No. 611 Buchanan street, and her throat so seriously slashed that she will die. Before relapsing into unconsciousness she stated that she was attacked by a man named Slattey, who had entered the room through a window while she was asleep.

WOULD-BE ROBBER CAUGHT.

WAS DISAPPOINTED AUTHOR.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

GREAT BEND (Kan.) Dec. 8.—After a daring attempt here at 9 o'clock this morning to rob the J. V. Brinkman Company Bank, single-handed, a man who gave his name as George A. Lewis of Kansas City, was surrounded and surrendered. Bud Westfall, a driver for the Wells Fargo Express Company was killed by a shot fired by one of the pursuers.

Lewis walked into the bank a few minutes after it opened its doors and, pointing a revolver at A. E. Taylor, cashier, ordered the latter to throw up his hands. In an instant a clerk dodged into the vault and set off the burglar alarm. Lewis fled immediately and darted up an alley into the Wells Fargo buildings, two blocks from the bank. On the second floor he locked himself in a room for an hour and defied arrest. Several shots were fired into the room in an attempt to dislodge the robber. One bullet struck and killed Driver Westfall, who was in the express office on the street floor.

The robber is 20 years old, weighs 160 pounds and is six feet tall. He has light hair and blue eyes, and is well dressed. He admitted that he had not given his correct name. He said he had made contributions to eastern magazines and papers, but his matter had been rejected, and he had become disheartened. He cried when he told his story.

GIVE BONDS TO APPEAR.

INDICTED MEN MISSING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SALT LAKE, Dec. 8.—Everett Buckingham, general superintendent of the Oregon Short Line Railroad; J. M. Moore, general agent in Salt Lake of the Union Pacific Coal Company, who were indicted yesterday, charged with illegal discrimination against a local coal company, and H. G. Williams, general manager of the Utah Fuel Company, who was charged in an indictment with conspiracy to defraud the Federal government of valuable coal lands, appeared before United States Commissioner Charles Baldwin just before noon today and gave bonds for their appearance in the Federal District Court before Justice John A. Marshall on April 8.

W. C. McCornick, president of the banking house of McCornick & Co., and L. S. Hill, president of the Deseret National Bank, qualified on the bond of $3000 required of Buckingham. Employés of the Utah Fuel Company qualified on Williams's bond for a similar amount.

It was stated that arrangements had been made for the Utah Surety Company to make acknowledgment in Denver and qualify on the bonds of Elroy N. Clark, the Utah Fuel Company's attorney in Denver, and George A. Woode, the company's Denver agent. In this manner they will be relieved of the necessity of surrendering to the United States Marshal in Salt Lake City.

Robert Forrester, geologist of the Utah Fuel Company, and W. D. Foster, Forrester's secretary, have not been located by the United States Marshal. Both have been absent from this city for several days. Both are included in the indictment charging conspiracy to defraud.

LABOR.

CALL TROOPS TO BE READY.

Gov. Elrod Prepares for Big Threatened Strike.

Two Thousand Hearst Employees Involved.

Railroad Tie-up Feared by Pittsburgh Officials.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Anticipating the strike of 8000 miners as a result of the immense mass meeting at Leed, S. D., tomorrow, Gov. Elrod of that State has instructed Adjt.-Gen. Englesby to get troops in readiness for mobilization.

Thus far the miners, headed by the 2000 employés of the Hearst Homestake property, have, in their demand for an eight-hour day, and full recognition of the union, conducted their conferences with calmness.

A big element throughout the Black Hills, however, is insisting on forcing the issue. The instructions to hold troops in readiness has created a sensation. Mine operators have been heard several times, through their spokesman, Superintendent Grier of the Homestake, who has urged the inadvisability of unionizing all mines.

Two military companies are located in the Black Hills, but they are considered insufficient to police the extensive districts should a strike ensue.

GENERAL STRIKE FEARED.

DISPUTE BECOMES CRITICAL.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8.—The dispute between the local officials of the railroads centering in Pittsburgh and their employés over the scale for yard men has arrived at a critical stage, and unless a settlement is reached within a day or so, fears are entertained of a general strike in the district.

Negotiations with the Baltimore and Ohio are already off and much depends upon meetings arranged for the general managers of the Pennsylvania and Wabash lines. If these two companies take a stand similar to that of the Baltimore and Ohio, all yard men in the Pittsburgh district will likely be called out on strike.

PICKET TELLS CRIMES.

SOME UNION "PREVENTION."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Michael Murphy, one of the pickets during the teamsters' strike, was on the stand in the Shea trial today. He testified that while he was acting as a picket at the plant of the Schultse box factory, Jeremiah McCarthy, business agent of the Truck Drivers' Union, drove up and told him to prevent all wagons from leaving the factory with any goods.

In compliance to this order he prevented the wagons of the Schultse company from delivering any paper boxes to the shoe house of Selz, Schwab & Co., because the latter's men were on a strike. The witness was told of preventing the delivery of coal to the Union Traction Company, and added that he, with other pickets, whom he mentioned by name, tied wires across the street in front of the Hobbie-street power-house so that teams could not pass. Witness added: "We also ran a car down the street and took off the brake, so that it could not be moved. Then we placed bricks in the center of the street, so that the wagons could not pass. About this time we were driven off by the police."

GRANT MIDDLE SCALE.

WAGE DISPUTES ENDING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8.—"All indications point to the settlement of the wage disputes in the Pittsburgh switching district," said W. G. Lee, Vice-Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, this afternoon, after a long conference with George L. Peck, general manager of the Pennsylvania lines, west.

"Our conference," said Lee, "has resulted in the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Pennsylvania lines, west, granting the 'middle scale,' which is 1 cent less than the Chicago scale of wages. I received official information that the Baltimore and Ohio had receded from the stand taken at their conference yesterday, and had decided to grant the 'middle scale.' We have notices from the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad that they have also decided to grant the same scale."

OFFER IS REJECTED.

WANT LARGER RAISE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) Dec. 8.—The offer of the New Bedford cotton manufacturers to increase wages 7½ per cent. was rejected tonight by the Textile Council. Acting under the recommendations of the various unions represented at the council that body voted to insist that wages be raised 10 per cent. Another conference will be held Monday.

LABOR BRIEFS.

Mayor Beaten by Thug.

COLUMBUS (O.) Dec. 8.—Presumably because of the stern measures taken by Mayor Badger to repress the labor riots growing out of the strike of the iron molders here several months ago, the Mayor was assaulted today in the Courthouse by Charles Miller, chairman of the strike committee. Mayor Badger was badly, though not seriously, injured.

Supreme Court to Decide.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—The Supreme Court of the United States will be asked to pass on the constitutionality of the eight-hour labor law. The first action to that end was taken in the United States District Court here today. The case was that of the Sheridan Kirk Company, recently convicted of employing laborers for more than eight hours a day on a contract on a government dam below this city.

Beveridge Bill Indorsed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—At a meeting of the board of trustees of the National Child Labor Committee, held here last night, the board took action on the proposed national child-labor law. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the Beveridge bill in substance as a national child-labor law.

Refuse Wage Increase.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) Dec. 8.—Great interest exists in all cotton-mill districts of Southern New England in a number of textile union meetings called for different hours here late today to consider the offer of the manufacturers to advance wages 7 per cent. next Monday. The council recommended that the offer be rejected, and the operatives insist on the original demand for a 10 per cent raise.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENT SWAMPS CONGRESS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The River and Harbor Committee is daily wrestling with the gigantic task of framing a bill for improving the country's water ways. An immense number of projects are before them. Those that have been previously reported upon by the engineers' corps of army alone call for an expenditure of $50,000,000.

Over 2000 separate projects are now being considered by various subcommittees of the full committee, and these do not include a large number of projects that have been unfavorably reported upon by the engineers.

Even if the rumor of a $50,000,000 bill is confirmed the committee will have to eliminate nine-tenths of the propositions before it.

Under the circumstances, it follows that a great many persons will be disappointed in not getting projects in which they are interested included in this bill.

Considerable pressure is being brought to bear here in favor of California river and harbor improvements, but members of the State delegation realize that the odds are against some of their projects. However, they are determined to make a good fight in behalf of the State's interests.

NOW TO PROBE HILL SYSTEM.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION PREPARING.

Investigation Not an Outcome of Specific Complaint, but Merely to Ascertain Exact Condition of Railroad Affairs—Inquiry Will Be Broad and Comprehensive.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—An investigation of the operations and management of the railroads controlled by James J. Hill and associates, including the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, is in contemplation by the Interstate Commerce Commission. After certain preliminaries have been arranged, and counsel for the commission is selected, formal announcement of the proposed inquiry will be made.

As in the case of the proposed investigation of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific railroads of the Harriman system, the inquiry is not the outgrowth of any specific complaints of violations of the interstate commerce law, but is to be undertaken by virtue of the general inquisitorial powers conferred upon the commission by Congress. The inquiry will be broad and comprehensive, with a view to ascertaining the exact condition of affairs regarding the railroads.

A member of the commission, in speaking of the proposed inquiry, said: "Although there has been outward compliance with the decree of the Supreme Court in dissolving the Northern Securities Company, yet there has been no difference in the rates given upon the united system."

KAHN WANTS TORPEDO BOATS.

FIFTEEN FOR PACIFIC SLOPE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative Kahn will introduce a bill next week, providing for an appropriation for construction of fifteen submarine boats, to be used on the Pacific Coast.

The boats are to be scattered all the way from Seattle to Southern California. The boats will cost about $300,000 each.

SAILORS CAN BUY DISCHARGE.

DEPARTMENT ISSUES ORDER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The President has approved the revocation by the Navy Department of a rule, which has existed since 1902, which prohibited the purchase of the discharge by enlisted men. The new order gives the right of purchase to men in their first enlistment who have served at least one year.

LEASES LONG BEACH OFFICE.

OWNER MUST EQUIP IT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Postoffice Department today accepted the proposal of Joseph T. Banghamto to lease new quarters for the postoffice at Long Beach, Cal., at the corner of Second street and American avenue for five years from June next, including complete equipment, heat, light, safe, water, etc.

GOVERNMENT BUYS FORT SITES.

NEEDS MORE LAND IN HAWAII.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Reports received at the War Department from officers in charge of installation of coast defenses in the Hawaiian Islands, state that most of the land which will be needed as sites for fortifications has been obtained, and that about one-fourth of what was originally planned for acquisitions remains to be got.

It is hoped to obtain such tracts of land, which are still needed for the Hawaiian coast defenses, as it is entirely in the interests of economy that the remaining sites should be obtained as soon as possible.

FISH AT WHITE HOUSE.

SAYS HE WILL "RESPOND."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Stuyvesant Fish, former president of the Illinois Central Railroad, called at the White House today, and later talked with the Interstate Commerce Commissioners. It was stated that his calls had nothing to do with the proposed investigation of the Harriman system.

Fish said he was not aware that he had any knowledge that would be of value to the commission, but if it was disposed to call upon him he would gladly respond.

SOLDIERS AT CAPITAL.

SEEK RE-ENLISTMENT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—President Roosevelt has been asked by the military authorities for instructions regarding the cases of discharged members of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, who apply for reënlistment on the basis that their previous service has been "honest and faithful."

About fifty of the discharged soldiers are here, most of them having arrived within the last day or two. It is understood their course will depend to a great extent upon the President's treatment of Sergt. Sanders.

WILL RELEGATE BILL.

JOINT COMMITTEE'S OPINION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The second day of the hearing on the bill amending and codifying the copyright laws held before the joint patent committees of the Senate and House resulted in the conclusion that the proposed bill will be largely disregarded when the actual work of forming new legislation is undertaken.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Young Men Needed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—"We want younger men to command the ships of the navy," said Admiral Dewey, after an interview with the President today, "and the only way to accomplish it is to retire officers early." The result is sought to be attained by the enactment of the naval personnel bill, which the admiral discussed with the President.

Wint Gets Instructions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Brig.-Gen. Wint, who has been assigned to command the troops in Cuba, received his instructions from Secretary Taft today. He expects to sail for Cuba next Tuesday.

SAYS ITALY MUST ARM.

Signor Luzzatti Says Real Danger to World's Peace Lies in German and Great Britain Rivalry.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VIENNA, Dec. 8.—Discussing in the Neue Freie Presse today the relations between Austria-Hungary and Italy, Signor Luzzatti, ex-Minister of the Italian Treasury, is quoted as stating that the military preparations of Austria, along the Italian frontier are bound to lead to the arming of Italy.

He contended that Austria-Hungary ought to recognize that the triple alliance offered the greatest security for peace between Germany and the Anglo-French alliance. The one real danger of the peace of the world, he said, lies in the rivalry between Germany and Great Britain and in a war between those countries, Austria-Hungary and Italy would have everything to lose. They should, therefore, unite to promote a good understanding between Great Britain and Germany."

The same paper publishes an interview with the Marquis di Rudini, ex-Premier of Italy, in which he is reported to have said that the triple alliance has lost its force since Great Britain has taken up a new position in the world's politics, and has become a source of continual anxiety to Austria-Hungary and Italy.

IMMIGRANTS IN DISTRESS.

Strike of Men Employed on Trans-Atlantic Boats Results in Congestion at Naples.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NAPLES, Dec. 8.—The strike on the part of the men employed on the trans-Atlantic steamers has resulted in a serious congestion of immigrants here. All sailing dates for America have been canceled. Thousands of immigrants held in Naples are in want.

ROUND UP RODENTS.

Plague-Infested Rats Exterminated by Professional "Catchers."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Reports have reached the War Department that a few months ago large numbers of plague-infested rats were found in Manila, and since then a large body of professional rat catchers were hard at work to protect the city's health.

It was evident that the plague-rats infected only two sections, and in both of these districts a thorough disinfection was at once undertaken. Every house was systematically cleaned and all the habitual abiding places of the rodents, such as wood piles, were removed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

IMPERIAL, Dec. 8.—The Colorado River, which is at flood, is overflowing the delta of the river as it always has done and will continue to do until twenty miles more of dyke is constructed. It is flowing over a level country where there is no channel. No damage is anticipated.

CROSSES UNFINISHED WORK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Dec. 8.—While a portion of the flood water of the Colorado River got through the unfinished part of the dyke south of the place of the recent break in the river bank, the situation is not nearly so bad as sensational reports make it.

It is believed that with the rapid fall of the river, active work will stop the inflow in a few days. There is little doubt that it will be shut out at the delta before it cuts a large channel.

LESS MENACING.

TIDINGS FROM YUMA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] So far as is now known the break of the Colorado River at the Mexican intake is not positively serious, and with a rapidly-falling river, the danger becomes less menacing.

The break is not at the dam, but in the levee on the south side between the intake channel and the old channel of the Colorado and about one-third mile from the stone dam.

The break was caused by an overflow from the old channel cutting under the brush and dirt levee. The gap is about 250 yards wide and still cutting on both sides.

Beyond saving railroad material nothing can be done at this writing toward stopping the break. It is impossible to tell the depth of the water pouring through.

At this point the river has fallen about three feet. Although the gauge shows but twenty-three feet, it is probably deeper on account of the scouring of the channel.

The flood is entirely from the Gila and, as that river enters the Colorado about twelve miles below there, it does not affect work at the Laguna dam.

Jack Carrillo, engineer in charge of the railway work at the heading, says that less than a third of the water of the river is flowing through the break. The river fell five feet in a day. Carrillo is very hopeful.

The Raymond, Pasadena, opens Dec. 18.

BATTLESHIP VERMONT WINS OUT IN TRIALS.

Returns With Entire Forward Deck Encased in Ice, After Successful Thirty-six-Hour Trip in Northwest Gale at Zero Temperature. Makes Speed of 18.43 Knots.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—The battleship Vermont from the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding and Engine Company of Quincy successfully completed all her government trials at sea this afternoon, including a four-hour full power, a twenty-four-hour endurance test and the usual turning and backing maneuvers. Her entire forward deck from stem to bridge was incased in ice as the result of a thirty-six-hours' trip in a northwest gale and zero temperature.

Tonight Rear-Admiral Hemphill notified the Secretary of the Navy that the behavior of the ship had been excellent.

On the four-hour full-power run yesterday the Vermont averaged 18.33 knots an hour. In the twenty-four-hour test the average speed was 18.43 knots an hour, and the horse power 14,500.

The requirements called for an average of 18 knots at full power, and 13,200 horse power at two-thirds speed. The trials were held under the most severe conditions yet undergone by a government vessel, and the requirements were all completed within four days which is the shortest period in which a battleship has been put through her paces.

Bladder Trouble Cured

Backache, Headache, Indigestion, Rheumatism, Skin Trouble, etc., are the cries of clogged kidneys for relief. Thousands have kidney trouble who do not know it until it has reached the danger point. Any one can, if taken in time, be cured by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

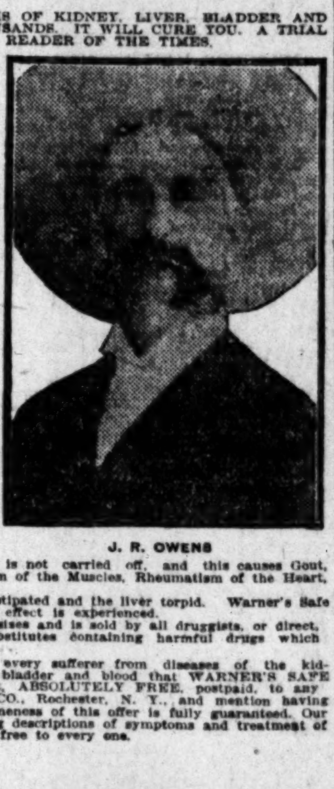
WHICH IS A SURE CURE FOR ALL FORMS OF KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER AND BLOOD DISEASES. IT HAS CURED THOUSANDS. IT WILL CURE YOU. A TRIAL BOTTLE ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE TIMES.

Mr. J. R. Owens, who was a nurse and orderly in the New York Hospital for eight years, was very sick with bladder trouble, and praises Warner's Safe Cure for saving his life.

He has seen many die on the operating table while being treated for diseases similar to his own. He preferred to take Warner's Safe Cure, and is alive and well.

"You may use my name as a reference in any shape or form you may think best. I cannot say too much for Warner's Safe Cure for what it has done for me. I am still taking it three or four times a day. During the eight years I worked in the New York hospital as nurse and orderly, I saw many operated on for the same complaint—kidney trouble—I had. A large number of these cases proved fatal. I have used only a small bottle and a half and am happy, as I feel like a new man. I do not have to get up during the night to urinate and have no burning pains when passing my urine. Just think what $1 worth of Warner's Safe Cure has done for me. It has been a Godsend.

"As for Warner's Safe Pills, they are good. They have no equal. I felt no griping pains when I took them."—J. R. Owens, State Hospital, Middletown, Conn., May 19, 1906.



J. R. OWENS

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off, and this causes Gout, Lumbago, Rheumatism of the Joints, Rheumatism of the Muscles, Rheumatism of the Heart, Rheumatism everywhere.

In Bright's Disease the bowels are often constipated and the liver torpid. Warner's Safe Pills quickly relieve this condition, and no ill effect is experienced.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two sizes and is sold by all druggists, or direct, at 50 CENTS AND $1.00 A BOTTLE. Refuse substitutes containing harmful drugs which injure the system.

Trial Bottle Free To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will cure them, a trial bottle will be sent, ABSOLUTELY FREE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed. Our doctors will also send medical booklet, containing descriptions of symptoms and treatment of each disease and many convincing testimonials, free to every one.

It Is Undeniabl That Pe-ru-na Is a Cure For Catarrh.

Rev. J. B. McLaughlin, 416 5th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., form City Attorney of Little Rock, Ark., now an attorney residing in Wa ton, writes:

"Catarrhal Complaint in all its various forms is so general, that public should be informed of a remedy for the same. It is undeni that Peruna is a cure for that disease. From experience and gen knowledge of its beneficial use I have no hesitation in giving it my est endorsement and recommendation."

CATARRH soon destroys the elasticity of the mucous membrane, producing a flabby condition. This leads to watery secretions, sometimes thickened mucus, and constitutes altogether a very disagreeable condition.

It makes no difference whether the catarrh is confined to the nose, head or throat, or whether it is located in the lungs, stomach or bowels. The essential condition is the same.

Anything that tones up the system tends to the relief of the catarrh.

Anything that purifies the system helps to clear away the pois cretions from the body.

Peruna has a world-wide rep as a catarrh remedy.

We have many testimonials parts of the country and from all of life, attesting to the benefit runa in catarrhal diseases.

Mr. Boss Craig, Fork Vale, writes:

"I had catarrh of the head years, and had abandoned all being cured. To my surprise cured me sound and well."

THROWS LIGHT ON FISHERIES.

British Foreign Office Publishes Correspondence.

Tone Is Friendly, but Shows Wide Chasm to Bridge.

Colonial Ministers Hamper Imperial Policy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The correspondence between the State Department at Washington and the Foreign Office and that between Newfoundland and the Colonial Office detailing the circumstances leading to the establishment of a fisheries modus vivendi was published here today. While the tone is conciliatory, it shows that a wide chasm remains to be bridged.

The dispatches commenced in October, 1905, with letters from Secretary Root to Ambassador Durand, asking for an early interview on the subject of the fisheries and explaining at length the United States' status of her treaty rights and urging that Great Britain take steps to secure the repeal of the Newfoundland laws conflicting therewith. Foreign Secretary Grey, February 2 last, through Ambassador Reid dealt at length with Secretary Root's observations, and said he regretted that he was unable to assent thereto without important qualifications. Reid notified Secretary Grey February 2 that Secretary Root disagreed with him.

Ambassador Reid added:

"I am instructed to ask for such action as will prevent any interference on any ground by officers of the Newfoundland government with American fishermen when they go to exercise their treaty rights on the Newfoundland coast during the fishing season."

Secretary Grey, replying August 14, said he observed "with much regret the wide divergency in the views of the two governments disclosed by the correspondence makes it hopeless to expect an immediate settlement," but was ready to confer with the United States government with the object of arranging a modus vivendi applying only to the ensuing season.

On September 12 Reid wrote Secretary Grey to the effect that the government of the United States "hears with the greatest concern" that the divergence of views renders an immediate settlement impossible, and suggesting terms of the modus vivendi. These were accepted by Secretary Grey, September 25, whereupon Reid was authorized to ratify them.

All the communications of the Department to the Foreign Office were forwarded by the Colonial Office to the Newfoundland government. The Secretary for the Colonies, Lord Elgin, repeatedly urged a modification and a holding in abeyance of the Newfoundland ordinances to which objection was made and unequivocally notified the Newfoundland Ministers that he was unable to assent to their view that the enforcement of the fishing act of 1906 was a matter of purely local concern. The Secretary of the Colonies insisted firmly on the right of the imperial government to intervene in questions affecting the relations of the British Empire with foreign states.

The last communication published Newfoundland was still deprecating the arrangement consenting to the use of Purse seins and the engagement of local fishermen for work on American boats.

PEARY TELLS OF TRIP.

Explorer Believes There Is Land Northwest of Grantland—Found Driftwood Far Up.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Commander Robert E. Peary gave a public lecture today at the Museum of Natural History upon his latest attempt to reach the North Pole. He said in the course of it that he was satisfied that there is a body of land somewhere about a hundred miles northwest of Grantland in the open polar sea, which he wood a hundred miles from Grantland in the open Polar Sea, which he was convinced could only have come from rivers flowing through land not yet placed on the map.

Commander Peary said also that he believed that if the polar winter, during which he made his attempt, had been a normal one he would have reached the Pole.

He thought it could be reached with no greater expense or loss of time than he had experienced in his expedition. With his added knowledge of arctic conditions, he believed the Pole could be reached with sledges, but the explorer should leave land farther west than he did, at about Cape Richards, and should not proceed straight toward the Pole, but toward the northwest, and thus take advantage of the north drift of the ice and currents, which are southwest.

He discovered, he said, a unique glacial fringe on the northern coast of Grantland, which he believed to be the origin of the paleocrystic, or always-frozen ice, which former explorers had thought was from ice massed about the Pole.

SAVOY THEATER REOPENS.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—There was much interest in the reopening of the Savoy Theater tonight for a revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas under the direction of Mrs. D'Oyley Carte, with the coöperation of W. S. Gilbert, who superintended the staging as he did in the days of his collaboration with Sir Arthur Sullivan.

STEAMER HITS CRUISER.

TANGIER (Morocco) Dec. 8.—The Spanish steamer Carmen, steaming at eight knots, crashed today into the Fernch cruiser Forbin, which was at anchor here. The bows of the Carmen crumpled up as if made of cardboard, but the warship was uninjured.

There was no loss of life.

DR. KILMER & CO.,
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.
Sold by all Druggists.

Didn't Know I Had Kidney Trouble

"I was out of health and run down generally; had no appetite, was dizzy and suffered with headache most of the time. I did not know that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, but somehow felt they might be, and I began taking Swamp-Root. There is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the spot and drives disease out of the system. It has cured me, making me stronger and better in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers."

Gratefully yours, MRS. A. L. WALKER, 311 East Linden street, Atlanta, Ga.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue, much suffering and many fatalities are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh or the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles; make your head ache and back ache, cause indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, make you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

To overcome these troubles take Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has yet been discovered.

How to Find Out

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—So successful is Swamp-Root in promptly overcoming even the most distressing cases, that to prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy they needed. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that all readers are advised to send for a sample bottle.

In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say that you read this generous offer in the Los Angeles Sunday Times.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Swell Carlton Bags $4.00, $6.00 and $8.00

These fashionable little bags come in alligator, seal and fancy calf leathers. Really bag purses, with chain handles and trimmings in gilt or gun metal. They are all leather lined and remarkably roomy for small hand bags. These Carlton bags are distinctly the correct thing for young women. See the assortment.

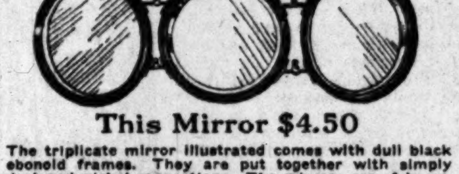
These descriptions do not begin to cover our bag stock. Many others—all desirable. Come in and see for yourself.

Mirrors for Christmas Gifts

"The Owl" has just now the finest stock of Mirrors ever assembled on the Pacific Coast. See the windows of both stores—and the display inside. The showing is really immense, and well worth seeing.

Many Triplicate Mirrors

In Triplicate Mirrors our assortment is unusually strong. Many shapes and sizes here, ranging in price from $1.50 to $12.50. Some of the materials are ebony, mahogany, light Antwerp oak, Flemish oak, etc. Triplicate Mirrors are a real necessity to any woman's toilet table.



This Mirror $4.50

The triplicate mirror illustrated comes with dull black ebonoid frames. They are put together with simply designed nickel connections. The mirrors are of heavy beveled French plate glass, beautifully perfect and flawless. This mirror has chain ready to attach for hanging. Its price is $4.50, and at that figure it is a splendid value.

Shaving Mirrors $1.25 to $6.50

Fine assortment of shaving mirrors at both "Owl" stores. They come on stands, in many shapes and sizes—some arranged on special bearings that admit of turning in all directions. These mirrors come in various materials—shell, ebonoid, mahogany, ebony and in metal handsomely nickeled. They make very acceptable gifts for men.

Hand Mirrors

We can't begin to describe our stock of hand mirrors. Fine selections here at almost any price you want to pay. You cannot realize what variety our stock holds without seeing it yourself. Visit either of the "Owl" stores.

A Beautiful Showing of Leather Roll-Ups

These leather roll-ups are suitable for gifts for either men or women. We can merely hint at the assortment shown, and say nothing of the unfitted roll-ups which we have in great variety, and which we can fit up to your order with toilet articles of your own selection.

$1.50 This roll-up is a telescope case style in seal grained leather. It is fitted with comb, brush and tooth brush in ebonized hard rubber. Takes up very little room in a suit case or traveling bag. A simple roll-up, but of really excellent quality.

$3.00 This roll-up, closing with a clasp, comes in imitation morocco leather. It is cloth lined, fitted with mirror, military brush, comb, soap dish and glass tooth brush holder; in ebonized hard rubber. Articles are of good quality.

$1.75 This roll-up comes in seal grained leather, leather lined. It is fitted with comb, brush, tooth brush and nail brush in ebonized hard rubber. Roll-up closes into very small compass by means of encircling strap. A really extraordinary value at its price, $1.75.

$5.00 This is a seal grained leather roll-up, closing with a clasp. It is leather lined, containing tooth brush, hair brush, comb, soap box, and glass tooth brush holder. This roll-up would make a fine gift for a man. It is good quality, as are the articles it contains.

High Grade Roll Up $11 This handsome roll-up comes in genuine walrus grain leather. It closes with a wide heavy strap, is leather lined, contains hair brush and comb, nail file, scissors, tooth brush in glass holder, nail brush, glass extract bottle, nickel top soap box, and mirror. This is a very elaborate roll-up, yet it can be packed into very small compass. It is especially suited as a gift for a lady. Toilet articles in it are handsome and made for service.

PACIFIC CHAPTER, O.E.S. INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS.

Mrs. M. A. Bronson Acts as Presiding Officer and Is Assisted by Mrs. T. M. Lynn and Mrs. Sarah B. Thatcher—Banquet and Speeches Follow Exercises.

One of the most impressive, as well as beautiful ceremonies, attendant upon any of the various installation services, which have been held the past week, in the several local chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star, was that of Pacific Chapter last night at Masonic Hall, on South Hill street.

MRS. ANNA C. LYNN, grand conductress.

To the strains of music, the officers-elect entered the chapter room, and were seated between the altar and dais.

Mrs. M. A. Bronson, Past Worthy Matron of Pacific Chapter, presided as installing officer, and Mrs. T. M. Lynn, Grand Conductress of the Grand Chapter of the jurisdiction of California, was the Installing Marshall. Mrs. Sarah B. Thatcher acted as Installing Chaplain.

Following the ceremonies, Mrs. M. A. Bronson presented Pacific Chapter with five beautiful electric globes, symbolic in color of the five points of the star. A number of beautiful floral tributes were presented to the newly-installed, as well as to the retiring officers.

Later, the members and guests of Pacific Chapter assembled in the banquet hall, and discussed an elaborate menu, Frank B. Reichenbach acting as toastmaster.

The following officers were installed: Elizabeth Caldwell, Worthy Matron; Frank B. Reichenbach, Worthy Patron; Jessica W. Smith, Associate Matron; Hattie E. Walker, Secretary; Mary H. Wirth, Treasurer; Anna L. Shorb, Conductress; Ethel Roth, Associate Conductress; Ruby Miller, Ada; Alvira Potter, Ruth; Bell Burch, Esther; Mary Groves, Martha; Lizzie Wetherby, Electa; Nellie R. Haupt, Warder; George H. Wood, Sentinel; Lottie V. Smith, Chaplain; Rena W. Stinson, Marshal; Minnie E. Reichenbach, Organist.

DRAGGED BY FAST TROLLEY.

POLICE SERGEANT CARPENTER SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Tries to Board Moving Car, but Slips and Falls—Caught by His Coat He Is Nearly Killed Before Coach Is Stopped—Was Recently Promoted for Good Service.

Police Sergeant E. W. Carpenter fell from an inbound trolley car at Wesley avenue and Jefferson street last night, and sustained a broken leg, five fractured ribs and serious internal injuries. Soon after the accident Carpenter was removed to his home at No. 4020 Woodlawn avenue. Dr. Sumner J. Quint said that Carpenter was badly but not fatally injured.

About 10:15 o'clock Sertg. Carpenter left the University Police Station, and walked a half block to the car line. He waited until a West Jefferson-street car, No. 433, rounded the curve from Wesley avenue into Jefferson street. Although Carpenter saw that the electric was running at a rather high rate of speed, he thought that he would be able to step on the front step without difficulty.

In stepping onto the car Carpenter's foot slid off the steps, and he fell onto the ground with great force. The coat Carpenter wore caught on the step, and he was dragged for about fifty feet along the rough streets. The wild cries of the injured man warned the car crew, and they brought the car to a stop.

Motorman G. Clear and Conductor Frank R. Longdon, disentangled the garments of the injured man, and carried him into a barber shop. Policemen from the sub-station rushed to the scene, and the police ambulance was called from Central Station. A half-hour delay was necessary to secure an emergency wagon.

As soon as the ambulance arrived Carpenter was sent to his home. Police Surgeon Quint and Dr. Stearns went to Carpenter's home in an automobile.

According to the car crew, the coach was bound for the barns and no effort was made to stop for the officer. They did not seem to be aware of the existing law that a street car must stop for an officer, no matter where signaled, so far as the police could learn.

For six years Carpenter has been on the Los Angeles police force. He was transferred to the University station when it was built three years ago. For some time he was acting desk sergeant, and on November 13 he was appointed to the sergeancy. He is one of the most popular officers on the force.

WHAT SULPHUR DOES

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY IT.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and, mind you, this old fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

SHOE SALE TOMORROW

Special Inducements From The Big $50,000 Shoe Purchase.

1000 Pair Ladies Shoes 98c

Hundreds and Hundreds of Different Kinds of Good Shoes Go on Sale Tomorrow at Mammoth Shoe House,

519 South Broadway,
Between Fifth and Sixth Sts.

The big busy Mammoth Shoe Store will have some special surprises for Monday's shoe buyers. A thousand pairs of ladies' shoes and Oxford ties will be sold for 98c a pair. Several hundred pairs of men's shoes, worth as high as $3 a pair, will go for $1.50. Children's shoes and slippers of fine quality will be on sale for 98c. Boys' box calf shoes in good styles and qualities will be sold tomorrow for 98c. Ladies' quilted warm lined Juliets, just the thing for a Xmas gift, will go for 69c. These are worth $1.25 a pair. There will be many more low price surprises to meet the shoe buyers Monday.

Persons in need of footwear cannot afford to miss these Monday inducements. The purchase of this big stock is by far the largest shoe deal that was ever made in this part of the country. These shoes were bought at a big cut in price, and the customers of this store are now getting the benefits in the way of shoes at a fraction of their real worth.

The Mammoth Shoe House started in Los Angeles fifteen years ago and has grown to such an extent that it now can boast of selling twice as many pairs of shoes as any shoe store in Los Angeles. There must be a reason for this.

Come Monday and you'll see the reason. Location—519 South Broadway.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY
BOTTLED BY THE
DUFFY MALT WHISKEY COMPANY
ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED
ROCHESTER
N.Y. U.S.A.
TRADE MARK

Cheap Substitutes and "Just As Good As."

Unscrupulous dealers, mindful only of profit and caring nothing for the health of their patrons, are offering for sale low-grade, impure whiskey, which they tell you is as "good as Duffy's."

It is a cheap concoction and fraud, intended to deceive the people.

Of course, when a remedy has been before the public so long, has been prescribed and used by the best doctors and in all the prominent hospitals, and has carried the blessing of health into so many thousands of homes as DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY has, imitations are bound to arise. But they can imitate the bottle and label only—no one can imitate the contents.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY is made from a formula worked out fifty years ago by one of the greatest chemists the world has ever known, and while it has cured millions of people during the last half century, the secret has never been discovered.

Any firm that will sell imitation or substitution goods will sell impure drugs. The firm that is dishonest in one thing would not hesitate to be dishonest in another. Whenever you see imitation and substitution goods offered for sale by a firm, beware of anything and everything put up by that firm. You endanger your own life and the lives of your family and friends by dealing with them.

Beware of Frauds! Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in sealed bottles only—never in bulk. A facsimile of the genuine bottle, full size, is printed here so that you may easily recognize it. It is our own patented bottle—round, amber colored, and with the name "Duffy's Malt Whiskey Company" blown into the glass. The trade-mark—the Old Chemist's Head—is on the label, and over the cork there is an engraved paper seal. Be certain this seal is not broken.

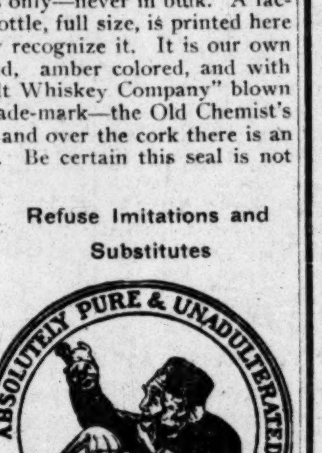
When you ask for DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY be sure you get the genuine which is the only absolutely pure malt whiskey containing medicinal, health-giving qualities. Imitations and substitutes, far from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand DUFFY'S, and be sure you get it. Be on your guard against refilled bottles.

Refuse Imitations and Substitutes



Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey promotes health and longevity.

Keeps the Old Young—the Young Strong

Contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey recognized as a medicine. This is a guarantee.

The genuine is sold by all reliable druggists and grocers, or direct, $1 a bottle. Medical book free. Address Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

The New

Augustine Corsets

Are Here

New models show a radical chic and dashiness. At no time have we been able to present so many entirely original styles.

Each pair is exclusively hand made. The corsets are crafted with numerous gores and cut on curving bias lines. An imported corset of great excellence must cost considerably more, and cannot afford the same fitting to the American figure even after extensive alterations. We should be pleased to have our expert from New York demonstrate these models to you.

"The fact that the girl was undressed and found lying in bed and that Church was fully dressed for the street seems to prove that he returned after leaving at 10 o'clock and stealing quietly in so as not to awaken her turned on the gas and laid down beside her to die."

Miss Louise Shepard, a chum of the dead girl, and who worked with her, said Miss Willett had often been threatened with death by Church.

It is said that both man and woman have lived here and in other cities as man and wife, but each had another sweetheart. The dead woman is known to have loved another than Church, though no quarrels between Church and Miss Willett are recorded. Church's parents are well-to-do people. He is known in Boston as an exemplary young man of excellent habits.

THINK SHAH WILL LINGER.

German Foreign Office Does Not Believe Him so Near Death as Reported.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Although the German Foreign Office does not believe that the Shah of Persia is so near to death as is reported from Teheran, it is well understood that his passing cannot long be delayed, as his maladies are in their final stages.

Germany is popularly supposed, in Great Britain and France, especially, to be pursuing mysterious political objects with the ultimate design of acquiring territorial advantages in Persia.

The German policy, the Associated Press is informed, is simply equal trade privileges in Persia for all nations. The principle of the German policy in Persia has been clearly explained to the Foreign Office of Great Britain and Russia misunderstandings, such as those which made the Moroccan question serious, are not likely to arise. The offer of the banking concession by the Shah was voluntary, and was part of his plan to borrow money from Germany.

LEWIS MAKES REPORT.

Declares Electric Power and Light Companies Plan Merger With Harriman Interests.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Corporation Counsel James Hamilton Lewis today reported to the City Council the result of the investigation recently made by him in New York into the reported consolidation of the electric power and electric lighting companies in Chicago. Lewis states he had learned from reliable sources in New York that the Commonwealth Electric Company is to pass into the hands of the Edison company by the purchase of the stock of one company in behalf of the others, and that these interests amalgamated are to pass into the hands of the Harriman interests, and then combine with the interests now existing in the names of the Illinois Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the Illinois Tunnel Company.

Passenger Train Strikes Freight in Danville Yard and Kills Engineer and Tramp.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

DANVILLE (Va.) Dec. 8.—A wreck occurred this morning in the yard of the Southern Railway in this city, resulting in instant death of two men and the injuring of a number of others, one of whom will die.

A passenger train crashed into a freight train standing on the track. Engineer G. C. Kinney and an unknown tramp were killed. George Ford, a negro fireman, probably will die of his injuries.

The other injured include some postal clerks and a number of passengers who were shaken and bruised.

In Answer to Senator's Demand Attorney-General of Texas Publishes Evidence.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) Dec. 7.—In answer to a statement issued last night by United States Senator Joseph W. Bailey, in which the Senator demanded of Atty.-Gen. Davidson all documentary evidence in his possession which tended to prove that he was paid by the Standard or Waters-Pierce Oil Company for services rendered, Atty.-Gen. Davidson made public a statement tonight which contains all vouchers, notes, letters and drafts in his possession and upon which he based his charges against Senator Bailey.

In this statement Davidson denies that he has coöperated in any movement to prevent Senator Bailey's re-election, and affirms the authenticity of the documents upon which his charges were based.

President of Lawrence University Asserts Schools Are Not Hurt by Magnate's Munificence.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Dec. 8.—A special from Appleton, Wis., says President Samuel Plantz of Lawrence University today made a statement, in wihch he corrects assertions recently appearing in public print with reference to the $30,000 gift to the Lawrence University from the general education board fund founded by John D. Rockefeller. President Plantz says Rockefeller has now no connection whatever with the board, and has nothing to say about the distribution of its funds. Continuing, he says:

"That accepting a contribution from the general board of education would compromise freedom of speech in an institution of learning is a gratuitous affirmation. Rockefeller has given Yale and Harvard a million each; but whose professors have spoken more freely on economic questions? President Hadley of Yale, before Rockefeller's gift and since has been one of the most outspoken of our economists on railroad rebate."

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

THIS GRAFT FOR A GOOD CAUSE.

PASADENA WORKMEN RUSH TO AID BROTHER.

Twenty-five Employees of the Edison Electric Company Will Submit to Surgical Operations to Provide Skin for One of Their Number. Great Rush of Offers.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Dec. 9.—Twenty-five employés of the Edison Electric Company will submit to surgical operations tomorrow afternoon to provide skin to graft on to the body of one of their number, George G. Hibbard, who was severely burned several weeks ago. The men will go to the General Emergency Hospital in Los Angeles, where Hibbard has been taken for treatment, and will submit to the removal of strips of skin.

Hibbard was burned by an electric flash in the Pasadena power-house of the Edison company. At first it was not thought that his injuries would prove serious, although he suffered considerable pain. In spite of the efforts of the physicians in attendance it was impossible to induce new skin to grow over the wounds, however, and it became plain that, if Hibbard was to recover, it would be necessary to perform a skin-grafting operation.

When the word was brought to Hibbard's friends and fellow-employés they at once volunteered to donate pieces of their skin, and arranged to be at the hospital tomorrow in order to have the operations. One of the first men to volunteer was Humane Officer McAney, and the physicians were embarrassed by the number of volunteers instead of by a scarcity of offers.

With the exception of the fact that the skin is not growing as rapidly as it should Hibbard's condition is as favorable as could be expected under the circumstances, and the attending physicians have every hope that the ultimate outcome will be satisfactory. The unfortunate man will be confined to the hospital for some time, but it is not thought that he will suffer permanent ill effects.

The accident which Hibbard suffered was a peculiar one. He did not come into actual contact with a live wire, but was burned by the flash of a fuse-block, which burned out.

IS THROWN FROM CAR.

Miss Katie McConnic, a dressmaker living at No. 81 Dayton street, was thrown from a Los Angeles car near Vineyard street at 6:30 o'clock last evening, and so severely injured that it was necessary to take her to the Pasadena Hospital for treatment. Dr. Rowland was summoned, and dressed the unfortunate woman's injuries, and later it was announced that no bones had been broken, and, as far as could be ascertained, no internal injuries suffered.

Miss McConnic is employed by Mrs. Philips, who has an establishment at No. 151 North Fair Oaks avenue. She has a sister living at the Revere Hotel on North Fair Oaks avenue.

JUST A JIMMY JOB.

Burglars entered the house of Mrs. Isabel Thayer at No. 110 North Los Robles avenue between 6 and 8 o'clock last night, and got away with several hundred dollars worth of jewelry. Entrance was gained by forcing the front door with a jimmy, and the job bore the earmarks of professionals.

The crime was committed while Mrs. Thayer and her niece, Miss Beatrice Frazier, who lives with her, were out at dinner. When they returned home they found the house in confusion, all of the bureau drawers having been ransacked and everything of value, with the exception of the silverware stolen. There was no money in the house at the time, so the burglars did not secure any cash.

Mrs. Thayer and her niece occupy the house alone. They are easterners, who are spending the winter here, and, as they dine at the restaurants, keep no servants about the house. Fortunately, Mrs. Thayer had already deposited the greater paht of her jewelry in a safety-deposit vault, so most of the loss fell upon Miss Frazier.

STREET LAMPS TO GLOW.

J. O. McCament yesterday morning entered into a contract with the Edison for the lighting of the ornamental lamp posts in the business section of the city and the company will start the work of connecting the lamps at once. It was originally the intention to have the Board of Trade undertake the task officially but it was discovered that the by-laws of the organization would not allow of the contracting the indebtedness necessary.

It was finally decided to have one of the directors enter into the contract, the other members standing back of him to guarantee the amount involved. As soon as the money which Pasadena merchants have subscribed for the purpose has been collected it will be turned over and the matter can then be straightened out.

It is not the intention to light all of the lamps at this time as insufficient funds have been subscribed for that purpose, but as fast as additional money is subscribed other posts will be connected. The contract which was made yesterday provides for the connecting of the posts on the streets bounded by Union and Green streets and Marengo avenue and Delacy street.

Manager Gillespie of the Edison company stated last night that his linemen would at once undertake the task of connecting the posts. He said that it might be possible to get the work through by Christmas but that he would not promise that the lamps would be burning before the first of the year. The scarcity of men hampers the company in its work and, with the extra demands made upon it at this season of the year, it will be a difficult matter to put sufficient men on the job to complete it as rapidly as is desired.

TOURNAMENT ITEMS.

H. W. Maloney has offered a silver cup to be competed for at the Tournament of Roses by the members of the Pasadena Gymkhana Club. The cup will be awarded to the member of the club who exhibits the most skill and proficiency in the mounted tent-pegging contest. The trophy will be entirely separate from any prize that may be offered by the Tournament Association.

In order to make the contests more spectacular the members of the club have adopted a military uniform for the occasion and all of the competitors in the sports will be dressed in a modification of the English cavalry uniform. The lances will be decorated with pennants and saddle-blankets and equipments will be of a uniform pattern.

The cow-punchers, who are to ride in the bronco-busting contests, are scouring the country hereabout for wild horses and the outlook for exciting contests is promising. The restricted space in which the men will have to work will hamper them somewhat, but the track will be kept clear and advantage taken of every bit of ground.

An innovation will be introduced this year in the form of a donkey race. The jockeys will be prominent young men-about-town and the fleetest burros in the local livery stables will be called into service. Heretofore there has never been any effort to provide a lighter form of amusement between the main events and the innovation will be welcomed undoubtedly.

ELECTRIC TRAIL TRUCK.

The big electric truck which will be used to convey the telescope and other apparatus to the top of Mt. Wilson, was given a thorough test yesterday and the officials of the observatory are enthusiastic concerning the showing which it made. Although the Mt. Wilson trail is not yet ready for use, it was thought wise to try out the machine and see what it would do, and with that end in view, the truck was loaded with some bits of heavy apparatus and tried over grades which are more severe than any that will be encountered upon the trail.

Work on the trail is being hurried along as rapidly as possible and as soon as it is in shape the truck will be run to the summit. Work on the trail has been, of necessity, slow, as considerable blasting has been necessary, but the worst part of the distance has now been covered and the most difficult feats of engineering have been settled.

UNCLE SAM'S THANKS.

Representatives of the different water companies, which sent men to fight the fire which threatened to devastate the Arroyo Seco last month, have received official letters from Washington thanking them for what their men did and expressing the gratitude of the Forestry Bureau. In the communications the plans which the government is making for the combatting of future fires were outlined.

When the big fire broke out last month the water companies were among the first to get men onto the ground and the forest rangers received able assistance from the companies' employés. The Pacific Electric Company also responded to the call for assistance and sent several hundred Japanese laborers to the scene of the trouble. These men, armed as they were with pick and shovel, did yeoman service and enabled the rangers to save the great San Gabriel reserve from immense damage.

MYSTERY HOLDS LADS.

Boys Who Sailed from Ocean Park in Launch Have Completely Disappeared.

OCEAN PARK, Dec. 8.—With almost four weeks elapsed since Ben Cammer and Harry Alter sailed from here in a small launch bound for San Pedro no trace of the missing lads has been discovered. The heartbroken parents wait for the tidings that do not come.

A description of the boys follows: Ben Cammer: About 5 ft. 10 in. in height; weight about 145 pounds; light brown hair and gray eyes; wore dark suit, black shirt and a cap. Harry Alter: About 5 ft. 11 in. in height; weight about 138 pounds; dark brown hair and brown eyes; had a scar on right side of neck; wore a brown suit, black shirt and a leather cap.

The launch in which they sailed was without a name; 20 ft. long, 6½ ft. beam; double-ender; small cabin with a window on each side; slide doors and slide top; boat painted white, deck yellow, bottom dark red copper paint; with three horse-power auto marine engine. The boat was provided with a sail.

A thorough search has been made at San Pedro and other ports along their route. As it is only a four or five hours' trip, skirting the Coast all the way, it seems strange that they should be so completely swallowed up that not even a timber of the boat can be found.

SAWTELLE, Dec. 8.—The newly-organized Citizens' State Bank of Sawtelle will open its doors Monday morning in commodious quarters in the Bundy block. The stockholders are local residents, who have capitalized the institution for $25,000. The following officers have been elected to preside over the destinies of the new concern: R. F. McClellan, president; W. F. Sawtelle, vice-president; N. Head, cashier. The other directors are H. M. Crane and G. E. Bahrenburg.

BRAIN FEVER EXPLAINS ALL.

LONG BEACH YOUNG WOMAN MISSING, LOCATED.

After She Left Seashore Town Bound for Whittier All Trace of Her Was Lost, but It Develops That She Became Ill and Was Taken to a Los Angeles Hospital.

LONG BEACH, Dec. 8.—Miss Ella Docker, a young woman who disappeared ten days ago from the home of her employer, E. E. Buffum, was located yesterday in a Los Angeles hospital, where she is suffering from an attack of brain fever. The young woman started for Whittier on Thanksgiving Day, but was taken ill on the way and charitable people on the car took charge of her and sent her to the hospital.

REPORTS VALUABLES STOLEN.

Charles E. Cheetham reported to the police today that a valise had been stolen from him by a man named Williams, of whom he furnished a description.

Cheetham, who has just returned from a visit of several months in Honolulu, met Williams in San Francisco, and the latter claiming to live in San Pedro, the two journeyed south together, and as Cheetham was not robust, his friend thoughtfully relieved him of the burden of carrying his luggage. At the Pacific Electric, when the pair boarded a car, Williams disappeared and with him one of the grips, which contained several hundred dollars in valuables. This morning the victim thought he saw his false friend on the street, sans mustache, and he promptly notified the police, but the supposed Williams had apparently taken alarm and as yet has not been found.

SEASHORE JOTTINGS.

The Christmas rush at the local postoffice has commenced, and the quarters, inadequate even in quiet times, are badly cramped. Postmaster Hirsch is securing extra men as clerks and carriers, and by the use of outside weighing clerks hopes to greatly lessen the work of the regular clerks. In the past week several hundred packages have been sent to foreign countries. From present indications this month's postal receipts will be 50 per cent. more than last year.

Property owners on Atlantic avenue will by private contract make that thoroughfare one of the best drives in the city from the ocean to Hill street. They have contracted to improve the street with what is known as the oiled roller tamping process, said to produce a street smooth, firm, dustless and noiseless. Work will begin on the northern end next week.

Sells Bros. and Forepaugh Show May Winter by Sea—Citizens Will Object to Menagerie.

VENICE, Dec. 8.—If it should come to pass that the Sells' Bros. and Forepaugh circus decides to go into winter quarters on the Midway, for which negotiations are now pending with the management, one of the first matters to be considered by the City Trustees will be the formal protest of taxpayers and residents against the maintenance of a menagerie at their front doors. The formulation of such a petition was proposed today in all seriousness, when it looked for a time as if the circus people were in earnest about wishing to winter by the sea.

SPORT AT SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA, Dec. 8.—The exciting sporting event of the beach today was the basketball game of the league championship series, between the Santa Monica and El Monte High School teams. The former team was defeated in a well-played game. The score was 11 to 18.

Excitement is centering in the baseball game to be played tomorrow afternoon on the Southern Pacific diamond, between the Santa Monica All Merchants and the Polo Park nines. The game is the first one of a series of three for a purse of $100 and the championship of the bay.

Did you, sleepless one, ever try a dish of GRAPE-NUTS and CREAM just before bed-time?

Surely you never did or you wouldn't train with the "sleepless squad."

IT'S A BAD PRACTICE to load up the stomach with a promiscuous variety of rich, indigestible food at night because it "tastes" good.

STRENGTH WITHOUT BULK is a requirement of an ideal food for the last bite before going to bed. The food that is concentrated so that a sufficient amount for all purposes will not distend the stomach; the food that is practically predigested, so that organs can, without undue effort, absorb it wholly; the food that contains the tissue-repairing and energy-making elements from clean field grains—that contains the Phosphate of Potash which combines, by vital process, with Albumen to repair the gray matter in brain and nerve centers—that's LAUNDERERS DO TALK IT OVER.

ATTEMPT TO SOLVE SOME PROBLEMS OF THE TRADE.

Incidentally They Prove Their Ability to Enjoy Hospitality Whether It Be in the Nature of an Appetizing Spread or a Tally-ho Ride Among Orange Groves.

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 8.—Laundrymen from all the larger towns of Southern California are in convention at the Glenwood Tavern today, discussing the problems of the trade and incidentally having as good a time as a hospitable local committee can give them. Fifty members of the Laundrymen's Association of Southern California make up the party, about half of whom are from the various laundries of Los Angeles. Representatives of the steam laundries of Redlands, Pomona, Pasadena, Long Beach, Ocean Park, San Diego, Santa Ana, and San Bernardino complete the delegation.

They arrived at 10:30 o'clock this morning, and devoted the morning to a business meeting. A tally-ho ride down Magnolia avenue and among the orange groves of Arlington Heights filled the afternoon. This evening an elaborate banquet was given in the Glenwood refectory in their honor by local laundry managers, including those of Riverside, San Bernardino and Redlands.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBATE.

Debaters of the Riverside and Ontario high schools were matched against each other last evening in the first debate of the season for the Swing cup. The decision of the judges was in favor of Riverside, which had the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That it would be to the best interests of the United States to annex Cuba." Ontario was represented by Chester John and Henry Packard, and Riverside by Henry Reye and Walter Bott.

REAL INDIAN SONGS.

A novel feature of the Christmas bazaar in progress at Sherman Institute was the native Indian song sung by Chief Ta-wa-quap-te-wa and some of the Hopi Indian boys who have just entered the school from their reservation in Arizona. Seldom, if ever before, have purely Indian songs been heard away from the reservations. Pupils have made an attempt to sing snatches of songs which they have remembered hearing their elders sing, but none of the distinctive Indian songs has been heard in anything like its complete form.

The melody has a quaint, impressive quality, with the pathetic minor cadence that is found in all primitive music. The theme was introduced in low weird tones in the first part. In the second part it ascended to a climax, with more of the bright major tone, while the third part returned to the theme of the first, dying away to a faint, eerie thread of melody.

Disgreeable Odor Arising From Indigestion or From Any Habit or Indulgence, Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning —that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines, all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 60 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SQUADRON AT SANTA BARBARA ENLIVENS CITY.

Yorktown Joins Sister Ships and Princeton Is Expected Soon—The Fleet's Run from San Francisco Uneventful—Bound for San Diego Later—Target Practice in January.

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 8.—The gunboat Yorktown came into this port early this morning, and now lies at anchor near the flagship Charleston and the cruisers Chicago and Boston of the Pacific squadron, commanded by Admiral Swinburne. It is unofficially reported that the squadron will remain at Santa Barbara until December 22, and then sail for San Diego, going later to Magdalena Bay for the annual target practice, which should have taken place last autumn, but which was deferred on account of the trial trip of the California.

The squadron will return to these waters about the middle of January to be on hand for the trial trip of the South Dakota, which is expected to take place sometime between January 15 and 20.

The run from San Francisco, which port was left on Thursday, was uneventful. In San Francisco Bay the fleet experienced considerable bad weather and heavy seas. On Monday the effects of Rear-Admiral Swinburne were transferred from the Chicago, then the flagship, to the new flag-bearer, the trim Charleston, one of Uncle Sam's latest types of cruisers.

Arrangements were made to coal the fleet on Wednesday, but the choppy condition of the bay prevented, the ships rolling as in a storm at sea. On the succeeding day coaling was completed and the fleet received orders to proceed to Santa Barbara. Good weather and a smooth trip was reported. As the vessels neared this harbor the band of the flagship played national airs.

The Princeton may join the fleet soon.

NEW TREE-PLANTING IDEA.

The Department of Agriculture of the United States, through the department of forestry, has instructed Forrester George H. Peavy, who is in charge of the experimental tree-planting station on the San Marcos, about twenty miles from this city, to follow a new system of experimental tree-planting in order to promote if possible the work of re-forestration of the government reserves.

It is proposed that small tracts considered suitable for the purpose be planted by the forest rangers, using seeds to be furnished by the government. Col. W. M. Slosson, supervisor of the Santa Barbara reserve, has just returned from the San Emegdio Mountains and reports the heaviest fall of snow in many years. This is a condition, he said, that was considered most favorable, as a heavy deposit of snow would ensure sufficient moisture to keep the trees moist and the undergrowth will germinate throughout the entire season.

Cures Drunkards

MARY'S MIRACLE

The day of working miracles,
I'm sure is far from past,
And now to show you what I mean,
I'll tell you of the last
Great one that happened right to me,
For I was part of it, you see.

You know the life I used to lead—
O God, a living death,
A drunkard of the hopeless kind—
For, scarce a sober breath
I ever drew, and hope and pride
Were lost to me and nearly all beside.

One friend alone was left—my wife,
God bless her ev'ry hour!
She saved me from a drunkard's gave,
And whisky's wicked power.
Just how she saved me you shall see—
This is the way she told it to me.

When hope was almost dead within
Her faithful, constant breast,
She read of Dr. Haines' Cure,
Then without stay or rest,
She sent for one Trial Sample free,
And gave it unbeknown to me!

I drank it at ev'ry meal—
I ate it in my bread,
While Mary watched me anxiously,
But ne'er a word she said;
Until one day I stopped to think,
That I had lost my love for drink!

When, quite unconscious I was cured,
My Mary told me all;
It seemed the very act of God,
A modern miracle;
I call it this, because my wife
And Haines' Cure had saved my life.

And now my little story's done,
My ev'ry word is true,
And what this treatment did for me,
The same 'twill do for you;
And wives and mothers—one and all,
Take heart of Mary's Miracle.

Save those near and dear to you from a life of degredation, poverty and disgrace. You can do it by cutting out this coupon.

FREE TREATMENT COUPON

Fill in your name and address on blank lines below. Then cut out this coupon and mail it to Dr. J. W. Haines, 7906 Glenn Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio. You will receive in return enough of the remedy to prove to you that it will cure drunkenness in any form. You give it in tea, coffee or food. The drunkard will stop drinking without knowing why. You will also get books and testimonials to prove how hundreds have been saved.

Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 97 per cent.; 5 p.m., 76 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., calm; 5 p.m., south, velocity 5 miles. Maximum temperature, 59 deg.; minimum, 50 deg.

Weather Conditions.—The disturbance central over British Columbia yesterday morning, has moved southeastward. A part now overlies Nevada, while a second portion is central over Colorado and the adjoining States. This storm has caused increasing cloudiness in Southern California and general rains north of the Tehachepi and in portions of Oregon and Western Washington. It is expected that this storm will be the controlling factor in the conditions on the South Pacific Slope during the next thirty-six hours, and that threatening weather, with showers, will prevail in Los Angeles and vicinity during tonight and the greater portion of Sunday. No rain or snow of consequence has occurred in the States east of the Mississippi since yesterday.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Threatening with showers tonight and Sunday; southerly winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—Rain has fallen generally over Washington and Oregon with showers i nCalifornia. It is snowing in the Sierras and considerable snow is reported on the ground. A thunderstorm has occurred at Boise. The pressure distribution indicates showery weather Sunday with warm southwest winds over most of the State. Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Cloudy, unsettled weather, probably showers Sunday; fresh southerly winds.

Sacramento Valley: Probably showers Sunday; fresh southerly winds.

San Joaquin Valley: Probably showers Sunday, fresh southerly winds.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Cloudy Sunday, possibly showers; light south winds.

LOCAL STOCK MARKET.

IT WAS a typical Saturday market yesterday on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. The total amount of money involved in the transactions was but $3l,535, compared with the more than $27,000 of Friday.

Dealing was confined exclusively to the oil stocks, Olinda Land and Oil Company being the market leader in point of number of shares sold, 10,000 shares being traded in at 17¼@17½. The stock closed a trifle stronger than on the previous day at 17¼ bid, none offered.

In point of advancement in the quotations, Mexican Petroleum closing at 1.15¾ Friday, shows a gain of 4¼ points on the bid, closing Saturday at 1.20@1.25. No sales were made, the holders regarding the security too good a thing to let go at the prices ruling. Bidding started a fraction below the preceding day's close, at 1.15, but as no offer was heard the stock rapidly went up, reaching high at 1.20, at which point it closed. Offerings were first heard at 1.50, but the asked price gradually came down to a more reasonable trading basis, never going lower than 1.25. Bids for futures ranged from 1.20 to 1.30 for thirty-day options to 1.26@1.27 for the sixty-day variety; 1.21@1.23 was a common bid for buyer 30's, while the offerings hung about 1.35 to 1.28, a block of 15,000 shares being offered at 1.30, and 5000 at 1.25, with 19¾ bid for large blocks.

Associated Oil shows a fractional loss and no trading, closing at 51⅝@52½. Bids for Associated ranged from 51 for a block of 5000 cash, to 51, seller thirty, with offerings at 52@51¾ under the latter conditions. For buyer 30's 52 was bid, the stock being held at 53¼. Odd lots were in fair demand, a standing bid of 50 being made for anything odd.

An effort was made to trade in Rice Ranch, the offering being depressed from 1.50 to 1.30, with the only bid at par. Later both bid and offering were withdrawn, and the stock closed at its former asked price of 1.50. Bids of 1.10 to 1.32, buyer ninety, were made and 1.50 to 1.75 was heard for any part of 50,000 shares at thirty days' call.

United Petroleum is feeling the effects of the weakened market for Union Oil, and was offered much below the ruling asked price, twenty shares being put on the floor for sale at 365, but found no takers.

Central Oil was in fair demand, especially on future trading. The stock closed without perceptible change at 1.11½@1.14. Bids for futures ranged from 17@18, buyer thirty, to 19, buyer sixty, the offerings being at 1.20, buyer thirty. Calls were bid for at 1.18, thirty days, and 1.25, sixty days, with the asked price under these conditions holding up well to 1.50.

Continental shows a weakening of 1¼ points on the bid, closing at 17½@21. No trading was carried on in this security. Union Oil was very weak, closing at 200@201, with but nine shares changing hands at 199@200. Odd lots of two and three shares were in good demand, the bidding reaching 199.75 for twos and threes.

Among the miscellaneous stocks Home preferred is still holding its own, closing Saturday with a bid of 61 and none offered. The bidding reached high at 62½ for any part of 100 shares, while 62½ and 63 were bid, buyer thirty days. No transactions were made in anyway. United States Long Distance Telephone suffered a loss of 6 and 9 points on the bid and asked ruling during the week, closing at 40@50.

Banking securities were quiet, bidding being confined to State Bank and Trust, and Merchants' Trust, the former showing a decline of 2½ points on the bid, closing at 86@93, with no sales made. Bonds were very quiet.

ON MINING CALL.

Business was slightly better on the mining call than on that immediately preceding it, although the money total does not exceed that made on the early call.

Johnnie Consolidated was again the leader in point of sales made and points gained in the manipulation. Fully 19,000 shares were traded in the prices ranging from 22, buyer ninety and sixty, and 21, buyer thirty, to 20 for immediate cash delivery. Only 5000 shares of the big total being tied up under time contracts. Opening with a good bid at 18, the stock wavered about that price, at times reaching 20, at which most of the sales were made, the offerings receding from 23 to selling price, but never getting lower than 20. Futures were in good demand, bids ranging from 21@21¾, buyer thirty, 20@23, buyer sixty, to 21½@22¼, buyer ninety days. Bids for large blocks were heard at 19@19½ for 5000 or 10,000.

California Hills is the only other mining stock to get on the sales sheet, 7000 shares changing hands at 6⅝. Little interest was shown for the stock and the security closed with Friday's bid of 6⅝ ruling with an offering at 7.

Clark Copper is still on the toboggan, having lost 4½ points in the handling Saturday, closing at 65 bid, 72¾ asked, with no sales recorded.

Some little attention was paid the Searchlight stocks, but no trading resulted, the stocks showing a slight weakening after the call.

'CHANGE GOSSIP AND NEWS.

Since news of the great merger of the big mines in Goldfield has been announced holders of the stock of the companies composing the new merger have been asking for information as to the ratio at which they may turn their holdings into the new company. This information has been gleaned from an authentic private source and is as follows: Mohawk has been taken in at a valuation of $20 a share, and may be turned at a ratio of one for two shares of the consolidated stock. Jumbo has had a valuation of $5 a share put on its stock and will go in at two for one, Red Top has been appraised at a similar rate, and Laguna at $2, being returnable at a ratio of five for one. There is some talk of the Combination Mining and the Goldfield Mining being taken in. If these companies are absorbed they will be at a valuation of $4,000,000 for the former and $2,500,000 for the latter.

The Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company is the name under which the new merger is known, the capitalization of the company being placed at $50,000,000, with a par value per share of $10. This stock will be listed on the San Francisco, New York, Goldfield and Los Angeles stock exchanges by December 21, if all papers are ready and if not then, soon afterward.

This stock has been guaranteed in much the same way U. S. Steel has been, by a firm of underwriters, composed of capitalists from Philadelphia, New York, San Francisco and Goldfield. The company having received $250,000 for the risk assumed, which, considering the capitalization, is very small.

Another important matter for the first time made public is the fact that the companies will go into the new merger and get the exchange of their stock only in the ratio stated, and to the amount of stock issued, and not at their capitalization.

In June, 1904, a seat on the local Stock Exchange could be bought for $75, and this, with the prevailing transfer fee of $25, cost the new member a total of $100 only. During the week a call on a seat at $3000 was taken up, the buyer paying $250 for the privilege of calling, and $200 transfer fee. Saturday a strong bid of $100 for a call on a seat, at thirty days, at $3500 was made. This is an almost phenomenal gain and shows that the exchange is thoroughly up to the times in most things.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The produce market ended an active week at good prices, though yesterday the usual Saturday quietness was more or less noticeable.

Fresh ranch eggs continued active at 42 cents. Forty-two cents was asked for case-count eggs, and 32 cents was bid. No sales were made.

There is no change in the price of butter. Stocks were firm yesterday at present quotations.

Yesterday morning's exchange session was poorly attended and no sales were made.

Potatoes are reported scarce in all quarters, and jobbers state that they cannot get sufficient supplies to fill their regular orders. Wholesale dealers of potatoes pay 1.50 for their stocks, and predict that 1.60 per cwt. will be the ruling price for the coming week. Bids of 1.42 were made on 'change yesterday for fancy Highland potatoes. One carload of Merced sweet potatoes were reported in yesterday by the Zasher Brothers Company.

Reports from Colorado state that the apple season is over in that State. The first carload of pineapples of the season came in yesterday from Florida and were consigned to Richardson & Holmes Fruit Company of the market. The pineapples will sell at 6.00 per crate. Celery was weaker at 25@40. Artichokes are scarce at 90@1.25. Tomatoes are inactive at 40@50 per box. Small fish was plentiful. Wild game was sufficient to supply the demand. Lobsters were equal to all requirements.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 188 cases; butter, 14,525 lbs.; cheese, local, 5249 lbs.; potatoes, 2022 sacks; onions, 891 sacks; beans, 1199 sacks; sweet potatoes, none.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The bank statement not only reflected fully the loss of cash indicated by the week's known movements of money, but more than made up the discrepancy in the loss reported last week, which was smaller than the estimates. Cash holdings have amounted to $12,365,600, and the accompanying scaling down of credits has amounted to only $3,803,600. The net result is a deficit below the legal reserve required of $6,702,575, which is the largest deficit in the New York reserve since the summer of 1893, when the endless drain of the treasury gold holdings was in operation to supply the exigent demand for gold to ship outwards. This compares with a deficit in the corresponding week of last year of $1,246,525. Last year an animated speculation broke out at the Stock Exchange in the week following the deficit. It is this precedent which plays an important part in keeping up speculative confidence in the present market. Prices wavered and yielded slightly today after the bank statement appeared, but recovered nearly all the declines before the trading ended and the closing was only slightly irregular. The Hill stocks were conspicuously weak, and the Harriman stocks showed some special effect of the judicial proceedings against the company in Utah. There is no money market at the Stock Exchange on Saturday, and loans made on Friday carry over until Monday. The effect of the bank statement, therefore, was restricted to sentiment. The latter was modified by the firm confidence that some action would be taken by the Treasury Department for the relief of the money situation in the interval before operations are resumed in the stock market Monday. Movements were reported to be in progress in mercantile quarters to urge the Secretary of the Treasury to release government funds to the money market for the relief of restrictions said to be out on commercial operations by reason of money scarcity. Total sales of bonds, par value, $950,000.

Which Has Now Become the Owner of the Beautiful Valley and Park

Just north of Glendale, consisting of 470 acres of the old Verdugo Rancho, a part of which as Verdugo Park, has been for more than 50 years a favorite suburb or park resort.

Seventy acres reserved as the Park is heavily wooded with beautiful live oak and other shade trees and has a fine natural stream meandering through it. These give it great natural beauty to be increased by winding trails and paths to and on the hills near by and other improvements under the direction of the most eminent landscape gardener of the Pacific Coast, Mr. McLaren, of San Francisco. Other features will be a Japanese Tea Garden, a Commodious Cafe, Music and attractions of a high class. Electric railways will connect with Los Angeles and Pasadena by short and scenic routes and "Forest Grove Park" will become the most attractive resort within reach of them.

Several hundred acres of the land will be divided into Villa sites already much sought after. Stock in this company will prove a most conservative, safe and profitable investment and is offered at $60.00 per share, (Par $100.00.) Further interesting particulars of

PORT ITEMS.

WEATHER: Cloudy at 5 p.m.; wind south, velocity 11 miles.

Beginning January 1, another raise for the transportation of lumber, to California from Puget Sound ports, will be made, when it will be $8.50 to carry cargoes to San Francisco and $10 to Southern California ports, an increase of 50 cents a thousand feet over the rate charged. The $10 mark, it is believed, will be fixed as the minimum tariff for delivering cargoes to Southern California ports.

The barkentine James Tufts sailed yesterday for Bellingham with a full cargo of lumber consigned to wholesalers at this port.

The schooner Alex T. Brown has arrived at Port and has been chartered to load a lumber cargo for San Pedro.

The steamer Marshfield, Capt. Dettmers, is discharging 6000 railroad ties at Redondo for the Los Angeles Railway Company.

The schooner Endeavor, Capt. McAliep, finished discharging her lumber cargo and sailed in ballast for San Diego where she will go on the dry docks for overhauling and repairs.

AWFUL AGONY OF PILES

Positively Relieved by The Pyramid Pile Cure.

A Trial Package Mailed Free.

There is no reason—surely no good reason—why any man or woman should continue to suffer with piles when a reputable company of druggists have placed in every high-grade pharmacy a positive and unfailing cure for this dread disease at a price within the reach of the poorest. They have done more. They offer to relieve the sufferer temporarily and start him on the way to recovery, by giving to any piles patient who sends his name and address, a free trial package of the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure in a plain sealed wrapper. There are enough of the curative elements in this trial package to greatly reduce the swelling of the affected part, to heal much of the soreness and ulceration. After the sample is gone your druggist will supply you with a box of the Pyramids for 50 cents.

Where Most Piles Sufferers End. Act Before Too Late.

Read Mrs. Bond's letter, which tells how she suffered and was relieved, if not positively cured, after using one 50-cent box:

"I have tried your pile cure and find them all you recommend them. I am very thankful to you for ever putting them within my reach, for I have had one box and I have not used all of them yet, and I feel like a new woman today, and I tell everybody about them. When I started them I could not walk across the floor, but now I can do my work all right. My work was a burden to me before I started them, but I can tell you that I can work much better now. You can rely on me. I will tell everybody about Pyramid Pile Cure. Yours sincerely, Mrs. J. Bond, Toronto, Canada, 33 Pears Ave."

There is positively no risk or danger with the Pyramid Pile Cure, for there is nothing but curatives in the preparation. They are suppositories which placed in the affected part, act as a soothing ointment working upon the infected and ulcerous tissues, giving them new life and stimulating a stronger circulation of the blood.

By the use of the Pyramid Pile Cure the patient is cured at home without losing a day's work, no matter what his occupation. The cure may be accomplished in absolute privacy. We use no names for advertising purposes without the voluntary consent of the patient.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is quick, permanent and painless. Do not delay, but send your name and address today, and we will furnish you at once with the free trial package. Pyramid Drug Co., 73 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

The 50-cent size packages are for sale at all druggists.

MOTORMAN MAY DIE.

He Is Pinched Between Two Cars of Work Train at Watts Station. Taken to Hospital.

In a wreck of a work train at Watts station at 12:15 o'clock this morning, Charles Vaughn, motorman, was pinched between two cars, and seriously, if not fatally injured. Vaughn was brought to Los Angeles and taken to the Receiving Hospital.

From what could be learned, the train ran into an open switch. With some other workmen, Vaughn leaped from the train, and rushed to assist in uncoupling the cars. A sudden move of the motor pinched the man between the beams. He will be sent to the Sisters' Hospital.

WILL YOU LET ME PROVE IT?

If You Have Any Kidney, Bladder or Uric Acid Disease (No Matter How Serious), I Will Send You Trial Treatment of a Medicine that I Believe Will Permanently Cure You. I will send you needed Advice and I Will Send You a 2-cent Postage Stamp by Mail, Postage Paid.

Absolutely Without Any Charge Whatsoever

I know that I have perfected the one remedy that really does cure and cure permanently a large per cent. of Kidney, Bladder, Uric Acid and Urinary diseases. I want every suffering man and woman to also know this FACT, consequently I say, and say in naked language, PUT ME TO THE TEST and make me prove it. All you need do is just to fill out the following coupon and send it to me. I will then send you sufficient medicine to prove that I have a REAL CURE. I will send you a book of PROOF. I will at any time give you my best advice, and I will send a good, unused United States 2-cent postage stamp to make good what it cost you to prepay in answering this notice, all of which I send you ABSOLUTELY FREE AND PREPAID.

Remember, there is no expense to you now or forever after for all this, and neither does this offer entail any obligations on your part. If I was only moderately successful I wonder how long it would take to bankrupt me in carrying out the provisions of the above offer? Not long, I warrant you, though I am by no means a poor man.

My cure used as directed POSITIVELY WILL NOT HARM the most delicate person in the world, and it HAS CURED CASES nothing else would touch.

You ask "why it will cure you when everything else you have used has failed?" I will tell you my conclusions.

When there is any disease of the Kidneys or Bladder there is always a leakage of vitality from the system, either through the urine or by absorption of poisonous matter, or both. The vitality thus lost is absolutely necessary to the support of the cell structure of the kidneys, and to the keeping clean of the bladder. Most any good kidney or bladder remedy will restore to the blood and fluids some of this peculiar though absolutely necessary vital element, but not enough to give these vital organs a sufficient chance to gather themselves for the complete overthrow of the disease. My cure DOES THIS. At least, it has for hundreds, yes, thousands of others, so why should it not for you?

My cure gives back the necessary vitality, it helps to restore healthy tissue, it cleans and heals the kidneys and bladder. It expels the poisons which may be rotting the kidneys and stupefies and eats out germ life. Just try it and let it CONVINCE YOU, as I think it will, that all the pains, aches and misery you are suffering from are entirely and absolutely UNNECESSARY.

Not every neglected or wrongly treated case leads to premature death, but a very large per cent. do, and you should bear in mind that by, taking my treatment now this element of danger is reduced to a minimum. Therefore, to escape your present suffering and what may become an incurable disease, attended with suffering more intense, more awful than anything you can now imagine, just fill out coupon below and send it to DR. D. A. WILLIAMS, No. 71 P. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn.

(I presume no sufferer cares for the free stamp, but it is my pride to PROVE I have an ACTUAL cure at not one penny of expense to the sufferer.)

This coupon entitles you to free trial treatment, free advice and a free postage stamp. Give your name and full address plainly and send to Dr. D. A. Williams, 71 P. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn., and receive same by return mail.

Mac Dermott's Advice To Stockbuyers!

My advice is to buy the good listed stocks that are sold on the open calls of the mining exchanges; my experience is that before Christmas all stocks are depressed in price because people sacrifice them to purchase Christmas present; this is the time for shrewd buyers to buy and make money, for all good stocks will be higher in January or February. Do not buy from promotors or fiscal agents, or any one who advertises large page advertisements. Recollect that you have to pay for them.

I advise the purchase of the following stocks;

Mohawk Florence Leasing at thirty-five cents.

Mohawk Gold Bar Leasing at thirty cents.

Kewanis Mining Co. at present price.

Silver Pick M. Co. at present price.

Manhattan Standard at present price.

And before buying or selling any stock come to the Southwest Miner's Stock Exchange

114 SOUTH BROADWAY.

Public calls daily at 11 a.m., where all stocks are bought and sold at their market value. Do not buy a share of stock until you have seen us. We will save you money.

The Man With the Saggy Left Lapel

By Old Dr. Goose.

Ha—whom have we here?
My friends, here is one of the Achievements of which I am Justly Proud.
That suit as you may Imagine—
Was when given to me one of the worst or best Examples of the Tailor's Botching you could Imagine.
In the first place—it had not been cut properly.
In some places the Cloth was Scant
In others too much Cloth had been allowed.
When being made up these Cutting Mistakes had been Exaggerated.
And when the Suit came to me—
Oh Dear! Oh Dear!!
It was the worst Looking Thing I ever saw.
Well I went to Work
I Shrunk the Cloth here—and I Stretched it There.
I Pressed and I Sizzled —Until
I had the Smoothest Thing in Suits you ever Saw.
I was as proud of that Job as "Saggy" was Only poor "Saggy" didn't know what he was Up Against——That's him now
And that's the Suit I "doped" up to sell him—
Only now the "dope" is all gone
And the Old Suit looks like it did before I got at it—
See how Saggy the Left Lapel is
Look at the twist in the Collar—and the slope and lumpiness of the shoulders—
See the wavy Curves and Wrinkles around the Arms and down the Front.
Look at the Twists in the Sleeves—
Say, on the Level—isn't a Fright?
Of course that Suit might have been made right.
For a very few Clothes are made right—
Only it Costs like fury—that's why I'm in such demand
For my "dope" is Cheap
But among the Clothes that are made right
Are "Sincerity Clothes"
I don't have a "look in" on Sincerity Clothes—
For they go to work with a slow and expensive Hand Process
And actually sew the Shape into a Suit—
They needle mould it—and the Shape simply can't leave the Suit.
The Style and Fit remains in a Sincerity Suit until, you're anxious to look at a different kind of cloth.
It takes the Sincerity Clothiers ten times as long to sew the shape into the Fabric of the suit as it takes me to "dope" the Shape in temporarily.
And what's the difference anyway—the Customer can't tell what he's buying—
That is, unless unless he knows the test for right clothes the "Sincerity" Clothiers give.
—The same test used by all expert tailors to tell whether or not a suit has been made properly.
It will qeeu my Job altogether if every bodys gets on to that Test—
But I guess people won't think of writing to the Sincerity Clothiers in Chicago for that test—although the address is given on the label below.
For they can be sure of one thing anyway that I don't get a look in on Clothes on which the Label below appears—that's what makes me Sore—
Your Progressive Dealer can supply you with Sincerity Clothes—Look them over anyway.
Here's the Label. Send for the Test.

I CAN CURE CANCER

At Home Without Pain, Plaster or Operation, and I Tell You How, Free.

I Have Proven Cancer Can be Cured at Home No Pain, No Plaster, No Knife.—Dr. Wells.

I have discovered a new and seemingly unfailing cure for the deadly cancer. I have made some most astonishing cures. I believe every person with cancer should know of this marvelous medicine and its wonderful cures, and I will be glad to give full information free to all who write me and tell me about their case.

Peter Keagan, Galesburg, Ill., had cancer of the mouth and throat. Doctors said, "no hope." Mr. Keagan wrote: "It is only a question of a short time—I must die." Today his cancer is healed up and he is well. My marvelous radiatized fluid did it. It has other just such cures to its credit. It is saving people every day and restoring them to health and strength. If you have cancer or any lump or sore that you believe is cancer, write today and learn how others have been cured quickly and safely and at very small expense. No matter what your condition may be, do not hesitate to write and tell me about it. I will answer your letter promptly, giving you, absolutely free, full information and proof of many remarkable cures. Address, Dr. Rupert Wells, 1764 Radol Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

I CAN CURE CANCER

At Home Without Pain, Plaster or Operation, and I Tell You How, Free.

I Have Proven Cancer Can be Cured at Home No Pain, No Plaster, No Knife.—Dr. Wells.

I have discovered a new and seemingly unfailing cure for the deadly cancer. I have made some most astonishing cures. I believe every person with cancer should know of this marvelous medicine and its wonderful cures, and I will be glad to give full information free to all who write me and tell me about their case.

Peter Keagan, Galesburg, Ill., had cancer of the mouth and throat. Doctors said, "no hope." Mr. Keagan wrote: "It is only a question of a short time—I must die." Today his cancer is healed up and he is well. My marvelous radiatized fluid did it. It has other just such cures to its credit. It is saving people every day and restoring them to health and strength. If you have cancer or any lump or sore that you believe is cancer, write today and learn how others have been cured quickly and safely and at very small expense. No matter what your condition may be, do not hesitate to write and tell me about it. I will answer your letter promptly, giving you absolutely free, full information and proof of many remarkable cures. Address, Dr. Rupert Wells, 1764 Radol Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Victor

His Master's Voice

For Christmas entertaining nothing equals the Victor—plays grand opera, band and orchestra music, comic songs, etc.—everything that is good in music. If you want to dance, the Victor provides the music, keeping perfect time.

We sell Victors at from $10 to $500 each. Put one in your home by buying half a dozen records at 60c each and then pay a dollar or so a week until the machine is paid for. We carry all other well known Talking Machines besides the Victor.

Christmas Records

In the Victor catalogue will be found many records especially for the Christmas season. These, with other records, are desirable for gifts to friends who own Talking Machines. Our "order" plan makes it possible to let those you intend giving records to pick them out for themselves, thus avoiding duplication of selections.

Visit our new Victor department—third floor—seven sound proof demonstrating rooms.

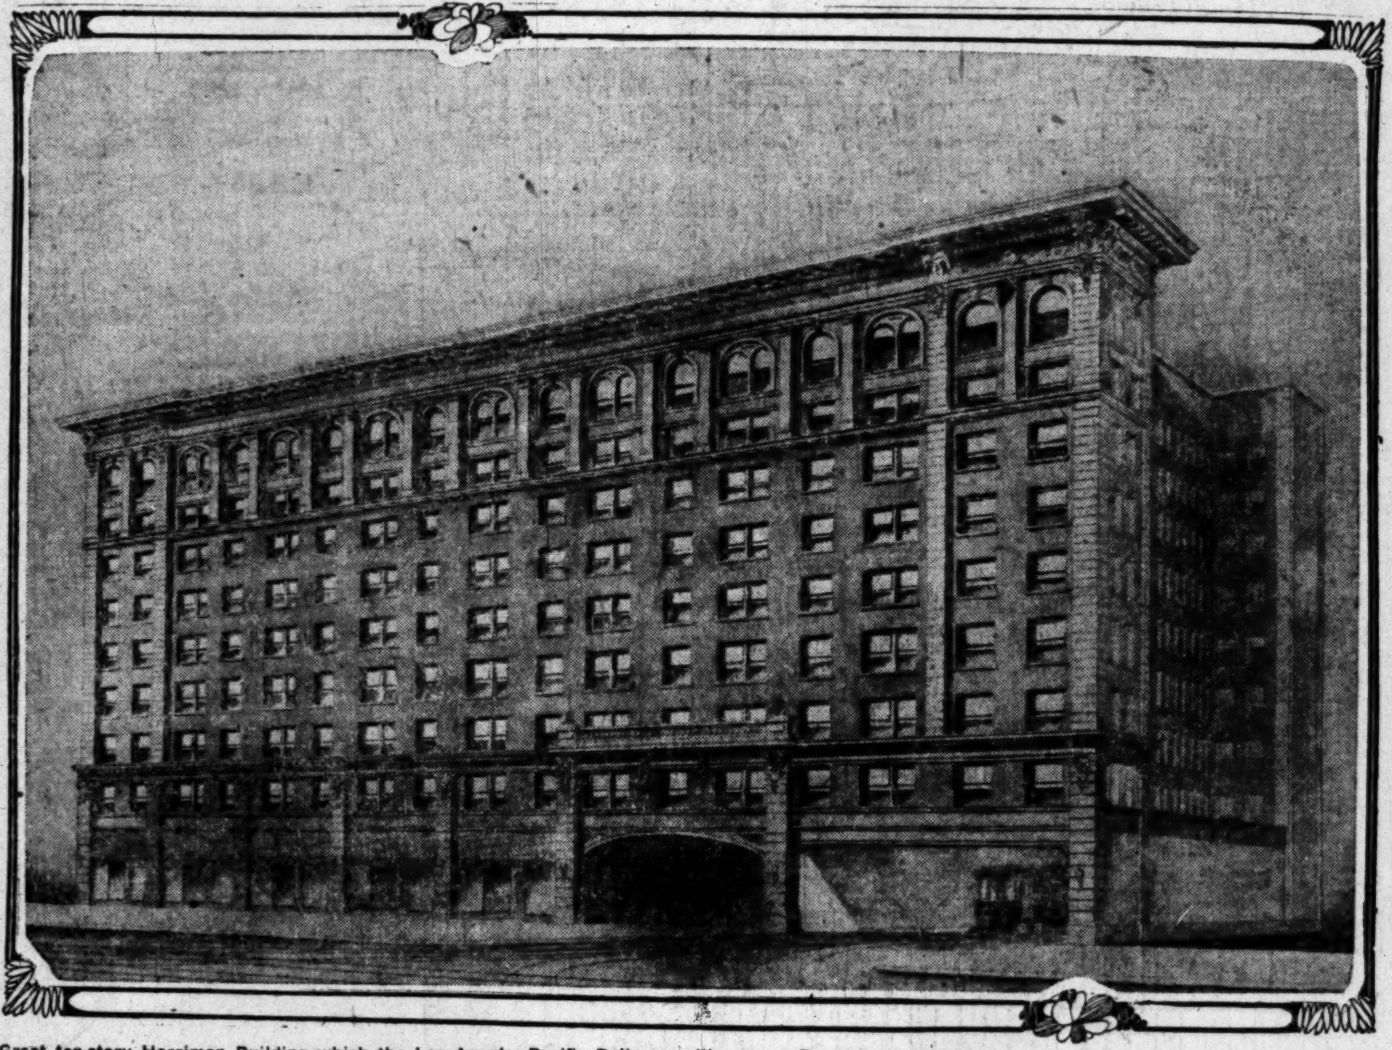
HARRIMAN SPENDS FIVE MILLIONS FOR GREATER TROLLEY SYSTEM.

Subways of Concrete Through Nearly Five Miles of the Western Hills, and a Gigantic Steel Building With Eleven Hundred Offices. First Details of the Titanic Project.



Great ten-story Harriman Building which the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway will rear at Fourth and Hill streets. It will be the largest structure of its kind in the West.

E. H. HARRIMAN, king of railroad builders, has completed plans for extensions and improvements for the Los Angeles-Pacific which will make it one of the greatest electric railway systems in America.

Three concrete subways five miles in length will carry the new express trains of the Los Angeles-Pacific through the heart of the northern and western hills.

Venice and Santa Monica will be but twenty minutes from Fourth and Hill streets. Hollywood will be ten minutes away, and the western city limits but five minutes.

The new million-dollar Harriman building will be located on the present site of the Masonic Temple and adjacent property on South Hill street. It will be a massive structure of steel, granite and reinforced concrete, the largest of its kind in the West. The plans contemplate 1100 office rooms, and a floor space of nearly sixteen acres.

There will be two main subways; one will parallel West Fourth street from Hill street to Vermont avenue; the second will pierce the Temple-street highlands joining North Hill street to Sunset boulevard.

More than $1,500,000 has already been expended securing rights of way for the subways; the estimated cost is $5,000,000.

Outside the city limits new lines are to be built reducing the distance to Ocean Park and to Hollywood, and to adjacent territory. All these lines, like the main project, are to be broad gauge.

There is a well-defined rumor afloat that these Los Angeles-Pacific extensions are but the forerunner of a great commercial harbor. At Santa Monica Bay the Harriman interests control fifteen miles of ocean front.

The next move in the railway and commercial development of the Southwest may be a mammoth breakwater similar to that the government is building at San Pedro. This would be a private Harriman enterprise.

Mr. Harriman has confided to some of his associates that he sees in Los Angeles the metropolis of the Pacific Coast. Not content with getting in on the ground floor, he has gone to the basement.

E. H. HARRIMAN, controlling power of the Los Angeles-Pacific.

Twenty minutes to Santa Monica and Ocean Park, ten minutes to Hollywood, five minutes to the western city limits—this is the electric-railway service that E. H. Harriman, king of railroad strategists, has promised Los Angeles.

A mammoth concrete subway equal to that which has made New York City's railways the pride of the East, and a great steel office building larger and more magnificent than any other in the West—these are two minor details of the titanic project which for Los Angeles is second only to the Owens River enterprise.

Three years of time and more than $5,000,000 of money will be required to complete what will be the finest electric railway system in America. Mr. Harriman has already expended $1,500,000 in the purchase of property in the western part of the city necessary to secure the right of way for the great concrete conduit which is to carry the cars of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway through the heart of the western hills and deposit them on Vermont avenue near the old Baptist College, fairly outside the city limits.

SUBWAY NEARLY FOUR MILES.

This subway of itself will be almost four miles in length; it will parallel West Fourth street from Hill street to Vermont avenue. The entrance will be from a magnificent ten-story office building located on the site of the Masonic Temple on South Hill street. This building will contain 1100 offices and will house 3000 people. It will be a city of itself with floor space almost equal to half the territory in the Eighth Ward.

The Fourth-street subway is only a moiety of the new system that is to comprise forty-five miles of track, and will bring Hollywood and beach points closer in time to the heart of Los Angeles than are University, Vernon or Highland Park. The project is one which only the genius of a Harriman would devise; it will give to Los Angeles and its suburbs an electric railway service which has no peer in Europe or America.

Mr. Harriman explained his plans for electric railway extension to his local captains of industry just five weeks after he learned that Los Angeles had secured the Owens River. Mr. Huntington was already in on the ground floor so Harriman made a bee line for the basement.

To his subordinates Mr. Harriman has confided his faith in the future of Los Angeles and Southern California. He considers this the favored spot on the Coast and he sees in Los Angeles the metropolis of the West.

HE GRASPS BIG THING.

Three years ago Mr. Harriman paid an extended visit to the south coast. When bidding his lieutenants good-by the morning of his departure, he said:

"Paris, Vienna, Italy are not half so beautiful. But you have about reached the limit; there is no more water."

It was then that he counseled retrenchment in the matter of the extension of suburban electric lines. But he was quick to grasp the changed situation when Fred Eaton and William Mulholland revealed the possibilities of the Owens River.

Mr. Harriman is the Napoleon of the railway world. He has won that position in commercial struggles as brilliant as Marengo and the Bridge of Lodi. His ability as an organizer dwarfs that of Jay Gould and the elder Vanderbilt. And he is backing his faith in the Southwest with millions of golden eagles.

There is no other city in America outside of New York in which Mr. Harriman is investing so much. In the last year he has turned more gold back to California than the entire output of the mines of California, Colorado and Nevada. He is sowing anew in the heart of the commercial West the yellow metal that is filched from the mountain and desert. He is preparing for a harvest richer than the mines of King Solomon.

PEOPLE REAPERS, TOO.

But in this harvest he will not be the only reaper; the people also will reap, for his success is wholly dependent upon the continued prosperity of Los Angeles and its environs. His present plan is to eliminate space with the wand of electricity and to bring the foothills and the beaches within walking time of First and Broadway.

Great electric express trains running at an average speed of seventy miles an hour will make it possible for a resident of Hollywood or Santa Monica to go home to lunch from his offices in the new Harriman building on Hill street and be back at his desk within an hour.

GREAT AIR LINE PLANS.

From the western entrance to the Fourth-street subway air lines will be built directt o Ocean Park, Santa Monica and Hollywood. The main line will extend across private right of way from Fourth street and Vermont avenue to Wilshire boulevard. There it will enter a second subway 3000 feet in length, running through the Nadeau vineyard and finally connecting with the present lines at the junction of the line to the Soldiers' Home and that to Ocean Park.

A second line will extend from Fourth street and Vermont avenue to Sherman Junction, a distance of five and one-half miles, making a short line for Santa Monica and the Westgate line.

Midway between Vermont avenue and Sherman Junction a third road will run through Hollywood by way of Highland avenue.

These are details which have already been approved by Mr. Harriman. There are others, possibly more important ones that are developing. But for the lines already mentioned the rights of way have already been secured.

Some of the great electric flyers which are to run over these lines have already been ordered. They will bring the entire Hollywood highlands within the residence district immediately adjacent to the business section.

By stepping into an electric express train at Fourth and Hill streets, one can be in Santa Monica or Redondo in the same time that it would take to walk to Ninth and Figueroa streets, or to ride on the surface cars to Figueroa and Adams streets.

These are possibilities undreamed of in the last century. Wizard Harriman and his millions make them already almost a reality.

IMPOSING BUILDING.

The new Harriman building will be the most imposing structure of its kind west of Chicago. It will be a massive pile of steel and reinforced concrete, comprising nine stories and basement. It will have a frontage of 240 feet on Hill street and a depth of 330 feet.

The estimated cost of the building alone is $1,000,000. It will have a floor space of 669,000 square feet, or fifteen and one-half acres.

The first and second stories will be faced with granite; the upper seven

IF MR. TOGO SHOULD COME.

Where Would Los Angeles Be Blown to?

Coast's Defenseless and so Is the City.

Urgent Need of Forts, Guns and Gunners.

If Admiral Togo should come prowling into San Pedro Harbor about 1 o'clock this morning, wouldn't it sort of spoil your appetite for dinner?

Would you give up that Sunday trip to the beaches and go off for a hurried excursion over behind Mount Lowe, or would you take the old Mauser rifle you brought back from the Yanko-Spanko War and go down and blow the Jap fleet clean out of the water?

If there were to be any hostile demonstration it would lie entirely with you and your shotgun to defend the entire Southern California coast from Santa Monica to Newport against the invasion of the enemy. The Bannings might lend you their Cabrillo if you preferred to meet the destroyers of the Russian fleet in the open. But you would probably feel away down in your heart that any Fourth of July artillery you might train against the invaders would hardly crack the paint from the scarred battle beaks of the powerful warships of the Orientals.

But aside from the danger of being peppered full of bird shot by some patriot stationed up in the lighthouse at Point Firmin, there would be mighty few life insurance policies collected on dead Jap sailors slaughtered in the storming of San Pedro.

WE HAVE NO DEFENSES.

Other cities of the Pacific Coast have some fortifications, inadequate and under-manned though they may be, but Los Angeles has nothing of defense more formidable than captured relics of the Spanish War. The Japs could land their fighting forces on this Coast with infinitely more ease than the captains of the squealy little Long Beach tugs tie up to the wharf at low tide.

They could sail of a Sunday morning the whole length of this beach resort coast and make spooning on the sands more perilous than it has ever been before. They could touch off all the beach towns, and while enjoying the spectacle of their burning, could amuse themselves by firing through the smoke and ploughing up the whole southwest residence district of Los Angeles with thirteen-inch shells. The nicely-oiled streets would be ruined; real estate signs would be torn to smithereens, and the burning of the buildings themselves would make the San Francisco holocaust pale into insignificance. It might be thrilling to a disinterested spectator watching from the observatory on Mount Wilson, but it would be a painful sight to the man who saw his home and business go up in smoke punctuated by explosions of lyddite.

WHERE WOULD WE BE?

In case of war with Japan what of our Pacific Coast defenses as a whole? Should a flying squadron come cruising up and down from Puget Sound to San Diego, with the grim destroyers of the Russian navy playing their heavy guns upon the port cities of the Coast would they be promptly met with such a storm of shells from long distance disappearing guns as to make them churn at full speed out to sea again, or would they come right on in under a firecracker-like demonstration from small guns inadequately manned, and do to Pacific Coast ports what they did to Port Arthur?

The people on the Coast are interested to know. This question in its various phases is a live topic in San Diego, San Francisco, and Puget Sound where there are fortifications manned with heavy guns and trained gunners, and coast defense vessels at anchor. But in Los Angeles, which hasn't so much as a revenue cutter, the subject is perhaps seldom mentioned.

The Chamber of Commerce has a coast fortification committee which has made recommendation after recommendation setting forth the need of fortifications at San Pedro, and asking that some provision be made by Congress for such defenses. But as far as can be ascertained these efforts so far have been without results.

NEED FOR SAN PEDRO.

"I don't apprehend war with Japan—just yet," said Gen. Charles Forman of the Chamber of Commerce Coast Defense Committee yesterday. "But if from this agitation Congress can be moved to take the steps toward the fortification of our coasts that the conditions call for, much good will be the result.

"We need, immediately, more fortifications, more g[illegible] and more men along this whole Pacific Coast, unless we are to be left at the mercy of any hostile power that may come along. I have always advocated proper action along such lines. All military men and thoughtful statesmen have taken the same view of the situation. But Congress has delayed positive action for years. It is to be hoped that it will now be brought to a realization of the urgent need of doing something at once.

"Look at Los Angeles and Southern California for instance. There is absolutely nothing along our coast line here to protect us from hostile invasion. The fleet of an enemy might land off our coast here anywhere with absolutely no resistance being shown them. Their ships could throw shells into Los Angeles and destroy the entire city. Their troops could land and take possession of everything in sight before we might raise a hand to protect ourselves.

"We ought to have fortifications and guns at Point Firmin and south of San Pedro at least. And we ought to have stationed here a coast defense vessel of a similar type to those now anchored at San Francisco. There ought to be several more of these same vessels to be placed at San Diego and other Coast points to be readily available in time of need."

SOUTH COAST ESPECIALLY WEAK

"We are especially weak in our Southern California coast defenses," said William D. Stephens, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Harbor Board, yesterday. "It will be a good thing if this Japanese war talk would result in forcing Congress to take some recognition of the existing con-stories will have a facing of terra cotta. It will be equipped with eight passenger and two freight elevators.

On the first floor will be waiting rooms, a lange ladies' parlor, restaurants, ticket offices, an information bureau and three store rooms. There will be 1100 office rooms, exclusive of light wells and stairways. Specially constructed fire escapes will lead from each story.

There will be eight tracks leading from the subway and two from Hill street. All outgoing and incoming trains will be handled through separate entrances, so as to avoid confusion and every possible danger.

The accommodations will be such that ten trains can arrive and depart every five minutes. All new cars will be equipped with multiple unit control. The overhead trolley system will be used. There is to be no third rail, even in the subway.

The tunnel will be three and a half miles in length. The maximum curvature will be four degrees; the maximum grade, .87 per cent, and the ruling grade one-half of 1 per cent.

FOUR UNDERGROUND TRACKS.

In the concrete subway there will be four tracks. These will come to the surface at Flower street only. The subway will be a great concrete tube. Fourth and Hill streets will be the single depot inside the city limits.

The average running time to Venice will be twenty minutes for the accommodation trains; the limiteds will do better than that.

The service will consist of express trains containing five or six cars each. The power will be so regulated that the head motorman will be in charge of the entire train. He will handle it just as easily as an engineer handles a train of Pullman cars.

Power is an important item of the new service. The Los Angeles-Pacific Company has $1,000,000 of power now under order. Five enormous motor-generator sets will be located at Nadeau Vineyard and other places to reinforce the present substation capacity and to equip new stations.

These are but a few details of the new Harriman enterprise that have slipped past the censor. They probably do not comprise a tenth part of the project as planned—for Mr. Harriman enjoys a reputation for building railroads on the solid earth and not on paper. He has little use for a press agent, and less for a vaporing promoter.

OUT FOR OCEAN TRAFFIC?

In business and commercial circles there is considerable speculation as to the ultimate object which Mr. Harriman has in view in developing and extending the Los Angeles-Pacific lines in the direction of Santa Monica rather than the lines leading to the great port at San Pedro.

Already it has been decreed that the great lumber traffic of Santa Monica, Redondo and intermediate points, aggregating millions of feet and constantly augmented, a traffic heretofore handled by the Los Angeles-Pacific through Redondo, will now be thrown to the Southern Pacific at Port Los Angeles.

Some think that Mr. Harriman has in mind the vested interests of the Southern Pacific at that port. These interests plus the new ocean front privileges taken over with the Los Angeles-Pacific—tantamount to a practical monopoly of fifteen miles of ocean front—may be considered sufficient to warrant Harriman in spending additional millions to make Santa Monica Bay a port of entry capable of safely harboring the entire shipping of the Pacific.

The man who had the audacity to bridge the great Salt Lake will hardly falter in the face of the comparatively inexpensive necessity of a breakwater at Port Los Angeles.

Men who are nearest the railroad king have confided to friends that Harriman is preparing to anticipate increased ocean traffic and tonnage that will reach this Coast through the Panama Canal by building a foundation broad enough and deep enough for a second great independent port on the coast line of Southern California.

The improvements planned for the Los Angeles-Pacific by the allied Harriman interests evidently mark a new epoch in the history of Southern California. Enterprises like these are not attempted by men of the Harriman caliber unless others and greater ones are to follow.

It is known that the subway plans do not contemplate the abandonment of the project to build a short line into the Hollywood district via North Hill street. Plans for the North Hill-street tunnel are still under contemplation.

Hill street is Mr. Harriman's favorite thoroughfare. It is here that he expects the great skyscrapers of the future to be built. His investments in Hill-street property already run into the millions.

Mr. Harriman personally selected Fourth and Hill street as the site for the building that is to bear his name. His plans for improvement extend as far north as Sunset boulevard. To his associates he has expressed the opinion that ten years hence Hill street will be the heart of the business district.

The Fourth-street and Hill-street subways will provide routes of ingress and egress for the half-million population that will be here to greet the Owens River when it arrives in 1910. They will pave the way for the underground transportation routes that will give quick and easy entrance to the business district, and will prevent the blockades that occur on the main thoroughfares of so many large cities. It is the first movement toward a city under ground, and marks the admission of Los Angeles as one of the select fifty large cities of the world.

Half owner in the Pacific Electric and Inter-Urban railroads, and holder of a controlling interest in the Los Angeles-Pacific, Mr. Harriman has taken another step in his obvious purpose of becoming master of transportation facilities in Southern Califor ditions and make appropriations immediately for badly-needed fortifications.

"When you stop to consider that there is nothing between San Francisco and San Diego to stop the landing of a hostile force, it gives food for thought. Here in Los Angeles we would be wholly at the mercy of any hostile forces which might make a sudden attack upon us. Under the guns of a powerful warship a landing party might fortify itself on the heights about San Pedro and be immune from land attacks of any but a powerful force.

"Mind, I don't take any stock in this Japanese war agitation. I think it is all foolishness. But there is nothing like being prepared. And that we assuredly are not now. We may find to our regret that we will get to building fortifications after the great need for them has passed. But it is possible even now, I think, with a man of the hustling qualities of President Roosevelt at the head of things to accomplish many things along this line if Congress can be induced to take the necessary steps.

"In the work of the Harbor Board we have not as yet been called upon to consider the question of fortifications, except in a very general way, but there is no doubt in my mind that more adequate defenses ought to be provided for all of the coast, and something specific for San Pedro and vicinity."

FOR GOOD SHOTS.

Adj.-Gen. Corwin, formerly in charge of the Department of the Pacific, said recently: "We need legislation for the coast artillery. The matter of pay of enlisted men of artillery also demands attention by the lawmaking power. Service of requisite character is obtained in this world only by proper pecuniary remuneration.

"Above all, the greatest efforts should be made to retain in service men who have shown themselves expert gunners; men who can actually train the gun and hit the target, not simply men who have a knowledge of the theory of gunnery.

"A man who can hit the target, not once, but time after time, showing thus an inborn faculty for the work, should be retained at all hazards, be he non-commissioned officer or private, a well conducted soldier or one not well conducted. After all, in the coast artillery, as well as other combatant arms, the main object is to hit.

"I for one, strongly advocate that the coast artillery be increased at least one half and the pay of enlisted men to the grades noted raised."

THE PRESIDENT URGES.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft, heading a unanimous list of army officers, have strongly urged the improvement of the Pacific Coast defenses. It has been repeatedly pointed out to Congress that on the entire Pacific Coast from Puget Sound to San Diego the coast artillery is manned by but 3000 men and officers, when it is estimated that one full working detail ought to be 10,000 men and officers. An effort is being made to improve the existing coast fortifications through the expenditure of $10,000,000.

The erection of fortifications such as they propose would render all of the principal cities of the coast immune from attack and destruction from the sea, with the exception of Los Angeles. A hostile fleet could be kept off San Francisco, for with the immense guns which it is proposed to install both there and at Puget Sound and San Diego, the enemy's fleet could be sunk before it came within firing range of the forts.

So the Japs would probably turn their attention to Los Angeles, which they could devastate at their leisure and in the face of the whole assembled army of the United States without the loss of so much as a single man. It would be merely target practice for the little brown sailors. But the target would be about the most costly and valuable ever set up for gunners to take the range of. Also it would be a valuable lesson to the government of the United States to have Los Angeles entirely wiped off the map in a day by a hostile fleet, but Los Angeles could scarcely be expected to be pleased to any great extent.

CITY WOULD BE SHELLED.

So while business men of Los Angeles are for the most part actively in favor of the improvement of the coast defenses to an extent which will enable hostile fleets to be held off, they are anxious enough that Los Angeles should be included in the general scheme of fortification.

It is certain, they say, that no other city on the coast is more in need of such defense, or has more to lose through hostile attack. This city, it is pointed out, lies directly in the path that a hostile fleet would take after capturing the Hawaiian Islands with a like absence of struggle, and would be the one to suffer the greatest damage from a sea attack, even at the distance which it lies from the ocean.

Even though Japanese soldiers or the armies of any other belligerent nation should land on this coast or in this vicinity, they could easily be repulsed by American troops already massed on the field, provided these troops were protected by coast defense guns from the fire from high power naval guns of a fleet lying off the coast. And under such circumstances it is highly improbable that any foreign power would have the temerity to land its troops where they would surely be annihilated unless brought over in a hundred transports at a time.

NORTH POLE NOW WOMAN'S QUEST.

ELLA OUGMAN WILL SEEK THE ELUSIVE SPOT.

Has Won Reputation Already as Explorer and Anthropologist in the Klondike Regions, and Will Start North in About a Month With Band of Eskimos.

"Somebody has got to find the North Pole. The men who have gone searching for it have failed. I'm going to try, and I think I shall succeed."

This is the confident assertion of Mrs. Ella Ougman, explorer and anthropologist, who is making ready at Nome, Alaska, for an expedition "farthest north." Photographs of this plucky woman and some of the interesting retinue that will accompany her on the hazardous trip have just reached New York.

Mrs. Ougman is well known at Smithsonian institution, Washington, for her determined exploits in Alaska and other parts of the Northwest, where she had for several years been studying the habits of the Eskimos. She is regarded as an expert on the Innuits, as the Eskimos are known, and her collection of Eskimo curios is considered the finest extant.

TO RETURN IN TWO YEARS.

Mrs. Ougman expects to start within a month and believes she will return to Nome well inside of two years.

This newest of the explorers will have Eskimos as her only companions. She understands the Eskimos thoroughly, speaks their strange language as fluently as she does her mother tongue and considers that they will be best able to withstand the temptation to dig for gold in the Klondike and stick to the object of the expedition.

"I would have recruited a few sterling white men," said Mrs. Ougman, "if I could have found any proof against their falling victims to the gold fever. I have not projected this trip for the sake of making money out of it. It is not gold we shall seek, but the elusive North Pole—that and nothing else. I cannot afford to take any possible deserters with me. I know the Innuits. They are faithful.

"Those who will go with me have sworn that they will stay to the end of the trip, and I know they will do it. Besides this, no white has the endurance that the Innuits have, and of all things endurance counts in a trip to the Arctics."

Mrs. Ougman is known to the Eskimos as a man. Although she wears skirts, the unsuspecting Innuits have always been led to believe that they were donned simply to keep her warm. The Eskimos do not trust women as they do men, and if they suspected that the leader of their bold expedition was of the weaker sex they would not follow her.

DON'T KNOW SHE IS A WOMAN.

"The Eskimos grant me courtesies they would not think of allowing women," said Mrs. Ougman. "For instance, they allow me to enter their burying grounds—a thing no woman not native born is ever permitted to do. In this way I have gathered all manner of things from the treasure buried with the Eskimo dead.

"On the trip to the pole this will be of much importance to me. It will be my object not alone to look for the pole, but to study the habits of the different Eskimo tribes we meet."

The expedition will start on sledges drawn by Eskimo dogs. At the Eskimo settlement farthest north in the journey the sledges will be loaded with food. There will be enough, Mrs. Ougman says, to last twenty-four months. Should the commissary supply by any chance give out there will be some extra dogs that can be spared.

Mrs. Ougman has the distinction of being the only woman who has seen Mount McKinley, on the heights of the snowy Alaskan range. With a party of explorers she pushed up the Yukon Valley two years ago and stood at the base of the mountain. The climb to the peak of Mt. McKinley is 17,000 feet.

"There won't be any chance of fatigue on this trip," said Mrs. Ougman. "I have had experience in the awful cold of the Alaskan country, and know how to keep warm. This time we will pass Mt. McKinley and continue north until we have found the pole."

SUICIDE OR ACCIDENT?

Former Indicated by News from Portland, the Home of Anton Fritz, Killed at Fernando.

Anton Fritz, who was killed by a train at San Fernando last Sunday, probably threw himself under the wheels with the intention of committing suicide. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death, but facts now coming to light indicate otherwise.

It appears from reports from Portland, his home, that Fritz was driven to seek death because he had lost $4000 in an unfortunate mining speculation. He had previously been robbed by a negro woman in this city of $9500, an dhe is said to have insisted that his son, Lawrence, was implicated in the affair.

Relatives testified that after the second loss of money, Fritz showed signs of mental derangement.

INDORSES SEATTLE EXPOSITION.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange passed resolutions indorsing the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, which Seattle plans to hold during June, July, August, September and October, 1909. The exposition is announced to be held to demonstrate to the world the vast and increasing commerce of the Pacific Ocean, and to bring before the public the great resources of the vast Northwest region of the continent, especially Alaska, the Yukon country, and northwest Canada.

ON TRACK OF CAPT. HALL.

Mexico Pursues Little Rover and Her Skipper.

Queer Things Said About His Mysterious Cruises.

Romance and Drama Both in Singular Career.

When "Capt." A. W. Hall and the schooner Rover are both seized by the Mexican authorities in Lower California, as is expected soon, there are a good many persons in this city who will be rather pleased than otherwise. "Capt." Hall has been known to the oldtimers about the Courthouse for the last twenty-five or thirty years, and his life during that time has been something of a puzzle.

In [illegible] he was arrested for an alleged assault, with intent to murder Henry Kegel, and he preferred the same charge against Kegel, who also was arrested and brought to trial. Guerrilla warfare had existed between the men for a long time in the Santa Monica Mountains.

Kegel held 160 acres as a homestead and alongside Hall held another quarter section. When first the land was taken up, Hall and Kegel were like brothers, but there was a falling out and Kegel forbade Hall to trespass upon his land. As Hall couldn't get out of the La Vegota Cañon without crossing the disputed territory, he had either to stay at home or else run the risk of being shot by Kegel.

The latter, while law-abiding enough, intimated that any one trying to complicate matters by plastering scrip on his holdings, or otherwise forcing him into a corner, would have to answer to him for it. He always carried a gun instead of a walking stick, and as he was known to be expert in its use, he was not molested.

TAKES CHANCES.

Hall wouldn't remain boxed up like a rat in a trap, and crossed the debatable land whenever he felt like it, though he knew that he was taking chances. Kegel is said to have laid for him one day with a shotgun. Hall was driving a cart. A fusillade was fired and Hall, after banging away once or twice, laid down in the bed of the cart and let Kegel fire until his ammunition was exhausted. It is not of record that either combatant was injured, but both were arrested, and Kegel was found guilty in the Superior Court, but the case was appealed and finally dropped out of sight.

Some time later, Kegel's wife died and Hall insinuated that his neighbor had hastened the woman's death and had him arrested again. But the charge could not be sustained, and Kegel returned to his mountain home more at enmity with Hall than ever.

In a few months Kegel married again and took his wife to the house in the cañon, but ill luck dogged his footsteps. One day, when he was absent from home, the house was burned to the ground and his wife was burned to death.

By this time Hall began to get a little bit scared. He and Kegel had been having almost daily quarrels. Each would talk to the other from behind a tree, and there was constant dodging for an opening. Hall thought it wise to get out and he moved to Pasadena, where he got hold of a little piece of property. He was probably the organizer of an organization known as the Patriotic Order of American Mechanics. He got a "Council" started and then went to San Bernardino to organize a council there, for he was making money at the organizing game.

He borrowed the Bible and flag used in the council in Los Angeles as the San Bernardino council didn't possess any such articles at that time. Whether Hall utilized the Bible and flag in organizing the council or not, the Los Angeles council never had them returned. There was a row, for the flag was made of silk. Hall said that he had unfortunately lost it, but his enemies claimed that he sold it out for what it would bring.

GRAND ARMY REJECTS HIM.

Repeatedly Hall tried to gain admission to the Grand Army posts of the city, claiming that he was an old soldier. He said that he was born in Pennsylvania, but had served with the Third Indiana Cavalry through the war, under the name of Mike Flannagan. The local veterans would not believe his story. Then Hall wrote to the adjutant-general at Indianapolis and received a certificate of service under the name of Flannagan.

Armed with this, Hall again rapped at the lodge doors, but they were never opened to him.

FORGERY IS CHARGED.

In 1893 Hall was arrested on the charge of forging a check on the First National Bank, but while the man had the most wonderful aptitude for getting into trouble, he was equally lucky in getting out of it. After being in hot water for several years, he bought a little sloop, and went cruising. He was away for a year or two, and it was reported that he had been shipwrecked, and had afterward died. His wife applied to the Probate Court to administer his estate, and the small property remaining was about to be turned over to her, when Hall appeared at San Diego. Then his wife was indignant, applied for a divorce and got it.

Hall set sail again, and was again absent for a couple of years, and again returned. He took unto himself another wife, registered as a voter, and said that he was going to settle down in Los Angeles. But he couldn't keep quiet, and in a few months he started again for San Diego, and again hoisted the anchor of his little vessel. The strange thing about Hall's maritime adventures has been that at whatever port he puts in, his vessel is as empty as when he started. He never takes a cargo, but claims to be going somewhere in ballast. Ill-natured critics have accused him of running Chinese into the United States from Mexico via the Channel Islands, and also say that, when occasion offered, a light cargo of opium brought him big profits.

On an average, Hall has been arrested in Mexico about once a year, it is said. When last boxed up at Ensenada, it was for a more important offense than usual, and he wrote beseechingly to friends here, asking to get Congressman McLachlan to set the machinery in motion at Washington, or he would be a "dead 'un." His note also said that if his old Courthouse friends cared to make up a little purse for the purchase of luxuries for his prison, he would not say them nay.

And now the Mexican authorities are again watching for Hall, for he is charged with inveigling a woman and a young girl into making a voyage with him on the Rover.

MIDWINTER NUMBER.

The Midwinter Number of The Times, to be published on January 1, will fully sustain the reputation earned by these special numbers of The Times, during the past twenty years. It will contain a mass of reliable information concerning Los Angeles and Southern California, presented in attractive, readable form. The number will consist of six or seven bound magazine parts, similar in form to the Sunday Times Magazine, aggregating over 200 pages, in addition to the regular news sheets. There will be fifty full-page illustrations.

It is unnecessary to say that this is an exceptional opportunity for advertisers desiring to reach the eyes of the thousands of people east of the mountains, who are hungry for information about Southern California. No display advertisements for the Midwinter Number can be received after December 20, and no advertisements of any kind after December 27.

Coast defenses, Uncle Sam, coast defenses. "That's the medicine which our disease requires."

War talk is again springing up in various parts of the world. And Christmas is coming.

It is not so much a question as to where Christmas will be spent as it is how it it will be spent.

Hills turning green and the poinsettias blazing out in their Christmas clothes. Hail California of the South.

One often wonders how Senator Tom Platt of New York finds the time to attend so many lawsuits.

If it be possible that Abe Ruef got money out of actors, as charged, he is not only a thief but a wonder.

A "part-time" form of marriage is now advocated. But it can never take the place of the old rag-time sort.

The Japanese object to being classified with the Chinese. But instead of objecting they ought to feel complimented.

Charlie Schwab evidently has a desire to die poor, too. He is buying up all the mining properties he can get his hands on.

No doubt the Japanese came to the conclusion that we are barbarians after they had witnessed a few of our football games.

It doesn't matter what the amount of money is that the Philippines have cost us. The question is, how much blood are they to cost us?

The inside history of the Chicago Teamsters' Union is aired in the courts owing to the trouble between Kelly and Shea. Where's Burke?

A man may arrive at a stage in his career when he can write a check for $10,000 as easily as to give 10 cents to a beggarman, and still he may not be happy.

We do not blame Russia for hoping the United States and Japan will mix up in war. The fight would give Muscovy a chance to get square with both of us.

Things are looking better in spots, anyway. China is trying to prevent the use of opium among the natives, and France is endeavoring to stop the manufacture of absinthe.

College students are not always to be condemned for their rough-house tactics in public. Last week they stopped one of the theatrical trust's plays in a New York theater.

Money was reported "jumping" on Wall street, yesterday. And no doubt it was jumping sideways, as it has a habit of doing, not only in Wall street but on every other street the world over.

It would appear that the Civil War did not entirely dispose of the question of State sovereignty. It is still the subject of debates in Congress, which indicates that it will never be settled.

It seems that in Italy poets are awarded the "Collar of the Annunziata." In this country they are usually collared by a bill collector almost every time they venture out on the streets.

Throughout all these discussions on "How to be happy though married," it seems strange that no one ever mentions the old-fashioned plan of husband and wife just loving and respecting each other.

American authors are now demanding that the copyrights on their books shall last fifty years after their death. It will do no harm to grant the demand. In most cases nobody will notice the difference.

Two white men held up and robbed two Japanese in Los Angeles one night last week. They will probably excuse themselves on the plea that they suspected the Japs did not come by the money honestly, anyway.

MILLIONS FOR DEFENSE.

The time is ripe, this very morning, to recall the old American proclamation, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, in Congress the other day, speaking in behalf of the improvements of our rivers and harbors, gave it as his opinion that less should be spent on the navy and the money thus saved should be devoted to the improvement of the rivers of the country. Mr. Burton's constituents are in a position of happy safety. It is not at all likely that any foreign power will be able to reach his people in the city of Cleveland or anywhere along Lake Erie.

It is entirely different with those who live in the great coast cities, whether on the Atlantic or the Pacific shores of the country. The United States needs at the present time to go on with the utmost vigor and dispatch in building up a modern navy until it is at least twice the strength of what we have today. At the same time, every seaport on both shores of the country should be fortified as rapidly as money can be obtained, the guns cast and mounted, and ammunition provided. The nervousness felt at the time of our war with Spain seven or eight years ago was intense. The people of Boston and New York scarcely slept a quiet moment for thirty days after the proclamation of war. The Spanish had scarcely a warship of the real modern type, and what they had were badly manned and badly sailed.

It is a very different matter with Japan. This empire has within the last few years built up an exceedingly strong navy. The units are not numerous, but they are of the most powerful and efficient type. Today there is not one American battleship on the whole western coast of America, nor, in fact, anywhere in the waters of the Pacific Ocean.

It is not supposable under the present circumstances that we are to have any war with Japan, but one never can tell what will happen. The Japanese are an exceedingly conceited people as a result of their wonderful triumph over the great armies of the Russian empire. They really think that they can whip about half the world in a stand-up battle on land or sea. Their fighting qualities are undoubted. They have courage, patriotism, and skill. The army which took Port Arthur and overran Manchuria in the face of the powerful forces of Russia is scarcely disbanded. With the wonderful system of detail prevailing in the Japanese army, 100,000 fighting men could be assembled in a month and put on board of transports convoyed by powerful warships to sail for any port on the Pacific. It is only 1700 miles from Tokio to Manila. The Philippine Islands cost us, to begin with, $20,000,000. Americans are preparing during the coming year to put into investments in railroads and other industries in these islands twice that sum. During the six or seven years that we have had possession of the archipelago, it is estimated that our people have invested a total of $400,000,000 in one way or another.

The Hawaiian archipelago is a little farther from Japan than the Philippines and much nearer to America. But the distance from Japan and the nearness to San Francisco cut no figure, inasmuch as there is not a single American battleship in the whole Pacific Ocean. If Japan has or conceives warlike intentions toward the United States, that country will strike us as it struck Russia, without a word of warning, treacherously if need be. Before our government could weigh anchor on a single battleship prepared for action, Japan could send a half-dozen of the finest war machines afloat, convoying an army of 50,000 or 60,000 trained soldiers and land them at Manila, defying us to dislodge them. The fleet and transports could at once sail back to Tokio, where another fleet would be ready to land 25,000 or 30,000 soldiers in the Hawaiian Islands, and it all would be done before we could "get a move on."

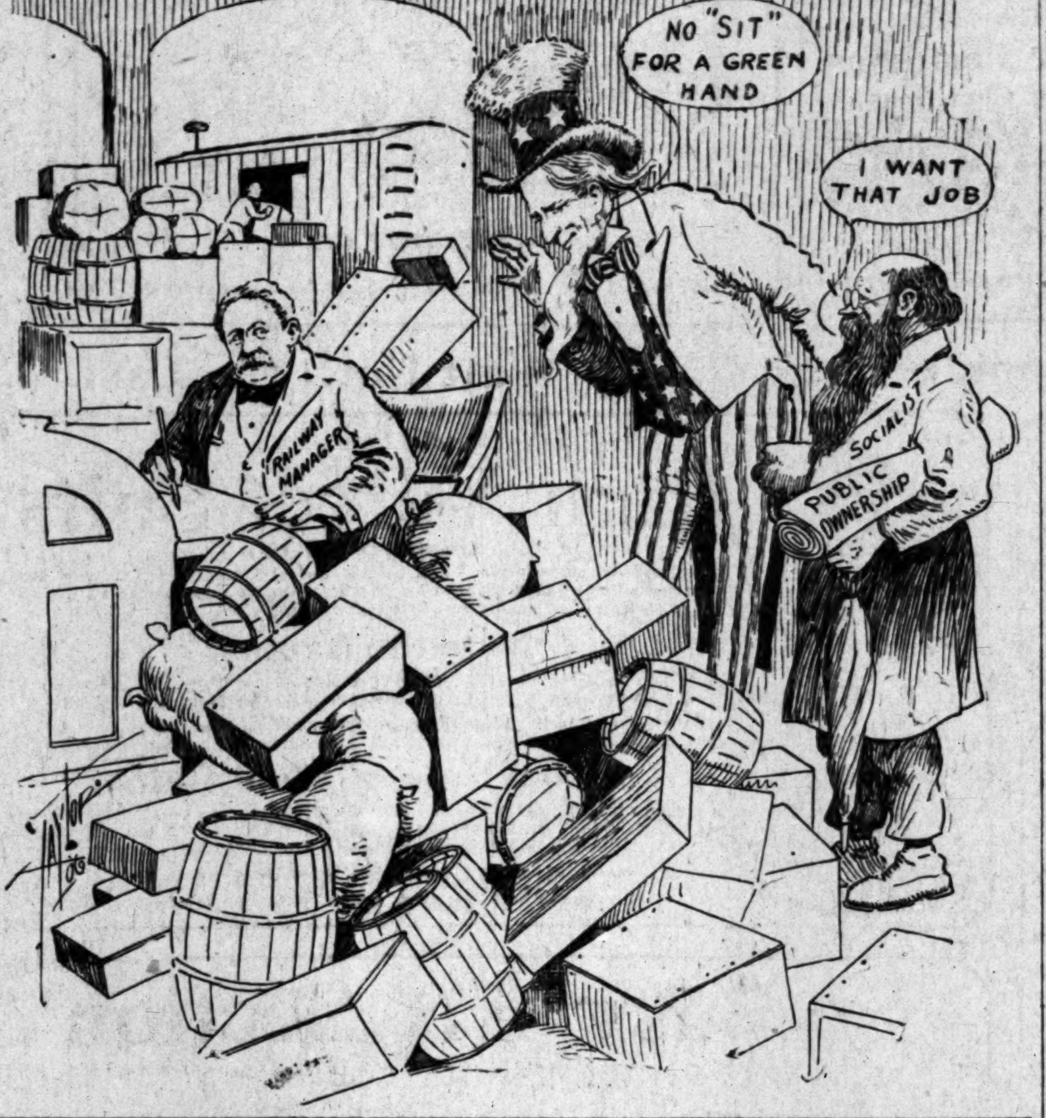
As to the cities of this coast, there is only one safe from the guns of the Japanese fleet. Portland, fortunately, is situated so far inland that no hostile fleet could reach that point. In ancient times, cities were built far enough from the seashore to preserve them from hostile invasion by sea. Our era being one of commerce rather than of fighting, we have placed our cities as near the broad ocean as we could find a safe harbor to protect our ships from storms. The Puget Sound towns would be shelled one after another before we could raise a finger to prevent it. A single Japanese battleship could do the whole work. A second could stand off of the Golden Gate at the Farallone Islands and shell San Francisco and Oakland. A third battleship could from the bay of Santa Monica knock down every ten-story building in the city of Los Angeles.

Of course this would not be done. What the Japanese would do would be to slow down steam in the ocean off of these cities and send a boat ashore, demanding the surrender of every dollar in the vaults of every bank in each city. They would collect (and we could not help ourselves) a war indemnity without firing a shot.

These cities are extremely easy to defend. Sufficient guns properly mounted on the bluffs around the Golden Gate would defy the combined fleets of Europe and Asia to enter the port or destroy the city of San Francisco. The same measures taken at the mouth of the Puget Sound would defy the heaviest ships on the sea to knock down a single brick in any of the sound cities. Guns mounted where the lighthouse stands at San Pedro and on the bluffs above Santa Monica would render Los Angeles and the surrounding towns impregnable. With proper batteries around the lighthouse at San Pedro and on the heights of Catalina Island, no warship could come within reach of anything along this part of the coast.

Our position in the world is utterly changed since the Spanish war. We are no longer an isolated nation with a sort of imaginary Chinese wall around us. We are in the thick of everything as a great world power with closest diplomatic relations with all the great nations of the earth. It is absolute foolishness for us any longer to go on in this negligent manner, leaving so much to hazard. The work of fortifying the coast on both oceans should be taken up at once and carried on with the utmost vigor. When the war with Spain broke out, there was not an arsenal in all America that had a ton of powder fit to burn. We had no equipment of any kind, and if the contest had been waged with a power more capable of defending itself than Spain, or more capable rather of attacking us, the war might have been lost by our defeat as quickly as it was won by the defeat of Spain, which resulted more from her greater unpreparedness than from our foresight and wise provision against such emergencies.

EVERY MAN TO HIS TRADE



ALWAYS MAKING MISCHIEF.

When anything untoward happened in Turkey under one of the former Sultans, no matter what the nature of the event, the Turk always asked, "Who was the woman?" So when in our country and day any mischief arises the question, "Who was the walking delegate?" is pertinent.

The disturbance of friendly relations between the United States and Japan is a direct outgrowth of the mischief making of San Francisco's unspeakable gang—the gang at the bottom of all the troubles of that unhappy city, excepting the fire.

The people of San Francisco have undergone unspeakable losses and are contending against a condition of things that well might make weaker hearts faint in the struggle. To get the city rebuilt is an enormous task. There is not enough labor, skilled or unskilled, in any branch of industry, to perform the necessary work, and the people whose means of living is the end of their tongue will let no man work if they can prevent it.

The débris of buildings remaining after the fire had in many cases a considerable value. The little Japanese, with skillful hands and patient souls, were engaged at moderate wages to clean these bricks and prepare them for reuse in the erection of temporary buildings for business purposes on the lots of people who had lost so heavily. That was enough to inspire the detrimental interference of the walking delegates. They immediately took up a crusade against the industrious Japs, as they have always done against any industrious people. There were no white men nor black men nor red men in San Francisco to do this work. If the bricks could be cleaned and reused there was not only the saving of the value in the bricks, but the saving of cost incident to hauling them away to be dumped far from where they were found. The walking delegate, unconscious of any regard for the interests of any but himself, declared that these bricks should not be cleaned by the Japanese, which meant that they should not be cleaned at all, but on the contrary, the owner of the lot should be taxed to haul them away at considerable expense before he could begin the erecting of the most temporary building to carry on his business. Not content with waging warfare upon the industrious Japanese engaged in cleaning these bricks, the same irresponsible loafers started the propaganda for the exclusion of Japanese laborers from the United States by an act similar to the Chinese exclusion law. This led up to the attempt to exclude the Japanese children from the public schools of San Francisco.

Here is the whole root of the matter. It comes back, as all these disturbances come back, right to the door of the loafer who, at the head of the most tyrannous trust in the United States, the labor trust, is always against the man who works, regardless of the color of his skin, or the nation into which he was born.

The question about schools for the Japanese is a minor matter. It will undoubtedly be arranged to the entire satisfaction of the people of San Francisco, of the Japanese government and of the Japanese students themselves. It is pretty clearly defined under our system of government that this is a mere matter of policing the city and that the municipal authorities have the right to make such regulations as they may see fit. The treaty, of course, is the supreme law of the land, but like an act of Congress, it must conform to the general principles of the Constitution of the United States.

A much more important question is this other one about the exclusion of Japanese laborers from the United States. If the President or the Congress or the people of the East generally, who at heart would be opposed to such a law, are misled by the demagogic outgivings of the average California Congressman, especially the one from San Francisco, who has to look to the influence of the walking delegate for his reëlection, they will make a grave mistake. California needs 100,000 laborers to do unskilled, rough work at this present moment. The farmers and fruit growers, the sugar-beet growers, and, indeed, every one engaged in the cultivation of the soil, finds himself very much handicapped all through every harvest time to get his crops gathered. About the only reliance we have is upon the few Chinese left in the country, and they are very few, indeed, who are not engaged in gainful pursuits on their own account, and the small number of Japanese already here. It would not do one cent of damage to any individual in California, and it would work a great deal of benefit to thousands of the farmers and fruit growers of the country, if 100,000 Japanese were landed in the State within the next twelve months.

The agitators and their representatives in Congress do not represent the real sentiment of the real people of California. Wherever a citizen of any standing in the State (not a politician) has the courage to speak his thoughts freely, it is his opinion that not only the incoming of these Japanese is no detriment in any way to any interest in the State, but it is almost a necessity that we should have more common laborers to do rough work upon the farms and in other capacities.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

It is a good sign of the times that a great deal of attention is devoted to the effort to make men and women happy. It is a subject that is widely discussed in the newspapers, the magazines, on the forum and in women's clubs.

It is also a good sign that the talk, whenever it is up, takes on a decidedly optimistic trend. It seems to be the general belief that the world can yet regain the lost art of being happy if the proper effort is put forth. There are many of the writers and orators who even go so far as to claim that it is quite possible to be happy, though married.

And why not? Really there should be no reason why the world could not again be as happy as it used to be in the dear old days before we all became money-mad and strenuous and yearners after the flesh pots. Our grandfathers were happy, and so were our grandmothers. They hadn't much money, they never knew what an automobile was, but they used to get around just the same. They made use of their hearts for the purpose of loving one another, and not merely to pump blood into their brains so that they could think up some new way to make a million dollars.

Even as the world is now constituted it is just as easy to be happy in it as it ever was, and, indeed, more so. The way to do it is to quit this insane race after the rolling and elusive coin, "to earn a little and to spend a little less." To "have a few friends, but those without capitulation." To regard our neighbors with affection. To slow up. To learn to wreathe the countenance in smiles, and to take at least 60 per cent. of the chances to laugh that come a thousand and one times between every morning and night.

The House of Happiness is subject to no particular rules of architecture. It may be a mansion that it took a king's ransom to build, or it may be a log cabin that you builded with your own hands. Let "the joyless American face" be banished from the highways. In the immortal words of Dr. Harry Ellington Brook, "Don't hurry, don't worry, and avoid certain inward physical restrictions."

BLACK DEVILTRY SURE.

It is about time the world, that is the sane, wholesome part of humanity, lifts its voice with one accord against the tommy-rot and rubbish that is played up nearly every week that the moon comes around about hypnotic influence and emotional insanity and other subterfuges and hollow pretenses for breaking the statute laws of the country and the eternal laws of righteousness.

Here we have a bunch of our newly-acquired citizens in Chicago with one Herman Billeck exercising a diabolical influence over a married woman and that woman's own daughter. There are intimations in the story that Billeck poisoned one or two members of the Vrzal family and that he maintained utterly abominable relations with the Vrzal woman. This woman's daughter, a young girl, tells about the brute, whom she intimates poisoned her own sister, kissing her mother. And she kissed him, too, saying that it seemed perfectly right for her to do so. Then the pair fall back on the rubbish of hypnotic influence. It is simply bestial nastiness when you shear it of all this false pretense and foolishness, nothing more and nothing less.

It is the same with the Thaw murder case. The attempt will be made to establish for that red-handed shedder of human blood that he was beyond all moral responsibility because beyond all mental control when he killed Stanford White. The man is a murderer if ever a murder was committed since Cain slew Abel, and ought to pay the just penalty of his crime.

We have a case here in our own court, a horrible one from Long Beach, in which a male brute committed an offense as black as hell upon an unsuspecting and innocent child. That the brute is well out of the way no one will dispute, but that the stepfather of the child, driven on by the energetic frenzy of her mother, was justified in killing the man cannot be set up with any sense of justice in this day and place. The peace officers who stimulated the mother to stir up the father to commit this crime certainly are accessories before the act. They are not fit to exercise the duties of peace officers.

Lax administration of the law is the only excuse for these heinous crimes. When our courts will cultivate sufficient moral perspicacity and mental stamina to insist that juries do their duty and execute the laws impartially, not vindictively nor cruelly, but firmly for the best interests of society, there will be an end to these acts of unlawful violence and it will be better for the United States and for each community in it.

AS TO CORPORATIONS.

It is very much to be feared that there is a confusion in the public mind which prevents a just discrimination between corporations, as such, and monopolies that exist "in restraint of trade." It is to this confusion that must be attributed the feeling of actual animosity that is prevalent against corporations in general, and which is really a senseless animosity, having no reasonable grounds upon which to sustain itself.

Corporations are a necessity of the times in which we live, and the conditions which govern us as a civilized and progressive nation. When a number of persons combine for the better conduct of any particular trade or business, they form a corporation. The laws of the various States of the Union not only recognize such combinations, but encourage them.

A corporation is, in reality, merely a combination of individuals who have associated themselves together in order to conduct their affairs more economically and with greater facility than they could do in any other way. Instead of being a menace, the average corporation is a convenience and a benefit to its members and to the communities with which it does business.

With a very few notable exceptions the various corporations that exist throughout the United States today are either directly or indirectly owned by the common people themselves—the very people, indeed, whom agitators and demagogues seek to prejudice against these organizations. In most cases their bonds are owned by savings banks—that is, by people who patronize savings banks and make a practice of hoarding the fruits of their labor. In equally as many cases the bonds that corporations issue are bought up by the great mass of the people. Whenever either the stocks or bonds of a corporation are placed on the market it is the public that picks these investments up.

The specious cry of politicians against the organized enterprises and industries of the country has no weight with thinking people, who have long ago realized that corporations are a necessity. The practice of a large number of persons of small means employing those means in a common cause has borne good results. The experiment has proved profitable and convenient.

If corporations were to be legislated out of existence the result would be to work a hardship on those who are least able to bear hardships. For these reasons, alone, there should be an end to this silly anti-corporation talk that the soap-box orators are so fond of indulging in.

The forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued on January 1, will contain six or seven magazine parts, aggregating over 200 pages.

DIAMONDS

For Christmas Gift-Giving

The Diamond is truly "in a class of itself" when it comes to gift giving. In selecting no other Yuletide present is there the same assurance of increasing values as the years go by.

Gems are rising in value the whole world over.

Undimmed Beauty

As to brilliance, also, years can have no dimming effects. A quarter century from this Christmas-tide your gem-gift will shine as gloriously as today, to remind the recipient of the donor's thoughtful kindness and well wishing.

Emblematic

And the unapproached brightness and clarity of this queen of all gems seems aptly fitting to the glad Christmas season, and emblematic of its sentiments of happiness and cheer.

Exclusive

Doubtless you will enjoy gift-giving the more if you are able to select a jewel that is absolutely exclusive in design. Our stock is replete with such—in styles and prices that range most widely to suit individual tastes and purses.

Monkey People.

t it be recorded that nowhere else the civilized world can be found such an unmannerly gang of hoodlums as the occupants of the bleachers at Mr. McCarey's place of entertainment near Naud Junction. A large majority of the patrons of the place is disposed to peaceable enjoyment of the controversies instigated by Mr. McCarey. When Mr. Cook, the gentleman endowed with lungs of brass, would converse, the statesmen, doctors, lawyers, preachers and exemplary citizens assembled would like to hear his words of wisdom. Even the Bandarlog on the back benches has a rudimentary desire to know what the noises issuing from the cavern in Mr. Cook's face mean, but it can't stay quiet long enough to find out. Being in large numbers and individually irresponsible, the Yahoos know it is safe to yell insults at every one in sight. Like a troop of monkeys in the treetops, they shriek and scream their incoherent imbecilities from the opening of the show to the end.

Some good people condemn the boxing game because they think it an exhibition of human degradation and an encouragement of ruffianism. They are partly right, but not in the way they think. The ruffianism is in the crowd, not in the ring. Most of the fighters are quiet, civil fellows, and they batter each other with the greatest good nature imaginable. If one goes to prize fights to study the human brute, he must give his undivided attention to the howling hoodlums on the benches. In other cities, the natural instincts of the Yahoo are repressed by the policeman's club, but in Los Angeles the offensive beast is unrestrained, and the fact that the roof of the fight pavilion hasn't fallen in around the edges incites a suspicion that the evolutionary law which eliminates the unfit isn't in good working order.

Infringement of Copyright.

Mayor-elect Harper is quoted as having said that he knows more about hydraulics than all the engineers in the world; that the Owens River should be brought down in a steel pipe and not in cement conduit. The quotation is open to suspicion, because it is made by one who has misquoted everybody on the subject; but Mr. Harper sells pipe, and naturally has a high opinion of the merits of pipe. If he were a tanner, he might think the conduit should be made of leather. The Mayor-elect should remember that there is only one person in Los Angeles properly qualified to settle all questions offhand—only one who knows everything, is everything, has done everything and can tell everybody how to do any old thing in the world. It is unbecoming in Mr. Harper to trespass on the prerogative of Uncle Heine, who was the first to demand that the Owens River aqueduct be made burglar proof and suspended in the air from balloons to preserve it from damage by earthquakes.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The office of gas and meter inspector was abolished yesterday by action of the City Council. It is said Mayor McAleer will veto the ordinance, as he believes the official is needed to make an investigation into gas supply conditions.

The City Council decided yesterday to readvertise for a fire engine house site in the district between Fifth, Sixth, Flower, Hope and Figueroa streets.

Public Librarian Lummis yesterday asked the Board of Public Works for advice as to the best method for securing funds to build a library in Central Park.

More civil service examinations are called for city employés.

The City Council yesterday decided to have a public hearing on the question of allowing an ostrich farm to locate near Eastlake Park. There are petitions from both advocates and protestants.

F. R. King charges his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia A. Marshall, with alienating his wife's affections and inducing her to leave him. He is suing for $5000 damages.

Earl Rogers yesterday concluded his argument in the trial of H. Wilson, who killed a Long Beach musician. On Monday Maj. Donnell will close for the prosecution and the case will be given to the jury.

Ferdinand Jaesckke was sentenced by Judge Smith yesterday to five years at Folsom for participation in the robbery committed at Huber & Huber's store.

AT THE CITY HALL.

CITY OFFICE IS ABOLISHED.

COUNCIL DOES AWAY WITH GAS METER INSPECTION.

Monthly Report Shows That Official Drawing Fat Salary Made Only Two Inspections, Collecting for the City Just One Dollar—Mayor May Veto Council's Action.

The city of Los Angeles is without the services of an official gas and meter inspector. But, judging by the past records of this office, the incumbent will not be missed.

The office was legislated out of existence yesterday afternoon by the City Council. This came about after the monthly report of Inspector L. C. Read had been read at the request of one of the Councilmen.

The report disclosed the fact that the inspector had made two tests during the month, and for this service had collected fees amounting to $1, which had been turned into the city treasury.

The salary of this inspector is $150 per month. His work was that of an average month. Councilman Smith moved that the office be abolished. He declared "This is getting to be a ridiculous proposition, and we must put an end to it." The Councilmen voted unanimously to abolish the office.

This abolishment has come, however, at a time when there is a demand for an inspector, if there ever was one. The gas famine of the past few weeks has aroused the people to demand an investigation of conditions which will permit such inconveniences and menaces to health, and the Board of Public Works, Mayor and City Attorney are casting about to determine just what form an investigation should be taken, and by whose authority.

Just what effect this doing away with the gas inspector's office will have on the proposed investigation is a question. Yesterday Mayor McAleer, City Attorney Matthews, City Attorney-elect Hewitt and Gas Inspector Read held a conference regarding the situation, and the inspector was instructed to gather certain data which is to be combined in a report to the City Council.

It is doubtful, in the opinion of the City Attorney, whether the Board of Public Works has any legal right to proceed with an investigation without further authority; but the Council can take up the subject and make provisions which will reach the case.

The formal repeal of the section of the ordinance creating the office of gas and meter inspector will require the presentation of an ordinance to be drawn by the City Attorney, even though the Council yesterday put itself on record. This will probably be presented at tomorrow's session. It was intimated last evening by those in close touch with Mayor McAleer that he will promptly veto the ordinance, as he believes that at the present time the official can be of much service to the city in the proposed investigation.

Councilman Hammon last evening declared that in case the Mayor vetoes the ordinance he would propose that the office be continued, but that all fees be abolished. This will allow people to call for tests at any time they suspect their meters are at fault or other gas troubles are suspected, without cost to the consumers.

DEATH'S TRAP.

WEDGED IN STORM SEWER.

W. J. Hicks of No. 1895 West Fifth street had a startling experience the other day while working for the city. He was employed to investigate the reason for the constant stoppage of the sixteen-inch storm sewer which runs forty feet underneath Sixth street at its intersection with Burlington avenue. He entered the sewer and managed to make his way back in the pipe to a distance of sixty feet, pushing a lantern on ahead of him when he suddenly found that a section of the sewer was caving in just ahead of him. Thoroughly scared he began to back out. His light was extinguished, and every moment he imagined he could feel the walls giving way as they pressed upon him. He had found as he made his original progress that the sewer pipe was shattered in many places and in his hurry to scramble out he dislodged many of these pieces. Hicks finally made his escape from what he was certain would be sure death, and he declared to the Board of Public Works yesterday that he would not go down into that hole again for $10,000. He reports that the entire section he traversed is liable to crumble down at any moment. The whole drain will have to be replaced, and unless done promptly property owners will suffer from the storm waters that are certain to accumulate. Notice was served on the board yesterday by property owners that they would hold the city responsible for any damages caused through this source.

NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY.

WHENCE SHALL IT COME?

Librarian Lummis has sent to the Board of Public Works a letter, asking an expression of opinion on the question of a bond issue for the purpose of erecting a public library building; or the advisability of a public subscription, perhaps in the form of an incorporation which would erect the building, and then turn it over to the city for maintenance under permanent conditions; or by direct appeal to Andrew Carnegie.

Lummis refers to the decision of the Supreme Court, in which the popular verdict of the people of this city is upheld, and the right to place the public library in Central Park is declared. He says:

"This is a question which concerns the whole city—and not only now but for generations to come. The board of library directors feels that a decision should be by consultation of the largest number of representative bodies and citizens that can be induced to share the responsibility."

He declares that the present library quarters will be adequate in space for three years, and that it will take that long to complete plans and erect such a building as is desired.

NEW SITE WANTED.

COUNCIL WILL READVERTISE.

The objection of many property owners to the city purchasing a lot in block 22½ of Ord's Survey, a lot on Flower street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, as a site for a new fire-engine house, was presenetd to the City Council yesterday, and caused much discussion.

It was stated that property could be secured at fully as desirable a location for half the cost. Councilman Smith championed the objectors. He declared that a suitable lot could be purchased so as to make a saving of at least $15,000 over the figures for the site selected.

"It seems to me that it has been the concern of the chief of the fire department, and of the Fire Commissioners to select sites that are on street railways, or some other place where there will be pleasant diversion for the fire boys while they are loafing. I am in favor of hunting out a cheaper site."

It was decided to readvertise for offers of lots, and this time it is desired to secure figures on lots lying between Fifth and Sixth, Hope, Flower and Figueroa streets.

Ostriches Cause Dissension.

Are ostriches a benefit to a neighborhood, or a detriment? This is the question on which the City Council will have to pass judgment on December 17. An ordinance has been prepared, at the request of certain citizens in the vicinity of Eastlake Park, prohibiting the placing of any ostrich far min that territory. At the same time there has come to the Council a petition from other property owners of the district, praying that this ordinance be not passed, and that the Council use its powers to encourage the establishment of an ostrich farm at or near the park, as they aver that such an institution will be the means of increasing the value of real estate thereabouts. A public hearing of the merits and demerits of ostriches as real estate boomers will take place on the date mentioned.

Florist Gowan Gets a Raise.

Florist William Gowan, whose splendid work at the Eastlake Park Conservatory has been a pleasure to thousands of Angelenos and tourists, yesterday had his monthly salary raised to $115 by the City Council, upon recommendation of the Park Commission. It is said Gowan has had more remunerative offers for his services from private parties, but his pride in the work accomplished at Eastlake Conservatory keeps him there.

Modern Accounting System.

The City Council yesterday authorized the Board of Public Works to expend $500 in the installation of a modern system of accounting and cost keeping in the bureau of the Los Angeles aqueduct. The Council also empowered this body, by the passage of a necessary ordinance, to employ the men needed to construct the outfall sewer.

Pay for Day Employees.

The City Council at yesterday's session gracefully adopted the request of the Board of Public Works that hereafter when the Council proposed to change the rate of pay or the hours of employment of any employé under the supervision of the board it confer with the board before so doing. Mayor McAleer had sent a veto to the ordinance proposing to give all day employés full pay for all holidays, except Sundays. Councilman Howton wanted to pass the ordinance over the Mayor's veto, but wiser council prevailed, and the last week's action was rescinded and the proposition was filed. Then the Council adopted by unanimous vote a motion that the Board of Public Works be requested to confer with the City Attorney with the view of "adopting a sane and satisfactory basis of hiring men under some other system than by the day."

More Examinations.

The Civil Service Commission has called examinations for Saturday, December 22, at the Turn Verein Gymnasium, No. 1345 South Figueroa street. The examinations include tests for drivers in the fire department, promotions from hosemen to drivers, hosemen. On the same date, at the Grand-avenue School there will be examinations of candidates for gas and meter inspector and inspector of reinforced concrete, tunnel foremen, foremen, carpenters and masons for the outfall sewer.

Association Protests.

C. S. James, Rev. O. V. Rice and J. P. Taggart, representing the Belmont Heights Improvement Association, yesterday morning made protest to the Board of Public Works over the condition of Kent street. They declare that Contractor Dunnigan, who has the contract for improving Bonnie Brae street, has hauled the surplus earth from this street out onto Kent street, and has left it there. Kent street is also to be improved, and this cannot be done until this earth is removed. They asked that a portion of the contract money for Bonnie Brae street be withheld until this work is done. The board will make investigations, and has summoned Dunnigan before it for an explanation.

New Branch Library.

A new branch of the Public Library is to be established the first of the year at the playgrounds No. 1, Violet and Mateo streets.

Want Elevated Bridge.

Attorney Clofelter, representing the Santa Fé Railway, appeared before the Board of Public Works yesterday and asked that plans be made for raising the new Seventh-street bridge when it is built, so that the Santa Fé Railroad will have a clear passageway under the westerly approach for its main line to San Diego. The matter has been referred jointly to the City Engineer and the railroad's district engineer. This change would require the extension of the approach a long distance westerly.

Election Officers' Pay.

A resolution was adopted by the City Council yesterday placing the compensation of election officers at the late city election at $10 each.

Consulting Engineers' Salaries.

It was discovered last week that the City Council had never formally ratified the plant to pay the board of consulting Engineers on the Owens River project the sums of $7500 each and expenses; and yesterday's session passed a resolution authorizing the Board of Public Works to make a requisition for the proper amount for these salaries.

Proceedings Abandoned.

The City Council yesterday formally abandoned all proceedings for the widening of Maple avenue, between Fifth and Seventh streets, and for the opening of Darwin avenue, from Main to Douillard streets. Property owners in the Darwin avenue assessment district paid the sum of $1,401.90, the expense already incurred in that project, and on this consideration the work was abandoned.

Civil Service Examiner.

An ordinance was adopted by the City Council yesterday providing for the employment of a civil service examiner at a salary of $150 per month. The salary of the stenographer for this department was raised from $65 to $75 per month. There is no change in the salaries of other employés of this department.

Companies Want a Refund.

Both the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company presented to the City Council yesterday demands for a refund of taxes paid under protest on an assessment of their franchises. They base their claims on a case in which the city of Fresno and a company operating under act of Congress were the principals and which was decided against the city. The demands were referred to the City Attorney for a report.

Will Advertise Franchise.

The City Council will sell to the highest bidder a franchise for an electric railroad extending as a continuation of the Garvanza line out through the New York and Eagle Rock valleys. The advertisement was ordered yesterday. This is the proposed line for which citizens have raised a $10,000 bonus.

More Alley Collections.

Superintendent of Garbage Collection Lofthouse has made a report to the Board of Public Works regarding the alley collections, in which he states that the experiment has proved fairly successful, although there is still much to be desired from householders in the proper placing of garbage cans. The board yesterday decided to apply the alley collection system to another district, and it will probably select a district in which there are many apartment houses.

Another Man Wrote Shakespeare.

Now it is Roger Manners, fifth Earl of Rutland, to whom a German scholar is attributing the plays of Shakespeare. The reference books say that a manuscript of "profitable instructions," written for his guidance, was probably by Lord Bacon. Perhaps this merely makes a circle of the old controversy. Did Bacon write Rutland's literary remains?

How She Broke the Cup.

Signora Veronelli (seeking a servant:) Why were you sent away from your last place?

"Because I broke a coffee cup."

"Was that the only reason?"

"Certainly, except that on that occasion my mistress had a little wound on the head."—[El Riso.

To Real Estate and other Classified Advertisers: The forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued January 1, 1907, will be a splendid medium for the exploitation of attractive real estate offerings. Thousands of copies will be mailed by citizens of Southern California to friends abroad who are figuring on emigrating to the Southwest. The rate will be 3 cents per word for classified announcements to run in the magazine section of this special issue. "Liner" copy will be received up to and including Dec. 27th.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

HOME IS NO LONGER HAPPY.

MOTHER-IN-LAW IS BLAMED FOR TROUBLE.

Former Brakeman on Espee Sues Her for Alienating His Wife's Affections and Asks Big Damages. Says Religious Fanaticism Is at Bottom of the Matter.

Fred R. King, recently a brakeman on the Southern Pacific, has brought suit against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia A. Marshall, for the alienation of his wife's affections and for inducing her to abandon her home and to take her children away with her. King claims $5000 as damages. He proposes to sue out a writ of habeas corpus and recover possession of his children, if he can.

The story lying behind this suit is rather exceptional. King married his wife in the East, and claims to have lived with her on most affectionate terms. He says that the trouble is of religious origin. While living in Chicago he claims that his mother-in-law first raised doubt and suspicion in the heart of his wife. The old woman is intensely religious, he says, and is a Catholic, as is Mrs. King. Mrs. Marshall, it is said, told her daughter that having linked her fate with a divorced man, she musn't think that she was married to him, for in the eyes of God she was not.

So constantly were these words dinned into the ears of his wife that she was made very unhappy, the husband says, and he tried to allay her fears, and did not raise any opposition when his wife and mother-in-law took the matter before high authorities of the church in Chicago. The church refused to meddle with the matter, except to say that though legally married under the law of the land, the marriage was not sanctioned by the church.

When Mrs. Marshall went to Los Angeles, King says that he and his wife and children were happy. But Mrs. Marshall, who was working as a nurse under Dr. McArthur, became ill and sent for her daughter. King was loth to come here and settle in the neighborhood of his mother-in-law, but he says that he loved his wife dearly and consented. The mother-in-law got better, and then, it is said, she again began to blame her daughter for living with a man in defiance of the commands of the church and of God.

King had furnished a nice little home for his family at No. 220 South Avenue Eighteen, but he was made anxious and unhappy by the unhappiness of his wife. Mrs. Marshall didn't visit his house, King says, but another daughter, Mrs. Molly Clifford, came constantly as an envoy from her mother to the young wife. Finally Mrs. King asked her husband if he wouldn't go to Rev. Father Harnett and seek counsel from him. King said he would do anything to give his wife peace of mind and restore happiness to their home. He says that he saw Father Harnett and was told that his wife had married innocently, not knowing that he was a divorced man, and that she was not in the same guilty position as himself, and that there should either be a separation or else he and his wife should live together as brother and sister.

The problem was solved when Mrs. King disappeared from her home, taking her two children with her. On December 3 King avers that he kissed his wife and babies goodby in the morning, and at night returned to an empty house. His wife took with her all the money there was, he says. He calls his mother-in-law a religious fanatic and blames her for all the trouble.

GETS FIVE YEARS.

BURGLAR'S PLEA FAILS.

Ferdinand Jaesckke is a young man who, in pleading guilty to the burglary charge before Judge Smith yesterday, claimed to have been compelled to participate in the crime at the point of a revolver.

Jaesckke and two other defendants are charged with breaking into Huber & Huber's store at No. 1822 South Main street, and stealing about 200 finger rings, 10 watch chains, a dozen lockets and a lot of other articles. After the defendants were arrested, all of the stolen property was recovered.

It was shown that one of the men broke in a door and Jaesckke told the court that he did it because he was threatened with death if he didn't do just what he was told.

Judge Smith sent him to Folsom for five years.

WILSON TRIAL NEARS END.

CASE GOES TO JURY MONDAY.

Earl Rogers completed his argument to the jury yesterday in the murder trial of Wilson, the Long Beach man who killed Wallace Belden last August. He said, in substance, that public opinion presented an iron front against all assaults upon innocent children.

Attorney Knight of Long Beach followed with a short argument in which he sought to show from the testimony that Wilson was not of sound mind and understanding.

Monday Maj. Donnell will close the case in behalf of the prosecution, and it will then go to the jury.

Late Forsythe Novelties in Women's Coats and Suits

We have just received from John Forsythe, New York, some very swell separate Velvet Coats. These coats are hip jacket models, very rich and handsome and posses both the elements of novelty and exceptionally good taste.

We also have from Forsythe, Suits in White Serge—very dressy for carriage and street wear. These suits are absolutely new in design and effect—totally different from the models ordinarily shown.

New Evening Coats here also in light shades of tan—very elaborate and strikingly modish.

A Comparison

Three or four years ago "Marconi" stock was begging purchasers at fifty cents a share on the dollar, the same as we are asking for Murry Marine Steady-Floating Steel Structures Company Stock today. The latest quotation we have seen of "Marconi" is $154.00 per share.

Its Birth Place

Los Angeles is the birth place of this great discovery of a new application of a basic principle by William Edward Murray, and here we are making our first offering of stock and giving the people of Los Angeles and vicinity the first opportunity to subscribe for shares.

A Possibility

Today twenty (20) shares of Murray Marine will cost you $100.00; one hundred (100) shares will cost you $500.00. It is possible you will have an opportunity of selling this stock at from $35.00 a share to even a higher price within twelve months.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

An Offering of Industrial Stock.

The present special offerings of 15,000 shares of Murray Marine Steady-Floating Steel Structures Company stock is for the purpose of providing an immediate fund that will enable the management to properly present our meritorious inventions to: (a) The government at Washington. (b) A Boston syndicate of wealthy gentlemen, who by letters and telegrams, have evinced great interest. (c) Pittsburgh parties who are acting in behalf of the United States Steel Company.

An immediate demonstration on the high seas, or at least in open water, is now desirable and timely, and to this end the officers and directors have decided to provide sufficient cash to defray in a dignified manner, the expense of giving model demonstration in the "White House" at Washington and to certain moneyed centers, where already a surprising interest has manifested itself. That the company and stockholders will have an opportunity to sell if they should elect to do so, at anywhere from $35.00 to $70.00 a share for their holdings, seems more than likely, but in order to bring this about, certain preliminary work must be hastened to completion, and for this reason the present special offering of 15,000 shares at $5.00 per share (par value $10.00) is being offered.

Parties wishing to participate in the present special offering of $5.00 per share for Murray Marine Steady-Floating Steel Structures stock—stock non-assessable, can do so by calling on or writing for further particulars to the company. Free demonstration with models. Call from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. at the office of NEWS OF THE MINES—Review of Week.

OUTLIVED USEFULNESS.

MINERS' CONVENTION WAS A DISAPPOINTMENT.

California Association Said to Have Been Perverted to Uses of Land Grabbers and Schemers—An Example to Be Avoided by Los Angeles Chamber of Mines.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—The California Miners' Association has come and gone, and while there was a great blaze of trumpets as to the large number of delegates who would be in attendance and the prominent mining men who would be on hand to deliver addresses, for some reason they failed to materialize, and the convention was a frost. As Vice-President Denton observed, after viewing the many empty chairs in the hall, it was time for the miners to either support the association or disband. He complained of the lack of funds, and Secretary E. J. Ensign, who was at one time a Justice of the Peace in the city of Bay'n Climate, began to "sit up and take notice." He probably wondered if the funds would be forthcoming to pay for the stationery.

The chairman looked in vain for the appearance of Gov. Pardee, Gov.-elect Gillette, Jake Neff, who used to be a wheel horse of the association, and his honor, Mayor E. E. Schmitz. The latter had a legitimate excuse, for about that time he had business with Assistant Dist.-Atty. Francis J. Heney. John Hays Hammond, who had been heralded for an address, failed to show up, as did also a large number of prominent mining men, who, the press agent of the association had given the public to understand, would surely be on hand.

PRESS AGENT FAKES.

It is suspected that in order to bolster up the meetings of the association the secretary sends invitation to every miner of prominence he can learn of, and suggests a subject upon wihch the association would be pleased to hear from him, and then passes it up to the press that Mr. So-and-so will deliver an address on such a subject. It is presumed that in 1907 the association will have a membership of three, i. e., the president, secretary and janitor.

The Southern California delegation of the new Chamber of Mines, who were invited to come to this city and learn practical methods of how not to conduct an association, were also conspicuous by their absence. They evidently thought that an amalgamation of their Chamber of Mines with the remnants of the California Miners' Association was not desirable.

That the California Miners' Association has fallen into a state of "innocuous deseutude," is evident by the way the real miners of the State have of recent years shunned it. Now and then some poor, misguided miner, who had come to the city more to view the ruins or to sample some of the firewater, he had been assured was mellowed by the action of the great fire, dropped in, but when he viewed the slim attendance and saw none of his kind, but a straggling lot of lawyers, politicians and a few machinery men, who laid in wait to sell him a hoist or an air drill, he shook his head, withdrew and wondered where the eminent speakers were and if he had not made a mistake and entered the grand jury room.

BELATED RESOLUTIONS.

While waiting for the eminent speaker, some one thinks it about time to offer a resolution, as some showing for the existence of the association must be made, and one is offered to have a law passed to stop frauds in mining.

By this time Judge Davis is on his feet and tells the offerer of the resolution to wake up; that the best law that could be enacted was placed in the statutes two years ago.

Then there was a discussion of the best means to prevent an overproduction of gold, and it was finally agreed that if there should be one the blame should be placed on the d—d Chinaman. For some reason the Jap could not be brought into the controversy.

Frank Short of Fresno then took the stand, and while Frank is known politically all over the State, it was not presumed that he had developed into an oil expert. However, he acquitted himself ably by roasting the railroads, which is always a good subject, and is sure to evoke applause. Short also advocated that the oil men pour all their petroleum into San Francisco. He thought it might in some way assist in rebuilding the city. Anyway, it would keep down the mortar dust.

Before adjournment the National Relief and Red Cross Committee advised the convention that it had 10,000 pounds of dynamite on hand, which it did not know what to do with, and thought perhaps it might be used to advantage in blowing up absent members. As but few present had any uses for dynamite or knew anything of the manner of handling the dangerous stuff, it was voted to refer the communication to Abe Ruef.

There being not much else to offer, President Tregidgo invited those few who remained to take a boat ride to the navy yard at Mare Island as guest of the Miners' Union of Vallejo. Something new in associations over there, for outside of a current plant and a quicksilver mine employing a few miners, whom President Tregidgo superintends, Solano county has never been credited with being a mining county.

AXES GROUND TO ORDER.

The few members left in the association feel grateful to H. H. Yard, who, it is alleged, came forward with the necessary funds to pay for new furniture and fittings for the secretary's office, which were destroyed in the fire of April 18. Others have been unkind enough to ascribe Mr. Yard's generosity to an ulterior motive. Mr. Yard is now one of the directors of the association and it is said that on this account many of the old members withdrew. Yard had located over 200,000 acres of timber land, with placer mineral locations, and in doing so had jumped the claims of many poor miners in Plumas and Butte counties, and had ridden rough shod over their rights, they concluded that Yard's interest in the association was to give him a standing in Washington. His methods are now being investigated by the government.

That Yard is the backbone of the present organization, such as it is, and that he will use its name to further his own ends can hardly be questioned.

PERVERTED FROM USEFULNESS.

Years ago the association had a good standing and it was looked upon as an ideal miners' association, but its former fair name is now being traded upon after it has lost its glory by a clique who are using its name to further their own selfish ends. Of late years it has failed entirely of results which would be beneficial to the miner, and it cannot point to the accomplishment of any object which would aid the miner in his search for wealth. In fact it has worked against the miner's interest and the association is on record as opposing one of its principal objects, laid down when originally organized. It declared against the establishment of Forest Reserves in Plumas, Lassen Shasta, Trinity, Siskiyou and Tehama counties in 1902, but, notwithstanding the opposition of the association to the creation of the reserves in the above counties, the President established them, and every miner in those counties has blessed him for it.

The hands of Yard, Benjamin, F. B. Walker, Holbrook, Webb and others interested in acquiring timber lands in the above counties, or acting for timber speculators, were apparent in framing the resolutions which aimed to deprive the miner of millions of acres of land. (The resolutions passed and to which this refers can be found on pages 157 and 158. Proceedings of the California Miners' Association, 1902.)

ABETTED HYDE LAND FRAUDS.

That the association was used to further the interests of F. A. Hyde, of Hyde-Benson fame, in Southern California, particularly in San Bernardino county, can be shown by the resolutions to be found on page 159-160 of same proceedings. The resolutions were presented by a prominent member of the association in the interest of Hyde. They urge upon the Secretary of the Interior that all the land embraced in certain dry lakes be noted at prima facie saline in character, and he is requested to issue instructions to the local land offices by which they are to be declared. It is alleged that Hyde purchased thousands of acres of school land for $1.25 per acre in these dry lakes. These lands were entered at the United States Land Office as agricultural. It was his object to have these lands declared saline in character, after which he could appeal to the commissioner of the General Land Office for scrip, which could be sold for not less than $4.50 per acre or be placed on valuable timber land in Northern California. It was a big job and would yield large profits to Hyde. Yet while the association formally went on record as opposed to scrippers and their methods, it was not consistent but passed resolution assisting Hyde to obtain scrip for a lot of worthless land.

AN EXAMPLE TO SHUN.

These are but samples of some of the methods pursued by the association, and it was this raw work which caused the self-respecting miners to withdraw from it. It is to be hoped that the new Chamber of Miners of Los Angeles will profit by the mistakes made by the State association. Since my arrival I have interviewed many of the past members of the association, and they all agree that an association conducted upon proper lines would be at this time of incalculable value to the State. But with the barnacles of the present association to contend with, they are of the opinion that the association could not be rejuvenated.

HECLA CONSOLIDATED.

Large Body of Gold and Copper Ore Said to Have Been Developed in Cabeza Prieta Mountains.

W. C. Tonkin, manager of the Hecla Consolidated Mines Company, a corporation composed largely of Los Angeles men, gives a glowing account of the results of development work on the company's property in the Cabeza Prieta Mountains, sixty miles southeast of Yuma.

"Yuma county has been making great strides in mining," said Mr. Tonkin, "and with the aid of new lines the transcontinental railroads are building, the mineral districts are being developed as never before. The Santa Fé is now building from Wickenburg on the Santa Fé, Prescott and Phoenix, over to the Colorado River, and that line will tap rich fields in the Salome and Bill Williams Fork districts, where high-grade copper ore has recently been discovered. Ten miles northwest of the King of Arizona, Col. Espes Randolph's property, George W. Norton of Mohawk has opened up veins of high-grade gold ore, running eight to ten feet wide. Fine copper ore has been found by McDaniels of Dome down in the southeastern part of the Gila Mountains near the Tenacas Altas (High Tanks.)

"Our property consists of thirty-six claims in all, covering a strip about four miles long. We have been working three years, seeking to uncover fully the two main leads of ore before beginning milling, with the result that today there is no longer any guess work. Shafts and tunnels on every part of the property have uncovered splendid bodies of milling ore. Some of it runs as high as $90 in gold and 14 per cent. copper, but the average of all our assays and samplings gives $14 in gold and 12 per cent. copper. That's mighty rich ground when you figure the extent of the ore bodies.

"There is no surface water at the mine, and we are today down 500 feet, with every indication that we will strike a plentiful supply of water at about 800 feet, where we are drilling. As soon as the well is completed we will build mill and reduction works at the California-Arizona, the middle of the three groups of claims. At present we are shipping what ore we have taken out to El Paso, and that little has been rich enough to pay a large part of the expense of development."

Plans are already formulated, Mr. Tonkin states, for a standard-gauge railroad from the mine to the man El Paso road of the Southern Pacific. The distance is fifteen miles, and connection will be made at Tacna, a siding forty-six miles east of Yuma. In case water should fail at the mine the road will be extended north to the Gila River, where a mill site has been secured.

Mr. Tonkin returned to Los Angeles with a party of Los Angeles men, who spent several days inspecting the property. They were George R. Bentel, president of the Hecla Consolidated; C. C. Bragdon of Pasadena and Auburndale, Mass.; W. S. Vawter of Santa Monica; J. J. Davis and C. L. Bundy of Santa Monica; H. W. Barlow, J. R. Bragdon, S. H. Ellis, W. R. Dickinson, E. M. Hills and S. V. Martin.

Developing Ely Mines.

The companies in the Ely camp are steadily opening up their ore reserves. Work on the concentrator for the Giroux is being steadily pushed forward. The ground has been cleared for the concentrator, the grading is practically completed and it is expected that the building will be under cover within six weeks. The contract calls for completion of the 500 ton concentrator by the first of March.

It is possible that the Giroux smelter will be started up within two or three weeks, running on ores from the Morris and Bunker Hill shafts which run 6 to 7 per cent. in copper.

Nearly every company in the camp is adding to its ore reserve, but all are handicapped by the lack of labor and the difficulty in obtaining an adequate timber supply.

Greenwater Townsite.

The old townsite of Ramsey has become the new town of Greenwater, and business is concentrating there under an agreement of consolidation. Owners of lots in the old Greenwater townsite are to be given similar locations in the new townsite of Greenwater.

The postoffice will be called Greenwater, and business houses will be concentrated there.

This consolidation does not include the Patsy Clark townsite "Furnace," three miles away from Greenwater, where the Patsy Clark mine is located.

IN JOHNNIE CAMP.

Still Taking Rich Ore from the Minnie Mae Leased Ground—Development Progressing.

JOHNNIE (Nev.) Dec. 5.—Last week another bonanza vein was broken into on the forty-foot level of the Frost Rathbone, that shows the ore full of free gold. The drift in which this vein was found is now extended about twenty feet, and the vein shows two feet wide. The ore is characteristic of the Minnie Mae Hill, where this lease is located, it being a dark brown, copper-stained, decomposed quartz. Through it runs a seam of gold. The superintendent is of the opinion that the whole will bear the expense of shipping. The ore on each side of the rich seam show much more copper stain. Rich ore is also extracted from the Bowler lease. Work on this lease is mostly confined to sinking the shaft. When it is a little deeper another drift will be run. Manager Stewart of this leasing company is now in Denver, ordering mill machinery to work the ore.

The ore body in the Johnnie Consolidated on the 700-foot level is assuming great proportions and a crosscut already shows this vein to be fifteen feet wide. The ore is characteristic of the Johnnie mine, and will average $20. An ore body on the same level in the south drift is widening out, and though a cross-cut of five feet has been run, the foot wall has not yet been encountered. Satisfactory progress is being made on the new shaft. The men are working through open ground and progress is slow, as much timbering is necessary. On the 400-foot level the men have struck a fault, which to all appearances, has thrown the ground to the hanging wall. The face of the drift is now in quartzite.

On the Globe the men are still working in the lower tunnel. Though the men have broken through the fault, the ore does not show any "glims," but gives big pannings.

On the Bullfrog Johnnie a tunnel is now being driven on the Primero claim. As yet the ore body has not been reached.

On the Belmont Johnnie, in addition to the other work, a vein is being prospected on the Red Chief claim.

The Panama mines have begun operations. Many experts consider this a valuable property. The shaft, which is now down sixty-five feet, will be sunk to the 100-foot level. Recent assays of the ore in the bottom of the shaft give returns of $60.

Good progress is being made on the Battery mines. The tunnel is now advanced sixty feet and the vein has been found. It shows good width and assays $20 across the face. The shaft is down thirty-five feet and will be sunk to the 100-foot level.

Copperhead Valley is the scene of great activity. On the Johnnie Copper Company's No. 1 claim, a shaft is being sunk. On No. 2 claim a tunnel has been run which has exposed a good ore body. At present operations will be confined to the shaft, which will be sunk to the depth of 100 feet before any drifting will be commenced. The vein outcrops and the shaft is in ore all the way.

The Johnnie Wonder is sinking a shaft on the Ella B. and the Copper King claims. Recently a vein was exposed on the Copper King claim, that shows excellent indications and has considerable malachite.

BULLFROG IN WINTER.

Fuel and Transportation Problems on the Desert—Railroads Will Soon Bring Normal Conditions.

During the recent cold snap the mining camps of Southern Nevada were caught short of fuel, and the price of wood went up to $75 a cord. Coal went away out of sight and became so valuable that it was shipped in by express. The Bullfrog paper asserts that the railroad men had to stand guard with guns to save ties and box cars, and that coal oil cases sold for $4 each. The Beatty Miner says Goldfield was saved from freezing to death by the hot air emanating from the Goldfield News Bureau.

Grading for the Brock railroad down the Amargosa River is within fifteen miles of Beatty, and it is expected that rails will be laid into town before the new year, and that the line will be extended south to Greenwater.

The Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad has announced that on January 1 passenger rates will be reduced from 8 to 6 cents per mile.

The Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad is now open from Ludlow, Cal., to Dumont, seventy-five miles north of Ludlow. Stage and freighting line now in operation between Dumont and Greenwater.

Borax Smith will push his road north to Goldfield, Tonopah and a connection with the Western Pacific.

Following are the railroad freight rates from Los Angeles to Beatty, and from San Francisco to Goldfield:

Class.	Los Angeles. to Beatty.	San Francisco to Goldfield.
1	$3.04	$3.66
2	2.90	3.50
3	2.46	3.31
4	2.18	3.03
5	1.83	2.41
A	1.46	2.37
B	1.31	1.65

Tenderfeet from the East, bringing copper cents and $1 bills, says the Bullfrog Miner, receive a rude shock when they learn that an auto trip from Tonopah south to Greenwater costs about $1000 for a distance of 170 miles, covering three days. About $700 pays for the auto and driver, and the balance goes for hotel accommodations, meals, drinks, etc. It is not what we spend, but what we make that counts. Such men as Macdonald, Parkhurst, Senator Oddie Schwab, Montgomery, Brock, Chapin and Richings, the Clarks, Shelby and a dozen others spend fortunes in auto travel.

The approaching railroads will reduce the costs of travel and mining, and normal conditions will follow.

Increase in Manhattans.

The three principal developments of the week in Manhattan were the advance in Indian Camp, from 60 cents to $1.15, the advance of Toquima Copper from 10 cents to over 20 cents, and the offer received by the owners of the Independence Consolidated of $200,000 for their holdings. The Indian Camp represents Manhattan proper, the Toquima Copper is eight miles to the east, and the Independence Consolidated two miles to the west. Nothing could better demonstrate the size of the Manhattan ore zone than these three almost simultaneous strikes of high-grade values in a district the extremes of which are over ten miles apart.

California Gold Product.

The State Mining Bureau has issued a table, compiled by Charles G. Yale, from all the available statistics, showing the production of gold in California for each year from 1848 to 1905. From $245,301 in 1848, the gold product jumped to $10,151,360 in 1849, and reached the highest figure, $81,294,700, in 1852. The yearly product at present is about $19,000,000, and the total since 1848 is $1,434,053,311.

Wages at Goldfield.

Miners get $4 per day at Goldfield; carpenters $6; painters $6 and $6.50; clerks per month $75 to $90; stenographers per week $30 to $50; mine superintendents per day $10 to $30; waiters per day $4; bartenders $7.50. Rooms rent from $25 to $40 per month and board costs from $1 to $3 per day.

SOUTHERN ARIZONA.

GUGGENHEIMS ACQUIRE MINES IN HELVETIA DISTRICT.

New York Capital Invested in Mineral Creek Properties — Ghost Dancers Hold Seances to Find Ore in Helvetia Claims—Benson Smelter to Be Blown in Next Spring.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Dec. 6.—The acquisition by the American Smelting and Refining Company, which is commonly referred to as the "smelter trust" of the Tip Top mines in the Helvetia district, the most promising property in the entire district, is the best mining news that Pima county has heard since the announcement of the entrance of the Calumet and Arizona people into the Twin Buttes and the Mohawk districts.

The Guggenheims, who control the American Smelting and Refining Company, have a wide fame as careful mining buyers, and the fact that they paid $75,000 cash for the Tip Top, to be followed by a payment of $125,000 within a year, shows their faith in the proposition.

In all probability the American Smelting and Refining Company will acquire the Omega, Lewison and possibly the Helvetia properties, which are located near the Tip Top. The Guggenheims will within a short time begin surveys for a railroad from Helvetia to connect with either the main line of the Southern Pacific or the Twin Buttes road, which is a standard-gauge road. The distance from Helvetia to the Twin Buttes line is eight miles, while it is twenty miles to the Southern Pacific.

The Tip Top property has its main shaft down to a depth of 40 feet, with 6000 feet of cross-cuttings. Although the property had never been worked on an extensive scale, it has nevertheless been a payer for several years. Last year 10,000 tons of sulphide ore, which averaged 8 per cent., was shipped to the El Paso smelter. The sale of the property was made direct to the Kansas City Smelting and Refining Company, a branch of the American Smelting and Refining Company.

The second installment on the purchase price on the Hardshell group of mines was made this week in Tucson to R. R. Richardson by Los Angeles and San Francisco parties.

The new company will open up the property as rapidly as possible and will sink below the present workings to the sulphide zone. Already the surveys have been made for a tramway connecting the Hardshell mine with the Flux mine and continued to the Sonoita River, where a smelter will be built. Concentrating mills will be put in at each of the mines for the treatment of the ore.

PROSPECTORS IN LUCK.

Fortune has smiled upon Tom Haley and Bill Souffren, two Pinal county miners and prospectors, after a quarter of a century spent in the mountains in developing a property near Kelvin in the Mineral Creek district. Owing to limited means, development work has gone slowly for these men on their property, but they have succeeded in bonding their property to New York capitalists for $125,000.

It has been given out in Benson that the smelter there will be operated by a new company that has just been formed and will be blown in before April 1. The parties interested in the new company are also interested in mines in the Johnson Camp district, and expect to receive much ore for the smelter from that camp. A railroad is now being built from Dragoon Summit on the Southern Pacific to Johnson Camp, a distance of ten miles.

GHOSTS AS MINING EXPERTS.

Freaks are to be found in mining, but the hiring of two fortune tellers from St. Louis to find the place most advisable to sink a shaft on a property in the Helvetia district is considerably worse than the average. The fortune tellers are now on the property holding seances to determine where the "spirits" say the shaft should be sunk.

On the Arizona Blade group, near Box Cañon, about eighteen miles east of Florence, a tunnel is being run to tap the main vein at 150 feet. This property is owned by C. G. Warner and Los Angeles parties. Two shafts have been sunk, one of which is down 100 feet, and the other eighty feet. Both are connected by a drift, which is run along the vein, showing the ore body to be seven feet wide.

The Copper Butte Mining Company has put a force of miners to work on its property, and will quarry ore. The company expects to ship one carload of ore per day to the Humboldt smelter, over the Phoenix and Eastern, as the property is but a mile from the Sheldon station on the line.

BUILDING STONE.

Aubury Says There Is Plenty of California Material Suitable for the Los Angeles Postoffice.

At the St. Louis Exposition the California State Mining Bureau exhibited a great composite arch, constructed of California granite, sandstone, marble, terra cotta, slate, tiling, pressed and glazed brick, showing the variety and superior quality of structural material furnished by the quarries of this State. In January, 1906, the Mining Bureau published an elaborate report on the structural and industrial materials of California in a book of more than 400 pages. There is no lack of building stone of the best quality in this State, and neither is there any lack of information on the subject readily accessible to government officials, yet certain officials in Washington appear to be unaware that California produces building material and profess to be unable to find anything suitable for the new Los Angeles postoffice nearer than Indiana. The following letter is very pertinent:

To the Editor of The Times: I have had called to my attention a telegram from Washington stating that "Supervising Architect Taylor is having lots of trouble selecting stone for superstructure of the new Los Angeles public building, and that Indiana limestone would suit the department exactly, but transportation charges to the Pacific Coast would be prohibitive, and that the officials of the suprevising architect's office say, on the whole, the question is one of the most difficult the office has tackled in a long time."

Evidently the officials of the supervising architect's office are not familiar with the many advantages of California building stones. There is no necessity for the government to seek material beyond our borders, as we can furnish building stone of a superior quality, and of every nature and color, in the State of California. It would appear that it is a very short-sighted policy to erect California buildings of foreign materials when we have the same at hand, and to endeavor to

MURRAY MARINE STEADY-FLOATING STEEL STRUCTU

National Magazine's Tribute to a Los A Inventor.

That Los Angeles has been the birthplace of one of the most important industrial inventions of the age, the Murray steady-floating marine structures, was announced in The Times on August 5 last. Since our descriptive article appeared, wide publicity has been given to the subject by the press of the United States, of Great Britain and France. The following articles from the December issue of the National Magazine, by its editor, Joe Mitchell Chapple, pays a glowing tribute to our townsman, William Edward Murray, the inventor of these steady-floating steel fortresses, lighthouses, breakwaters, piers, railroad bridges, etc.:

THE PORT OF MISSING SHIPS.

From the earliest ages, man's mastery of the ocean has been the greatest problem of many which the race has from generation to generation attempted to solve; for without safe and sure transportation across the high and narrow seas, civilization would languish and beneficent commerce would fall in her splendid task of diffusing prosperity and honorable peace. The terrible anger of contending winds; the tremendous impact of mountainous surges; the perilous sweep of unseen currents, again and again mock at the skill of the sagest mariners, and the creations of the most renowned marine architects. Only in the sheltered haven can the strongest vessel be absolutely safe, when the elemental strife of wind, wave and current is at its worst.

ONE YEAR'S TOLL OF THE SEA: 1038 SHIPS WRECKED IN 1905. Wrecks such as that of the "Sirio" are mere nine-days wonders, although some, by reason of their terror, appeal more to the popular imagination than others. It is only by such graphic presentations as this that we realize how vast a fleet the ocean engulfs year by year. In 1905, the "Bureau Veritas" tells us, 389 steam-ships and 649 sailing-vessels were lost—a total of 1038.

Unfortunately, the number of safe and easily accessible harbors is small, and most, if not all, are reached only by evading the dangerous shoals and deep ledges which surround the course of the ship channel, as heralded by beacon and delimited by landmark and buoy. In too many cases the lighthouses wihch sentinel the outer haven of a port, have been as a candle to the moth, leading the mariner to his possible undoing, as well as into the path of safety, for the site of the lighthouse, like the barriers of the harbor itself, must be located on sea-swept ledges, and often far from the safer channels or the deepest anchorages. In fact, the great minds of the past have failed to realize that, on the surface, the ocean's power is almost infinite, and that havens and their approaches can be defended and deepened only at immense cost and often to little purpose; while below the surface the calm is unbroken.

In a modest office at Los Angeles, Cal., I lately sat listening to the story of an inventor, whose claims seemed little less audacious than the enterprise of that Prometheus who first brought down fire from heaven, and thereby earned eternal honor from men, and the undying enmity and vengeance of the gods. In brief, his contention was, that at a comparatively shallow depth below the surface of the ocean, from twelve to fifteen feet downward, there is no conflict of wind and wave; that below the superficial strife of fierce and unstable elements, there lies the ponderous, immovable, unvexed and eternally "Great Deep;" never "broken up" since in the days of Noah its "vast profound" was hurled upon the doomed nations of the antediluvian world. At thirty-two feet below the surface, a pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch; say, two hundred and sixteen pounds per square foot; bears upon every sunken body, and the water thus compressed forms a stable foundation for any structure having a sufficient flotation and a flat bottom or base extending beyond the structure like a wide flange. Such a structure, strongly built, properly shaped, and moored where it cannot touch bottom, has only to bear the sweep of the seas, just in the same way as these harmlessly rage against the Arctic stream of massive, deep-floating icebergs and broader icefloes moving majestically southward with the great Arctic currents; founded on the enduring bases of the incompressible deep as firmly as the alluvial soil and rock upheavals of the land rest upon the adamantine ledges of the primordial rocks.

Upon these conditions, the inventor, W. E. Murray, a Scotchman by birth, has in his workshop-study at Los Angeles delved and dug his way through an immense labyrinth of scientific facts, the laws of statics and construction, making plans, elevations and the like, even as Samuel Morse planned and labored for a practical solution of the application of electrical energy to telegraphic communication. The successful construction of Morse's first line from Baltimore to Washington announced to an almost incredulous world that a new application of a great basic force and principle had been discovered and perfected, and now the earth is a network of telegraph and telephone wires, and the ocean is girdled with cables in every zone and hemisphere. In like manner Mr. Murray has satisfied prominent engineers and hydrographic experts that, under his discovery and application of a new basic theory of construction, sea-borne structures may be built and securely moored in deep water, which while floating at anchor will be veritable islands, as secure against wind and wave as any islet along the coast. He proposes to construct and float in deep water, where ordinary solid foundations cannot be constructed or would cost too much to be maintained, any and all of the following structures, all of which it has hitherto been considered impossible to construct as floating bodies; viz: mid-sea, or deep-water harbors, lighthouses, piers, breakwaters, coaling stations, floating hotels and sanitariums, forts, torpedo stations, railroad bridges and terminals, salvage platforms or pontoons for raising ships, etc. The general principle of all these applications is the construction of a strong steel caisson fitted for the especial purpose desired, floating so deeply that its bottom rests on water too far below the surface to be stirred by the superficial commotions of the sea. The flat bottom of the caisson extends laterally beyond the body, like a wide flange or ledge, which is loaded with ballast to keep the caisson steadily at the desired depth. This flange also serves to prevent the caisson from being greatly careened or shaken, as an enormous downward pressure is exerted on this circular flange, or ledge, whenever the structure is subjected to lateral (side) pressure.

Mr. Murray's plan for a lighthouse includes a strong hollow steel caisson, whose bottom extends in a wide ledge or flange far beyond the sides, and is so rimmed and divided as to form a series of pens, in which ballast is piled to sink the structure to the proper flotation. Proper arrangements for taking in and discharging water-ballast make it possible to sink the caisson to any desired depth. At a point near the surface the top of the caisson slopes toward the center, at a moderately acute angle, and is there joined to a strong steel tower, which, in its turn, supports a lofty tube or cylinder sustaining the lense room and light. This structure is to be built wherever it can be most economically constructed, towed to the required location, anchored by numerous large chains to immense and ponderous blocks of concrete, supplied with men, provisions, etc., and placed in commission. It is not too much to expect that, in times not far distant, the shorter and more important routes of commerce may be lined with such lights, as Broadway is defined and illuminated by electric arc lights, and that the rules of the road will in ordinary weather be followed by sea-going steamers, as readily as two lines of carriages pass each other on the public street. Nor is it impossible that the great Atlantic ferry will some day be crossed by boats, whose navigators will lay their course for and by a line of floating islets, each numbered and known by its peculiar color and lights, and offering to the cast-away sailor a sure beacon of hope and deliverance.

Last year's toll of the remorseless sea was 1038 vessels, ranging from great battleships down to coasting craft of a few hundred tons burden. With these castaways of the deep there went down to a watery grave some eight thousand of our fellow-beings. And this is a recurring yearly tragedy! Humanitarianism alone calls out for the adoption of the Murray steady-floating lighthouses, which by virtue of their cheapness will be capable of guarding every point of danger and so reducing to a mere fraction the present loss of precious ships and still more precious lives.

Built on similar lines, the torpedo stations of the future, almost invisible and invulnerable to anything except torpedo attack, will guard the outer channels of our havens where no land fortress can be of use, and no vessel can be safely posted. The steadiness of the firing platform will insure perfect accuracy of aim, and no enemy's fleet would dare oppose itself to so terrible an engine of destruction. A series of such torpedo stations lining the coast near a large city, alternating with deep-water, steady-floating forts, would make an effective blockade or naval attack impossible.

The Murray steady-floating steel fortress caps a floating caisson heavily armored, with a revolving annular gun platform within an invulnerable turret, and furnishes a steady emplacement for the heaviest seacoast artillery. Double the number of effective cannon for the cost of a single ironclad; economy in garrison, wages and rations; the power of carrying defensive lines so far to sea that shot fired at them cannot reach the cities they defend; a complete circle of range; great rapidity and accuracy of fire; such are a few of the principal advantages of Mr. Murray's invention in this line. These changes in the existing conditions of seacoast defense are so radical, that the adoption of his system by the leading nations of Europe would reduce the value of national "sea power" to an incalculable extent and with tremendous effect on the policies and destinies of nations.

A more peaceful proposition is that of great sexagonal, steady-floating steel coaling stations, in which the subsea flanges are on the inside as well as the outside of the sexagon, whose massive walls inclose an artificial lagoon. The great coal pockets are divided and strengthened by massive steel partitions and the crest of the outer faces forms a continuous pier, at one side of which a ship can always find a lee and discharge or take in coal. Moored by great steel cables imbedded in enormous masses of concrete, such a coaling station for the purpose of war or peace can be safely located in any part of the ocean where anchorage can be found, and the irresistible force of floating ice cannot act upon it. This invention also seems likely to revolutionize the conditions of naval supremacy. In the open seas, such a coaling station suitably defended, would be of more value than most of the islands and havens now occupied for the purpose.

The Murray steady-floating steel salvage platform is intended for raising sunken vessels from great depths. It is really a long, narrow dry dock without a bottom, whose deep, hollow walls flanged along the outside, give a flotation, steady, immovable and capable of lifting enormous tonnage. The steady parallel platforms, furnished with many powerful winches, make it possible to lift simultaneously and powerfully on a large number of cables or chains, and comfortable quarters and workrooms and a snug dry dock, enable temporary repairs to be made, quickly and effectively, when a wreck is raised to the surface.

An immense circular caisson, flat-topped, lofty and defended by a massive and high parapet, and surmounted by a hotel or santorium, suggests another use for Mr. Murray's discovery. Such a building can occupy without cost, lake and ocean surface, in or near, the most desirable resorts for business or pleasure, and will combine delightful and healthful surroundings with the most inspiring conditions of

The present owners of this tract say the boulevard right of way was tendered the city, but the city has never gone through the legal process of accepting it, hence the ground belongs to them, as the purchasers.

However this may be, the people who bought property along the line of Carlotta boulevard regard it as a high-handed act, and it is popularly known as "the swiping of a boulevard." The accompanying picture shows one pretty little home, whose side entrance has been entirely fenced off by the real estate firm, materially depreciating its value. The fence would have cut off the post of the front pergola but "consideration for the feelings" of the lady who owns the cottage caused the fence builders to make an angle at the place where the post stands, though they still claim the ground.

If the arroyo were preserved as a park all along the plots bordering on it would be much more valuable in the future.

A pretty place jutting on the portion of the valley where the rock crusher was placed could have been sold just a year ago for $3000. Since the spoiling of the natura park at the base, with the noise of the machinery further annoying the owners, they have lately parted with their home for $400. As an ordinary money proposition, it would seem advisable to save the arroyo.

A brickyard will soon be in full blast away up nearer the city line. The trees will be cleared out and the sweet ferns that abound will shrivel into ashes. The land has just been let for this purpose, and where the woodland solitude now reigns this new blot will soon be placed.

Every one is familiar with the stinking gas works near the county bridge. With heavy black smoke rising like a pall against the bosom of the cliff, with noxious fumes vomited from ugly-looking vents, the familiar nuisance is almost under the noses of the artist colony, whose beautiful homes crown the high ridges on either side. Miss Howells, a cousin of William Dean Howells, has lately built a home near here. Olive Thorne Miller, the well-known author and bird lover, is just completing one, all for the sake of the magnificent view—and the beautiful arroyo below.

If concerted action were taken and a general movement inaugurated immediately, this beautiful strip might yet be saved, and, like the Juvenile Court, the Playground Commission, the Housing Commission and many other blessings, it may be left to the women and the women's clubs to put such an enterprise in motion.

The Outdoor Art Section of the Los Angeles Civic Association has long been desirous of getting a driveway made through the arroyo, to extend from here to Pasadena. A year ago Mrs. Willoughby Rodman and others drove through to judge the feasibility of such a plan. The new president of the Outdoor Art Section, Mrs. Matthew Robertson, has chosen as her especial work the starting of a movement to build a beautiful driveway from Los Angeles to some other selected point.

At the last meeting of the directors of the Civic Association this organization put itself on record as being ready to coöperate with other bodies in all movements for good and beautiful roads, through the head of the Outdoor Art Section, Mrs. Matthew Robertson. It was decided to hold a meeting of all bodies interested in the effort, and together to formulate a plan of action.

At this meeting the Arroyo Seco will have strong advocates. The Pasadena women's clubs are working for the preservation of the Pasadena end of the arroyo, and nothing could help more to the plan of making it a public park than an automobile roadway through it. Instead of planting hedges of roses and lilies to beautify a road, and waiting years for trees to line it, the arroyo would show a park, a tangle of wild woods, trees that are stately sentinels—in short, a unique surrounding that could not be duplicated or imitated.

Artistic bridges could span the deepest cuts of the arroyo, changing the road from side to side in effective manner. It has been decided by the Civic Association that a well-kept roadway fifty feet wide will be more practicable than a boulevard. Like the celebrated drives of this character which connect the parks in Boston, this one through the arroyo could be continued to the Los Angeles River, thence across the bridge into Elysian Park, and through the park along the ridge, where a water conduit already exists. Through Arroyo Seco Park to Elysian Park would make a roadway worthy even of Southern California—and the arroyo would be saved.

The Very Finest Christmas Gifts

Few gifts that one can make will carry the high degree of pleasure and the lasting satisfaction that fine Diamonds and Diamond set Jewelry convey.

Our Diamond Department has always been one of the strongest features of our establishment. The limited space of our present store quarters handicaps us in some of the bulkier lines which we will expand in our new store. This feature has induced us, however, to put special effort into the Diamond Department.

Our large stock of unmounted diamonds is confined to absolutely Perfect Blue White and Extra White Diamonds.

We have always carried a heavy reserve stock and recent sharp advances have found us protected. You can still buy the very high grade gems as cheaply as the prices asked elsewhere for much inferior stones.

If a gift comes in a Brock & Feagans box the recipient will know that the Diamond is perfect.

JOHNNIE, NYE COUNTY, NEVADA

100,000 Shares at 20c

If you have decided to put some of your surplus profits or savings into mining stock, with the hope of making big profits, simply do yourself the justice of investigating this offer.

The men in the Boston-Johnnie are Los Angeles business men, not new-comers; they have been here for years; they are wide-awake, and are of the few Los Angeles business men who seem to realize what is waiting for development at our very doors.

They are putting their own money into mining properties with the aim and hope of making a mine.

They are not in the stock jobbing business.

Understand This!

We are not looking for a ledge. We have been in one for fifty feet deep. It is simply a matter of a mill to make our property pay dividends from the start.

There are now over sixty tons of ore on the dump—and we have only commenced.

With the sale of this treasury stock we will build a mill. We are negotiating now for its construction. We expect to be milling in 90 days. The next issue of Treasury Stock will be put on the market at 40c.

We invite the public to join us in taking a chance of making a great big stake. Our money, ability and time against your money. If our property proves to be what we think it is, we will all be rich.

We know we have tons and tons of free-milling ore in sight. Our engineers tell us it will go 1000 feet. What more can you ask?

OKLAHOMA TOWNS SIX FOR SALE.

CHANCE TO GET TOWN LOTS OR FARMING LAND.

Government to Open to Settlement the "Big Pasture," Containing 480,000 Acres of Land—Lots to Be Sold at Auction and Acreage on the Sealed-Bid Plan.

You can buy a whole town on December 3 if you want one; in fact, you can buy six whole towns if you have the money and bid high enough. To be accurate, they are only embryonic cities on fertile open prairie lands in the "Big Pasture" of Southern Oklahoma; just townsites which the government is putting up for sale to the highest bidder. Plain unadorned townsites out in a wide expanse of uninhabited grass and may not attract the eastern people greatly, but people out here in the West know that on the day these towns are born under the auctioneer's announcement they will bud out in a wilderness of tents and gaudy canvas signs, such as The Imperial Bakery, The Palace Hotel, The Diamond Restaurant, The Eureka Steam Laundry, The Mascot Saloon, The Bon Ton Store, The Original Meat Market, and a hundred others of equally small beginnings and pretentious heralding. In a month the same towns will grow amazingly and be weaned, and in three they will walk alone in the glory of some three-storied brick structures, a railroad or two, a city government and a chamber of commerce which works for the interest of the entire community.

Young Oklahoma in the last seventeen years has seen a thousand towns grow this way miraculously, almost as if the waving grass land itself bore the vivifying spore from which sprang, at the first dawn of a sunlit day, the mushroom crop of white-capped tents and its multitude of human cultivators. Not one of these sporadic towns has failed to go on developing; no town has had an economic blotting out; every one of them has won success and strength and solidity with advancing years.

So the Westerner of the prairie lands does not look upon the townsite auction as having much element of gamble in it; not nearly the hazard, nor the excitement of the old-time runs when every man pitched headlong onto a new townsite with a hatchet and some wooden pegs and wildly drove stakes into the ground while he yelled menacingly at all other newcomers, and hoped he was staking out a real lot and not punching holes into an alley or the main road.

The "Big Pasture," it should be explained, is the 480,000 acres of land reserved some years ago by Congress as a further holding for the Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches, after their territory as a whole had been opened to settlement and they had been allotted separate farms. It lies on the Red River, just across the line from Texas, in Southwestern Oklahoma, and is some thirty-odd miles long east and west and twenty north and south.

On December 3 all this land is to be opened to the white man, except certain allotments of 160 acres to each of the Indian babies born since 1900. These lands will be sold this time on the sealed-bid plan, the boomer run and land-registry system having been done away with. Any American citizen can bid on as many sections as he pleases, provided he bids not less than $5 per acre, and deposits one-fifth the price of his highest bid for a quarter section, or 160 acres. No individual can get more than 160 acres.

There will be six towns in this new land. Already they have been carefully selected and laid out by a commission from the United States Land Office, with due regard to location drainage and hygienic situation. The town lots, unlike the agricultural land, will be sold by public auction, under the hammer, by a man who will cry from the box, "Lot 36, corner of —— and ——; what do I hear bid?" and so on until the new city has passed from the possession of the United States into the molding hands of a thousand energetic citizens, who have the faith, enthusiasm and determination to create from dusty soil a prosperous metropolis.

The man most closely associated with the new towns of the "Big Pasture," and who is responsible for selling them to the American public, is W. L. Miller, special United States Indian agent and chairman of the Kiowa Townsite Commission.

Mr. Miller has already won a reputation along the Osage in this unique business of selling whole towns to the people. It is his duty not only to see that the towns are well laid out, but to appraise the value of every lot within the town limits. The lowest price that can be offered at the auction is his appraised valuation. If he puts the price too low, he may fail to properly protect the interests of his clients and the wards of the nation, the Indians, for the money goes to them, or is placed to their credit in the United States Treasury, drawing 4 per cent. interest. If he puts the price too high, the city may fail to materialize for want of takers.

The appraisement figures, of course, are not given out to the public, at any time, for it is important to prevent as far as possible the danger of combination of bidders to buy in at an agreed price. Of course, it might so happen without the bidder's knowledge of the appraisement price that a certain number of men might hold down the bids somewhat, but it is as unlikely as the purchase of a whole town by a single individual, as suggested in the first paragraph, for the obvious reason that thousands and thousands of persons propose to bid on these townsite lots, and they come from all parts of the United States. The Rock Island Railroad alone, which runs closest to the "Big Pasture" at the present time, has hauled in a single week to convenient points around this reserve over 10,000 home seekers, most of whom will certainly file bids on lands, and large numbers, no doubt, will be on hand at auction day to try a chance on bidding on some choice town lots.

Mr. Miller got his first experience handling open townsites at the Osage Reservation, when five townsites were selected and sold by auction. The department look upon him as a wonder in land appraisal. In one town the lots sold for $230,000 and he missed the valuation by just $12,000. His valuation of all the other four it is said was equally close.

In talking with him, he said that his greatest trial and tribulation lay in the man who wanted to talk with him confidentially. In order to ward off the man with the proposition and the one who wants confidential advice and information he has adopted the simple and effective system of keeping his office doors wide open and his stenographer close at hand. The visitor sits at some distance from Mr. Miller, and all requests for private or confidential audiences are smilingly and respectfully declined. The commonest request is for information on appraised values; a query often asked in perfect good faith by persons who do not spurn the more tricky side of schemes. Woe to the man who tries to whisper. He is told in no uncertain language that sotto voce conversation does not go, and that any business the caller may have can be discussed in a perfectly audible tone of voice.

Mr. Miller says all of the six towns have admirable locations, with due consideration for the securing of water supply and drainage. So far not a single railroad enters the territory. What particular railroad or railroads will build into the region to connect the proposed towns with the outside world, he would not say, even if he knew, but it was pointed out that the two systems, the Frisco and the Rock Island, which had literally honeycombed Western Oklahoma in the past ten years, will naturally push their lines forward rapidly into a land which they know in two years will be a tremendous crop producer, if precedent after precedent is to be depended upon in the marvelous production following former land openings in Oklahoma.

The chairman was adverse to letting railroads run through the townsites, but knew of no way to prevent it, for nothing in the law can stop the individual or the corporation from buying a right of way straight through the town, or, for that matter, of buying up the entire site, if they outbid the other fellow.

The names of the six cities are Randlett, Eshiti, Quanah, Isadore, Ahpeatone, Koonkazachi. Can six towns thrive started in an open grass land where plow has never turned furrow, and which will possess nothing on the opening day except such latent possibilities as are stored up in the energies of the fertile soil and the eager brawn of courageous settlers? Yes, comes the answer from every Kansan, Oklahoman and Texan. The affirmative is particularly aggressive on the part of the Oklahoman and Texan man, who figures with a stump of a pencil to show you, fearing that you may be from Missouri.

"You see, it is this way, the Big Pasture is a fine cotton country. Put the whole first year's crop in cotton, which stands new soil and needs little moisture. Allow 400,000 acres in cultivation out of the 480,000. The cotton can be put in with disk cultivators and seeders if need be, but it will be better if the sod is plowed with gang plows first. A bale to the acre can be depended upon, or at least $50 per bale, $20,000,000 income for this district for the first year, or $6000 a year for each of the 3000 families and farm help. At the end of the first year the towns will average 1500 or 2000 people, or say, 1800 families, in all, dependent on commerce. Most of the twenty million crop income and another two or three million—which the 3000 families will bring in with them, for the class of farmers who will buy the land will be a fairly successful lot who have a few thousand on the side—will find its way back during the first year into the hands of the tradesmen for almost every conceivable necessity and luxury needed by the civilized man. The 1800 store-keepers will average $12,000 for the year's business, and they will do better than 25 per cent. in profit, which leaves a living sum for the family."

This is the big-talk-man who reasons optimistically perhaps, but the Oklahoman has done such wonderful things starting with raw lands, that it allowed him not only to circulate large first-year profits, but to believe his figures without smiling too broadly. When you add this modern day farmer's profits from cattle, hogs and several hundred bushels to the acre potatoes, broom corn, wheat, corn and silo maize, his total profits on his mixed crop will probably nearly figure out what the Southwestern boomer would have you believe can be done if cotton alone were planted.

One may rest assured, however, that the six towns will be built in the next year, and that some one of them by push and hustle and good fortune in becoming a railroad center will number 10,000 inhabitants in less than five. It has been happening that way for seventeen years in Oklahoma.

"Going! Going! Who'll have a fine lot, right in front of City Hall, finest corner in the town? Did I hear you make another five? Yes! All right, gentlemen! Going dirt cheap! Gone!"—[Boston Transcript.

AFRICANS KEEN-SIGHTED.

Could Distinguish German Officers Though Clothed Exactly Same as Common Soldiers.

Some oddities of campaigning against the Hereros in German Southwest Africa are detailed by Col. Bayer of the general staff in some sketches which he has been publishing from his personal experiences in the field. One point that particularly impressed him was the readiness with which the Hereros and Hottentots singled out the officers at long range.

"It wouldn't have been strange," said he, "if we had worn brilliant uniforms, sashes or other insignia of rank. But we didn't. In the presence of the enemy we used exactly the same uniform and equipment as our troops—suits of khaki and cork helmets, with blue border. We carried no swords.

"Every officer carried a rifle and a cartridge belt with 120 rounds of ammunition in it, exactly like the men. Many of us also wore bayonets. Hands, faces, hair, uniforms, weapons, everything came to be of the same earthy color. We often couldn't recognize one another and all sorts of funny blunders took place.

"In spite of this outward similarity the natives seemed never at a loss to pick out the officers. Their extraordinary power of vision enabled them to detect the slightest sign—a gesture of the hand to control the advance of the firing line, the use of a field glass, the reception of a report was enough to indicate rank.

"In one case I remember, an officer addressed by his superior turned to him and instinctively raised his hand to his helmet in salute. Instantly the fire of the natives was concentrated on them and the superior was killed.

He Had a Good Reason.

The plaintiff's barrister in the breach of promise case thought he would make life a burden to the unfortunate young man who was the unwilling defendant.

"Do you mean to say," he asked, after a number of embarrassing questions, "that after you had been absent for an entire month you did not kiss the plaintiff, to whom you were engaged to be married, when you first saw her on your return?"

"I do," responded the defendant, firmly.

"Will you make that statement to the jury?"

"Certainly, if necessary."

"Do you think that they would believe you?"

"One of them would, I know."

"Ah, indeed! And why should he, pray?"

"Because he was present when I first saw her. He was at the gate when I rode up, and she stuck her head out of the second-story window, and I said to her, 'how d'ye do?' and called out I'd be back to supper in half an hour. I'm no giraffe;" and everybody smiled except the barrister.—[Tit-Bits.

Could Stop Tillman Talking.

Senator Tillman was recently talking in his usual vehement manner. The conversation threatened to be stormy. A friend expostulated.

"Please don't talk so much," said the warning voice.

It irritated Tillman.

"Talk!" he shouted. "I'll talk as much whenever and wherever I please. I would like to see the man who can keep me from talking!"

"I can!" came a voice from the crowd.

Tillman turned and glared. Then his eye caught the speaker. He pretended to quail. The laugh went around and the critical situation was saved.

The man who had hurled the defiant "I can!" was Dr. T. T. Moore, Tillman's lifetime dentist.—[Judge.

MUNICIPAL FADDISM DOOMED IN BRITAIN.

Failures of the Socialist Experimenters Have Caused an Awakening.

Poorer Service in the Public Utilities—Properties Allowed to Run Down and Taxation Increased Fifty Per Cent.—Politicians Make a Mess of Running the Gas Plants—Street Railways Wretchedly Conducted.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON (Eng.) Nov. 15.—London has sounded the death knell of Municipal Socialism in Great Britain. For ten years the rule of the faddists was unconfined, but the awakening has come. The Cockney Tammany met an overwhelming defeat in the November elections and the sturdy old Conservatives are returning triumphantly to power.

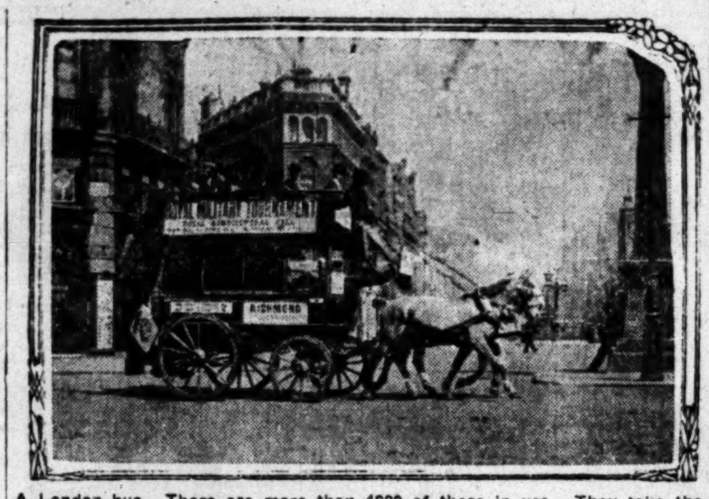
Municipal reformers have won 1115 of the 1362 seats in the city councils. They now control twenty-five of the twenty-eight boroughs of Greater London. Boss Crooks is about as popular as was his prototype Boss Tweed when Tammany Hall lost control of New York City.

November's elections affected only the borough councils; Crooks, Shaw and Kier-Hardie remain secure in their seats in the county council until March. Then will come the elections that are to decide whether London shall restore to private capital the great trading enterprises which her councillors have managed so disastrously as public utilities.

The municipal ownership bubble has burst. "While stands the London County Council municipal trading shall stand," asserted Kier-Hardie a year ago. The reform tidal wave now threatens to carry away the County Council itself and establish in its place a new system of borough councils.

SERVICE DETERIORATES.

For ten years London has followed the will-o'-the-wisps of the Municipal Socialists. During that time the public service has deteriorated, the municipal debt has almost doubled and the tax rate has increased fifty per cent. The awakening, so slow in coming, has arrived. It takes the average Londoner about as long to realize a civic extravagance as it does for him to see the point of an American joke.



A London bus. There are more than 4000 of these in use. They take the place of street cars and make a thoroughfare look like a procession of "sandwich" men.

London streets. In the center is the Stock Exchange building. The long, low building to the left is the Bank of England. The narrow thoroughfare running past it is Threadneedle street. The three windows to the right are in front of the mansion house of the Lord Mayor.

London's awakening was accomplished by the workingmen themselves. These have revolted against the rule of the municipal bosses; the Socialists and the walking delegates have been alike repudiated by the honest workers; and the rule of the ring is broken. Twenty-five boroughs have elected councillors on straight anti-municipal ownership platforms.

Those fine salaries would be all well enough, say the workingmen, if we didn't have to pay them. I discussed this phase of the wage question with a number of workingmen who came to the rooms of the London Municipal Society, seeking for information about the tax rates.

"It reads smoothly enough when on paper," said one hard-fisted carpenter, "but it doesn't work out well. My neighbor is employed by the city. He gets off an hour earlier than I do and he receives two shillings a day more pay. I don't envy him his place, but I do object to taking part of my meager wages to pay his fine salary. Not one workingman in ten is employed by the City Council. This means that at least nine of us must pay higher rents in order that the tenth man shall get a soft snap.

"I have read a great deal in our papers of what your President says about a 'square deal.' If he were over here I do not believe that he would stand for a scheme in which nine of us give up part of our scanty earnings in order to provide the tenth man with an easy place at a fat salary.

"It spoils a man to get a city job here anyhow. He isn't expected to do more than half a day's work. If he does better than that he will get himself disliked by the workmen about him. After he has been with the city a few months he educates himself to be a loafer and he can't go back on a private job and keep pace with the other workmen."

It is largely due to the efforts of the municipal societies that the workmen of London have learned what municipal ownership really costs them. They have found that the city pays about twice as much as a private company for an improvement and that the improvement when completed is seldom satisfactory.

A LOS ANGELES PARALLEL.

The record which Los Angeles has made on its outfall sewer has many parallels here—in fact, they are the rule rather than the exception. London has spent $10,00,000 on workingmen's dwellings. The object was to clear away the slums. Many old buildings have been torn down and new ones built in their places, but the slums still exist. The city charges higher rents for the new houses, the old tenants cannot afford to pay the increase, and the result is that they are crowded back one street and a new slum district grows there.

In ten years London has lost $8,000,000 in rentals and taxes by taking the street railways from private companies. She has incurred an indebtedness of about $50,000,000, and in place of being reproductive the operation of the lines, including street widenings, has cost the city about $6,000,000 more than the income received from fares.

Two years ago London established a fleet of municipal steamboats on the Thames. These boats cost about $3,000,000. During the two years they were used the cost of operating expenses was $500,000 greater than the revenue. Now the boats are tied up at docks rusting out. The last of them was taken off the river on the first of November. For this costly experiment the taxpayers must subscribe $4,000,000, including interest on the bonds. For that expenditure the city could not now realize $250,000.

The City Council has already expended $3,000,000 on a power generating plant for the street railway system. At least $3,000,000 more must be spent before the plant is finished. This plant is a marvel in municipal extravagance. Years have been devoted to its building and others years must elapse before it is completed; there are some who assert that electric railways will be obsolete by the time this plant is finished.

Competent electrical experts say that an electrical station adequate to supply the London trams could have been built for at least half the sum that this plant will cost, and in half the time.

This is one of the monuments London taxpayers have raised to Bill Crooks and his ring of Socialist-Labor Union agitators. It is doubtful if its fellow can be found even in the records of the Tweed regime in New York City.

THE STORM.

These things are now common talk in London. When I wrote my first letter three months ago the metropolis was still asleep. Then the Socialist-Labor Union ring was corrupt and the city was apparently contented. It is now extremely doubtful whether Crooks and his followers will be able to weather the storm of indignation that broke with the dawn.

Complete municipalization of the London street railway system was one of the main issues of the campaign. The railways are divided into a northern and a southern system. The southern system has been operated by the city direct for three or four years, while the northern system is controlled and operated by private capital.

London's enormous population and congested districts present ideal conditions for street railroading. Under private ownership the system would be a greater money-maker than a government mint. But under the malignant influence of municipal socialism the lines do not pay expenses.

Last year the northern system, leased to a private company, paid ten times as great a revenue over working expenses to the city as the southern system operated by the County Council. But the Socialists were insisting on cancelling the northern lease so that the whole system might be under public control. The mass of population is in the southern district and it there that the profit should be greatest.

The reports of the London County Council reveal pretty clearly the reason why the southern system does not pay expenses. These reports show that the cost of laying a double track road by the municipality was $400,000 a mile. This was a little more than the London workingmen would stand.

Since the November elections there has been some inquiry about what price the city could get if it were to conclude to sell the street railways to private companies. This inquiry has been made by the conservatives. It is bringing to light some startling facts about the conditions of the power-houses and the shops, the rolling stock and other parts of the municipal street railway system.

In order to make a showing of profit on paper the Progressives have permitted the property to depreciate until a great deal of the machinery is worthless. The entire system needs overhauling, but a bond issue of at least $8,000,000 will be necessary to raise the money. The sum set aside for renewals has not been equal to one-tenth of the actual depreciation of the property.

One firm of acturaries has estimated that the city could not sell the street railways for $10,000,000 less than she paid for them. In fact, there is a growing suspicion here that the life of the electric street railway is doomed. Within the two-mile district more than 1200 automobile busses are now operating. The fares on these busses is as low as on the cars; in many places they make better time and they are much more popular. The result is that bankers and financiers are exceedingly chary about how they invest money in private street car lines.

It is freely predicted here that ten years hence there will be no street car rails on London thoroughfares; but for the next fifty years the people of London will be paying for the bonds with which the Progressives bought the street car lines.

At the present time there are no surface lines inside what is called the two-mile limit. This comprises the heart of the business district. Here the only means of transportation are the clumsy, unsightly, double-decked penny busses, the 'ansom cab and the automobile busses. The latter were introduced only last May but they have about crowded the penny bus off the streets.

London's failures in municipal trading have been duplicated on a smaller scale by almost every city of Great Britain in which the Crooks-Kier-Hardie ring have gained a foothold. The failures are probably more marked here for the reason that the population of the metropolis is so great the there are millions of customers for a gas or electric company, and millions of fares for the tram cars.

CHEAP GAS—WHY?

London gets cheap gas, as compared with the other English and Scotch cities, but for its electricity and for street car rides pays away above the average. Its gas plant is the only utility that has not been absorbed by the Municipal Socialists.

In order to test the Socialist argument that municipal ownership would always reduce the cost of gas and electricity to the consumer I have compiled a table showing the comparative prices charged by municipalities and private companies.

In England the cost of gas or electricity is regulated largely by the price of coal. I have classed together cities in the same localities or at equal distances from the great coal fields.

Here are two comparisons near the coal fields of the price of gas:

ARROWHEAD COLLECTION.

F. L. Buchanan Has Interesting and Almost Perfectly-Formed Specimens.

F. L. Buchanan, of No. 1553 East Fifty-sixth street, has a collection of quartz arrowheads from the Nolachuca River district, in North Carolina, about twenty-five miles east of Ashville, which is one of the best in the country, it is said. There are about forty specimens in the collection, and they are made in the same general shapes as the flint arrowheads common throughout the West.

The largest specimen is 3 3-4 inches long and 1 3-4 inches across the widest part. It is perfectly transparent except for the refraction caused by the chipped surface. It is said to be the finest one of the kind extant. The smallest is an inch long and a quarter of an inch wide. Another is three-quarters of an inch long and one-half inch wide. All are almost perfectly formed. In the collection also is a clay pipe of peace.

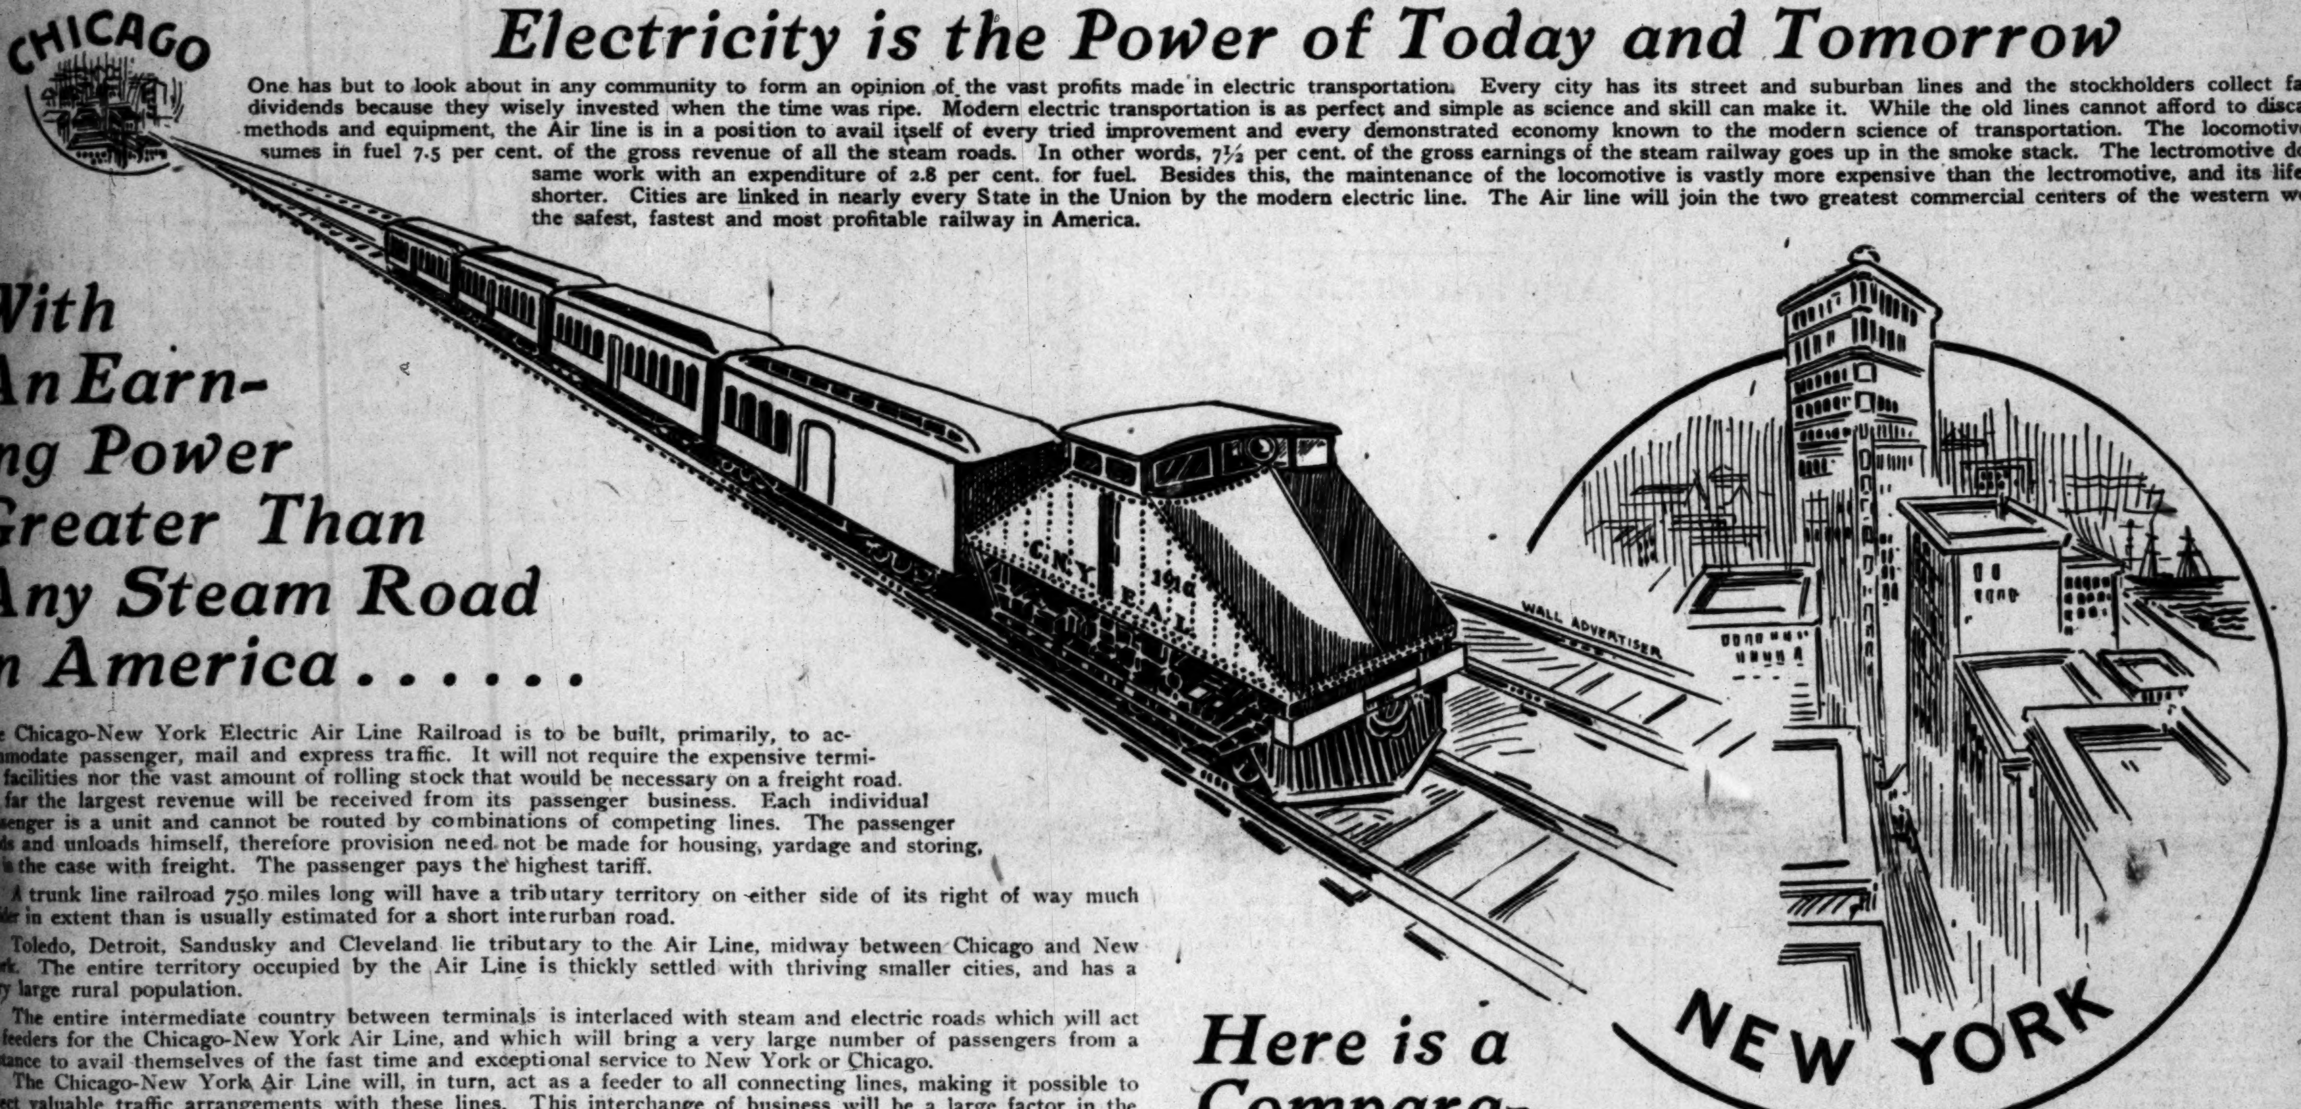
Chicago to New York as the Eagle Flies Straight As An Arrow from the Bow

The simplest railroad that the world has ever known is building now. The Chicago-New York Electric Air Line marks a gleaming milestone in the onward march of scientific railroad engineering. It will be 200 miles shorter than the shortest road. It will offer a high-speed passenger, mail and express service. It will be double-tracked, avoiding grades and curves excepting those imposed by physical conditions, and eliminating highway and railroad crossings at grade, will be operated at a greatly reduced cost of transportation, affording very maximum degree of profit to its stockholders. More economical than steam, safer than steam, it presents to the American people today one of the best and most profitable investments of the age rivalling in its opportunity the safety, certainty and security of the telegraph, and telephone, and other universally popular investments. It will fill a want long felt by the traveling and shipping public. The demand for more and better facilities is born of this age of science and mechanics. President Hill of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroads recently called public attention to the urgent necessity for increased mileage and one after another the great railroad minds of the country corroborate the fact which Mr. Hill so forcefully presented. Never before was there such an inviting field for the building of a new line, as the one now occupied by the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line. The equipment of this electric railroad will be on the lines of the very best and latest electrical construction. Electric power, manual blocking system, automatic safety appliances, and luxurious and commodious accomodations for patrons will present to the world an American railway, built by the people, combining every element of speed, safety, economy and profit.

Electricity is the Power of Today and Tomorrow

One has but to look about in any community to form an opinion of the vast profits made in electric transportation. Every city has its street and suburban lines and the stockholders collect fabulous dividends because they wisely invested when the time was ripe. Modern electric transportation is as perfect and simple as science and skill can make it. While the old lines cannot afford to discard old methods and equipment, the Air line is in a position to avail itself of every tried improvement and every demonstrated economy known to the modern science of transportation. The locomotive consumes in fuel 7.5 per cent. of the gross revenue of all the steam roads. In other words, 7½ per cent. of the gross earnings of the steam railway goes up in the smoke stack. The lectromotive does the same work with an expenditure of 2.8 per cent. for fuel. Besides this, the maintenance of the locomotive is vastly more expensive than the lectromotive, and its life much shorter. Cities are linked in nearly every State in the Union by the modern electric line. The Air line will join the two greatest commercial centers of the western world in the safest, fastest and most profitable railway in America.



With An Earning Power Greater Than Any Steam Road in America......

The Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad is to be built, primarily, to accommodate passenger, mail and express traffic. It will not require the expensive terminal facilities nor the vast amount of rolling stock that would be necessary on a freight road. By far the largest revenue will be received from its passenger business. Each individual passenger is a unit and cannot be routed by combinations of competing lines. The passenger loads and unloads himself, therefore provision need not be made for housing, yardage and storing, as is the case with freight. The passenger pays the highest tariff.

A trunk line railroad 750 miles long will have a tributary territory on either side of its right of way much wider in extent than is usually estimated for a short interurban road.

Toledo, Detroit, Sandusky and Cleveland lie tributary to the Air Line, midway between Chicago and New York. The entire territory occupied by the Air Line is thickly settled with thriving smaller cities, and has a very large rural population.

The entire intermediate country between terminals is interlaced with steam and electric roads which will act as feeders for the Chicago-New York Air Line, and which will bring a very large number of passengers from a distance to avail themselves of the fast time and exceptional service to New York or Chicago.

The Chicago-New York Air Line will, in turn, act as a feeder to all connecting lines, making it possible to effect valuable traffic arrangements with these lines. This interchange of business will be a large factor in the earning power of this road.

Patronage will be attracted to the Air Line from a much greater radius beyond terminals than to existing roads. The through business between Chicago and New York is very large as it now exists; but better accommodations, more frequent service, shorter distance, quicker time and the lower rate of fare which is made possible by this route will create a vast amount of new through business, and will also build up a local traffic between intermediate points on the road.

The revenue from United States mail contracts will add a large amount to the earnings of the railroad. Time in the delivery of the mails being the essential factor, the Air Line will have every advantage necessary to secure large contracts.

The government contracts for the transmission of mail with railroads operating between Chicago and New York amount to about $9,000,000 annually. The revenues which the Air Line will derive from this source will amount to at least $2,000,000.

Contracts with express companies can readily be secured, for the same conditions prevail in handling express matter as with the mails. The revenue from this source is estimated to equal or exceed that received from government mail contracts.

Enormous Earnings of the Railroads of the Country

Almost fabulous in their extent are the figures made public by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the earnings of the American railways for the year ending June 30, 1906.

Total gross earnings as shown were $2,319,760,030. This is equivalent to $10,548 per mile. Passenger earnings alone were $618,555,934, or $2,811 per mile. Operating expenses were $6963 per mile. These figures are instructive as indicating the vast profit in railroad traffic even with the clumsy and wasteful steam methods of transportation. Given a modern electric equipment, the profits on this vast amount of business, fabulous as it seems now, would be simply enormous.

Here is a Comparative Statement as a Guiding Factor

In order to make a comparison with the nearest approach to a similiar line we will quote from statistics of the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago Railway Company

Moody's Manual for 1905 gives the following information regarding the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago road:

The road covers a territory of 57 miles in length, including 26 miles double track, making a total mileage of 83 miles. It is equipped with one power station, 6 sub-stations, 3 power engines, 23 motor cars, 23 box and freight cars. The total cost of the line and equipment as given by "American Street Railway Investments" is $7,848,749. Reliable information indicates that this figure is 20 per cent. in excess of the actual cost of the road and its equipment.

The gross earnings of the Aurora line for the year ending June 30, 1905, are given as $505,454, which would be $5.68 per capita for the total population in the territory served.

The operating expenses of the Aurora line, as given by "American Street Railway Investments," for the year ending June 30, 1905, were $283,467, or 56 per cent. of the gross receipts.

The longer haul on the Air Line will reduce the operating expenses to not over 50 per cent. of the gross receipts.

Brief Comparative Statement

	Aurora, Elgin & Chicago	Goshen, So. Bend & Chicago (Estimated)
Territory traversed	57 miles	120 miles
Length of double track	26 miles	100 miles
Total mileage	83 miles	220 miles
Interurban population	89,000	190,000
Population per mile of road	1,600	1,600

There is a right moment for investment in any enterprise. While the United States teems with safe and good investments, there are always some which appeal more forcibly to the reason, the judgment and the purse than others. This is of that class and character. The necessity exists for the line. The traffic is eagerly awaiting the facilities. The profit is greater than in any other railroad in the country, and last but not least, the railroad is growing every day, mile by mile, forging steadily forward to its ultimate completion. If you want to place your money, be it much or little, where every dollar will return in liberal dividends, forming possibly a competence for you while you live and leaving an inheritance when you die, don't let this opportunity pass. The medium that has made millions for others can make its share for you also, if you but pause to think, to ivestigate and to buy. CONSIDER IT NOW—TODAY—REMEMBER THAT THE PRICE GOES TO $30 DEC. 15.

Just a Word About Terms of Payment

Partial or installment payments may be made at the rate of 10 per cent. down, 10 per cent. monthly, until shares are paid for. At the present price of $28 per share, this means $2.80 per share in cash, or its equivalent, with your subscription, and $2.80 per share per month for the next nine months. No interest will be charged on deferred payments. We want the small investor to participate in the profits of this great enterprise and will give the same attention to a subscription for a single share as to that for a thousand shares.

Affairs of Interest to the Ladies Especially.

Weddings, Parties, Dinners. Other Functions.

Charmingly Appointed Tea Given Yesterday.

One of the most charmingly appointed affairs of the week was a tea given yesterday afternoon by Miss Frances Barber of No. 2707 Halldale avenue in compliment to Mrs. William P. Dunlap, who is visiting here.

The handsome home was aglow with rare flowers in artistic profusion. In the library pink and white roses and ferns were effectively combined. Creamy masses of eucalyptus blossoms among the sage green of their foliage made artistic trimmings for the living room. The dining-room was especially attractive. From the chandelier swung a fancy basket filled with glowing poinsettias, while the table was lighted with red candelabra and held a basket of scarlet carnations tied with red ribbons as centerpieces. On the buffet and otherwhere were baskets of red carnations. In the bay window a chime of Christmas bells swung right merrily.

Receiving with the hostess and guest of honor was Mrs. Henry A. Covert, cousin of Miss Barber. Assisting were: Mrs. George Bliss Culver, Mrs. Claude Holman and Mrs. Charles Bishop. In the dining-room Miss Snow Longley and Miss Edna Waterman preisded at the coffee and chocolate urns. Young women who assisted in the dining-room were: Mrs. Malcolm Campbell, Mrs. Harry Paddleford and Misses Lida Covert, Lucy Sinsabaugh and Clara Smith.

Kutnow Dinner.

Julian Kutnow, a well-known manufacturer of New York City, gave an elegantly appointed dinner at the Alexandria. The table and banquet room were beautifully decorated, and just as the guests sat down the lights went out and in a second a light appeared from the ferns and flowers in front of each plate. Music was furnished by the Hawaiian Band and the Hungarian Orchestra in alternation. There were no formal toasts, but several of an impromptu nature. It was an evening of real happiness. The service and menu reflected the greatest credit upon the management of the Alexandria. The guests were: J. C. Ford, vice-president and manager of the Pacific Coast Company, and president of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, and Drs. M. L. Moore, H. Bert Ellis Walter Lindley, George L. Cole, J. H. Davisson, Hervey Lindley of Seattle, Drs. F. T. Bicknell, John R. Haynes, Thomas E. Taggart, W. W. Beckett, E. R. Smith, W. W. Hitchcock, Carl Kurtz and A. C. Thorpe.

Miss Sampson a Bride.

An interesting wedding ceremony which took place in the First Congregational Church was that of Miss Lulu Sampson, daughter of Mrs. Mary Sampson, prominent in W.C.T.U. work, and Dr. Charles S. Porter of Long Beach. Rev. Warren F. Day officiated. The bride wore a becoming gown of gray broadcloth with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. She herself is interested in the W.C.T.U. work, and painted all the badges for the National W.C.T.U. Convention. Dr. Porter is a Long Beach physician and has a sanitarium at Burnett, where he and his bride will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kleinberger entertained the members of the "Don't Worry" Whist Club at their home, No. 1026 Bonnie Brae street. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Kornfeldt won the first prizes, and the second honors were captured by Mr. and Mrs. I. Green, while Mrs. Emil Strauss and Mr. Goldsmith won the consolations. An elaborate supper was served from a prettily decorated table, and vocal selections were given by Mrs. Marcus and Mr. Goldsmith.,

—o—

Fortieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Brewer received friends at their home on West Forty-second street and celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary. The rooms were prettily decorated, red being the prevailing tone. Many beautiful gifts were received. Light refreshments were served, and a pleasant afternoon was passed by those present. Among others present were: Mmes. J. Reichard, William Teakle, J. Rhomberg, C. T. Cook, Lee Storry, W. N. Ballie, W. N. Burns, G. W. Coanse, W. T. Joyce, M. E. Hanlon, John Lewellyn, Mrs. Edith Puff, Mrs. Hollenbeck, Mrs. Norman Bryant and Mrs. M. H. Cone.

Miss Thew Entertains.

Under the auspices of the Wednesday Morning Club, Miss Bessie Belle Thew, assisted by a number of friends, gave a most delightful enetrtainment on Friday evening at No. 2515 Pasadena avenue.

Miss Thew gave several original readings, written by herself, including "A Daughter of Russia," a sad little story of the Russian settlement, and "The Morning Mail," brightened the listeners with its quaint bit of humor, running through it. Miss Gara Van Loenen, a pupil of Miss Thew's, gave a "Midnight Spread," and Miss Ethel Hodgson in a "Test of Geography," was most convincing. "The Joys of Domestic Culture" was a fetching bit of comedy as done by Miss Emma and Sherman Shumway. Little Portia Newport, the thirteen-year-old vocalist, won a large amount of praise for her dainty vocalizing of several songs.

—o—

Hawxhurst Wins Bride.

Henry I. Hawxhurst, cartoonist, and Miss Edith Nora Humphreys, were married last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hawxhurst will make their home at Sierra Madre, it is announced. Mrs. Hawxhurst, who is a native of England, is a charming young woman and has for some time resided at Sierra Madre. Mr. Hawxhurst is well known among the artists.

—o—

Mr. Kremer Is Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Lissner of No. 422 West Adams street announce the engagement of their cousin, Miss Lucille Jacobs of Berkeley, to A. M. Kremer of this city. Mr. Kremer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Kremer of No. 952 Lake street, pioneers of the city, and Mr. Kremer himself is a native son. Miss Jacobs is a bright and attractive young bud.

A reception will be held on Sunday afternoon, December 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lissner for Miss Jacobs, who is visiting here, and Mr. Kremer.

—o—

Miss Edmunds Is Bride.

Miss Lucy F. Edmunds and L. Shirley Luard, formerly of Washington, D. C., were married recently in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rev. J. J. Wilkins officiating. The bride wore white swiss trimmed with lace, and wore a veil with orange blossoms, and carried a shower of bride roses. Soon after the ceremony, the couple left on the evening train for Vallejo to make their future home.

—o—

Merry Makers' Whist Club.

Mrs. Koop entertained members of the Merry Makers' Whist Club at her home, No. 1707 Toberman street, on Friday afternoon. Score cards were suggestive of the Christmas season, in the shape of bells adorned with holly berries. The prizes were large framed pictures of "Cupid Awake." Refreshments were served, and those present were Mrs. Jasper, Mrs. N. Powell, Mrs. Flint, Miss Beatty, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Steadman, Mrs. Giffen, Mrs. McLean, Miss Flint, Miss Gaty, Mrs. McKinne, Mrs. Hatch, Mrs. McCutcheon, Mrs. Brewer, Mrs. Coppock, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. E. Powell, Mrs. Slack and Mrs. Koop.

For Mrs. White.

A number of Mrs. Claudia Hazen White's friends are arranging a minstrel show and fancy cotton dress ball to be given on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Glendale skating rink. A large number of society folk will take part in the show. Mrs. Harry Dow Kirk of Colegrove will be Black Patti, and is to sing Arditti's waltz songs. Frank Hezmelhalch of Glendale will sing the Toreador song from "Carmen," in costume. Clarence Peck will play a selection from Rubenstein on the violin. J. F. Carson of Los Angeles will sing "My Chocolate Drop," a coon song with words and music by Claudia Hazen White. Mrs. White will give a medley called "Her Actress Child," which includes the cursing scene from "Leah, the Forsaken;" a coon specialty, "Angelina Johnson," and various other selections. The whole gay affair is to end with a cake walk, the winners to receive two mammoth cakes, weighing five and ten pounds each. Then there is to be a fancy cotton-dress ball. A $5 gold piece will be given to the wearer of the gown looking least like cotton.

—o—

Notes and Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Metcalf have taken apartments at Hotel Heinzeman for the winter.

La Fiesta Parlor, No. 236, will give the first dance for the season at Kramer's Hall, on the evening of December 18. This chapter is the baby chapter of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and this is the first dance which they have essayed to give.

The University Five Hundred Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Green, No. 2936 Halldale avenue. Mrs. E. M. Smith and J. Burris Mitchell, making the highest scores, were awarded the first prizes. Mrs. Thomas K. Hughes and A. L. Keys received the consolation prizes.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Weid, recently returned from an oriental trip, have located at No. 1613 West Seventh street. Mrs. Weid will be at home on the first and third Fridays.

Mrs. I. M. Seits and Mrs. John A. Moss of Clay Center, Kan., who have been touring the Coast for three months, are visiting at the home of D. W. Sidey, No. 1622 West Twenty-fourth street.

Announcement of the engagement of Walter H. Jackson and Mrs. E. Gertrude Lewis is made. The wedding will be a quiet home affair, sometime during the holidays.

GETS TICKETS BY MAGIC.

Indian Fakir Relieves Railroad Employee of Embarrassing Situation.

[Advocate of India:] Mohammed Che apparently is allowed by the particular railway company whose line passes through his part of the country to ride without a ticket, for the simple reason that he can always procure a ticket by unknown means if he wishes to. The inspectors have now given up asking him.

Some years ago he happened to be at a certain station where he was not known and asked the booking clerk for a ticket to another station a little way up the line. The clerk produced the ticket, which Mohammed Che proceeded to take.

When asked for the money he confessed he had not any with him. whereupon the clerk took back the ticket. Mohammed Che merely shrugged his shoulders and sat down quietly on the platform to wait.

It was about half an hour before the departure of the train. Very soon intending pasengers began to arrive and ask for tickets. What was the booking clerk's consternation when he found that there was not a single ticket in the office! Every single pigeonhole was empty!

The number of applicants for tickets began to swell, and there was soon almost a mob of angry and perspiring people around the opening. The poor clerk did not know what to do. There he was without a single ticket, and every minute the time at which the train was due drew nearer.

At last Mohammed Che looked up and said that if the clerk would give him his ticket he would see what he could do. The poor man, in despair, consented.

He turned around and lo! in one pigeonhole was a single ticket to the place where the old magician wished to go. Having handed this over, he turned around again, and to his abject astonishment every pigeonhole now bulged with tickets.

PATRONS of The Times desiring to aid in the necessary work of further spreading the gospel of Southern California throughout the country can employ no better means than by sending copies of the Midwinter Number of The Times to friends and acquaintances living at a distance. This special 200-page paper in magazine form will contain concise information about the climate, resources and opportunities in the growing Southwest. It will be richly illustrated, and the text is now being prepared by a corps of expert writers. Every effort is being put forth by the entire Times staff to make this number better than any preceding Times annual. The price will be 10c per copy, and patrons will find it a splendid advertising medium. Paid display copy must be in The Times office not later than Dec. 20. Liners will be accepted up to and including Dec. 27.

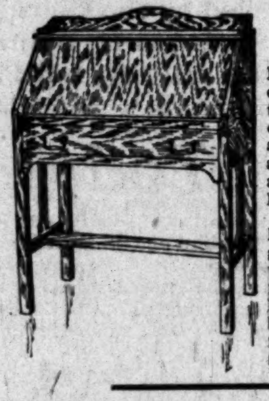
Everything Favors the Early Gift Buyer

How strange it is that everybody agrees that it is best to buy Christmas gifts early and so few do it

We can see an improvement this year, however. The last week has been a lively one. Hundreds of pieces have been selected and laid aside subject to the purchaser's order. We do this favor willingly and will do anything else that we can to make your shopping a pleasure.

We hope to see you this week.

Weathered Oak Desk



.. $18 ..

Worth $22.00

Is made of solid oak throughout and the finish is weathered. The design is a new one. There is ample room inside and a big drawer below.

We have desks as low as $8.00, with a good range all the way up to as high as you care to go. Needless to say we have all woods and finishes well represented.

Arts and Crafts Table

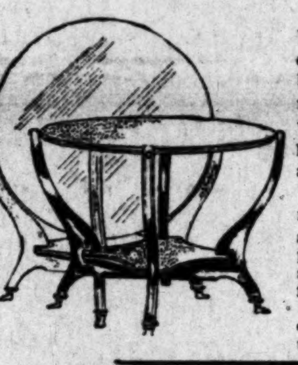
Worth $9.50

It's an odd piece that isn't odd at all, for it will fit in with most any kind of furniture. We have it in both the fumed and weathered oak finish. It is an Arts and Crafts product.

Reversible Card Tables

...$35...



Worth $40

You will find that a card table will be welcome in many homes when you are planning to send a gift.

This one is made in mahogany, with top polished on one side and green felt on the other.

We have other equally good values.

Quartered Oak Table

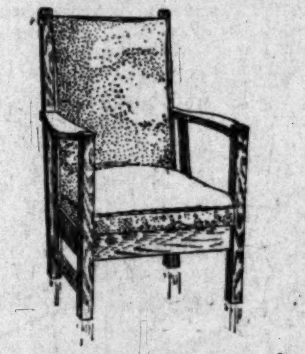
Worth $6.50

It is made of quarter sawed oak in the golden finish. The finish is perfect — it is hand polished. After all, the fads in finishes have their day; golden oak still holds its popularity.

Here's Something Extra Good



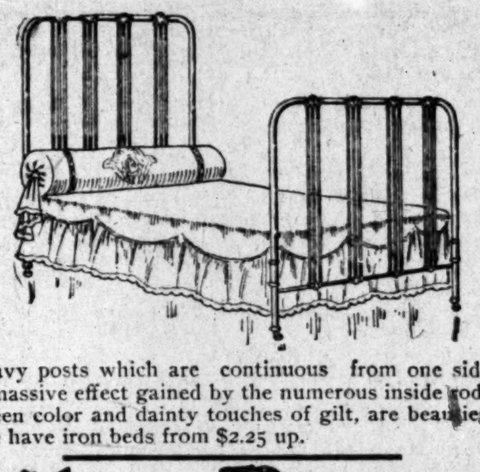
This Arm Chair $21

It Is Worth $25 Any Day

Every stick of wood is solid oak and quarter-sawed. The finish is weathered. The price includes two heavy cushions, leather covered. It is exceptionally well built. The rocker to match sells for $23.00.

This Splendid Bed $12

Worth $16



Good heavy posts which are continuous from one side to the other, a massive effect gained by the numerous inside rods, a rich apple green color and dainty touches of gilt, are beauties of this one. We have iron beds from $2.25 up.

Have You Considered Furniture Carefully?

Have you looked into the wants of those you wish to remember? When you do you will discover that there are hundreds of things in the furniture line that will be appreciated. Take an hour or two tomorrow and walk around our floors. You will meet suggestions at every turn.

We can't begin to tell the story in an ad. of this kind, but offer a few suggestions from some of the lines.

Solid Oak Morris Chair

WORTH $12.50

The frame is made of solid oak throughout, and the finish is golden. The cushions are velour covered and are reversible. You can't beat this one for the money. We have a big stock of Morris chairs in all woods.

This Craftsman Chair

$8.50 WOULD BE A VERY FAIR PRICE FOR IT

It is a Gustav Stickley chair: that is all we need to say. We have both the fumed and weathered finish and the seat is upholstered in various colors. This is a sample of our chair bargains.

This Music Cabinet

WORTH $7.50

Like the picture herewith. Note the numerous shelves. There is a brass rod and rings at the top for a curtain. The finish is mahogany.

We have an exceptionally good assortment of music cabinets this year. You will have no trouble in geting one in the finish you want and at the price you want to pay.

This Child's Rocker

WORTH $3.50

The wood used is solid oak, and you can have either the golden or weathered finish. Why not give one to the youngster? It is something that will last a lifetime and become a keepsake. Plenty of others—all bargains.

Business Conditions in November Never Better and Bank Clearings Unprecedented.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s report for November shows that trade conditions during the month were very satisfactory. Following is the report in full:

"Prices for agricultural products and fruit are higher than ever before. Winter vegetables are now going forward, and shipments are heavier than during the corresponding period last year. Prices are higher, and demand is stronger. Tomatoes are bringing $40 a ton and it is believed that $60 will be reached. Call for celery exceeds supply. The output will total this year 2100 carloads.

"The bean crop for 1906 is harvested. All not shipped is in warehouses. The yield was 835,000 bags, the carry-over stock 40,000. Nearly two-thirds of the crop has gone forward and prices have been well sustained. The shorts selling Limas came to grief on their October and November contracts. It has been the most prosperous year in the history of the industry.

"It is a great year both for beet tonnage and percentage of sugar. The output is 110,000,000 pounds, valued at $4,400,000.

"There are only eighty carloads of honey to Southern California's credit this year, as against 175, the average output. Growers expect 4½ cents or better.

"In the cured fruit market, every line continues strong. Apricots are held from 15c for standards to 17½c for fancy; peaches 10½c standard to 13c for fancy, with limited quantity. The prune price is advancing and about 80 per cent. of the crop of the State has been sold. Growers will receive, it is estimated, $2,500,000 more than last year.

Active demand for California raisins continues. Few packers have goods to offer. The whole crop has practically been sold and shipped. All previous price records have been broken.

"The bulk of California walnuts has been shipped. The crop was over-estimated. Prices have advanced 2½c above association prices.

"This season's orange crop is slow in maturing. Only in very few localities will fruit be well colored enough for Christmas shipment. Price has been fixed at $2 for choice, and $2.25 for extra fancy, f.o.b. The lemon market is holding up remarkably well under the disadvantages of cold weather and heavy importations.

"Locally, November business reached high-water mark. Never before have jobbers' stocks been so large or so quickly depleted. The gain in bank clearances was unprecedented. There was, too, a notable advance in prices of food-stuffs. Building permits were issued to the number of 653; value, $1,089,543. The petroleum situation and the increased activity in tributary mining regions are important factors in present prosperity. Price of oil in local markets is 80 to 90c a barrel. Producers are looking for $1 and are making few long-time contracts.

"Failures for month, 12; liabilities, $42,000; assets, $20,000.

"Same month last year, 11; liabilities, $38,000; assets, $27,000."

Let Your Money Earn You An Income

Watch Out For an Early Advance in U.S. Granite Pressed Brick Stock

There's More Money in Good Brick Than in Any Other Commodity

No investment today or at any other age since the art of building began is safer and surer in its returns than that of successful brick making. The basis of all trades and manufacture is demand. Without it there would be no values. When the demand decreases, it is a case among manufacturers in all lines of the survival of the fittest. If there is any one commodity which can be said never to have severely felt a falling off in demand it is brick. People must build, must grow. We must have stores and hotels and offices and manufactories and homes and all the thousand other buildings necessary to an advanced civilization. There are in Southern California three brick concerns. Increased, extended, enlarged as they have been from time to time, they are always behind in their orders because of the growing demand for brick. All are making money for their owners. Were we to enter upon the making of brick, with all the delay, all the expense and all the waste of the ordinary method we could even then make money rapidly and surely. BUT WE HAVE SOMETHING BETTER.

We are Prepared to Manufacture the Finest Pressed Brick in the World

We have the processes and the rights to make the finest pressed brick in the world. We can make it better, make it faster, make it cheaper and make more money. We make the brick which science and mechanics, as represented by the two most powerful governments in the world, have deemed it wise to select, to endorse and to use. We make the pressed granite brick, which is stronger, handsomer and more enduring than the ordinary pressed brick. It is made of crushed granite, has no cement in its composition, and may be made in any size, shape or color. Architects welcome it for its pleasing color effect, for its smooth surface and perfect alignment. Contractors prefer it because there is no waste in its use, it has a perfect edge, four smooth faces instead of one, and lays faster with less mortar. The general public like it for all these reasons combined and because buildings constructed of it are handsomer, presenting smooth walls of unvarrying color. IT STANDS WITHOUT AN EQUAL.

The German and American Governments Endorse and Use it for its Endurance

What do You Think of BRICK Like this Costing Only $7 a Thousand to Make?

Figure out the cost of making pressed brick by the common process. It takes twenty-one days. Many are warped or otherwise imperfect. Consider that we make ours in twenty-four hours. That there are no culls—absolutely no waste. Consider that we make a better brick for one-third the cost and get the ruling prices which run from $35 to $60 a thousand. Figure out the profits for yourself on our daily output of 20,000 brick and you will buy this stock today while you can.

We are preparing to make this brick in large quantities to satisfy an unquestioned demand for it by up-to-date builders and contractors. There is nothing speaks so eloquently of its merits as the brick itself. We have it at our office and urge all interested to call and examine it. It costs nothing to investigate it. Bring along your friends among the architects, builders or contractors and let them give you their honest judgment on it. We have pre-empted the land carrying the deposit, and have secured a factory site of several acres at the corner of Fifteenth and Alameda streets in this city. We have ordered our machinery and will be ready to start right in making brick as soon as the plant is equipped. We are offering a block of our stock at a very low price, the balance of the second allotment. No other industry was ever founded in the West with better prospects. The first allotment of stock sold readily, and the second allotment at an advanced price is almost exhausted already. The shares have a par value of $10. With the certainty of demand for this brick, and the cost of its manufacture, it is a fact beyond question that each share will advance to fully $50 within a year. The present price of these shares is $6 each. Par value $10, absolutely fully paid and non-assessable. This constitutes for rich and poor alike a safe, sure money-making investment. The demand exists. We have the lands in sight carrying the granite deposit. We have secured the factory site at Fifteenth and Alameda streets. We have the rights and process and have ordered the necessary machinery. Don't wait until the price of stock goes to $7. Don't wait until all the stock allotted for equipment purposes has been sold. Bring along your friends, your achitect, builder or foreman and see the brick. If you are engaged in any building trade, come in yourself and see the triumph of modern brick-making, destined to revolutionize the brick-making industry and make big money for every investor wise enough to pause and investigate.

SHIP SUBSIDY IS POSSIBLE.

BELIEVED THAT CONGRESS MAY ENACT SUCH A BILL.

Speaker Cannon Willing That the Measure May Come Up at This Session—Other Republican Opponents Are Now Understood to Have Changed Their Minds.

A Washington dispatch to the New York Journal of Commerce says there seems to be a growing conviction in Washington that the Ship Subsidy Bill will become a law at the next session of Congress. The measure, which was before the last session, passed the Senate, was unofficially approved by the President and the House Committee on Merchant Marine was about evenly divided in its support. A sufficient number of Republicans in the committee voted with the Democrats to defeat it. Speaker Cannon was unwilling, it is said, to allow it to come up. The Republicans who were opposed to the measure were as follows: Benjamin P. Birdsall of Iowa, William W. Wilson of Illinois, James E. Watson of Indiana and Edmund H. Hinshaw of Nebraska. It is thought that if Speaker Cannon is willing to allow the measure to come up, Mr. Watson will be willing to change his vote, which would tie the committee.

It is stated now that Speaker Cannon will be willing for the measure to come up this session, and was unwilling last session mainly because of the rush of business. He is said to have remarked: "We will be all right at this end of the avenue." With all these considerations in favor of the passage of the bill, it is still to be observed that the committee will be tied if the others vote as they did last term. No changes in the personnel of the committees have occurred to alter the situation, and it is thought improbable that any new arguments can be found one way or the other which would have much influence upon the committee.

If the opponents of the measure make a determined stand in support of the Republican opponents on the committee, they may still be able to defeat it. Activity on the other side of the proposition may be confidently expected. One reason for believing that the four Republican opponents of the measure are liable to weaken is that their position last session was one of passive opposition. hey were unwilling to vote for it, and the measure was not passed.

ARGUMENTS FOR SHIP SUBSIDY.

The annual report of the Bureau of Navigation, Department of Commerce and Labor, which has just been issued, is made to subserve an obvious purpose in harmony with that of the administration as proclaimed by Secretary Root and others, namely, to support the ship subsidy measure. In fact, there is little else in the report.

There is a first summary of conditions in the shipbuilding trade. We are told briefly that the documented vessels number 25,006 of 6,674,969 gross tons, that American shipping on the Pacific has doubled during the decade, while on the lakes it has increased 69 per cent. in the same period and is now one-third of our total tonnage; that the Atlantic and Gulf shipping has increased 29 per cent. and that it now requires 177,200 men to man all our merchant vessels and yachts. In this same decade the world's merchant shipping has increased about 45 per cent.

The year's construction was 1221 vessels of 418,745 gross tons, but only three ocean steamers were built. If the present rate of construction is unhindered by strikes or delays in furnishing structural steel the output of our shipyards will be the largest in half a century, close to that of 1855, which holds the record. Work is more evenly distributed on the seaboard and on the lakes than for some years. Of the thirty-two ocean steamers buiuding on the seaboard, only two are for foreign trade, and these will operate under the postal subsidy laws of 1891. Then follows the argument for the ship subsidy, which is, briefly, as follows:

"The assemblage of large bodies of trained mechanics in our shipyards creates a condition especially favorable to a legislative project to begin to reëstablish the American merchant marine in foreign trade next year, and the enactment of the Merchant Marine Commission Bill, which has passed the Senate, is recommended. An American ship cannot receive a subsidy unless it carries a certain proportion of naval reserves. These reserves are volunteers, not conscripts, and the success of the measure thus depends on the willingness of competent American seamen to enroll as volunteers under direction of the Navy Department. The bill is thus founded on national defense. The expenditures for naval reserves are to be fixed by Congress on estimates of the Secretary of the Navy. Expenditures for ocean mail steamers are to be fixed by Congress on estimates of the Postmaster-General. The expenditures for general subsidies to cargo steamers and merchant vessels depend on numerous conditions, including carrying naval reserves, fixed in a written contract with the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. Few Federal appropriations are so rigidly safeguarded."

SIX WOMEN CLAIMED HIM.

Embarrassing Conditions of a Man Who Knew Not One of the Claimants.

"A strange case of mistaken identity occurred some years ago in Kirk Langley, England," said the old lawyer. "Diligence Kerry was the name of a young man who lived there. He procured an appointment to India and just before he went he married a lovely girl of the village. It was agreed that she would not go out to India with him at once, but should wait until he had prepared a home for her.

"Soon after he reached India he had letters from England informing him that his wife had died of gastric fever. He remained in India and accumulated a fortune.

"Twenty years after he had left home he returned and settled down in Starling cottage, which he bought. Not long after his return he happened to be seen by a Mrs. Rucktuck of Liverpool, who promptly declared to her friends that Kerry was the husband of a neighbor of hers, he having left the country some years before. Mrs. Rucktuck at once communicated with the deserted wife, and she went to Kirk Langley and the moment she saw Kerry she identified him as her husband, and, despite his protestations, insisted on claiming him as such. The strange dispute created much consternation in the village, and proof was quickly sought on both sides to make good the respective assertions.

"Pending the settlement of the dispute, a second woman, Mrs. Spass, suddenly appeared upon the scene and declared that Kerry had been married to her and had deserted her. Besides these, four other women came forward, each of whom claimed Kerry as her own lawful husband, and, what is stranger still, each of the six women declared Kerry to be a separate and distinct individual.

"It was conclusively established by Kerry that at the times the women swore the marriages took place in England, he was actually in India, and that ended the matter."

ROAD SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

LONG LINE BEING BUILT IN VIRGINIA TO TIDEWATER.

Five Hundred Miles of Track for Which no Public Bonds Are Issued, Nor Is the Public Asked to Subscribe for Any of the Railroad Stock.

Down in Virginia and West Virginia is being built a 500-mile railroad which is shrouded in mystery. In Virginia the road is known as the Tidewater, and in West Virginia as the Deepwater, taking its name from the beginning point on the Kanawha River. It extends from the rich coal fields of Southern West Virginia to Norfolk. It is being built in sections, and will be ready for through traffic by July 1, 1908.

So much for the road. But who is building it? Ordinarily the public is asked to assist in the building of roads, but in this instance not a bond or a single share of stock has been offered for public subscription. All of the company's bills are promptly discounted. Cash is paid for everything. No debts are allowed to accumulate. Thus far it is estimated that between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 has been spent, and the identity of the men who have spent the sum and who apparently are ready to spend many times more, has been carefully kept secret.

One of the theories is that the Standard Oil Company is behind the undertaking. They are practically the only people, it is argued, who have enough ready cash on hand to carry through such a gigantic scheme as the Deepwater and Tidewater. To add plausibility to this surmise, it is known that the men who compose that corporation have acquired a great deal of land in West Virginia, some of it by outright purchase and other tracts by long leases, with oil and coal rights attached.

Of course, it is known who the officers are. W. N. Page of Ansted, W. Va., is president of the Deepwater road—that is, that portion of the road lying in West Virginia; and Dr. J. O. Green of New York is president of the Virginia section, which is known as the Tidewater. The treasurer and other officials are also known, but they have steadfastly refused to divulge the source of the funds being expended in constructing the line.

About seventy-five miles of the road, beginning at Deepwater, have been built and are in operation. The road has six locomotives and over 700 cars. And all this without the sale of a single bond or single share of stock. Who before ever heard of a railroad being built without a bond or stocks being issued? The only information given out regarding the ownership of the road was by Dr. Green, who recently took occasion to say: "I cannot see that the question of ownership concerns the public, since the owners are not asking the public to subscribe to the stocks or bonds. We are paying all of our debts promptly. We do not like our bills to accumulate. I might say that some of the owners are interested in coal properties in West Virginia, and can afford the luxury of a railroad to haul their coal to tidewater at Norfolk."

The project is one of great interest to the Norfolk and Western and its proprietors

Men's Ailments

My Treatment For Weakness

Functional derangement, such as prematureness, loss of power, etc., is neither a "weakness" nor a disease. It is a symptom of prostatic disorder. To stimulate activity by the use of powerful tonics is an easy matter, but such results are merely temporary drug effects. Most doctors treat "weakness" in this manner because they do not know how to cure the real cause of the derangement. I am the only physician employing scientific and successful methods. I use no tonics at all. My treatment is a local one entirely, and corrects every abnormal condition of that vital center, the prostate gland. My cures are real cures, and are permanent.

My Treatment For Contracted Disorders

The importance of quickly curing contracted disorders is being more fully recognized among the medical profession. The tendency of these diseases is to gradually extend backward, involving in a chronic inflammation the most vital centers of the organic system.

The serious results that may follow could scarcely be exaggerated. Saftey demands an absolutely thorough cure in the least possible time. I have treated more cases of contracted disorders than any other physician upon the Pacific Coast. My cures are thorough and are accomplished in less time than other forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results. I employ remedies of my own devising and my treatment is equally effective in both recent and chronic cases.

Specific Blood Poison Positively Eradicated

Without the use of dangerous drugs. I drive the very last taint of virus from the system, and every symptom of the disease vanishes, to appear no more. I employ harmless, blood-cleansing remedies only.

Nature accomplishes nothing by force. Her work is wrought through gentle influences. We see evidences of this truth everywhere. Nature has a way of overcoming every disease. Sometimes she fails. The physicians duty is help when nature falters, and to help by reinforcing the natural recuperative influences. This is often a delicate task. The treatment must be accurate, mild and and gentle, Otherwise it works harm. Exciting tonics, fiery caustic and cruel cutting have no part in my practice. I have mild and harmless methods that cure by nature's plens, and that cure thoroughly and permanently in the briefest possible time. Why take chances? I offer you that which you are seeking, a quick and permanent cure through painless and harmless treatment.

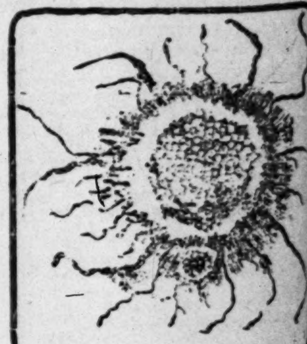
Cancer Can Be Cured!



Investigate. Convince yourselves. Take this case of Mrs. O. S. Walters of Ventura, for example. This lady had Cancer of the Tongue. There is no doubt about it. Her tongue was examined by ethical physicians, who went so far as take scrapings and subject them to analysis. They agreed that this was a clear case of Cancer, and a very sorry case. They told Mrs. Walters that an operation, cutting out her tongue, was the only means to save her life. She consulted Mrs. Bridge, who examined her, and found that the Cancer affected the whole arch of the tongue and would have to be treated on both sides. Mrs. Walters underwent the treatment by the Mrs. Bridge Remedy, and in six months' time was completely cured. Her tongue was saved—not only that, her LIFE was saved. Mrs. Walters and her friends are overjoyed at her recovery, which is one of the many remarkable cures of cancer credited to skillful treatment and the efficacious application of Mrs. Bridge's Cancer Cure. Call at this office, or write for the names and addresses of other patients discharged as cured by this treatment. Talk with them, and be assured that this Remedy cures, and cures to stay cured. Examination and consultation FREE. Don't despair, and don't neglect your Cancer, if you are afflicted with one.

BEAUTIFUL PALMS

OVERLOOKING THE CITY AND THE SEA

Midway between the twinkling lights of the city and the curling foam of Old Ocean's breakers, lies the most beautiful cluster of hills in Los Angeles County. Without adequate transportation facilities the march of real estate progress has passed them by. The tremendous, far-reaching plans of the Los Angeles-Pacific will bring them as near the heart of the city as Westlake Park is now. From the magnificent new station at 4th and Hill, shortly to be built by that "Wizard of Finance," E. H. Harriman, Palms will only be a matter of 18 minutes. The new coaches now building in St. Louis, will carry you through that triumph of modern engineering, the sub-way, to the city gates in 8 minutes, and 10 minutes more on the 4-track, broad gauge, air-line road will land you at what will inevitably become the most beautiful home center of Southern California. The Palms Land, Light and Water Co., organized under the laws of California, with a capital of $1,000,000, has purchased the Winship water plant and 379 acres of land, including every hill-top in and around Palms. The above facts constitute the real estate opportunity of the decade: lots will sell for far more than acres do now. Values have increased every week during the last month, and the Company's latest purchases had to be made at much higher prices than earlier ones.

We only ask you to go out and be convinced. You can get free tickets at the company's offices, 432 H.W. Hellman building, and 410 Delta Building and the company's autos which meet every Short-Line car, will take you to the office on Fourth street., Palms, where the representatives of the company will gladly show you the property, discuss their plans and explain how you can get in on the "ground floor" of the best paying proposition of these remarkably prosperous times.

NEW ENERGY, MORE WORK.

College Settlement Gets a Strong Director.

Gordan, of Chicago, to Be Salaried Resident.

Much Is Accomplished by the Local Center.

The Los Angeles College Settlement is soon to take unto itself a well-known worker from one of the most celebrated social centers in the world, the Chicago Commons.

Edgar Gordan, who is coming to be the moving power at the local settlement, has directed the household activities for five years in the Windy City center for civic coöperation, where nearly four thousand men, women, children and babies go every week for the good of their souls, bodies, minds and hearts; where the friendship of this great brotherly settlement takes a thousand forms of betterment in a congested district where there are 60,000 people to the square mile.

What the Chicago Commons has done, the College Settlement of Los Angeles hopes to do in time with the help of Mr. Gordan, who will be the first salaried resident, and who will live at the Settlement with his wife and little daughter, there to govern the rapidly-growing activities, and to put into them the ideas and power that have so lifted the burdens, brightened the dull lives, and lightened the cruel circumstances of many of the submerged population of Chicago. Mr. Gordan's present sphere of activity is a great building, humming like a bee hive, with day nursery, kindergarten, kindergarten training school, domestic science and manual training classes, music clubs, mothers' clubs, men's clubs, and every avenue of effort that trained intelligence can devise, making 2373 permanent settlement groups that meet under the same auspices, and from which civic, moral, and mental uplift flows out through the entire community.

The Men's Community Club in the ward where the Chicago Commons stands has simply revolutioned politics in that section. Intelligent citizenship has taken the lead in municipal affairs instead of ward bosses, and ever since the organization of this club and its discussion at the Chicago Commons of the significance of each city election, a good Alderman has represented the ward.

MUST HAVE SUPPORT.

The added expense to the College Settlement of maintaining such a worker as Dr. Gordan must be met by private support. Half of his salary has already been guaranteed, but the whole scheme of work in the Settlement district at Alpine and Castelar streets, where the population has doubled itself in the last few years, and the many new departments needed, speak to a large-hearted public for support in no uncertain terms.

In the East, schools and churches and colleges have the settlement work under their wings, and see that it is supported, and this local enterprise where friendship to the alien races abounds and to the poverty-stricken of humanity is as freely accorded and as delicately proffered as to one's own social intimate, this enterprise which has worked almost in secret for fear of alienating its neighbors of the Cholo courts, its familiar acquaintance of the crumbling adobe, which has been the means of doing the pioneer work in nearly ever civic advancement in Los Angeles, now stands after nearly twelve years of patient endeavor where the general support of the public should be accorded to it, in the same sense as it is given to this work in eastern cities.

To those desiring such a course, the College Settlement affords a training in philanthropy that is more valuable than any knowledge learned in the schools. A post graduate course in Settlement activities is a broadener which years of life in a single groove cannot equal.

Here the college graduate gives of her stores of knowledge to her less fortunate friends; the trained physical culturist lends her effort, little girls are taught to sew and to prepare food, mothers are instructed in making over garments for their children, music is taught, and choral clubs are encouraged, every one who has something of learning or lore gives it, along with her personal friendship, for friendship and not charity is the keynote of the settlement spirit.

ACCOMPLISH THINGS.

Because of the "pizen modesty," as one has recently dubbed it, of this little group of volunteer workers in the college settlement, few people are aware of how many civic improvements have been the outcome of efforts begun there.

From the work among the boys and girls of this neighborhood, the need of a Juvenile Court was so desperately felt that the first meeting held in the city in the interest of such a court was called together by Miss Evalyn Stoddart at the settlement house.

Here the first district nurse made her demonstration, so that the City Council granted the request of the College Settlement and paid for her services out of the public purse. Now Los Angeles supports two municipal nurses and contemplates another.

The settlement nurse is herself a great institution. She comes daily in closest touch with a polyglot population, representing fifteen nationalities, and with her work of healing, sanitation and helpfulness, she wins the confidence and is able to work with the most ignorant and suspicious of the foreign population, preventing contagion and materially helping the people amidst the greatest congestion of habitation and the fiercest poverty to be found in the city.

Domestic science and manual training in the public schools of Los Angeles were first agitated by the College Settlement, and the city officials first saw the practical workings in a small way in the settlement classes. Indeed, the settlement has been the great demonstrator to Los Angeles. A night school to teach English to foreign-speaking men was carried on there for several years, and lately the school authorities have taken it out of their hands and established it on an enlarged scale at the Castelar-street School. The first night school for girls has just been started this season by the settlement workers. It has already an attendance of fifteen pupils, and as soon as it is definitely shown that the attendance will justify the effort, the school board will take this in hand also.

The burning desire of the settlement women for the happiness and welfare of the neighborhood children was one of the greatest factors in the starting of public playgrounds in the city, Miss Bessie Stoddart, one of the foremost workers, being named as a member of a playground commission. The housing commission was also the outcome of settlement agitation, the workers taking prominent people from other cities to visit the dreadful courts in their neighborhood to get advice from those accustomed to grappling with such problems.

VISIT TO BE REMEMBERED.

A visit to the College Settlement almost any day in the week is an experience not to be forgotten. Tuesday afternoon the poor Mexican mothers meet there to make over garments for their children. The entire family, save the father, accompanies the mother, so she can try on the clothes she is fashioning. Indeed, she could not come if she had to leave the babies at home. The older girls of the families meet the same afternoon for their sewing class, and even the tiny girls and the tiny boys have their own classes going on at the same time. Little Italy may be found now in the settlement district, and many little dark-eyed boys and girls of Italian families are members of the clubs in good and regular standing.

The small boys' club learns to sew, but bless you! It is sewing disguised as a manly occupation. They are told that soldiers must often mend their own clothes. They are given soldier dolls painted on cloth, which they cut out and make, thus learning two mending stitches. They make bright capes for the soldiers, and have a fort to put them into after they are finished.

One tough specimen of a "newsy," just 8 years old, who condescended to make a soldier boy, was seen to go off in a corner by himself when he had finished his soldier. He kissed the doll surreptitiously, and whispered: "Good-by, I must leave you now," and no one had ever suspected a soft spot in his make-up.

The little housekeepers are taught to cook and to wash, and to serve a meal. Then they play family at the table, one is father and another is mother, and then there are the children, good manners and dainty ways being imbibed with the dainty viands. Social evenings for the families of the neighborhood, boys' game evenings, and all sorts of interesting activities may be found in full blast at the College Settlement. The officers Mrs. Mary H. Bingham, president; Miss Bessie D. Stoddart, vice-president; Miss Louise Barber, secretary; Miss Jessie Anthony, treasurer; Miss Mary Veeder, Mrs. Nathan Weston and Miss Amanda Matthews. Associate memberships in this association cost $5 a year and may be sent to the settlement house to the treasurer, Miss Anthony.

CALIFORNIA PRODUCT GROWING IN APPRECIATION.

This State Could Supply Needs of the Country, but There Has Been Little Profit in Its Manufacture Recently—Used for Paving, Roofing, Paint and Roads.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

The United States Geological Survey says that the production of oil asphaltum is an industry peculiar to California, and most of the material is made as a by-product in the distilling of lubricating and illuminating oils and lighter products from crude petroleum of asphaltum base. Such oil asphaltum could be manufactured in California in quantities far greater than are required to fill the whole needs of the United States, and the industry is now suffering (1905) from acute overproduction.

The price of crude oil acceptable to the refiner of asphaltum has, generally speaking, been about 33 per cent. less than it was in 1904, but even with this advantage the oil asphaltum producer has been barely able to meet expenses, and in many cases the asphaltum has been sold for less than the cost of manufacture. Rates as low as $6 per ton, free on board at the refinery, were reported as the average value of the entire production of some refineries for the year.

Expert chemists state that the refiners are handicapped by the absence of a process of manufacture, which will economically produce an asphaltum free from carbenes (deleterious products of the cracking process which goes on in the stills during the distillation of the heavier oils,) with a uniform and suitable penetration and possessing stability on heating.

Another obstacle to the trade is the high price of containing packages. No cheap and satisfactory substitute for the wooden-stave barrel has yet been found for asphalt. Barrels of about 480 pounds capacity cost 63 cents or more each, delivered at he refineries, and are an expensive container for a comparatively low-priced material.

Californian oil asphaltum is about the consistency of thin molasses at ordinary temperature. It is largely used for oiling roads, being delivered by the refineries into tank cars and pumped from the tank cars into tank wagons for spreading over the roads.

The production of oil asphaltum increased from 44,405 short tons, valued at $459,135, in 1904, to 50,169 short tons, valued at only $430,911, in 1905, the average value decreasing from $10.34 to $8.59 per short ton.

To the keen competition in California of oil asphaltum is attributed the decrease in the country's production of bituminous sandstone (from 46,641 short tons in 1904, to 39,273 short tons in 1905,) as 90 per cent. of the bituminous sandstone production in the United States is quarried in California.

In 1905, the hard natural asphalt of California brought $12.07 per short ton at the mines, while that of Indian Territory brought $15.

Preparations have been made for the manufacture in California of briquettes for fuel from California peat mixed with oil asphaltum. Samples were at the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

California oil asphaltum has been used to some extent for street pavements, and other purposes in New York and other eastern cities. It finds wide use throughout California, and the West for making street pavements, as roofing cements, for waterproofing and preservative preparations, and as marine and iron paints. Being a pure asphaltum, this material can be mixed in any desired proportions with gravel, crushed rock, and other paving materials.

The quantities of oil asphaltum produced in California in 1903, 1904 and 1905, were more than double that produced in 1902. The industry is growing in good shape.

To Real Estate and other Classified Advertisers: The forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued January 1, 1907, will be a splendid medium for the exploitation of attractive real estate offerings. Thousands of copies will be mailed by citizens of Southern California to friends abroad who are figuring on emigrating to the Southwest. The rate will be 3 cents per word for classified announcements to run in the magazine section of this special issue. "Liner" copy will be received up to and including Dec. 27th.

JAPAN EXHIBIT
VENICE CAL.

Real Genuine Oriental

Japanese Christmas Goods

Unique Christmas Gifts You Can Obtain Nowhere Else in America

TODAY is the first grand Christmas Opening of the Oriental Exposition at Venice. It's a "straight from the shoulder" proposition, in which you are afforded actual savings of from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. on all things "Jappy." Everything made in Japan, too, by skilled and clever Japanese workers. No imitations—all absolutely genuine. Japan exhibit is under the management of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, and is exclusively the only one of its character in America. They have gone to great expenditure of time and money in maintaining this American Exhibit and have sent here positively the finest display of Japanese goods ever seen in this country. Practically all of the entire exhibit which was at St. Louis Exposition is on display at Japan Exhibit, Venice. These are for sale and you may be sure you will never have another opportunity to pay "so little" for these goods. There are many that cannot be duplicated exclusive of Japan.

Japan Exhibit

Sarah Bernhardt, while at Venice, recently, commented upon the extensiveness of the exhibit. So enthused was she that it took her a little over 10 minutes to purchase more than $1500 worth of kimonos, bric-a-brac and tapestries. In all her tours she claims never to have seen this Japanese Display equaled.

JAPANESE GOODS are becoming more and more popular with us. Christmas is but a few days off, and Japan Exhibit affords unlimited Christmas gift suggestions to the prospective buyer. Then, why not give Japanese gifts this year? They will certainly be appreciated by the recepient.

Come to Venice and Japan Exhibit today. Come to see and you'll remain to buy. Then, we'll allow you the price of your round trip fare if you purchase to the amount of $5 or over. Or if you spend ten dollars we will give you free a handsome picture.

These are generous offers, considering the price at which you pay for Japanese goods here.

If you have a want—large or small in things "Jappy"—Japan Exhibit is where you can best fill it. By all means don't miss today's Christmas Opening.

Gifts for "HIM," gifts for "HER" and gifts for the children; Christmas toys in abundance. Rich hand carved teakwood furniture, handsome hand embroidered portieres, screens and tapestries for the home.

This is the Tourists' mecca—so by all means come down today, Mr. Tourist, and you'll be mightily pleased. This invitation is extended to everyone. Japan Exhibit is open every day and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Special attention to C.O.D. orders. We have experienced Japanese packers and make safe shipments to any part of the country We solicit business in this connection. No charge for packing.

Nothing will suffice short of a microscopic journey from the assessor's field book to the moment at hand, a trip that includes a great deal of figuring and many signs of restlessness from near-by waiters in the line. "And now how much do you say the taxes are?"

"Seven dollars and eighty-three cents, madam."

"What, seven dollars and eighty-three cents. Good gracious you can't mean it. Now in the East, well, I haven't that much with me, anyway. If you will please give me a memorandum I'll try to send you the money, but I think it is an outrageous charge."

By this time the waiting line has begun to send forth sundry sharp verbal messages all calculated to speed the lingering guest on her outward journey.

SAD TENDERFEET.

The separation of State and county from city taxes is a prolific source of confusion and usually tangles the recruit from the East in such a web of confusion that his only escape seems to be along the path of a rather severe arraignment of western tax methods. It is frequently astonishing to learn what heathen we are in this regard and the only marvel is that our blind stumblings have not long ago landed us in the melancholy pit of civic insolvency.

The only satisfaction is that if one may rely on contrasts and a testimony of those who have pulled out for other localities, if one may depend on such things there are, it appears, some localities between the Sierra Nevadas and the Atlantic Ocean where it is a perfectly delightful pastime to pay taxes, a joy that makes the day memorable and fills the heart of the payee with a great longing for its speedy return.

It would be an injustice to touch upon the activities of a tax office without alluding to the pathetic phases of the day's business; little glimpses into the struggles of every day life that make the world so intensely human.

It is astonishing how much comfort a few words of good cheer can bring to the despondent one. There is no use to waste the words for it is no trouble to distinguish the one to whom pennies are from necessity as big as dollars from the other one who would have you believe that with him at least such is the case.

FIRST FRUITS DRAW BUYERS.

CALIFORNIA NAVELS ATTRACT IN NEW YORK.

Oranges Arrive in Gotham Surprisingly Well-Colored and of Extraordinarily Good Flavor for so Early in Season—Delays in Transit Bother Receivers of Floridas.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The first navel oranges for this season were offered during the week. One car and part of another constituted the first offering and there was considerable interest manifested in this, the first sale of the season. The fruit came surprisingly well colored, and of more than ordinarily good flavor for the season. It was in good condition, as a whole, and the prices were as high as could reasonably be expected.

The time has gone by when opening sales attract men who want to build up a reputation for liberality by paying iordinately high prices for fruit. Formerly that was common, but it was in the days when the margin of profit was wider than it is now, and when dealers were quite willing to allow their enthusiasm to run away with their heads.

The full car was of the Mariposa brand, and the average was $3.55 per box. A fraction of another car sold at $3.96 per box. The car was offered by Steinhardt & Kelley, agents of the California Citrus Union. The union was the first in the field last year, and offered good oranges. The offering is earlier than the first one last year. In fact, it was possible to offer fruit from this first car for Thanksgiving consumption.

The range of prices on the fruit in the car was: 96s, $4.85; 126s, $4.95; 150s, $3.65; 176s, $3.20; 200s, $3; 216s, $2.75; 250s, $2.50; 288s, $2.55; 300s, $2.55. This car was offered Tuesday and another smaller quantity was offered Friday, which did no better.

The arrival of the first car of navels always attracts an inordinate amount of attention, and this year was no exception to the general rule. While buyers do not bid up prices as high as they have some years, they were quite as much interested, and took what was offered very readily. Consumers will be pleased, likewise, to know that it will soon be possible to buy navel oranges in as liberal quantities as required.

The market promises to be better than ever before. This is indicated in the sales of storage navels, which have shown uniformly high prices all the fall. The storage fruit has kept fully as well as usual, but after all, it is more or less insipid, after it has been under ice for months, and it is largely the loyalty to California fruit which has induced buyers to pay the prices which they have paid in certain instances for the cold-storage navels. Now, with fresh navels arriving, there will no longer be any question as to the interest which buyers show.

Delays in transit have bothered receivers of Florida fruit of late, and much of it has shown heavy waste. At the early sales prices fell off fully 25 to 50 cents a box, because of the unsatisfactory condition of delayed fruit. There is, and has been, an active demand, and this has prevented a further decline in price. Brights showed a range of $1.85 to $3.75 on good to fancy, and $1.05 to $1.65 for ordinary stock. As high as 15 per cent. decay was reported in some of the arrivals.

At the last sale of the week 4000 boxes of Porto Ricos were sold. The range was from $1.50 to $1.75 per box for good fruit, and $1 to $1.50 for ordinary stock. A small lot of Porto Rico navels brought $2.15 to $2.20 per box. These are among the first of the cultivated fruit to arrive in this market. It is said that only a few will come forward this year, but that next year a considerable quantity will be landed here. The orchards are all reported as doing well and promising liberal yields next season and all seasons thereafter.

A lot of 300 barrels of Jamaica oranges showed heavy waste, and sold for $2.25 to $2.37½ per barrel. These will have to be repacked and the buyer will not make much money, even at that figure.

Not many lemons were offered, but a few lots of Californias sold at $2.80 to $5.05 per box. The demand was heavier than the supply, as it always is now when Californias are offered at all. It is reported that there are many buyers who would never take anything else if they could always get Californias. This has much of encouragement in it, and indicates that sales will continuously increase regardless of the efforts of importers to introduce their fruit where Californias are most wanted.

Some Florida grapefruit was offered, but bidding was slow and prices ranged rather low. The best that could be done was $2.37½, and from that the price ranged down to $1.50 per box. The quality is not entirely satisfactory and business is done in a small way only.

An Ideal Present for a MAN
The Novels of PAUL DE KOCK

Major Pendennis's remark that he had read nothing of the novel kind for thirty years except Paul de Kock, "who certainly made him laugh," is likely to remain one of the most durable of his testimonials. And Bulwer wrote of De Kock as being "more racy and powerful than any other writer I am aware of." He was one of the most fertile and most charming of contemporary novelists, one of those, also, whose fame will never die.

"De Kock kept France laughing for more than fifty years."—The New York Herald.

"One of the most amusing writers of the century."—The Outlook.

"Light and bright—I recommend you to Paul de Kock."—Truth.

"Lively and amusing sketches of life."—Professor George Saintsbury.

"The pen pictures that he drew around his characters, from first chapter to last, simply were delicious."—The North American, Philadelphia.

"No one of his contemporaries was as well known. The names of Balzac, George Sand, and even the elder Dumas, seemed obscure beside his."—The Bookman.

The masterpieces of the writings of Charles-Paul de Kock are now for the first time completely translated into English and printed only for distribution among bona fide subscribers. They will be printed solely for such private distribution, and no copies will be procurable through the ordinary trade channels or otherwise as above indicated.

Much Learning Soon Will Gather Here.

State, County, City Teachers and Professors.

Institutes Will Meet and Science Hold Sway.

Another week and the schoolma'am will be with us again, and the schoolmaster in lesser numbers; bright-faced women with purpose writ large upon their countenances will be seen pursuing their several ways from this section to that general meeting, from Polytechnic High School to Simpson's Auditorium, and to the State Normal School, and Los Angeles will pause and be glad that they are here once more.

The great educational week of the year begins December 17 with City and County Teachers' Institutes, and Southern California Teachers' Association. That Chinese puzzle, the combined programme of all the meetings and all the sections of the entire week, will be out in a few days. Those who must annually grapple with this programme will be glad to learn that Mark Keppel, president of the teachers' association, has arranged a key, or birdseye view of the whole for the benefit of reporters and laity.

Monday, December 17, at 9:30, a general meeting of Los Angeles city teachers will be held at Polytechnic High School and will be addressed by City Superintendent E. C. Moore, and Superintendent Hyatt of Riverside. A meeting of the county teachers will be in session at the same time at Simpson's Auditorium with Superintendent Mark Keppel and Dr. Richard G. Boone of New York, as speakers. Tuesday morning the city teachers will hear Superintendent Frank F. Bunker, Superintendent H. A. Adrien, and the county teachers, President Jesse F. Millspaugh of the local State Normal School and Prof. Ellwood D. Cubberly of Stanford.

FOR EFFICIENCY.

Tuesday morning the high school teachers of the city and county will meet in separate institute at the auditorium of the L.A. High School. They will discuss the subject, "How Can Efficiency in High Schools Be Increased?" The speakers are Principal J. H. Francis of Polytechnic High School and Prof. E. E. Taylor, Prof. Clapp of Berkeley and Prof. H. P. Rolfe of Stanford. In the afternoon the general topic of pedagogy will occupy attention with Profs. Cubberly, Osterhaut and Bunker to talk.

Wednesday afternoon the city teachers will be addressed by Profs. Cubberly and T. L. Heaton, and the county teachers by Superintendent H. A. Adrian of Santa Barbara, and Frank F. Bunker of Seattle. Monday and Tuesday afternoons and Wednesday forenoon will be spent in seventeen separate section meetings, the majority being held in the Polytechnic High School.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Southern California Teachers' Association will open Wednesday evening, December 19, at the Polytechnic High School with an address of welcome from City Superintendent E. C. Moore, with response by Superintendent Nichols of Orange county, an illustrated lecture on "The Great Quake," by Vice-President Branner of Stanford, to follow.

Thursday forenoon there are to be ten section meetings: High school, grammar school, primary, rural school, school administration, designed especially for school officials, led by Hon. N. W. Thompson of Alhambra; home and school league, led by Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum; manual training and art section, with manual art exhibit in addition to literary programme. The Council of Education, forming one of the sections on Thursday morning, has a variety of subjects to be compressed into the two hours' session.

"How May Schools Be Kept from Political Influence," is first on the list, the discussion led by James A. Foshay. "Free Text-Books," follows, with Lewis B. Avery to start the ball rolling; "Supervision of Rural Schools," will be treated by Prof. Cubberly; "Future of Nature Study," by Prof. Osterhout; "Child Study," by Dr. Jesse Allen, and "Humane Education," by Prof. W. F. Bliss, Prof. O. P. Jenkins, Mrs. Elizabeth Grinnell, Mrs. J. B. Millard, Prof. W. C. Crandall and Prof. L. H. Miller.

Thursday afternoon there is to be a general session at Simpson's Auditorium, when Mark Keppel will talk on "Our Creed;" Willimina Armstrong on "Ancient and Modern Education in India," and Capt. E. Miller on "Agriculture in the Public Schools." Friday morning a music section in charge of Prof. J. N. Whybark of Santa Ana will render a full and excellent programme at the Polytechnic auditorium. Geography will be taken up by Profs. Bunker and Fairbanks, and Prof. Camberlain of Throop, at Simpson's Auditorium.

"Health and Development" is scheduled for the Normal School auditorium under the direction of Profs. Osterhout, Jenkins, Leslie, Gilbert, Grinnell and Colliver. "School Activities" will hold sway in the Normal School gymnasium and will deal with a model high school.

MEETING OF SECTIONS.

Other sections meeting are "Classical Languages" under Miss Katherine Carr at Polytechnic, with Prof. Clapp on "Some Old-fashioned Ideas in Teaching Classics;" an address on Greek by Prof. Rolfe, and "A Student of Archeology in Rome," by Miss Ada Trotter; history section with "Municipal Problems," by Rev. Dana Bartlett, and talks by Prof. W. F. Bliss and Miss Ella B. Morgan and an address by President David Starr Jordan of Stanford; mathematics section will include "Training of Civil Engineers," by J. A. Bell, and "How to Make Mathematics Concrete," by Frank F. Bunker.

Prof. Jenkins will speak to the science section on "What Should Be the Aim of Biological Sciences in Secondary Schools;" Council of Education will take up "Certification of High School Teachers," by President Gates of Pomona College; "Industrial Training of Girls," by Superintendent F. W. Conrad of San Bernardino; "The Batavian Idea of Teaching," by A. Harvey Collins.

Kindergartners will be addressed by Dr. Boone and Prof. Cubberly; manual training and art section, by Miss Alice Tabor, who will speak on "Hawaiian Children and Their Legends," and Prof. Batcheler on "Art Craftsmen." Prof. Rolfe will speak to the English section on "Some Problems of High School English." "Graded Systems in the Public Schools" will be treated by Superintendent George L. Sackett of Ventura.

Friday afternoon a general session at Simpson's Auditorium will be addressed by Dr. John W. Cook of Illinois and President Jordan of Stanford. The last session will be held Saturday morning at the Polytechnic auditorium, when Dr. Cook will talk on "Modern Tendencies in Education," a business meeting and election of officers to follow.

ASSOCIATION ITEMS.

The Southern California School Masters' Club, of which State Superintendent-elect Edward Hyatt is president, will hold its annual business meeting and banquet Thursday or Friday of association week.

The California Physical Geography Club, with Prof. C. T. Wright as president, will meet on Friday with the geography section, and take an excursion to some point of interest Friday afternoon.

The Pacific Manual Training Teachers' Association will meet with the manual-training section Friday and an exhibit will be held under the direction of Prof. Charles W. Kent.

A committee on free text-books, consisting of Superintendent L. B. Avery as chairman and J. F. Millspaugh, B. W. Reed, Edward Hyatt, Herbert T. Clark, George L. Sackett and W. W. Tritt, will prepare and present a report to the Saturday-morning session.

San Bernardino county and Orange county will hold their annual institutes and come to join the teachers' association the last three days of the week.

SCHOOL DECORATION.

The Child Study circles of the city have an eye to the artistic. They have accomplished much good in many lines, and perhaps no one of their many schemes for the good of the children has appealed more to the "kiddies" themselves than that for decorating and brightening the schoolrooms.

It is reported by the committee that there has been no school building in the city but has benefited by this; every one having received some assistance in the way of making rooms more attractive. The mothers have become awakened to the fact that the place where their children spend the greater part of their days should be as cheerful and bright as possible. To this end, plants, pictures, casts, bits of statuary, pretty curtains and bright hangings have been purchased. In several instances the Herculean task of buying a piano for the schools has been undertaken, that their children may have the advantages that other children have where there is a piano furnished by the school. This has been successfully carried out in the following enterprising schools: Tenth street, McKinley avenue, Eagle Rock avenue, Twenty-third avenue, Griffin avenue, Ninth street, and Washington street.

All the other schools have bought the things they most needed and wanted through the efforts of the Child Study circles. Breed street school bought some pretty pictures and a fine flag; Nineteenth avenue school has placed several fine pictures; the San Pedro Street school has bought curtains for the principal's room, and also for the teachers' lunch room. The mothers of the Norwood street pupils have placed a basketball court and turning poles on the grounds, much to the delight of the youngsters.

Fifty dollars is the sum expended by the Union avenue school on decorations. Hewitt street school has expended $18. Alpine street school bought basket balls for the girls' court and balls for the kindergarten children. At the Main street school they have bought games and flags for the different rooms. The First street school has had window boxes built in and has a few fine pictures. The Garvey school has furnished screens for doors and windows. The Micheltorena school has made its new buildings very pretty and attractive with plants, pictures, and casts, while the school at Avenue Thirty-five has raised $135 to expend on its school and grounds for athletic apparatus. The California street has added some pictures and many little things to make their abode attractive and homelike.

Mrs. W. A. Varcoe, who is chairman of the School Decoration Committee, reported to the Civic Association that she has expended $8.30 and has in hand $19.20. She and the members of the various Child Study circles are justly proud of the good work they have accomplished along these lines in the past few months.

The Jefferson street school is another enterprising one. In order to furnish and decorate their new school building the children are planning to give an entertainment in the U.S.C. chapel on the evening of December 14. Two scenes from the "Bird's Christmas Carol" are to be presented, and there will also be music.

NORMAL ALUMNI REUNION.

To break bread together, to renew old friendships, and to have an all-round good time is the plan of the Los Angeles State Normal School Alumni, who will have an alumni spread at Hillcrest Inn at noon on December 20, this time having been chosen as Normal graduates from all over Southern California will have arrived to attend the sessions of the Southern California Teachers' Association.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the luncheon is under the able leadership of Moses Chandler of class 1902, while the president, Mrs. Dan Laubershimer, is devoting time and energy to perfecting every detail for a happy reunion of graduates on that twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the State Normal School.

A delightful menu will be served amid decorations of Christmas holly and carnations, the time for the gathering to be promptly at noon, Supt. Mark Keppel having kindly extended to the members of the alumni the courtesy of returning to the afternoon session of the teachers' association at 2 o'clock instead of 1:30.

When the Rich Man Died.

Lorenzo Dow, relates the St. Paul Pioneer Press, on one occasion took the liberty, while preaching, to denounce a rich man in the community, recently deceased. The result was an arrest, a trial for slander and an imprisonment in the County Jail.

After Dow got out of limbo he announced that he should preach, at a given time, a sermon about "another rich man." The populace was greatly excited, and a crowded house greeted his appearance.

With great solemnity he opened the Bible and read, "And there was a rich man who died and went to—" Then, stopping short, and seeming to be suddenly impressed, he continued: "Brethren, I shall not mention the place this rich man went to, for fear he has some relatives in this congregation who will sue me for defamation of character."

The effect was irresistible, and he made the impression permanent by taking another text.

$10 In a Searchlight Lot Is As Good As $100 In the Bank.

Fortunes Will Be Made By Those Who Buy Real Estate In This Growing Nevada City Before Railroad Day. Free Tickets To Buyers.

Searchlight, Nevada, has become so thrifty and so well known that it is now experiencing the sensation of having a lot of new additions tacked onto its skirts. This is a sign of growth and progressiveness, and while it is a fact, as the Los Angeles Herald said last Sunday, "that these new additions will always be secondary in importance to the city itself, and will preserve a countrified aspect so far as real estate values are concerned," still they are evidence of the virility of this wonderful growing city of Searchlight.

We own practically every unsold lot in the city itself. Upon the streets of our ground are all of the residences, business houses, postoffice, school, hotel, water works and every other public and private building, valued at nearly $1,000,000. Here is where to buy—within the city itself, for the city is to be the theater of one of the greatest real estate excitements in the history of Nevada as soon as the Santa Fe Railroad opens up.

We can now sell you lots for $100 on very easy terms, with no taxes; lots that will make you rich and will bring you forty per cent. income on your money, if you desire to improve them.

We have for sale the finest centrally located business property in Searchlight from $300 per lot up; every lot a money maker and an income producer. Terms easy; no taxes to pay and an abstract with each lot.

HERE IS OUR SPECIAL PROPOSITION: To each buyer of $150 worth of property we will give a round-trip ticket to Searchlight, good on railroad day. We agree to exchange any lots you buy for any other unsold lot in the tract, provided on inspection you are not satisfied with the location of your property. This is the fairest offer ever made by a reputable real estate firm, and our reputation is backed by one thousand satisfied clients and the references you can secure from the Citizens' Bank and Dun or Bradstreet's agencies.

Uncinch your hesitation and investigate Searchlight at once. Come and see the photographs—they tell the truth—and get a twenty-page prospectus containing a history of the camp and its wonderful mines.

LONG BEACH HARBOR

MANUFACTURING SITES

Everything within the scope of physical means and engineering skill is being utilized to create a deep water harbor at Long Beach, with a frontage of SIX MILES. The entire project is being carried on subject to government supervision.

The great Long Beach harbor is not a prospect—it is a VISIBLE REALITY. Ample capital insures its actual completion at an early date. Long Beach will have the only water frontage NOT controlled by railroad corporations in the Southwest. For nearly a year powerful dredgers have been creating this deep water harbor. Its completion may mean commercial supremacy of the South Pacific and control of the ORIENT. It will place us in a position to handle the products of the South and receive and ship to the Orient the great commerce of the coming century.

Long Beach will be the natural assembly and distributing point for lumber from Oregon and Washington when the free harbor is completed. It is now the terminus of TWO transcontinental railroads and will be the natural and geographical terminal point of all prospective roads on the Southern coast. The future of Long Beach is bright with commercial prosperity.

Over $500,000 Worth of Property Sold in the Harbor District in the Last Ten Months

A few manufacturing and business sites in the Long Beach Harbor Tract on sale at consistent prices. These excellent sites adjoin what will be the real center of a ctivity. Fortunes will be realized by investors who are shrewd enough to snap them up atpresent prices.

You may never have another opportunity to buy at the door of a great deep water harbor. Opportunities of this character are RARE. Those who buy in Long Beach Harbor Tract will reap a big reward as sure as the sparks fly upward. Go down today and see the great work.

30,000 Feet of Actual Water Frontage!!

The great enterprise is backed by strong, conservative Redlands capitalists—men who don't do things by halves.

A four-track line of the Pacific Electric Railway will go through the tract to Wilmington. The great Wilmington Boulevard (100 feet wide) also traverses the tract, connecting Seventh St., Long Beach, with Seventh St., Wilmington.

MOHAWK SAVED VETERAN'S HOME

FORTUNATE INVESTMENT BY LOS ANGELES FRIEND

Large Sum Realized by Placing $200 in Nevada Mining Stock—Story of Human Interest.

(L. A. Herald, Nov. 18, 1906.)

How many absorbing human interest stories lie behind the cold, commonplace quotations of the stock exchange, especially when those quotations mirror a market at flood tide!

What stories of rifts in the clouds, of uplifts from the depths of despair to the heights of hope, of transitions from the ruts and chuckholes of Hard Luck lane to the broad, smooth, shining pave of Easy street, are hidden in figures that signify ascents in market values of hundreds and thousands of per cent within comparatively short time!

That debts may be paid; what long-cherished plans may be at last executed; what hopes deferred so long that the heart became sick may be realized; what comforts and luxuries may be bestowed upon loved ones. How immensely, indeed, how incalculably the sum of human happiness has been augmented out of stock profits that within a month massed into millions, as the profits in a long list of Nevada mining stocks have of late.

Profits of 3000 Per Cent

In the last half year this list of stocks has shown advances in actual market values up to 3000 per cent, the appreciation of the last three weeks as shown by the transactions on the San Francisco and Goldfield mining stock exchanges, approximating in the aggregate $7,000,000, the tumultuous rise in values rivaling anything of the kind occurring in the storied days of the Comstock lode development.

If the princely profits could only be followed to their respective recipients and their significance gleaned themes fit for the pen of William Dean Howells would be found in plenty.

One of these themes cropped out yesterday in the course of a conversation with R. D. Robinson, president of the R. D. Robinson Company of this city, a house heavily interested in Nevada mining enterprises.

A Friend in Need

Early last spring Mr. Robinson received a letter, accompanied by a draft for $200, from a small town in Virginia, which, by the way, is Mr. Robinson's birthplace. The writer went into considerable detail concerning his affairs, excusing himself for thus trespassing on a busy man's time by stating that he had been advised to do just that thing by a mutual friend who had recently returned from California and who, while in the Golden state, had been with Mr. Robinson's company. He explained that he was one of those who in early manhood had followed the stars and bars oft to victory and at all times in honor, if, ultimately, to defeat. The vicissitudes of war and the reconstruction period had left him a fraction of a large patrimony, a small plantation, a remnant of a great one on which he had been born, and even that little possession had been mortgaged for $2000, an incumbrance so heavy that there was absolutely no probability of its liquidation when due, which would be about the last of this year. When the mortgage was incurred, many years ago, the writer was sanguine that with the help of a bright boy, then just merging into a lusty manhood, it would be paid at maturity.

Only Son Died

But fate had seen fit to take away the boy. The latter, like so many thousands of sons of the new south, had responded valiantly to the call to arms when the United States decided to lift the tyrant's yoke from bleeding Cuba, and enlisted, to fight for the flag which his father, a generation before, fought against. The boy returned; but he was not the chap who went so gayly, animated by high patriotic fervor—shattered of limb and with the deadly diseases of Cuban and Philippine swamps consuming his vitality he lingered with the old people a while and then passed to the realm where the beat of drum and the sound of bugle are never heard, and the father, broken in spirit and weighted with the infirmities of old age, was left to bear an all too heavy burden.

The amount, $200, sent by draft, he said, represented the careful savings of a long period. It was too small to be of any avail by itself, and acting upon the advice of the mutual friend who had told him of the handsome profits made in western mining stocks, the Virginia veteran sent it to Mr. Robinson to be invested according to the latter's discretion, and with the fervently expressed hope that the result would be fortunate enough to enable him to save his home, the last bulwark between himself and the almshouse.

Last Shot in Mohawk

Mr. Robinson promptly invested his Virginian's funds—"his long, maybe, last shot"—in Mohawk mining stock, which had already been largely placed with the Robinson company's clientele at 50 cents per share. Mr. Robinson had inside information regarding the value of the Mohawk's property, and on that information based confident expectations of the stock's great appreciation. As the world now knows, results have surpassed all expectations. Under Mr. Robinson's advice the Virginian clung to his Mohawk stock until it reached [illegible] on the San Francisco Mining Stock Exchange, then he sold, his 400 shares bringing him $7200, or just $7000 more than he paid for them.

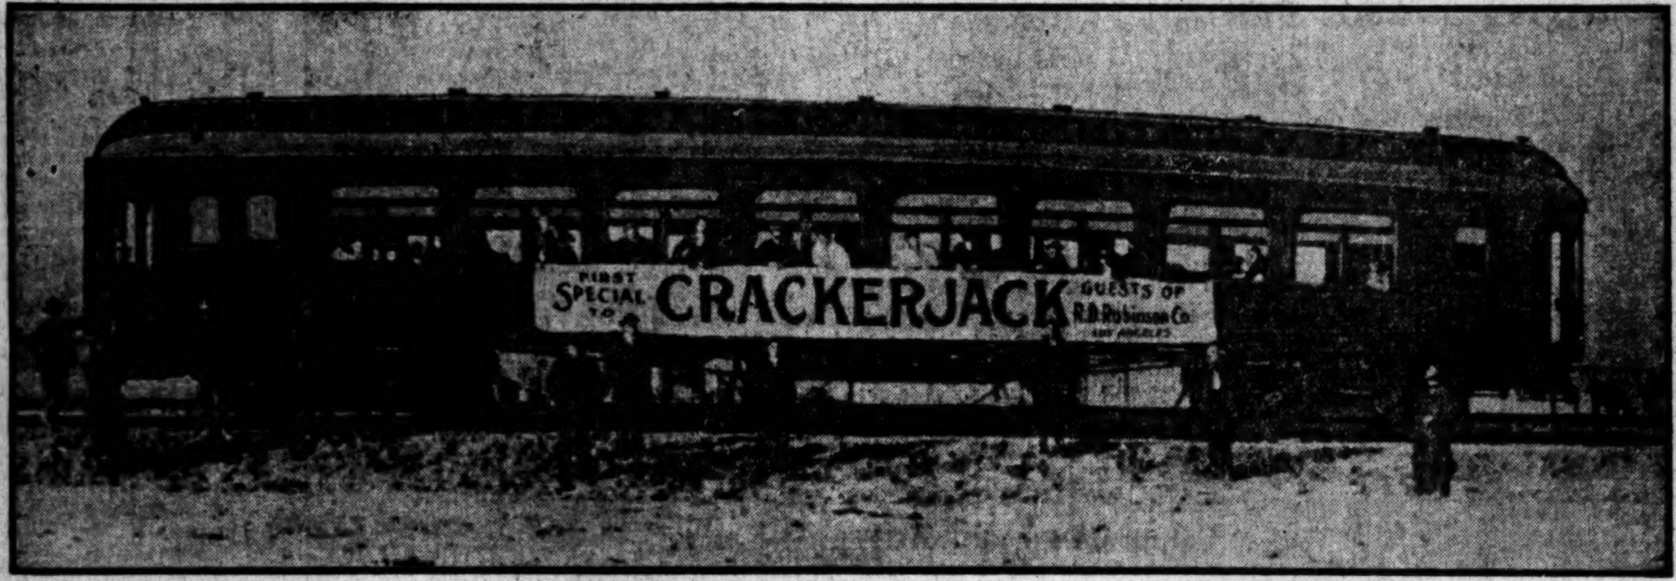
The "long, maybe, last shot" had hit the mark. The following excerpt from a letter received by Mr. Robinson yesterday made that gentleman feel as though he, himself, had won the "shot."

"I do not know words warm enough to thank you for the honest and wise manner with which you invested my little cash, my only possible resource. I have been able to absolutely clear my property from indebtedness and have enough left not only to purchase adjoining land, put the latter and the old place into cultivation that I feel pretty sure will pay, but also to put a snug sum in the bank. This winter we shall visit California, which I feel we can do now, and I shall personally do myself the honor of calling on the man who in the 'hour of need' proved a friend indeed.'"

Crackerjack

A Mining District Ribbed With Riches

and squarely on the East Mother Lode, which is showing its marvelous mineralization in the Record Breaking Production at Goldfield, a production at the rate of $40,000,000 yearly.



Right in the Heart of It Are the Superb Properties of the Crackerjack Gold Mining Company

Now being developed into shippers as fast as men and money can do the work. The high grade character of the ore bodies being opened up on these holdings is shown by the following assays by Baverstock & Staples, Assayers, of Los Angeles.

WILLIS A. CATES, President.

Unprecedented Guarantee

As the most absolute evidence that in the stock of the Crackerjack Gold Mining company we are presenting a mining reality, not a mining prospect, we submit the following proposition: To any and all persons who may buy of us shares of said stock and who, after said purchase, shall visit the property of the company described in this paper and who shall find the said property and matters pertaining to it not as herein described, we will refund the amount or amounts paid us for the said shares of stock and in addition pay to said person or persons the full amount of all necessary expense of such inspection, including cost of transportation from any part of the United States.

One Portion Alone Worth a Million Dollars

The development of the properties includes a shaft from which shipping ore in large quantity is already being taken and a tunnel being driven to intersect an iron capped dikes which is thirty feet wide on the surface and traceable with the naked eye two and one-half miles. Of this dike Willis A. Cates, president of the company and a mining operator of extended and successful experience, has said the following in the public press:

"The surface assays of this dike show 2 per cent copper; at the point at which our tunnel will cut the dike, the latter will undoubtedly be wider and assay many times what it does at the surface, but if it only assays 5 per cent this portion of the company's holdings in the district will alone be worth not less than $1,000,000."

We are offering the first allotment of the Treasury Stock of this Company, operating in the core of the second Goldfield, and destined, like Mohawk, to be a mortgage lifter, at

Twenty-Five Cents Per Share

(Par Value $1.00) Issued Fully Paid and Non-Assessable

Price advanced as development opens up the splendid ore bodies

In this stock we are presenting an opportunity to investors to repeat the profits made by those who bought of us "Mohawk," "Frances Mohawk," "Jumbo" and "Red Top," profits that ranged up to 1,000 per cent in four months.

To all who call on or send to us we will give further particulars, also a map showing correctly the locations of the mining camps of Southern Nevada and Southeastern California and the railroad and wagon roads thereto.

CRACKERJACK NEXT BIG CAMP

First it was Tonopah! Second Goldfield! Then Bullfrog! Later Greenwater!

(Charles Richard Gates in the L. A. Herald.)

First it was Tonopah! Second, Goldfield! Then Bullfrog! Later, Greenwater!

Will it be Crackerjack next? It certainly seems to look that way to a lot of people who have drunk deeply of the golden stream rolling forth from the camps which have revived and made wider than ever Nevada's fame, for the same people are pouring into the Crackerjack to slake again the insatiable thirst for fortune.

Though the Crackerjack is obviously on the same mineral belt as the Nevada wonder camps, joining and being a continuation of the Greenwater section, it is not of the sage brush commonwealth, but in California, the first western state to fling out before the world the banner of gold.

The Crackerjack district is not a pleasure resort. Winter days are hot; summer days, thermometers with attics are almost essential for the accommodation of the mercury; on days of all seasons the winds blow a gale. But it has the stuff that men scheme, sweat and die for—gold, silver, copper and lead. It is seamed with great ledges of precious and base metals—on surface and in canyons is read the evidence in bold, long-reaching ore outcrops of a remarkable mineralization.

Extent of District

The Crackerjack district commences about fifty miles northeasterly of Daggett, and takes its name from the most important property in it—the Crackerjack group of claims, belonging to a Los Angeles corporation—is about thirty-six miles square, and on its easterly edge clasps hands with Death Valley; but it is not as bad as the latter, because at a reasonable depth it has water, and having water and metallic wealth it will have society in time, a very short time, indeed, if one is to judge by the rate people are going into it. The nearest railroad point is Silver Lake station, twenty-three miles distant, on the Tonopah-Tidewater railroad, now in course of construction from Ludlow, on the Santa Fe, to Tonopah. The Avawatz range of mountains—rough, uncouth, belying in their forbidding appearance the veins of wealth that course through their bodies, give the district an undulating, altitudinous topography gashed with ragged canyons. They rise to an elevation of nearly 5000 feet, do these mountains, and whatever may be their heat when the sun shines, the cold upon their heights at night sends a bitter chill to the marrow of one's bones, unless those bones are mighty well covered.

Pecked at 100 Years Ago

Nearly 100 years ago Spanish miners in their crude way pecked at the surface of what is now the Crackerjack district, recovering the values with the aid of primitive arastras, the ruins of which may be found scattered over the district now.

But the generation of today knows, or will know, this district, because of the searching spirit of "Cyclone" Wilson. And who is "Cyclone" Wilson? A typical "desert rat," ever on the rove for new fields of mineral conquest, whose sobriquet is descriptive of the man in action. He won note as the locator of the Jumbo mine at Goldfield, but wider note, perhaps, as the man who dared to "bat" Walter Scott ("Scotty"), he of supposed fabulous wealth, in the face in a quarrel at Barstow.

Wilson went into the Crackerjack last December, his mining eye took in the prospect presented and his location notices found prompt filing. That was the beginning. Now the district is located almost solidly for about thirty miles square. The most important locations are about the middle of the district, in close proximity to the holdings of the Crackerjack Gold Mining company, after which the district is named. Hereabouts Nevada and Southern California mining operators have been busy during the year "proving up" on claims, and saying precious little about it.

In a few instances, almost extensive development work has been done, but for most part the miners have been content to do little work. Of the great value of their holdings not one expresses doubt, indeed all are enthusiastic, and many assert that the district will strip the laurels from Goldfield, Bullfrog and Greenwater, as robustly as the latter are booming.

Valuable Ore Is Found

Ore assaying up to $5000 per ton has already been uncovered. On the Beck & Wilson group, the claims originally located by "Cyclone" Wilson, and adjoining the Crackerjack company's claims on the north, there is an ore body from 6 to 12 feet wide, running 3000 feet, and assaying up to $75 per ton. Wouldn't that make you glad if you had it? Another bunch of claims shows an 18-inch vein carrying silver at the rate of from 600 to 1300 ounces to the ton, and silver going up in price, too. Copper ore bodies run 3½ per cent to 15 per cent, and one copper blow out can be traced for 1400 feet. This is of consequence when we bear in mind that the red metal is climbing to the highest quotation in modern history.

Mining in the district has actually commenced, the first gold brick having recently gone out.

Soon the town of Crackerjack will be on the map, for a townsite is to be laid out at once. To it regular conveyance from the railroad station will be provided by a stage line to be put in operation at once. Telephone, telegraph and mail communication is also on the tapis—and, needless to say, a newspaper, that greatest of all civilizing agencies, will arrive ere long, and then Crackerjack, town and district, will be made. In fact, the district is already made, for the stuff that moves the wheels of progress is there, under its ugly face, and all man has to do is to dig it out.

THE CAPITAL OF THE STATE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 7.—Aspirants to the position of Secretary of the State Board of Examiners need aspire no more. It is announced that this coveted position has been promised to Byron Deeming of Auburn and the statement is likely enough to be true. Deeming used to live in Humboldt county and at the time of the fight against Senator Selvage for the Congressional nomination he rendered invaluable service to Mr. Gillett. He did it without hope of reward, which has no doubt proved a strong recommendation to the man who offers him what is almost, if not quite, the highest position at his disposal. Byron Deeming is still a young man, he has marked capacity and his character is of the highest.

There is said to be something like a panic among the very numerous gentry who confidently relied upon the influence of Ruef to secure them appointments under the new administration. Why any one should suppose that Ruef's influence would have any weight with the Governor it is hard to say, but there are some people who will believe anything. It is now evident to these foolish ones that they have backed the wrong horse and that whatever influence the little French boss may once have possessed has passed away forever. Hence these tears as they see their prospects of preferment fade away into the dim and distant. Of course Ruef's recommendation would never have had the slightest influence with Gillett. There were a great many who thought differently, but they have given up the last hope. The desertion of these men has weakened Ruef considerably; for with the brutal frankness that distinguishes the purely selfish politician they have made their defection known and are trying hard to reconstruct the old worn-out machine of Phil Crimmins and Martin Kelly. It will avail them nothing. If Gillett answers expectations the advice of a machine boss in San Francisco will have about as much effect upon him as it would have upon the planet Mars.

There are a considerable number of office holders who have been appointed by Pardee since the last Legislature adjourned, and there is great uncertainty among them as to their fate. According to the law the Senate must confirm all such appointments, that is to say all appointments that have been made during the legislative recesses. There is also another law, unwritten, but that has always been observed. According to this unwritten law all those appointed to office during a legislative recess and subsequent to the election of a new Governor must run the gauntlet of the party caucus as well as of the Senate Committee. That is to say the Senate, before confirming such appointments, refers the matter to the party caucus for its opinion as to the fitness of the nominee. It is the verdict of the caucus that then influences the decision of the Senate committee.

The Pardee appointees are said to have a plan on foot to circumvent this custom. They have been approaching the Senators and trying to persuade them to confirm the appointments immediately upon their assembly and before the new Governor shall be sworn in. The swearing-in will not come for six days after the Senate meets and there would, therefore, be plenty of time to do this if the Senate were so inclined. Gillett's friends have been well informed as to the move and are meeting it. All that the Pardee men would have to do is to persuade some Senator to make an early motion to the effect that all appointments be confirmed direct by the Senate without the usual formality of the committees and such a motion might very well be carried unless its true inwardness were pointed out.

There is no longer any one to say that the Ruef-Schmitz prosecution is a political move or inspired by Hearst. A great many said so at first but they are not saying so now. The fact is that the average San Franciscan has begun to look upon Ruef as invincible, as one of the permanent institutions of the city. They have seen attack after attack fail and the gravest charges as ineffectual as water on a duck's back. And there has been a sort of sneaking admiration for a man who can do things in a colossal way, even dishonest things, and successfully evade all penalties. But no one now disputes that the prosecution is in earnest and there seems to be no one who doubts that Ruef's hour has come. But many believe that Schmitz will pull through, and it is not unlikely that he will do so if he can be persuaded to break away from his evil mentor. There are signs that he will do so. When Schmitz landed in New York he had no conception of what was actually impending and then Ruef was just as good a fellow as ever he was. Schmitz had a great deal to be told and his attitude toward Ruef perceptibly cooled, in some of his wayside speeches he even spoke of him contemptuously. On passing through Sacramento he asserted his own innocence but when asked about Ruef he hesitated and said that that "was quite another matter." This reason may have been due to a genuine repugnance at facts that had reached him for the first time. On the other hand it may have been due to a dawning recognition that Ruef was beyond the pale and whoever stuck to him must inevitably go down with him. The coolness between them is now marked.

NOW that the gift problem is confronting you, why not decide it sensibly—logically. There is really nothing that mother, father, brother or sister would more highly appreciate than an artistic piece of furniture which will provide comfort for them through the years to come, and will add to the charms of the home. You can spend as little or as much as you like and feel confident that for every dollar spent here you have secured full measure and honest value.

A Desk for Mother or Sister

There is perhaps nothing more appropriate for a woman than a desk. It is a gift that will prove its usefulness and convenience every day. We show a thoroughly complete variety of new and artistic ideas in desks—65 different styles. Every popular wood is represented—Circassian Walnut, Golden Oak, Weathered Oak Fumed Oak, Birdseye Maple, Mahoganized Birch and Solid Mahogany in light and dark shades. Prices range all the way from $8.50 to $175.00, and every in-between price is represented. The showing of exact Colonial reproductions is very complete. These pieces take one back to the early days of the Nation. They are elegant, substantial pieces that enhance in value and become heirlooms in the home.

Desk chairs are shown in wide variety in all styles and woods to go with the various desks. Prices $4.50 and up.

$60,000 to $70,000 BLOCKED OUT

Our Mr. T. F. McAvoy, just in from the mine, tells us that he has pushed the lower tunnel in full 700 feet, and that for 500 feet it is in ore, with high-grade ore at the head. He says that we need funds to pump out the upper tunnel, and clear up the workings, so that the lower tunnel may be safely completed. Just now our miners are afraid to remove more of the gouge matter, because the upper workings are full of water. We then will take out ore running as rich as $1500 to $1600 a ton. The drainage will take care of itself thereafter. The immediate need is for $10,000, and the company has resolved to sell stock at public subscription—50,000 shares at 20 cents—just enough to raise that amount.

We offer treasury stock in a mine opened up with over 1000 feet of work, with good milling facilities at hand, and all the requisite tools, machinery and appliances for mining the ore.

ONLY 50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS

As soon as the tunnel work can be cleared and completed, our mine will take rank with its neighbors as a producer of gold. We are surrounded by famous mines. We are on the east belt of the Mother Lode in Tuolumne Co.; the Hardtack is next to us on the south, and the Buchanan next to that. On the north, our claims adjoin the Spring Gulch mine, while beyond are the Providence, Dead Horse and the Grizzly, the latter of which is putting up a 100-stamp mill.

All our ore is free milling ore, and we have a low price contract at a mill within a short haul from the mouth of our tunnel. We can show you as fine ore as ever you saw, taken from the winze on the Paymaster claim. We will be glad to show maps, and other proofs of the legitimacy of this proposition. If you invest, you get a dividend earner.

Arthur Wilson, the clever mathematician and one of our ablest bank examiners, says: There are many queer things about the numeral 9; one that I remember is this:

Wilson adds: Some bookkeepers, instead of footing long and heavy columns of figures the second time, prove their work by the elimination of nine.

sum of the remainders is 19, divided by 9 equals 2 and 1 over. sum of the digits of the grand total is 22, which divided by 9 equals 3 and 1 over. When the last noted remainders are identical (as in this case, being 1) it is a proof that the 207,- is a correct total. The same principle applies, of course, to fifty numbers as well as to five and is a valuable as well as interesting way of proving the correctness of addition.—[New York

Inglewood Mission Sanatorium

40 Per Cent. Dividends Inglewood Mission Sanatorium

The most conservative estimate warrants the statement that this stock will earn above dividends.

From best information obtainable as to the earnings of sanatoriums now in operation in Southern California, less favorably located and with an equipment far inferior to the

Inglewood Mission Sanatorium

We are justified in asserting that 40 per cent. is a most conservative estimate.

There is a most urgent need for a modern, first-class sanatorium close to this city.

A number of experts and conservative business men have carefully examined all desirable sites, and have settled on Inglewood as the ideal place. Inglewood, one of the most beautiful and picturesque suburbs of Los Angeles, can be reached within a few minutes from Los Angeles by up-to-date electric lines. It has a most excellent drainage, a good elevation, free from fogs, and the sanitary conditions cannot be excelled. It is fast being selected by a refined class of people as a dwelling place, who, while engaged in business in the city, prefer to live in Inglewood, because it takes them away from the turmoil and noise of the big city and it affords them rest.

Look at the men at the head of this enterprise. They are persons of high standing in this community, a guarantee of safe and conservative management. All are successful in business or the professions, assuring owners of this stock that the affairs of this company are in good hands.

The sanatoriums and hospitals of Southern California have paid and are paying big dividends. The most will as a matter of course do the same and pay handsome profits from the day it opens its doors for business.

There is little stock of established hospitals and sanatoriums for sale. SUCH stock as is offered is far above par, proof that the certainty and desirability of this class of stock as an investment has been demonstrated beyond all possible doubt.

25,000 SHARES are offered to the public at

25 Cents Per Share, (Par Value $1.00)

This money will be used for construction and equipment. It is sold out of our own office in order to avoid heavy brokerage. Work on the buildings is vigorously prosecuted, and we expect to be open for business within a few months. The company owns a splendid property, and the accompanying illustration shows the buildings when completed.

From inquiries we have had so far, we expect to have more patients than can be accommodated. This again shows the business acumen and farsightedness of the organizers of the enterprise.

If you are looking for safe investments and at the same time want good returns, you should investigate at once, for this allotment is going fast.

Get in on the ground floor. Let your savings and accumulations earn more that the usual 3 or 4 per cent. Invest it where it is as safe as in any savings bank.

In less than twelve months this stock is bound to go to par.

Make your money earn the biggest dividends, consistent with sane and safe rules governing investments

A few thousand shares of this stock means an income for life.

If you are tired of drudging along day after day the same old unprofitable grind, if you want to put your money where immense returns are possible, then buy

Inglewood Mission Sanatorium Stock

You cannot afford to miss this splendid offer and should act without delay.

Over 90 per cent. of those who have looked into this proposition have bought stock, which is a sure proof of its merit.

There is no preferred stock in this company. What is offered you is a strictly business proposition. You run absolutely no risk, as will be shown to your entire satisfaction.

STORER SHOWS HIS SORE TOE.

Like Little Boy He Tries to Elicit Sympathy.

Prints Letters to Explain Dismissal from Office.

President Lectures Madame for Silly Intrigue.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The Chicago Tribune in its Washington dispatches today says that an extraordinary letter has been addressed by Bellamy Storer to the President and members of his Cabinet in regard to his dismissal from the post of Ambassador of the United States to Austria-Hungary.

Storer was dismissed because of his wife's supposed interference in affairs of the Roman Catholic church and her alleged misuse of letters from the President. It was also charged that Mrs. Storer had meddled with French politics by taking part in anti-republican intrigue to promote the marriage of Victor Bonaparte with a member of the Orleans family.

Both of these charges Storer denies, and on the other hand declares that the President's interest in the selection of Archbishop Ireland as a cardinal was not due to Storer or to Storer's wife, but the President alone.

The text of Storer's letter was printed and transmitted not only to the President, but also to memebrs of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate.

Storer says that his removal in so summary a manner suddenly dismissed him from an office which he had been given reason to believe he had filled to the satisfaction both of his own government and of that to which he was accredited, and being accompanied by no public explanation, it exposed him to suspicious and injurious conjectures such as must naturally arise when a man in public office is abruptly dismissed by his government with what is obviously intended to be discredit.

The correspondence shows the family relations of the President and the Storers from the time Mr. Roosevelt was Governor of New York, just aftr the Spanish-American War. Some of the President's letters to Storer were addressed, "My Dear Bellamy," and to his wife, "My Dear Maria," and Mrs. Storer addressed the President as "Dear Theodore."

One letter of the President to Mrs. Storer, dated December 11, 1905, after the efforts of the Storers in behalf of Archbishop Ireland began to attract attention, contains the following passages:

ONE OF THE LETTERS.

"Your direct or implied complaint of and reflections upon my own personal conduct give me no concern, but I am very gravely concerned at the mischevious effect your letters must have in misrepresenting the position of the United States government and by the far-reaching governmental scandal your indiscretion may at any time cause.

"Your letters not only convey a totally wrong impression of my attitude, but they are such as you have no business whatever to write in view of the position of your husband in the diplomatic service.

"The letter of Cardinal Merry del Val to you of November 23 is a rebuke to you, expressing plainly his belief that you have been unwarrantably officious in matters with which you have properly no concern. It should of itself be enough to show you how exceedingly unwise and improper your action in writing to him was.

I am indignant that the wife of any Ambassador in the United States service should have written such a letter, should have given the impression undoubtedly conveyed in that letter and should have incurred such a rebuke.

"You don't seem to realize that it is out of the question for me knowingly to permit the wife of one of our diplomats to engage in ecclesiastic intrigues to influence the Vatican."

After referring to the report that Mrs. Storer was known in Europe as the American Ambassadress to Rome, the President closes thus:

PRESIDENT DEMANDS PROMISE.

"I must ask you to give me this positive promise in writing if Bellamy is to continue in the service and if you even unintentionally violate it I shall have to ask for Bellamy's resignation, for I can no longer afford to have the chance of scandal being brought on the entire American diplomatic service and on the government itself by such indiscreet and ill-advised action as yours has been.

"I cannot trust myself to express fully the feeling of indignation with which I read the letter to Mrs. Storer," says Storer.

"Though I was in the public service, I felt and still feel that I had lost some of the rights which a man has to judge of the propriety of letters addressed to his wife and to resent any improper communication.

"I did not even then know what I have since learned, that the letter was not even written for my wife's eyes or mine alone, but had been shown to others before it was sent and thus used to make a case against a lady, a trusting friend, who could not be heard in her own defense.

"My wife was deliberately accused of having quoted isolated sentences from the President's letters to convince other persons that he was doing exactly what, as he asserts, he had explicitly stated in writing that he would not do.

"This charge of shameful conduct was based on no evidence which could even have misled the writer into a hasty judgment, but was in answer to a letter which, whether approved or not, at least furnishes no such evidence either in itself or in its enclosures.

"The tone of long suffering and outraged patience, the careful omission of all mention of anything that the writer had himself done and authorized to be done in the matters complained of, and the quotation from the letters written at the time of my errand to the Pope without any of the facts and circumstances related above which would give those letters their true character or show that they were angry complaints because what he had directed to be done had become known—these things with the abusive personal characterization of my wife and with assumed indignation with which it had been, in fact, permitted, and encouraged, where not expressly directed, seemed to me to put the letter outside the limit of anything justified even in a stranger.

"What a sense of outrage of friendship it aroused in us can perhaps be understood by any one who has read even the small part of the private correspondence given above."

In concluding his letter, which is dated at Cincinnati, November, 1906, the former Ambassador says:

"I write this letter without the knowledge of 'Mr. Ireland.'"

There can be ONLY ONE Brentwood Park near Los Angeles. There is no location for another. Nature seems to have reserved the site of Brentwood for just such a villa home park as we are creating. Brentwood has no standard city lots, nothing but broad villa sites—PRACTICALLY ACREAGE. Why pay $5000 for a 50-foot city lot with commonplace improvements when Brentwood lots (almost acres) with the best residential advantages and costliest improvements in the West can be purchased for LESS MONEY.

San Francisco-Bullfrog Mining Co

Offers For Sale

30,000 Shares of its Treasury Stock at

20 Cents Per Share

The company owns free and clear of incumbrance five full claims situated in the Bullfrog mining district of Nevada. The ores already showing up in our main shaft have given the following assays:

Gold, value per ton	$977.61	Gold, value per ton	$207.53
Silver, value per ton	367.68	Silver, value per ton	.16
Total	$1.345.29	Total	$207.69

Original assays and rock now at office of the company.

These claims lie in close proximity to the great MONTGOMERY SHOSHONE MINE, now owned by CHAS. M. SCHWAB and his associates.

Photographs of Montgomery Shoshone and San Francisco Bullfrog can be seen in our office, showing relative locations.

We have the same identical formation as the great Shoshone, which now has millions of ore blocked out and ready for the mill.

We publish herewith a report signed by Mr. Mat Hoveck, the former superintendent of the Montgomery Shoshone Mines Co., who examined our property:

MONTGOMERY-SHOSHONE MINES CO., (Copy.)
BEATTY, NEVADA.

San Francisco Bullfrog Mining Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen—At the request of your manager, I have today made a careful examination of the property of your company, which consists of five claims, known as the Belchers Nos. 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10, and are located about one mile northeast of the property of the Montgomery-Shoshone mine on the southerly slope of Black Mountain, or Mt. Ryan, as it is shown on the map.

I found on Belcher No. 5 a shaft 5x8x64 feet deep. The shaft is all the way down in a good mineral lead. The hanging wall is well defined and the foot wall is twenty feet from the shaft.

I examined the ore on the surface for a distance of three hundred feet and it is perfectly traceable clear across the claim.

The ore on these claims is similar to that on the Montgomery-Shoshone and there is no doubt that with further development your company will find another Montgomery-Shoshone.

The ore samples taken by me from the main shaft are talc with sulphides the same as the Shoshone, and the showing on your vein in its present state of development is fully as good as was the Shoshone.

The other claims contain fissures leading toward the main body of ore in your big vein and are feeders for it.

I would recommend that you sink for a depth of 200 feet and then drift north on the vein. This would open up your big values.

I find the claims all properly surveyed and property secured, and a good wagon road from either Beatty or Rhyolite, with the exception of a small portion, say 600 feet, leading up to the shaft, which can be put in shape at a very small cost.

Water can be piped direct from Indian Springs to your property, about one mile, as we have done at the Shoshone.

Hoping that you will be among the shippers in the near future, I am, very truly yours,
(Signed)
M. NOVECK, Supt. Montgomery-Shoshone Mines Co.

The mines of Goldfield and Bullfrog, that one year ago were prospects, with their stock selling at a few cents a share, have already given the fortunate holders of these stocks profits of such magnitude as to far outclass the most prosperous days of the Comstock, where the great fortunes of the Mackays, Fairs, Floods and O'Briens were founded.

With persistent development we believe our property will be one of the great mines of the camp.

Only 30,000 shares are offered for sale at 20 cents per share. Capitalization 1,000,000 shares. Par value $1.00 550,000 shares in treasury. Fully paid and non-assessable.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

Officers and directors are among the most valuable and best known business and mining men of the State, whom you may meet personally at officer of the company.

Investigate and order this stock at once, as the property is well known and there will be no more stock sold after this allotment is subscribed. Parties outside of the city should wire us for reservations of stock.

All moneys received from the sale of this issue to be used for the immediate prosecution of work in our main shaft.

We are now ready to drift on our mammoth vein, 140 feet wide.

Don't delay. Act at once. Prospectus on application.

5-Cent Copper

Five Cents A Share

Only a sufficient amount of treasury stock will be sold to provide the necessary funds for the further development and future operation of the property. Every share will be offered to the public at the same price, 5 cents a share, which the stockholders and the company have been paying during the past year. Every share of stock is fully paid and forever non-assessable. No stock will be issued for anything but cash.

At 5 cents a share this is the greatest opportunity now open to the public to get in on a superb copper mine capable of shipping ore. Returns from copper are most satisfactory. The demand for the metal is practically unlimited, and is increasing each year in this present age of electricity. Despite the fact that during the past six months the copper mines of this country have produced more than ever before in their history, the market price of copper is steadily advancing.

The permanency of a copper mine is proverbial. No one ever has reached the bottom of a copper mine.

Colorado River & Ely Copper Company

Incorporated for $1,000,000 in 1,000,000 shares; each of $1 par value.

One-half the capitalization, or 500,000 shares, in the treasury. Every share fully paid and forever non-assessable. No personal liability to any stockholder.

Our property is located in California, in San Bernardino county, about 275 miles east from Los Angeles and about 12 miles west of the Needles and six miles south of Ibex station on the Santa Fe. Our property is known as the Copper Butte, and consists of ten claims, all in a group, owned outright by us with a perfect title and free from lien or incumbrance.

Over $80,000 has been spent in developing this property. One large shaft was put down to a depth of 500 feet. At that depth a cross-cut was run east to cut the ledge. Work at that level was interrupted by the presence of water, making it necessary to put in large pumps. Another shaft was sunk about 500 feet south to a depth of 300 feet, in ore all the way. We have five distinct ledges of ore running parallel, which vary in width from 3 inches to 5 or 6 feet, and which are traceable on the surface for a distance of 3000 feet. From the five-foot ledge the average percentage, taken from many samples, is 5 per cent. copper. We have a rich streak of copper running 21 per cent. and nearly a foot wide. In shaft No. 1 ore samples at the 30-foot depth ran 9 ounces of silver and over 5¾ per cent. copper. In shaft No. 2 at fifteen feet depth samples show over 5 per cent. copper, with a trace of silver and gold. The average of twenty-four different samples is 5 3-8 per cent. copper. At the present price of 22 cents a pound for copper, this ore is worth over $23 a ton.

About 500 tons of this copper ore is blocked out ready to be mined. It can be mined and hauled to Ibex, over a good wagon road, right from the main shaft to the railway station, for $3 a ton. The freight and smelting charges at Needles are $9 a ton. This would leave a profit of about $11 a ton.

This property has been worked for two years, and it now requires only a small amount of money to complete the practical development of the mine and to open up a very large body of ore.

Maps of the district, the full report of Mining Engineer J. L. Carder, samples of the ore, photographs of the property and other evidence of the sterling character of our possessions are at this office, and may be seen by any who are interested in copper mining.

FIREMEN WIN FIERCE FIGHT.

Pioneer Roll Paper Company Loses Stock.

Five Men Carried Senseless from Building.

Crossed Electric Wires Are Held to Blame.

Firemen fought through a smother of smoke in an ugly basement fire at the Pioneer Roll Paper Company, Nos. 219-221 South Los Angeles street yesterday afternoon. Five of them were carried out unconscious, among these Chief Walter Lips. The damage, according to W. G. Hunt, president of the company, amounted to about $12,000 to stock, and several hundred dollars to the building.

After fighting their way through peculiarly pungent clouds of smoke, the firemen finally got access to the flames from the front, rear and through the floor directly over them. Then they drowned out the blaze. In so doing they had to cover the basement floor with several feet of water, and this leaked through the south foundation wall, left exposed by excavation for an adjacent building. What danger the seepage through the naked wall may cause could not be learned last evening.

This is the second big fire which the company has suffered from. During the winter of 1904-1905 the Pioneer Roll Paper Company's store building at the corner of North Los Angeles and Commercial streets burned, entailing a total loss of about $150,000. A year ago in its present building the company had a small fire. The plant on Macy street has been the scene of a number of slight blazes, as is the case with all factories of this nature. Yesterday's chapter in the story of misfortune began at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

START OF BLAZE.

An employé saw smoke rolling up the elevator shaft in the front of the building. He notified others at once. Patrolman Henry Ditzen turned in an alarm from box No. 59, at the corner of Second and Los Angeles streets. The apparatus was quick to respond.

From the beginning the firemen were working under difficulties. The company had bought out the Pacific Paper Company, and had just finished taking over the latter's stock. The last load had come during the noon hour, and the sidewalk was still covered with rolls and boxes, which partially blockaded the entrance, while within the building the floor was strewn with new goods.

Over these and between them the firemen struggled. Smoke was now filling the first floor. They dropped a line of hose into the basement by way of the elevator shaft and Chief Lipps was among the first to enter that part of the building. The men, for the most part from engine companies Nos. 3 and 4, found themselves enveloped by clouds of peculiarly stifling smoke.

The fire itself was in the extreme rear of the basement, among rolls of asphalt roofing paper, and its yellow fumes rolled out until they became thicker and blacker and more smothering. Into these clouds the hosemen slowly made their way. As they advanced they gasped; then reeled like drunken men. But they hung to their nires, crawling now on hands and knees where the air was purest.

FIREMEN OVERCOME.

Lipps rolled over on the floor and was carried out. It took some time to revive him and he re-entered the building while still suffering acutely. Another man from company No. 4 was borne out unconscious. Jacob Letts, the elevator boy of the building, was overcome soon after the arrival of the firemen and carried to fresh air by employés.

Meantime the hosemen in the basement were fighting a grim and baffling battle. No flame was in sight. They labored in complete darkness with here and there the red gleam of a lantern obscured by smoke wreaths. They kept advancing toward the rear of the building, pouring water from the nozzles as they went. A second line of hose was brought in soon after the first and men were set to work chopping a hole in the first floor at the rear. A third nozzle was dropped through this.

A second alarm was turned in and engine companies Nos. 5, 7 and 9 responded. They were set to work at the rear where windows gave access to the fire. These windows were backed, a few feet distant, by a high retaining wall. As soon as the firemen broke them they found themselves in a smoke-filled pit. Captain Thomas Home and Lieutenant Stammer of Engine Company No. 9, were overcome here and were carried up ladders by members of the company. They were resuscitated in the fresh air and returned within a half hour.

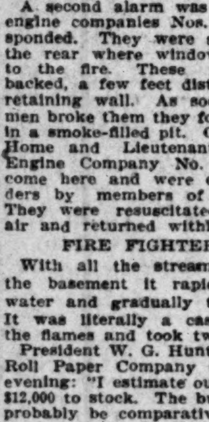
FIRE FIGHTERS WIN.

With all the streams playing into the basement it rapidly filled with water and gradually the fire waned. It was literally a case of drowning the flames and took two hours.

President W. G. Hunt of the Pioneer Roll Paper Company said early last evening: "I estimate our loss at about $12,000 to stock. The building loss will probably be comparatively slight. The stock is insured. How much salvage there will be I cannot say."

The fire department placed no estimate on the loss last evening. The origin of the fire is unknown and an investigation will be made today. A crossed wire is suspected as the cause. Henry Van Nuys owns the building.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER



Politicians are waiting with a marked degree of expectancy the canvass by the Council on Monday of the votes cast at the last municipal election.

Clampitt of the Second Ward was counted in by the election officers; his plurality is less than seventy votes. But the return sheets show that eight ballots were rejected before this result was reached. The election officers in the doubtful precincts were all organization men and there is a suspicion that they were too critical in their inspection of the Non-Partisan ballots.

If Clampitt's election is affirmed, the Republicans can organize the Council and Blanchard will be in a position to teach the Non-Partisan recruits to do the lock-step. But if Van Degrift should be declared winner the situation would be different; then Wallace, Republican and Non-Partisan member from the Fifth Ward, would hold the balance of power in organizing the Council and naming committees.

The side which organizes the Council this year will have the appointment of three members to serve on the "Public Utility" board, a committee that is to succeed the Council Board of Public Works. The duties of this committee are even more important than were those of the old works board. It is this committee that will fix the maximum price of gas, electricity and telephone service for the next fiscal year. It will also make recommendations to the Council on all franchise matters.

Wallace has been picked by those on the inside for the chairman of the Council. He was both the Republican and Non-Partisan nominee. The Republicans will need him to assist in passing ordinances that require the expenditure of money by the city. Such can be passed only by six votes. He may also be needed to help pass routine legislation over the Democratic Mayor's veto.

The first slate makes Wallace president of the Council and Blanchard chairman of the Public Utilities Board. The other members on this board are to be Healy and Pease.

Wren and Yonkin will probably secure places on the Finance Committee. The situation this year is unique in that the Mayor is a Democrat, but there is not a single member of his party in the Council.

While Mayor-elect Harper is away in the tall grass trying figuring how to satisfy 517 applicants with seventeen places, hordes of the great unwashed are besieging Chairman Edelman of the Democratic Executive Committee, asking for a promise if only it be a straw vote.

Harper's election came as an anticlimax to the warmest municipal campaign on record. Some are unkind enough to say that he rode in as a stowaway.

"Ten men have been to me today, each asking me to speak a good word for him as a member of the Board of Public Works," said a big local contractor yesterday afternoon.

There is only one place to fill and the vacancy does not occur until January, 1908, but the Democratic statesmen are already standing in line offering themselves for the place.

J. Marion Brooks thinks his valuable services to the party should be requited by this appointment. Contractor Franklin is another who thinks he is made of Board of Public Works timber; and there are at least fifty back precincts yet to be heard from.

Chairman Anderson's term expires January 1. He is a Democrat, but the aspirants for his place unite in declaring that a second cousin of his wore a Gates badge the night of the election. This, they think, should be sufficient to warrant his retiring from the board, even before the expiration of his term.

Two places on the Police Commission are already filled. Dr. Ralph Hagan is to remain and M. J. McGarry is to be advanced from the Park Board to the Police.

Former Police Commissioner Craig was an ardent Harper supporter and he is very likely to be named as the third member of the commission. The fourth place may go to the Council in return for some legislation in which the new Mayor is interested.

Park Superintendent Morley supported Harper for election. He even went so far that he was admonished by some members of the present administration for partisan activity. There is just a chance, although a remote one, that Morley may retain his present place under the Harper régime.

Health Officer Powers is happy. A Democrat, he has managed to stick to his place through an exceedingly trying Republican administration. Now he is in clover again.

Men--My Duty is to CURE YOU

By my method I am enabled to reach the vital spot with my direct treatment, which drives every disease germ from the system by going to the root of the disorder. I invariably obtain prompt and satisfactory results because my searching examination brings to light the nature and extent of the trouble.

My experience in curing diseases of men extends over a long period. My facilities are the best and my treatment is most cleanly and perfect.

I especially invite those who have deep-seated and chronic disorders to call and be examined. Consultation and examination is free and carries with it no obligation to engage my services.

NO CORRESPONDENCE TREATMENTS

I do no guessing by the unreliable mail method, for speculating on disease and their cure is unsuccessful. I can do more for you and accomplish quicker results in a few days' personal treatment than can be done in months of correspondence. Patients from out of town are furnished rooms free of charge.

316 SOUTH BROADWAY

ARE YOU A MAN?

With No Back Pains
No Nervousness
No Waste of Power
No Loss of Ambition

But with plenty of life and energy and the vigor of youth. Such you can be if you wear DR. McLAUGHLIN'S ELECTRIC BELT.

To be strong and manly is the aim of every young man, and yet how many we find who are wasting the vitality and strength which nature gives them. Instead of developing into strong, vigorous, manly young fellows that nature intended them them to be, they find themselves weak, stunted, and despondent—no ambition to do anything. They struggle aimlessly along, sooner or later to become victims of that dread disease, nervous debility; their finer sensibilities blunted and their nerves shattered.

What a Difference between this class of men and the strong, manly young fellow who is in full possession of the gift of manhood that nature bestowed upon him—full of life, vim and vigor that should be characteristic of every young man. He is the envy of his fellowmen. His superiority is evident in his every action, because he feels the confidence and strength of his manhood. Do you wonder why some young men yearn for the power that they have wasted? "To err is human," and that is why nature has provided a remedy for the evils that come to the young fellow who has disobeyed the laws of nature. There is a lack of electrical force in the nerves, and this can be restored by supplying electricity to the system. To do this, and do it thoroughly, is what has given to its world-wide reputation. It has 50,000 cures of sick men, sick women (as good for women as for men,) rheumatics, dyspeptics and sufferers from pain and debility.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co.,

Dear Sirs—I hope you will pardon my neglect in not writing before, but I have been improving right along and not in need of any particular advice, but I feel that it is no more than right that I should let you know of the great benefit the Belt has been to me. I am doing very hard work every day, swinging an ax, but I don't get tired as I used to, my appetite is good, digestion perfect, I feel as strong as I ever was. I very easily overcame all my bad habits, and thank you very much for your assistance and advice. Yours very truly,

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co.,

Dear Sirs—No words can express my feeling of gratitude to you. When I received your marvelous Belt I was in a very bad condition physically. I was nervous, weak, digestion was poor, I couldn't sleep but two or three hours in the night, my mental power was weak, though I had been naturally very strong, and all these symptoms were the result of weakness. Now I am well, and I am glad to have this opportunity to recommend the Belt to those who suffer from such troubles as mine, for they will be restored to perfect health by your Belt.

Yours very truly,

Searchlight, Nev.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co.,

Dear Sirs—I am very much pleased with your Belt. You are the first men I ever met who did what they claimed to do in their advertisements. If you could overcome the prejudice which the general public feel towards any advertised treatment, and this prejudice is due to the fact that advertisers overdraw their claims so ridiculously, it would be a godsend to the great army of sufferers, for they would not then deny themselves the relief they will find in your Belt. I have improved under your treatment, no more backache, indigestion or weakness.

Yours very truly,

O. T. LANDON.

TELEGRAPH CHEERS 'EM.

Rhyolite and Greenwater Now in Touch With Civilization, but Fuel Is Scarce.

I. T. Dyer, superintendent of telegraphs of the Salt Lake, has just returned from Rhyolite, Nev., where his men have completed the installation of a telegraph office in the temporary station of the Las Vegas and Tonopah Railway, and a public Western Union station in the Rhyolite bank building.

Yesterday morning, also, the same gangs carried the first telegraph lines into the Greenwater camp on this side of the California line. The residents of Greenwater, who have no railway as yet, are jubilant over being brought into touch with the outside world through the medium of the telegraph.

According to Dyer, the promising little town of Rhyolite is suffering from a shortage of fuel. A blizzard was on during the past week and it snowed heavily. There was no wood nor oil for fuel, and the mercury hid itself in the bulb of the thermometer. In this extremity lumber shipped in for building material and valued at $100 a thousand feet was cut up for firewood to keep the people from actually freezing to death.

In spite of the cold, however, Dyer says the little city is going right ahead in the fulfillment of its promise of becoming one of the most important mining camps in the Nevada gold fields.

GAS? CERTAINLY NOT.

Coroner's Death Certificate Shows Cugnier Died of "Valvular Hear Disease."

"Valvular heart disease" is the latest name for escaping illuminating gas. Coroner Trout yesterday morning signed a death certificate designating this as the cause of Louis Cugnier's death the day before. Cugnier was found in his room at No. 864 Summit street, with the gas cock turned on. To a layman the case looked decidedly as though the man had died from asphyxiation.

The reason for the remarkable certificate is said to have lain in the fact that Cugnier suffered from the complaint mentioned and that the escaping gas naturally in the end brought on heart failure. What the real reason for the certificate is was not given out by any one for publication.

BUTTED IN, BAILED OUT.

Young Men With Prominent Sires Wind Up Night of Gayety With Foolish Escapade.

To masquerade as officers seemed a pleasant joke yesterday for E. D. Moon, son of D. C. Moon, general manager of the Lake Shore, Southern and Michigan Railroad, and Frank R. Mitchell, whose father is president of a Lima, O., bank. But the pleasure was brief, for the pair, who had enjoyed a tour of Los Angeles questionable resorts prior to their escapade, found themselves in the end confronted by a genuine officer. He was a big officer at that, and wouldn't listen to their pleadings when they found they couldn't intimidate him.

Moon and Mitchell had been touring the West in the private car of the senior Moon. In this city they made an early evening call on a young lady on South Figueroa street. Afterward they went to livelier neighborhoods. They drank, and then became noisy, and were eventually thrown out of a resort of bad repute on New High street.

They wandered to the business section of the city. On South Main street they paused in front of a restaurant from which J. H. Erbst had been cast forth. Erbst it seems had refused to pay for his supper. Moon saw a chance for becoming real bad.

"I am a Pinkerton," said he, confronting Erbst.

"And I," said Mitchell, who wanted to be bad, too, "am a United States secret-service man."

"I don't care who you are," said the night waiter, who was fighting Erbst during all this, "I want my money, and you better not but in."

Then Patrolman Winnerton appeared. He had heard the statements of the pair that they were officers. He held them for inquiry, and was joined by Sergt. McDowell, who found that the pair had never seen the inside of a police station, let alone working out from one.

Moon and Mitchell were booked at the central station on a charge of disturbing the peace. The senior Moon appeared, after a few hours and furnished $25 bail apiece, which was forfeited.

WAGONLOAD OF LOOT.

Burglars Ransacked Department Store and Carry Off Plunder by Wholesale in Wagon.

Burglars plundered the Divvers Department store at No. 2001 Central avenue yesterday and drove away with an express wagon laden with their loot. The theft was singularly bold.

Yesterday morning employés found the place turned upside down. The thieves had ransacked shelves, taking with them about $150 worth of handkerchiefs and clothing, both men's and women's. They had apparently taken their time at the work, and had removed the big bulk of plunder to the outside, where they had loaded it into the vehicle, then driven away. The matter was reported to the police, and detectives were placed on the case.

TAKE THEIR TIME.

Thieves Loot Residence While Family Is in the East and Make a Good Haul.

About $400 worth of cut glass and silverware was taken from the residence of George H. Chase at No. 1213 Westlake avenue by burglars who looted the house during the absence of the family. Chase went to his home Friday night directly upon his return from New York, where his wife and daughter still are. He found evidences of thieves everywhere, and examination disclosed the losses. Yesterday morning he reported the matter to the police.

The burglars had entered the place through a side window and had taken their time in hunting out everything of value. They got several pieces of sterling silver and a lot of cut glass, a few trinkets among which were a pair of diamond chipped cuff links and other articles of minor value.

DRIVER ESCAPES DEATH.

A runaway West Second-street car struck a horse and wagon driven by J. F. Willard for a grading company yesterday, at the corner of Second street and Broadway. Willard was uninjured, but it proved necessary to kill the horse.

The car had apparently gotten from under the motorman's control, and came down the Second-street hill at high speed. The motorman managed to slacken it as it neared Broadway. Willard was crossing the tracks with his wagon, and was unable to get out of the way before the collision came.

SENSIBLE CHRISTMAS
SUGGESTIONS

"What to give" is the question of the hour.

Something lasting, something attractive, something appropriate, something beneficial.

These are essentials.

All of these are combined in a gift of a lot in our Glendale Valley View Tract, and to them is added a very important item—profit.

A deed to one of these lots would be the best Christmas present imaginable for husband, wife, son or daughter.

A monthly payment contract for one would be an ideal present to the son or daughter.

It would inculcate the habit of saving and yet not cause undue economy.

Lots range in price from $275 to $525. Can be bought for as little as $10 down and $10 per month, without interest or taxes.

Lots are large—all 50 feet—street are graded and oiled—cement work all in—water piped—electric light poles up.

400 lots have been sold since April 14. 26 houses built. $35,000 spent for improvements.

You can make a $10 deposit and let the beneficiary of your gift select his own lot after Christmas.

Come in and let's talk it over. Free tickets to see property.

TEAMS AWAIT BIG CONTEST.

Sixteen Pairs Entered in the Six-Day Race.

The Greatest Bicyclists in the World Included.

Root and Fogler Favorite on Present Form.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sixteen teams of bicyclists gathered from every quarters of the globe will start tomorrow night in the long journey of the annual international six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden. The release from Ellis Island of the championship French team, the Georget brothers, who recently won the greatest six-day race ever held in Europe, completed the list of entries which was held open until the last moment awaiting a decision in their case. The champions of Europe, Asia and Africa, as well as the very best riders in America, will go to the post.

Eddie Root of Sheepshead Bay, who won the last two races, is again favorite, with Joe Fogler of Brooklyn, his partner of last year, but Bobby Walthour and Hugh McLean are a close second choice. Walthour is conceded to be the best six-day rider in the world and McLean demonstrated last winter that he can go the distance, so they have many supporters who claim them to be superior as a team to Root and Fogler.

Root still maintains an ability to steal a lap during the first twenty-four hours and keep it the rest of the week. This idea was fostered last year by several of the riders, but none of them succeeded in realizing it. Root then carried out a plan of hanging on for three days and his plugging frustrated the other schemes. Now he plans to beat them at their own game.

Walthour simply laughs at the idea of Root outsprinting him or McLean either, and says he only hopes Root will try to. Despite the reports of Walthour not being able to stand a strain such as he once could, he looks to be in splendid condition and avers that he is.

Mil and Leon Georget are looked upon as the most dangerous of competitors. Van Derstuyft and Stall, who rode well up to the end last year, are entered again. They are classed below the two brothers by those American riders who went abroad last summer.

AFTER URBAN SUPPORT.

Rowing Clubs Want Permanent Endowment to Perpetuate Annual Regattas.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Delegates of seventeen rowing clubs of this vicinity will make an effort on Monday to induce the Board of Aldermen to appropriate the sum of $2500 for the purpose of holding an annual regatta on the Harlem River and thus bring the sport of rowing prominently before the public. The matter will be thoroughly argued before the finance committee of the Board of Aldermen, and by this means the necessary public support will be obtained if possible.

A delegation of the convention clubs, which includes Columbia University and the New York Athletic Club, has been appointed, each club sending one member. E. W. Kemmelberg, president of the Wancke B. C., and vice-president of the Harlem Regatta Association, will act as spokesman, together with Fred Vilman, president of the Nonpareil Boat Club, and Philip Sinnot, another man prominent in affairs on the Harlem River.

Never before has such a determined effort been made to secure the support of the city for the sport of rowing which President Eliot of Harvard has stamped as the cleanest of all amateur pastimes, and which is universally conceded to be of great personal benefit to the men participating in it.

CREWS READY FOR ROWING RACES ON THE PLAYA DEL REY LAGOON.

Rowing is to undergo its inauguration as an inter-club game in Southern California at Playa del Rey this afternoon, when the gritty little crew of the Los Angeles Athletic Club gives way in the first dash of its championship race against the crack pullers of San Diego, who have come north in force to defend laurels won in far southern waters and to capture more trophies offered here.

The feature of the day will be the four-oared shell contest between the Los Angeles and San Diego picked crews. The championship race between Harry Vaughn of San Diego, holder of the Courtney medal, challenger Harvey Slocum of the same organization, and G. W. Isaacs of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Beside the big double-header main events will be several of minor importance, but of little less interest. H. W. Stone of San Diego, the veteran shell builder and an oarsman of international repute a few years ago, will pull against another worthy champion of other days, J. B. Franklin, coach of the local club. Incidentally two teams of Los Angeles Athletic Club juniors will show what they can do at single scull racing, and other events of like sort may be added also.

Trained to the minute and anxious for the day's trial, both crews put in a quiet day yesterday, sizing up the course and talking over details. Rejoicing on the part of the San Diego four at its fifty-six pounds excess of working weight was quite well offset by the local clubs' manifest advantage of twenty-five clear pounds in its featherweight coxswain, little Gay De Long, who is said to have picked up many of the duties of his rather arduous position in a surprisingly short time, considering his inexperience at sitting in the stern of a racing shell.

TRUE SPORTSMEN.

Today's events are in great measure the outcome of the recent trip of Dick Dunnigan to San Diego to participate in a series of races held on the bay of lamented memory. On that occasion the San Diego brethren behaved in every way as characterizes true-blue sportsmen and established so friendly an inter-club feeling that frequent races in the future were assured. Dunnigan, for the time being, is under the weather and will have to watch the fun from the amphitheater.

Several previous attempts at popularizing rowing on Del Rey lagoon proved rather abortive owing to lack of equipment, and the absence of the keen spirit of amateur competition that alone makes interest in sport of whatever sort surge to fever heat. Today none may say enthusiasm is lacking.

Just what controversies will arise between daylight and 2 o'clock this afternoon is hard to anticipate, but past experience promises that there will be some. Some excuse for complaint on the part of the local oarsmen may be found in the racing barge that is to be used by Harvey Slocum, as it is six inches less in beam than the local boats, is outrigged, and has a smooth carvel-built shell bottom, to say nothing of lines so sweet that victory seems written all over them.

According to Coach Courtney of San Diego, who put up the medal, the boat is entirely within the classification he imposed, but her excellences are so many and so undeniable that they will militate against the race showing a fair line upon the individual competitive abilities of the men, making the contest degenerate somewhat into a battle of boats, in which a manifestly and admittedly superior type is meeting craft which border upon the work barge order.

SINGLE SCULL RACE.

The single scull championship race is to be three-quarters of a mile up the lagoon to a mark, turning and pulling back over the same course, which ought to give a fair line to go upon, provided the men sat in boats of approximately equal design. Harry Vaughn, the medal holder, has been challenged by his fellow-clubman, Harvey Slocum, and also by George W. Isaacs of the Los Angeles Athletic Club who once was a sculler of renown in the celebrated Argonaut Boat Club of Toronto. Isaacs is rather a light man, but the others are lean, rangy fellows of many inches and put up on the grayhound order.

For the four oared shell race a handsome silver cup is donated, not as a perpetual challenge trophy, but as a prize contingent upon the one victory, the winning crew taking it for their efforts. The visitors are eighty-one pounds heavier in the shell, but only fifty-six pounds of this is working weight, the visiting coxswain, Hackleman weighing 125 pounds, against an even 100 for young DeLong.

The gentlemen from the far south have been working their star performer, L. J. Allen, 172, a big, rangy fellow, at No. 1. L. Lundblade, 160, No. 2, W. E. Hige, 157, the lightest man, No. 3, and Max Winter, 160, stroke. Slocum may replace Hige. The probable average of the visiting crew is 162 1-4 pounds.

For the Los Angeles Athletic Club, Leroy P. Swaine, 140, pulls No. 1, H. S. Lewis, 145, No. 2, H. Conger Bowers, 161, No. 3, and G. W. Isaacs, 147, the best seasoned oarsman in the lot, stroke. The men say DeLong, their coxswain, has steered in good shape and handled his crew excellently in training, and if he keeps together for the race they look to him for much valuable aid other than that of his light weight.

BATTLE OF CREWS.

The four oar shells were both built by Stone of San Diego, and there is absolutely no choice between them so far as can be seen, the battle being altogether one of crews. Both boats belong to the local club, the San Diego craft not yet having been completed.

While officials are not entirely settled, it is quite certain that Frank Haggerty, coach of St. Vincent's, Bernal H. Dyas, and N. E. Brown of San Diego, secretary of the visiting club, will officiate as judges. A. B. McKenney, and Al A. Lawton probably will time, and Chas. F. Eyton is expected to start the boats. No interference on the route will be possible, hence there has been no talk of a clerk of the course. The rent boats are all tied up and out of harm's way, and none will be let today, thus obviating any possibility of trouble. The president of the San Diego Boat Club, J. C. Ackerman, probably will act as referee by request of the local institution.

The individuals who will compete in the junior races for members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club have not been announced, entries being open until the last.

The duel between Messrs. Franklin and Stone will be rowed in regular racing shells, the kind an ordinary man cannot get into without falling out the other side. So many have never seen these that lively interest may be expected to feature their appearance.

Schaefer After Titles.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the closing of the 18.2 championship billiard tournament won by Elbert Cutler of Boston, word comes from Chicago that Jacob Schaefer, the wizard, soon is to challenge for both the 18.1 and 18.2 world's championship billiard emblem. Willie Hoppe and George Sutton are the present respective holders of the 18.1 and 18.2 emblems.

EXPERTS ARE TO PLAY BASEBALL.

BIG LEAGUERS TO PERFORM THIS AFTERNOON.

State Championship Is the Honor at Stake—Jack Sheridan Engaged to Umpire—Such Stars as Chance, Chase, Strickiess, Lifield and Sheehan Will Appear.

Today is the time set for the big ball game between the Stockton and San José teams for the championship of the State League and while these cities are represented really in name only, for five or six of the men are members of the big leagues, still the game should prove to be as good as any ever played on the Coast, for every man in the line-up is a real ball player. There are five big league men in the Stockton team in Chance, Lifield, Shay, Sheehan and Shannon, and two in the San José club in Stricklett and Chase.

In the post-season series of five games between these teams, each won two games and the deciding one is to be played this afternoon at Chutes Park, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, if there is no rain falling at that time. As the local fans well know, a rain all morning will not prevent the game in the afternoon, for the ground dries out very quickly.

Two of the Los Angeles team are in the San José line-up in Chase and Brashear, and while it looks as if the Stocktons had it on the other team, it might be said that baseball is much like horse racing in that you can't always tell which team will win. It is said that Umpire Jack Sheridan will umpire. The line-up will be as follows:

Stockton.		San José.
Lifield	Pitcher.	Stricklett
Donahue	Catcher	Graham
Chance	First Base.	Chase
Mohler	Second Base.	Spencer
Sheehan	Third Base.	Irwin
Shay	Shortstop	Brashear
Mitchell	Left Field.	Hildebrand
Kruger	Center Field.	Williams
Shannon	Right Field	Walters

POLY BOYS WIN GAME.

Defeat San Bernardino Team by Clever Punts.

Orange Belt Lads Had Better Scrum, but Failed.

Words of Praise for Fairness of Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Polytechnic team defeated the local High School boys at Rugby football today by the score of 7 to 0. The game was very fast and although the Berdoo boys had much the better of the first half, Poly played the superior game in the second. A penalty kick netted the visitors four points and they scored a try towards the last part of the second. The Berdoo boys had the better scrum and heeled the ball out nearly every time, and it was not an uncommon thing for one of the three quarters to make a fifteen or twenty-yard run.

Poly made most of the gains by clever punts and it was only this that kept the score down in the first half.

In the second half Poly picked up and, although Berdoo came near scoring in the first part, and was given a free kick, the visitors worked the ball up the field and dribbled it over.

The Polytechnic boys are the cleanest and the fairest lot who have played here this season and their coach, Norman Denshman, who acted as referee, was just in his decisions.

The game was free from wrangles and unlike the last one held here, in which twenty-six minutes was taken out of the first half to discuss the decisions.

POLY PLAYS HIGH.

AGREE ON CONTEST.

In spite of the refusal of Throop Polytechnic High to play in a series with the other two teams that are tied for the interscholastic championship of Southern California to decide the final and legitimate resting place of the title, the series will be played out and unless Throop recedes from her present attitude and consents to play, Poly and L. A. High will fight the battle out by themselves.

Managers Hutchins and the Poly manager have decided that their respective schools are just as anxious to win the title, whether Throop remains in or out of the contest, and have concluded arrangements for a game to be played between the two teams next Saturday afternoon, December 15, at Fiesta Park. The game is sure to be a good one, as there is plenty of rivalry between the two local schools, and with the interscholastic championship of the South at stake, in a game between them, both sides will put up a scrappy fight.

Throop is given a decided advantage in being allowed to play the winner of the first game and the rooters feel it would be foolish for the Pasadena boys to sacrifice their chances of becoming the acknowledged champions on the flimsy and wholly groundless claims they have advanced.

SANTA MONICA TEAM.

GREAT SEASON'S RECORD.

The second eleven of the University of California will play the second team of the Santa Monica High School next Saturday, and at Long Beach the Los Angeles Rugby Club aggregation of English players will meet the Long Beach High School Rugby team in a scrum contest.

Santa Monica has put the best team in the field this season that has emanated from any of the beaches since her great team of four years ago, and rooters regret that the aggregation was not given a show with some of the big local and Pasadena teams. Roberson, the captain, probably divides with Stan Mitchell of Los Angeles High School the scholastic honors for all-star work in the South for this season, and it is unfortunate that no contests were arranged so that the followers of the game might have been given the opportunity of seeing more of his work.

ATHLETIC PAVILION FOR AMATEUR SPORT.

A. A. U. Proposes to Boom Track Meets and Games in Southern California by Building Great Enclosed Structure in Central Location.

WITHIN the next twelve months Los Angeles is to have an innovation in the amateur sporting line that will bring about a revolution in the future conduct and development of local amateur athletics. The Amateur Athletic Union, backed by a number of local capitalists who have the interests of amateur athletics in Southern California at heart, has decided upon the erection of an athletic pavilion on a site that has been chosen in the heart of town. Before the year is out the A.A.U. will be conducting the venture along similar lines as the famous Madison Square Gardens are run in New York.

This announcement was made yesterday by A. A. Lawson, local secretary of the A.A.U., but as several details of importance in connection with the plan have not yet fully matured, the names of the capitalists back of the scheme and the exact location of the proposed pavilion are withheld for the time being.

The full plans of the A.A.U. as far as announced at the present time are as follows:

A lease on a large and centrally located piece of property has been secured and sufficient capital subscribed to insure the erecting of an immense but plainly-constructed pavilion. Within this pavilion will be included accommodations for practically every form of sports that can be carried on under a roof. There will be a track, with a hundred-yard straightaway course, indoor tennis courts, basketball and indoor baseball grounds, and other facilities. The building will be plain and unadorned within, being intended simply to afford shelter so that the games can be carried on during rainy weather. It will be a closed structure, but there will be none but natural flooring. It will be designed so that it can be utilized for other purposes, such as horse shows, but the primary rule in connection with it will be that no exhibition or contest of any kind shall be held within it that shall not be purely amateur.

A.A.U. IN CONTROL.

The Amateur Athletic Union, through its regularly delegated representative in Southern California, will have entire control over the pavilion. The plans contemplated by the union, as soon as it can be occupied, which is expected to be January 1, 1908, are too extensive to be dealt with in any but a general way at present. The A.A.U. will throw open the building to any teams in any of the various lines of athletics. It will then endeavor to form as many leagues as may be desirous for the holding of sectional and graded championship contests. The aim will be to stimulate in this way all forms of amateur athletics in the graded schools, interscholastic and intercollegiate, as well as purely outside athletics.

Not only indoor athletics will receive the attention of the union. The building of the pavilion will simply mark the commencement of a new era of activity in amateur athletics all along the line. Both outdoor and indoor athletics will receive the benefit and stimulus of the union's encouragement and coöperation. The pavilion will be the central point of amateur athletics in Southern California in both kinds, as the Madison Square Gardens are in New York.

In applying the league development system the union will not necessarily infringe on the colleges or schools who play annually under their own arrangements. Outside leagues will receive the same recognition that they now get from the Amateur Athletic Union, and teams will be eligible to play as they choose on the outside and enter as many or as few as they like of the contests that are especially arranged by the union.

ANNUAL FIELD MEET.

At the close of each spring when the track season is drawing to a close, it is part of the plan to hold one great field and track meet open to all amateurs. This part of the plan closely resembles the big games held annually at Madison Square Garden and would soon come to be looked upon as the one great athletic meet of the year here, and receive national recognition.

The change that the proposed plan will work in the condition of amateur athletics can hardly be realized at a glance. There are unusually large numbers of teams in Southern California even today and with the added impetus that the guidance of the union will give, the number is due to multiply greatly. The organizations and leagues that control the contests as they are played now are extremely loose and the A.A.U. will perform a great function by stepping in and taking the matter in hand.

Although the proposed pavilion will not be begun for four months and will not be completed until 1908, the A.A.U. will take its first step in initiating itself strongly into Southern California during the coming spring. The first A.A.U. field day ever held in this part of the State will take place in Los Angeles in the latter part of April, and if the plans that are being pushed forward by Secretary Lawson carry, the meet will not only be for the championship of Southern California, but for the entire Coast.

Lawson has taken steps to put the matter before the proper parties in the A.A.U. If he is successful the picked athletes of all parts of the Coast from the Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, the great northern universities, and the local stars will compete for American records in this city. The meet will surpass anything in the amateur athletic history of Southern California and will be an instance of what the entrance of the A.A.U. into a field of activity means to this part of the State.

Seiger Knocked Out.

DENVER (Colo.) Dec. 8.—Freddie Weeks of Butte knocked out Kid Seiger in the final of a ten-round go before the Eagle's smoker last night. Weeks had the better of every round, although Sieger put up a game and vicious fight throughout.

EUGENE ESTOPPEY,
Marathon runner with L. A. Athletic Club.

MARATHON RUNNER HERE.

Eugene Estoppey Will Run Under the Colors of U.S.C. in Distances Events.

The University of Southern California has a valuable addition to the track team in the person of Eugene Estoppey, Marathon runner and cross-country enthusiast. Historically weak in the distance runs, the Methodist team will be greatly strengthened by his advent.

Estoppey's work in practice bears out his records admirably and in every sense he is an ideal distance man. With a dogged persistency he plugs around the track in a manner that is a mystery to the lookers-on. Holmes hopes to increase his sprinting abilities by careful coaching to eliminate some faults he possesses.

Estoppey has the following records to his credit: One mile, 4 min. 44 sec.; two miles, 10 min.; three miles, 16 min. 32 sec.; ten miles, 56 min.; twenty-five miles, 2 hrs. 50 min. He has competed in amateur athletics for the past sixteen years, being a member of the Pastime Athletic Club for twelve years. He has competed in a number of Marathon runs and placed in each race.

To Real Estate and other Classified Advertisers: The forthcoming Midwinter Number of The Times, to be issued January 1, 1907, will be a splendid medium for the exploitation of attractive real estate offerings. Thousands of copies will be mailed by citizens of Southern California to friends abroad who are figuring on emigrating to the Southwest. The rate will be 3 cents per word for classified announcements to run in the magazine section of this special issue. "Liner" copy will be received up to and including Dec. 27th.

YACHT RACING IS PROMISING.

Better Boats Constructed and Imported.

Byron Erkencrecher's Detroit Has New Rival.

Francis Hay Builds Yawl for Pleasure Cruises.

Alexander J. Mitchell of the South Coast Yacht Club, owner of the racing sloop Mischief, says that in the coming year there will be more and better yacht racing in this locality than ever before. Besides the boats being constructed here, there are others to be imported. One more is expected to arrive today for the Detroit class, and Messrs. Spruance and Bronson will have the boat off the cars at Terminal and put her in the water as soon as possible. At present little is known about the new craft except that she is to be raced against Byron Erkenbrecher's craft, which won Lipton's Pacific Cup two years running. Her name is to be changed, but she is supposed to be one of the thirties which beat the Detroit on the Great Lakes before the latter was brought to California. This will be a welcomed addition to the local fleets, because since the changing of the Lipton Cup deed the Detroit was without a well-matched competitor and almost useless for strictly racing purposes. The arrangements for the advent of the new boat have been secret, and there may be a surprise party on the ways for Byron Erkenbrecher.

A new yawl is being finished at the Fellows yards for Francis Hay of Los Angeles. It is a strongly constructed craft that is intended to be able to cruise outside in all weathers, and for this purpose she is being given a moderate sail plan, easy to work, and all her spars and rigging will be of the most substantial kind. The oak frames are two inches by two and a half, and are spaced only eight inches on centers over the iron keel, while in the overhangs they are two inches wider apart.

The casing of iron on the oak keel weighs 6400 pounds, and the cabins will be in white enamel, with mahogany and teak. The expensive fittings and woods of the interior will give a rich appearance, and everything supplied is of the very best. The yacht will use the patent Edison steering gear, and auxiliary power will be supplied by a four-horse power Standard engine, which is now expected from San Francisco.

Charles A. Lewey will turn out all the canvas of the new boat, and also a full set of signal flags and ordinary flags. In the mainsail headsail and mizzen there will be in all 1050 square feet. This area is well divided for short-handed cruising, the canvas being practically all on deck, the main boom being twenty-five feet six inches, gaff seventeen feet six inches, with a hoist of twenty-four feet. Blocks of the same kind that Erkenbrecher put on the Detroit will be used, these being of lignum vitae with patent sheaves.

Over all, the boat measures forty-two feet, while her water line is twenty-eight feet and her extreme beam eleven feet. The keel draught is about six feet, and the whole boat will be a cruiser of a staunchness that may well be copied for general safety in this neighborhood. She will have a commodious interior with six berths, and a fairly good speed under either power or sail. It is understood that Mrs. Hay of Pico Heights sometimes will cruise with her son, who is a member of the South Coast Yacht Club.

The Lehua will appear in the next racing for the Lipton Pacific Cup. She is on the ways now at the Fellows yards and will take her first plunge today. She is for Mr. Gay of San Diego, who has a residence at Coronado. Joe Fellows was going to sail her down to her new home anchorage, but word has come that Mr. Gay, Jr., of Stanford University will meet his father at Terminal and with him take the 100-mile passage.

The racing sails are on the mainsail and jib pattern, made of a new material, very light and strong, just procured by Lewey from the East. The Lehua measures twenty-nine feet over all, the water line being eighteen feet, and the beam nine feet. The hull draught is only sixteen inches, but with the board down she will draw seven feet.

The lines are smooth, symmetrical and fast, and there is a little cabin in which four could sleep. Except the oak frames and backbone, the woodwork is all white cedar, and on her pole mast she will carry in her cruising rig 650 feet of sail. Mr. Gay first will sail to Avalon, taking that harbor as a sort of halfway house on the long sail down. He intends to use the boat during all the winter months, chiefly in the inland waters of San Diego Bay, where his wife and daughters can join in the Christmas yachting of Southern California.

Franklin Holmes of Los Angeles was at Terminal yesterday surveying the new pleasure launch which is being completed for him by the Fellows Construction Company. This is a fast craft, as shown in her lines, but Mr. Holmes intends her for fishing parties as well as cruising. Owing to a delay in the arrival of the engine from New York the boat will not be launched for about two weeks. She is twenty-eight feet long, with a draught of about fourteen inches, and a deck beam of six feet. She is ten feet shorter than Mrs. Doran's Presto, but has a similar speedy look, her lowest freeboard being twenty-two inches. The engine ordered is of the three-cylinder type and of nine horse power. Fellows has guaranteed a speed of nine miles an hour, and will probably do about eleven. She is finely fitted with mahogany and brass trimmings and will have a collapsible cabin canopy of canvas. Her cost will be $1500, and she can carry ten people on fishing trips.

Robert R. Greig of Chicago, secretary of the Railways and Engineering Review, has words of praise for Walter Folsom's Mischief II, and says there is not a boat like her on the whole of the Great Lakes. It will not be at all surprising if a good offer secures Mischief II for Chicago waters, because she has supplied the most substantial proofs that she can, in her class, be a winner in any waters.

Thompson Ties Hoover.

In a fast and snappy game of football the Hoovers, for the first time this season, did not come out victorious, being held to no score by the Thompsons. Polkingham for Thompson and Ralph Harlow for the Hoovers were easily the stars.

Matches between negroes are all right, and only in world's championships ought there to be inter-racial contests. The "white championship" should be enough honor for a white man, and the "negro championship" would carry similar honor in its way. There are enough good boys in either race to make it interesting for the champion of respective color. This is no disparagement of the negro fighter, but every race has its place, and inter-racial contests should be discouraged.

Jim Jeffries Game.

By deciding to act as referee in the Gans-Herman fight at Tonopah, Jim Jeffries shows that he is game and cares little for public criticism. Jeff is honest; that is his great qualification. But if honesty unwittingly is misplaced it has the same general effect as crookedness. Jeff is still green as a referee, but he may acquire the fine points of the game and show real worth. If he expects to remain in the refereeing business, there will be none to discourage him if he is willing to take just criticism. The sports are not yet able to swallow his decision in the Burns-O'Brien battle, and some of his actions in that fight must be improved upon—for instance, the pictures show that on three occasions he was out of the ring talking to sporting critics when the men faced each other in the center. Jeff must learn to give his own decision. Also, he must insist that the men break at the word, and that they refrain from holding. Here's luck to you, Jeff, if you decide to see it through.

Track Athletics.

No sport is so healthful and brings out so many good physical qualities as track athletics, and now that the training season of the colleges and high schools is beginning, every student who can should get out and work for a place. The young students, and the older ones, as well, should remember that the only way to win contests and develop into good men is to be faithful in training, beginning easily and then increasing the work gradually. No student should enter straining contests unprepared, and young boys especially should receive an extra amount of training before taking part in athletic games. The great danger of athletics today is the proneness of youth to enter into the strenuous games of the better developed, and thus run the risk of strain or stunted growth. Every one should classify himself according to age and ability, and then work for a higher gradation.

Successful Matinees.

The success of the first matinée of the Los Angeles Driving Club yesterday showed that the better class of people like the sport, and if it were made more popular with frequent meetings, enthusiasm would be aroused to a high pitch. It would appear that if the Driving Club scheduled matinés for every Saturday there would be enough days in which the weather is good and the track fast to give at least two days a month of first-class sport throughout the winter. As there are no records attached to the performances of matinée horses when conducted with a free gate, many of the best would be entered for tryouts, while there are always enough green horses of speed to fill out the events. The game is well worth the boosting in this country, where so many horses winter and where there are so many enthusiastic horsemen and horsewomen.

Athletic Pavilion.

The intention of the Amateur Athletic Union to construct a large pavilion in which to hold sporting contests of all kinds will be the biggest step in the history of athletics in Southern California, if carried out. Southern California preëminently is fitted to foster pure amateur sports. The climate is excellent, the weather glorious, and training conditions in general unsurpassed. Records of the future should be made in Southern California. Nowhere in the United States are pure athletics given more attention. More persons living here have leisure to play in contests and witness them than in any other locality in the United States. There is a healthy spirit of amateurism prevalent which augurs well for any move such as is contemplated. The project should be pushed along and the promoters aided in every way.

Lawn Tennis.

If there is one game Southern Californians excell in it is lawn tennis. The game has won the attention of young and old, men and women, and is the best all-around sport for the home. Many champions have gone out from Southern California, and as a class the players here rank higher than in any other locality, except possibly the spheres of the big California universities, which are much more limited. The game can stand further development.

JACK AND JIM SIGN FOR GO.

Sullivan and Flynn to Meet January Fourth.

Next Battle Between Gardner and Kaufman.

Baker and Attell Matched for Second Bout.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan and Jim Flynn met yesterday afternoon in Manager McCarey's office and signed articles to fight before the Pacific Athletic Club the night of January 4. Hugo Kelly, who was to meet Sullivan on that date, wired McCarey that he wanted to pass Christmas with his folks, and as Flynn was anxious to fill in, the latter was signed. Kelly will meet the winner.

The match is a good one, for the men have gone to a ten-round draw. Flynn claims that he had Sullivan running away during the last three rounds, or would have defeated him sure. Sullivan is just as certain that he can defeat Flynn. Burns, who fought both men, says that Flynn gave him the hardest fight.

Al Kaufman and George Gardner have begun hard training for their fight December 21. The Terrible Turk and George Brown, who will meet on the same night in a twenty-round preliminary, will begin work Monday, resting up after their fight of Friday night, when Brown took a ten-round decision from the Turk, which might have been called a good draw and done no injustice to Brown.

Kaufman and Gardner are the first big heavies to meet here in some time, Gardner now weighs 180 pounds, and it is expected he will train "on" weight. Kaufman is heavier, and will weigh 185 to 190 when he enters the ring. Gardner has not fought a big fight in some time. In fact, his last hard contest was with Fitzsimmons, who took the decision from him in twenty rounds about three years ago. He has beaten Marvin Hart, Jack Root twice, and other good men.

The three big cards slated by Manager McCarey form the best advance programme ever handed out by an athletic club. The three bouts have been cinched and all the men have signed. Nothing ordinary can prevent the fights being held.

The last fight of the three is between Harry Baker and Abe Attell and really is the class of the lot, although the battle is between little fellows. However, the other two battles ought to prove more spectacular to the fans who like a slugging match. The Gardner-Kaufman fight may not go over ten rounds, while the Sullivan-Flynn match may furnish something sensational long before the limit.

REDLANDS WINS IN ORANGE BELT.

BECOME INTERSCHOLASTIC RUGBY CHAMPIONS.

Team Has Defeated Every Fifteen Against Which It Played, Including Los Angeles Polytechnic—New Game Has Aroused a Great Deal of Interest.

October 28—Redlands, 11; San Bernardino, 0.

November 3—Redlands, 11; San Bernardino, 0.

November 10—Redlands, 11; Riverside, 0.

November 17—Redlands, 6; Pomona, 0.

November 29—Redlands, 6; Los Angeles Polytechnic, 0.

December 1—Redlands, 6; San Bernardino, 0.

The Redlands High School Rugby football team won the Interscholastic Orange Belt League championship this season, and becomes the possessor of the trophy cup put up at the beginning of the season to be played for.

The Orange Belt League includes the high schools of Redlands, Pomona, Riverside, San Bernardino, Colton and Ontario, who took up the game of Rugby this year.

The Redlands team averaged 147 pounds and was not particularly fast, but the ball never crossed its goal line during the entire season. In six games they crossed the opponents' goal line fifteen times for a total of 51 points.

The game between Pomona and Redlands was perhaps the best exhibition of the series in point of clean, fast ball and spectacular plays. Redlands won, although Pomona outweighed them by an average of ten pounds. The Redlands team took up Rugby systematically, and with the idea that the game required study and was not a hit or miss proposition.

Thanksgiving Day the team defeated Los Angeles Polytechnic in a close game, and closed the season by defeating San Bernardino for the championship, December 1.

The Rugby game aroused much enthusiasm, and some new stars were developed. The game was played in a thorough manner, with excellent coaches to assist in bringing out the best individual qualities and team work.

Dr. Huddlestone of Pasadena, an experienced player, was secured to coach the team for a week, and to him largely is due the success achieved in the early part of the season. Later on, Carl Hill, an old Stanford player, went north for a week prior to the intercollegiate game and studied the style of play adopted by Coach Lanagan, and later imparted what he had learned to Redlands.

DEFENSE OF RUGBY.

Dr. Huddleston Says the Game Has Not Been Given Full Trial in Short Time.

Dr. Dan Huddleston of Pasadena writes:

"Rugby football properly played is a very fine game. We in Southern California have really had no opportunity of seeing what the game is capable of when played by experts, so that any criticisms that have been made cannot be otherwise than in the nature of "snap judgments" not unmixed with a good deal of prejudice, perhaps.

"However, we have plenty of teams, let those who prefer the intercollegiate play that style, and let us also get up a new high school league in Rugby—Pomona, Redlands, San Bernardino, Los Angeles Polytechnic, Long Beach, Compton, Riverside and possibly others—then let the winners of the league play a picked team from the best players of the remaining clubs, which would wind up the season in a very fitting manner. Such a schedule would do much to enhance the popularity of the winter sport.

"In reference to sports in general the writer has noticed that many sporting writers have, since the Olympic games at Athens, stated that we in America hold all the championships of the athletic world. While we do, most assuredly, carry off the palm in most short distances, yet in common fairness to English athletes we must admit their supremacy in the long distance running and some other sports. Following is a short list of notable old country athletes who are supreme in their several roles:

"Tennis—R. F. and H. L. Doherty, world champions; golf—Harry Vardon; rowing—Leander Club; swimming—D. Billington, 440 yards in 5 min. 25 sec., 1000 yards in 13:52; H. Taylor, half mile in 11:25, mile in 24:10; walking—A. T. Yeomans, 1 mile in 5:19, world's record; running—G. Butterfield, 1 mile in 4:18 1-5; long distance, A. A. Shrubb, world's champion; cross country, C. J. Straw, holder of national championship. In lacrosse, polo, cricket, football, etc., fine teams are also turned out.

HOPPE'S GREAT RECORD.

Makes Run of 312 and Finishes 500 in Three Innings, Establishing World's Mark.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Willie Hoppe, the phenomenal billiardist, last night gave an exhibition of how much he outclassed his brother Frank in a practice game at 18.2 balk line at Hoppe's academy.

Willie scored 500 points in three innings, his runs being 96, 92, and 312. The last run beats the world's record of 311 made by Hoppe in Chicago last year. His average for the game was 166 2-3—66 2-3 higher than the world's record average made by George Sutton in the New York tournament last spring.

Unfortunately, neither of these records will count for Willie, as it was only a practice game. He is now practicing for his match game for the world's 18.2 balk line championship, and this game was one of the series of practice matches.

Frank Hoppe had only two chances to play, and made runs of 46 and 49, giving him a total of 95 and an average of 47½, the highest average he has ever made.

The Croix, a clerical organ at Paris, announced yesterday that the Pope had indefinitely interdicted any steps being taken by Catholics for the purpose of holding church services under the public worship law of 1881, under which the government proposes the services to be held after December 11.

SMALL RIFLE FOR RABBITS.

Novel Form of Hunting Has Many Advantages.

Sport One Can Reach After Business Is Done.

Near-by Places in Plenty a Boon to Shooters.

Many inquiries have been made as to the places where rabbits and small game may be shot near Los Angeles. Without quibbling, it would be about as hard to find some place where one cannot go hunting with a rifle for birds and rabbits—the entire country is open to the expectant nimrod. As for finding a place where some shooting is to be had for the hunting, that is quite another matter.

To a fair shot, a day's rabbit hunting with a 22-caliber rifle, with chance of occasional cracks at coyotes or quail, it little less sport than the chase after deer. The instrument of precision has many an advantage over the shotgun so far as the rabbit is concerned, since it enables a clever marksman to nail his game cleanly through the head, which allows clean killing and provides much more palatable meat. To any who have ever tasted a young sage rabbit, properly killed so as to drain the blood, and suffered to hang in the cold mountain air a day or so until tender, no encomiums upon delicacy of flavor are necessary.

Excluding such parts of the near-by mountain ranges as have been denuded by the season's extensive and destructive brush fires, there are but few hilly fastnesses wherein a reasonably experienced hunter may not expect to bag a fine mess of rabbits in any late afternoon's hunting. At sundown in particular the elusive bunny hies himself to the edges of the covert in search of food, deserting his form in the chaparral wherein he has remained during the day. Rabbits are largely nocturnal in their habits and particularly so at times of full moon such as the present. The day shooting is better after dark nights, but the veteran hunter seldom wastes much of his effort until evening approaches unless fortunate enough to be on the ground at the early morning. While the dew is still damp the rabbit may often be surprised in the act of imbibing his matutinal drink, fresh from the chalice of some mountain flower, or politely proffered him at the tip of a tiny weed. For that is the only way in which wild rabbits drink, and accounts for their frequenting places remote from springs.

HUNTING RABBITS.

The pursuit of the rabbit entails little hard labor other than an hour's easy walking at times when the temperature is moderate and the cool air invigorating in its freshness. No equipment other than a small rifle and inconspicuous clothing of a color not at variance with the green—brown tints of the hill chaparral—equally appropriate for all upland hunting, need be taken.

The expectant rifleman prowls about the edges of the brush and the rims of shallow cañons, watching for a flash of gray if it comes to that, but hoping to catch sight of a rabbit unsuspecting, and within shotgun range. Even the 22 short, using the smokeless, greaseless ammunition, which is an ideal gun for the work, can be absolutely relied upon at, say, fifty yards. A good shot can drill a rabbit's head with considerable regularity at that distance.

If bunny happens to be sitting with his head the other way and it is impracticable from the lay of the land to stalk him, a shrill whistle often has the desired effect by pitching the game to his haunches, where he sits a second in curiosity. Then is the time to shoot, and right at the junction of the ears is the spot to hold upon, unless the shot be a very close one, in which event the under jaw is the proper mark. All 22-caliber rifles are sighted to throw high at very short range owing to the small power of the cartridge and corresponding drop in trajectory.

Two or three in an evening are considered all a hunter may expect, except in unusually favored localities—eight and nine are record bags. Sometimes one may ride in a light sulky cart, stopping whenever a rabbit jumps, and watch him until he "holes up." This was usually a matter of but a few yards, and bunny's fright soon succumbs to his curiosity. Two ears will issue from the hole, then a gray head, and last a clear, bright little eye, that makes the best possible "bullseye" for the rifleman's aim. At such work who could miss? The rabbit's spasmodic spring at the moment of impact invariably carries him clear of his hole and into the open so that there was no loss, as might be the case with shotgun shooting.

Many places in the San Fernando Valley's washes afford opportunities for good sport and the same is true of any of the river beds that lie along the Huntington lines to the east and south. On the Glendale line are any number of spots where an evening's fun might be expected to yield the piece de resistance to an excellent game dinner, for nothing yields to a pair of young rabbits properly cooked.

Taking the Glendale car to any of the near-by foothill stops in the Los Feliz range is a matter of only half an hour's time, and one may run out after business hours in the evening with every prospect of success, while he who lives on the Hollywood line need only walk north to the foothills. Around Pasadena, Eagle Rock, Verdugo are any number of places that may be discovered by the most casual stroller. Indeed, it is hard to go into the country in any direction where there is a little brush without encountering rabbits.

HARD GAME ON THE RUN.

Shooting a rabbit sitting is unjustifiable in the shotgun sportsman's ethics, but to the rifleman it is the fairest of all shots because it allows of a clean kill with no waste. Given a crack snapshot with a rifle, however, and the game of bowling over bunny at the top of his speed becomes a frequent performance. Usually the brushy country in which rabbits delight prevents more than a quick shot at them as they turn, but on the level plains where sagebrush and tomescal harbor the elusive "jack," one may take any number of cracks at the black-eared chaps. There is something uncanny about the long, swinging gait of the jack rabbit that covers the ground so fast. Such speed in so small an object seems incredible, and a tourist might be excused for thinking there's magic in it. A frightened bound, a dash for liberty, half a dozen breaths, and the elusive jack is out of sight.

His must be a keen eye, a quick hand and a ready brain who bowls over one of these black-tipped veterans in full flight with a rifle, big mark though it be. The bounding gallop baffles the best-aimed bullets at times, and a kill is largely a matter of chance, but with a repeater, or magazine rifle as one's aid, the adjacent air can be so liberally alloyed with lead that even jack can hardly find a path through.

As to the jack rabbit's culinary qualifications, perhaps the less said the better. Young ones are not bad eating; they are generally a long way from good, however, although the French eat them.

Relentlessly persecuted, and nowhere very plentiful around this city, the jack rabbit is a sporting animal of such real worth that it proved his undoing. The lovers of coursing—and by that word is meant the real game of riding across country after a pair of hounds to a fair kill, or escape, and not the brutal gambling game that used to flourish here before the better element of the public awoke—yields nothing to fox-hunting.

JACK RABBITS SCARCER.

An intolerable nuisance wherever plentiful, the great rabbit drives of the San Joaquin Valley, aided by occasional outbreaks of pestilence among the rabbits, have made of the much-maligned jack little more than a memory. There are some who will regret his passing, for he lent variety to full many a jaunt, and perhaps deserved a better fate than to be beaten to death in some fenced enclosure by fifty men, women and children, armed with clubs. In times when game has been scarce he often served the remote rancher well, and eked out the prospector's bacon and beans.

Of the easier methods of rabbit-hunting in this end of the State might not inaptly be mentioned the diversion of driving along little frequented roads at evening with one's rifle across the knee, handy for a quick shot at the chances that are so often noticed when no firearms are along. Two or three bunnies in an evening and a couple of hours pleasant driving to boot are likely to reward the hunter who fancies easy game. The foothill road that skirts the Los Feliz hills promises well as the hunting ground.

NEW BASKETBALL RULES.

Principal Changes Affect the Game and Improves Conditions of the Sport.

Principal changes in basketball rules this year are:

One official shall have entire control of the game. It has been demonstrated in the games of the Intercollegiate League that one official is competent to handle the game; and since one official must be mutually agreeable, the choice of that official will receive more careful consideration than formerly, when each team felt that it might rely upon the official of its own choice if the other proved incompetent.

Time shall be taken out at the request of the captains not more than three times for each team during each half, and play shall be resumed within two minutes after stopping. These changes will prevent unnecessary delays and will give to the better conditioned team the advantage which it deserves.

The score keepers shall compare their scores after each goal is made, and the timers their time after each stop; both shall report to the referee at once any discrepancy. These changes insure correction at once of any discrepancies in scoring or timing.

The background to the goal shall be painted white. This provides a uniform background throughout.

The dimensions of the court are stated in maximum and minimum lengths and widths, instead of square feet as formerly. Although this does not alter in any degree the playing space, it is in line with the policy of a uniform court, if conditions are ever such as to allow it.

The definition of carrying the ball out of bounds has been altered to cover the case of a player who passes or bats the ball out of bounds and then regains possession out of bounds. This prevents a player who is well guarded in the court from passing out of bounds in order to obtain a free pass.

Another definition has been given to holding. The rule as now stated defines holding as two acts: (1) The "actual holding of an opponent with the hands;" and (2) "impeding his progress in any manner more than momentarily." The first case is self-explanatory. It covers every case of holding with the hands of any part of an opponent's person or clothing. In the second case, if the arms, body, or legs of a player are used in guarding an opponent, the opponent shall be free to move in some direction at any time, except when the arms, body, or legs in guarding are used momentarily to check his progress. By momentarily is meant the shortest possible time necessary to remove the contact of the body, arms, or legs. Thus, it is not considered holding if a player in guarding another, uses his arms alternately upon each side of his opponent, provided the player so guarded is not prevented from making progress away from the player guarding, and also provided that the arms of the player guarding do not come in contact with his opponent more than momentarily. Simply touching an opponent is not holding; there must be an actual checking of progress more than momentarily.

HARNESS HORSE MARKS MUDDLED.

GREAT RECORDS OF DAN PATCH ARE DISCREDITED.

Rules Do Not Permit of Racing With Wind Shields and Other Appliances — Authorities Attempting to Devise Scheme to Correct Existing Statistics.

When Dan Patch's questionable performance against time at Memphis last year led the National Trotting Association to so amend its rule as to prohibit the use of wind shields and bar all time performances made at hole-in-the-corner meetings, it was generally believed that the great pacer would be forced to start under normal conditions, and in broad daylight if he attempted to break any records this season; but those who so believed were evidently unacquainted with the shifty owner of the shambling-gaited son of Joe Patchen.

In the campaign just ended Dan Patch started against time on numerous occasions, and though he was faster than ever when aided by a runner in front to break the natural resistance of the atmosphere, he was not once put to the test of showing what he could do under normal conditions. Reports from the recent meeting at Lexington, Ky., were at first to the contrary, but it now appears that there Dan Patch had the same artificial aid as at all the other meetings.

Notwithstanding the fact that the new rules of the National Trotting Association expressly forbid the use of a runner in front, and further provide that performances so made shall not be recognized as records, the owner of the wind-shield champion has set up the claim that since his horse has several times this season performed on tracks governed by the rules of the American Trotting Association the wind-shield performances must go into the records.

No changes in the rules of the American Trotting Association were made last winter, no meeting of that organization having been held. Its directors, however, held a meeting in April, after the National rules had been amended, and pledged the enforcement of the amended rules on all American tracks. Whether the directors had authority to do this is at least doubtful, and it is certain that the agreement has not been carried out, since enforcement of section 19 of rule 43 of the National code would have prevented Dan Patch from starting in the wake of a wind shield.

A board composed of the presidents of the various trotting associations decided three years ago that Lou Dillon's wind-shield performances could not go into the records on an equality with those made without this artificial aid, and the same tribunal will doubtless rule on the validity of the Dan Patch performances this year if any attempt is made to get them into the official records of the year book.

The failure of the Board of Presidents to appreciate the true character of wind-shield performances when the Lou Dillon case first came up for decision has already led to much confusion. Instead of throwing out these trick performances altogether, as was done when kite tracks, down hill all the way, were devised to make slow horses trot fast, it was first decided to admit them to the year book with a conspicuous distinguishing mark showing they were not made under normal conditions and were not on an equity with legitimate records. For some reason not satisfactorily explained by the registrar entrusted with the compilation of the year book, this distinguishing mark was omitted except in a few obscure places, and the official 2:30 list indicated erroneously that Lou Dillon had trotted a mile in 1:58¼ under normal conditions.

When the biennial Congress of the National Trotting Association was held last February the rules committee recommended, and the delegates voted without dissent, to end this confusion and inequality of records by doing away with the discredited wind-shield performances entirely. The following rule was accordingly adopted:

"When a horse performs against time, it shall be proper to allow any other horse to accompany him in the performance, but not to precede or be harnessed with or in any way attached to him."

It was not until after the Congress adjourned that the real effect of this rule occurred to those who made it. Then it was seen that its operation would be to let all wind-shield performances then on record stand, while forbidding them in the future. All horsemen agreed that it was manifestly unfair, because it forced every horse attempting in the future to lower the world's record to go against time which has been made with the aid of a wind shield, though he himself was denied this aid.

To rectify the mistakes which have been made and again put all horses and all records on an equality as nearly as may be, is now a puzzling problem.

PLAYED THIRTY YEARS.

Dan Brouthers Holds Record for Service in Baseball—Was a Heavy Hitter.

Dan Brouthers, one of the greatest ball players that ever lived, quietly tells his friends in New York that he is going to work, and the baseball world, which once worshipped at his shrine on the diamond, can now see him as an everyday citizen.

"Quit playing baseball?" inquired Dan, in answer to a question. "Well, I guess not. I'll be playing until they cut the uniform off me, and, you know, I can go some yet. You fellows must have heard of Poughkeepsie, haven't you?"

Everybody laughed. They thought the big fellow was stringing them. They did not know that Dan Brouthers has been playing baseball continuously since 1876. Think of it—thirty years in the game! Even Jim McGuire can't touch that record.

Some of them drifted around through the minor leagues and finally quit altogether; but Brouthers has kept it up to this day. He played first base and managed the Poughkeepsie team, of the Hudson Riven League, during the season just passed. And he hit close around .300, too.

Ran Brouthers first came into prominence in 1880 while playing for Buffalo. On the club with him at that time were Rowe, Richardson and White. They were such wonderful players that they became known as the "Big Four," and were eventually sold to Detroit for an immense sum of money. That was the first big baseball deal on record.

Later they were sold to Boston. Brougthers then went to Brooklyn, later to Baltimore, and then to Louisville and Philadelphia. He then began to show signs of "slowing up," and went to Springfield, in a minor league. From there he drifted around minor leagues until he went to Poughkeepsie.

Brouthers always played first base. Of the old-timers—that is, back in the '80's—Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Roger Conner, Adrian Anson and Pete Browning were considered the five greatest hitters the game has ever developed. All of them passed out of active baseball life but Brouthers, though Thopmson did play a few games with Detroit the past season just to "fill in."

CAREER OF CRESCEUS.

Romantic Story of Great Trotter, One of the Greatest of Harness Performers.

Cresceus will be a horse of history when all other trotters of his day are forgotten, and deservedly so. His career, from the day he was foaled until he retired after the notorious exhibition at Wichita, Kan., was a succession of sensations, triumphs and happy incidents. In fact, the last-named element began playing a part in his career that was to be long before he was foaled.

It came about in this way: In Ohio there was a mare called Mabel that produced a colt which trotted in 2:27 as a four-year-old. George Ketcham of Toledo, hearing the mare was to be sold at auction, decided to bid on her up to $1500. But on sale day two other men, acting in concert, became mixed in their bidding, each thinking the other was the man that had the auctioneer's eye, so that Ketcham got the mare for $250. When she foaled Cresceus the youngster was a most ungainly, common-looking specimen of the trotting horse. No one on the farm regarded him as of any possible value.

As a yearling the homely colt was attacked by epizootic, and to relieve him a blister was put on his neck. As soon as it began to heal it itched, and the colt walked to the half-door of his stall and rubbed the neck until a horrible gaping wound that exposed the windpipe had been made.

"Kill him," were the instructions. Now, if there is one point where the average stock-farm employé balks it is at killing a horse, unless such action would be humane. So, as the colt looked better the day following his sentence to death, he was allowed to hang around, and got well at once. Then he was broken to harness, and it was weeks before he could trot at all, but finally he balanced himself, and then he could step in good shape for a yearling. And then began the wonderful series of things that Cresceus did the winter before he was a two-year-old. He was driven on the snow at Toledo and could beat most of the fast ones there. In the spring he continued to be trained, and in no time at all it was seen that he would be up to a race. He started twice that season and won his second race in 2:37¾, 2:38¾, beating a field of fifteen. The average horseman would have seen to it that such a colt got a nice let-up until the following spring, but Cresceus was worked steadily on the snow. Early the following June he was started in a race with eight other three-year-olds and won. Thereafter it was easy sailing.

THE UNIVERSAL RULE.

England Objects to the American Method of Measurement, But Change Is Doubtful.

In a recent issue of the Yachtsman, one of the leading English nautical magazines, a writer has the following to say regarding the American rule of measurement:

A considerable amount of dissatisfaction exists in the United States with regard to the new so-called "universal" rule of measurement adopted by the New York and other leading clubs. The type produced by the American rule does not appeal very strongly to us. It is said, however, that the "universal" rule has produced fast and good sea boats, and there will be strong opposition to any change. That may be so, but the true test of any rule is whether it encourages precisely the type of yacht that the majority of yachtsmen would build for other purposes beyond that of racing. If, as is suggested, the subject of the "universal" measurement is to be reopened this winter, one may be pardoned for hoping, even against hope, that some consideration may be given to the European rule.

It is true that there is to be another meeting of the Atlantic Coast Conference this winter. In fact, invitations will be issued very shortly by the New York Yacht Club. It has been stated very emphatically, though, that the delegates are not to consider the present rule of measurement. The new rule, it is true, is not liked by certain designers. The consensus of opinion seems to be, however, that the rule is good enough and that it would be foolish to change it. Yachtsmen are tired of this continual changing of rules. It upsets the sport entirely too much and interferes with the plans for building.

The time allowance scale will come up for consideration at the coming meeting of the Coast Conference. As it was last winter, the argument now is, that the larger boats are not fairly treated under the existing 70 per cent. clause. This, however, will have to be shown conclusively before any change will be made. There is also a cry against the allowances made for rig in mixed races. When yachts of mixed rigs race, schooners are rated at 85 per cent. and the yawls at 93 per cent. of their full rating. This is thought by some to be unfair to sloops.

FEW GOOD BILLIARDISTS.

Present Champion Players Have Held Honors for Many Years and Remain Unbeaten.

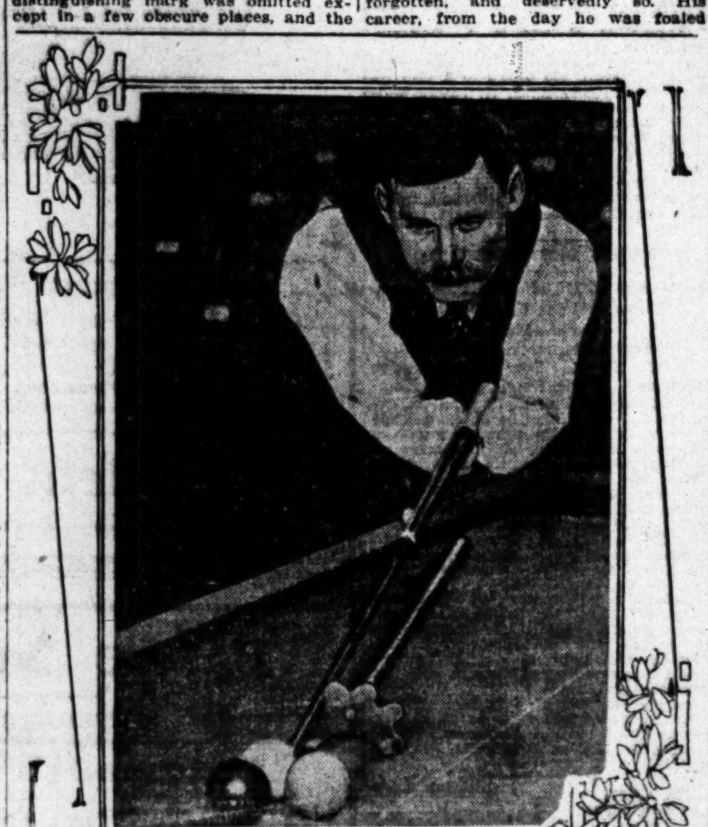
The fact that very few first-class billiardists have ever been developed, is one of the strange features of the game. Vignaux, Schaefer and Slosson have been champions for over thirty years, the only others developed during all this time being Ives, Hoppe and Sutton, a most remarkable showing, not to be paralleled in any other branch of sport.

Of all the experts Shaefer deserves most credit for the development of the game to its persent high standard. He always has been anxious and willing to aid in the development of youngsters, and Ives, Hoppe, Morningstar and Sutton all were his pupils. The balk-line nurse, the feature of play responsible for all high runs, however, is the invention of Sutton, and when, as a shortstop, he first sprung it, he occasioned great surprise.

Schaefer is the father of all the rules under which billiards are played. At various times he has surmounted by his inventive genius the many barriers imposed on experts to decrease their speed, and necessitated the making of new restrictions; for the other experts could all take advantage of the new discoveries, as soon as they came to know them, and almost unending runs were the result.

In a championship contest between Jake and Ives, the latter sat down with 14 to go, and Schaefer came to bat with 566 to go. The largest run ever made up to that time had been 288, and the Wizard seemed to have but little show to win. His great inventive genius came to the rescue, however, the anchor nurse was discovered and Schaefer ran the game out. This was the only time the anchor nurse was allowed in a match game, for Ives, after it was discovered, could play it as well as Schaefer, and, as it made the game too easy, it was immediately barred.

Incidental to the above game, Frank White, a well-known Chicago sport, won a most remarkable bet from Leo Mayer, the well-known book-maker. As Schaefer walked up to the table in the final inning, White turned around to Mayor, who was making book on the contest, and said, "What are the odds, now, Leo?" "100 to 1," said Mayer. "I'll bet you $10," said White. "Done," said Leo, and when the game was over Leo had to settle with the wise Mr. White, who, a billiard player himself, knew that a game was never over until the last point was made.



With both arms severed just below the elbow, George Sutton, of Milwaukee, executes the various billiard shots as well as an ordinary player.

A. M. Brown (Rep.) has been unsuccessful in his contest for the office of Sheriff in Oahua county, Hawaii, a recount confirming the election of C. P. Iawkea (Dem.) by a small majority.

Twenty-eight Chinese, who, it is alleged, have been smuggled across the Mexican border, were deported yesterday at Las Cruz, N. M., forty miles north of El Paso, Tex.

Track athletes who are expected to uphold the honor of U. S. C. in the spring inter-collegiate meets.

U.S. C. TRACK MEN AT WORK.

Small Army of Athletes on the Cinder Path.

Prospects Bright for Very Successful Season.

Hopes of Defeating Stanford and Berkeley.

At the University of Southern California, Coach Holmes has departed from the former practice and is preparing to hold the annual inter-class track meet before the Christmas holidays. This is in accord with the present procedure in some of the large eastern colleges. In view of this fact, a small army of prospective athletes are daily cavorting around the cinder path and doing stunts with the weights and jumps.

With a strong array of valuable material at hand, both seasoned and in embryo, the prospects for a winning varsity team are the brightest in years, and the more optimistic of the local supporters are looking forward to the humbling of Stanford and Berkeley by the U.S.C. team alone.

The recent rains have, if anything, improved the condition of the track, and Coach Holmes is planning new banking and other improvements.

Aside from the estimate gained from performances in daily practice, no true measure can be obtained of the real worth of the men until after the inter-class meet next Thursday. It should be said, however, that in no event are the Methodists weak or lacking in representation.

IN THE SPRINTS.

In the 100, 220 and 440-yard dashes, Coach Holmes is pinning his hopes in the ever-successful Parsons to pull the fifteen points. The 220-yard dash is expected to be the most interesting event on the card for the coming U.S. C.-Occidental match, and the knowing ones freely predict a close race. [illegible] is not likely to enter the class owing to his present poor condition. Cooper, who will captain the track squad this year, and Cree, both experienced men and point winners of last year, will be in the short sprints this season and have excellent chances of shading the 10-second mark.

Widely different in form, these boys represent the two radical types of sprinting. Cooper is an advanced example of the large stride, and is perhaps the prettier performer. Cree is especially effective in the 100-yard dash. But a mediocre man at several years ago, his work has improved steadily under Harvey Holmes's tutorage and fruitful results are expected this season.

[illegible] a sprinter of the Archie Hahn type, is speedy and quick and a follower of the short stride finish recently illustrated by Rice of Chicago. With good starting and close attention to form, the U.S.C. boys are confident that this trio of sprinters will clear away all the obstacles in the sprints, barring Bird of Occidental, who is second only to Parsons. A comparisons of their work last year, both in the [illegible] and at home, places them close together.

AN OPEN QUESTION.

The middle distance probably will remain the only unsolved question. A number of promising men have responded to the call and are faithfully training for the meet to come. Lenox, the phenomenal 220-yard and relay man who came into prominence for the first time last year, probably will be shifted to the 440-yard run, where his staying powers and wind will make him a hard man to beat.

[illegible] of the Law School, the genial utility man who captained the team last year, will likely be back in school this year before the season is far advanced. Although not a star performer in the distance runs, he can be depended upon to pull the team out of an unforeseen rut. The longer distances seem to be the more popular this year, more men going in for them than has been the case in previous seasons, and much enthusiasm is manifested.

[illegible] has never produced a performer of even passing ability in the [illegible] event, and if stamina holds [illegible] three men should make [illegible] enough 440-yard men to turn out, it is probable that Nordahl will be shifted to the mile run. Possessing a marvelous stride, Nordahl is an ideal relay man, lacking only in a final sprint, but his good points may offset this fault in the mile and bring him into the front rank.

Fred Garbutt, a youngster fresh from grammar school, is well spoken of and has the making of a winning distance man. He has a long, easy stride which is practically faultless, and eats up ground without apparent exertion. He is a typical miler in build and lacks only in age and experience.

Eugene Estoppey, the new distance man from Boston, has all the marks of a winner, and will show a clean pair of heels to the long distance men, particularly in the two-mile grind. Schoeller, Snyder and Klitten complete the list of eligible distance men who have the stamina to enter the lists. Klitten was unable to come up to expectations, two years ago, on account of sickness. His last race was with Roth, running the Occidental man a close nip-and-tuck race. With a nerve-killing unfaltering stride, he has everything in his favor for a good consistent showing.

IN OTHER EVENTS.

The broad jump events will fall back upon Richardson, who is good for 21 feet under any conditions. Outside of Richardson, no jump of more than 19 feet has been registered. The stick race looks like a cinch to the U.S.C. aggregation, especially the shorter one. With Youngs in the field, it is extremely doubtful if any competitor will distance him. Elliott is the equal of all southern men in the high hurdles and superior to any on a curved track.

With the agreeable prospects in the run, it is still plainly evident that the all-important events on the programme are the high jump, shot put, pole vault and hammer throw. In the first of these, U.S.C. is good for a number of points except against Pomona, which has undisputed claim to the first five points. The 16-pound shot put goes down in the dope book for a clean sweep.

With two men bettering 40 feet in practice, and four good for 36, the prospects are decidedly brilliant. Richardson and Custin are raising the 41-foot mark with encouraging repetition, and Comstock, who has put the weight 39 feet, is coming around in good shape and expects to better his mark of last year.

The pole vault will attract a large amount of attention from the grandstand from the number of men entered and their excellent records. Comstock has the enviable record of 11 feet in the pole vault and Richardson has made three inches better. Three other aspirants have a mark of 10 ft. 6 in.

Richardson, the Santa Paula youngster, shattered all existing records last week by tossing the weight 142 feet, 2 inches in practice. With a throw equaling this mark, he is assured of a first place in any California track meet. His weight and height enable him to throw the heavier missile with almost the same proficiency which marked his succes in the 12-pound shot last year.

Burek, the crack full back, will enter training after the holidays and should make a good showing if he does not step outside the ring, as is his habit. Taylor is another one who is doing good practice in hurling the hammer.

THE CLASS MEET.

The inter-class meet for next Thursday has caused class spirit to run high. The third academy team looks like a winner, as it possesses such men as Richardson, Klitter, Lenox, Shute and others. The Freshmen have second place picked out with the juniors running third. The meet should be interesting, as it will furnish an inventory of the track material.

Cross-country running will be started immediately after the holidays to lay the foundation for the distance runs.

It is the intention of the coach and the faculty to make this season a red letter one, and it is the fond hope of all at the institution to complete the athletic year without a single marring defeat in the remaining spoils of track, basketball, tennis, and baseball.

MANY SPORTS VISIT ASCOT.

LARGE CROWD WITNESSES VERY GOOD RACING.

Main Event at Seven Furlongs Is Taken by Varieties at Long Price. Favorites Capture Three of the Six Races—Airs, Winner of the Second, Shows He Has Class.

Three winning favorites divided the honors with the good things in the Ascot Park races yesterday and a big crowd of sports turned out to see the races. Seventeen ring books laid against the nags, in addition to three field books and a combination and there was rushing business all afternoon. The feature race was the fourth on the card, the Santa Catalina Stakes, and brought out a field of seventeen starters and the winner turned up in J. Curl's Varieties at the long price of 12 to 1, the 5-to-1 Pantoufe second and the 15-to-1 Entre Nous third. The favorite, Supreme Court, was a close sixth, after getting away poorly. Entre Nous was probably the best nag in the race, but got away next to last and couldn't get up in time. Lydia Wrouseman at 60 to 1 furnished a surprise by running second in the first race.

Results:

Seven furlongs: Search Me, 110 (Booker,) 3 to 1, won; Lydia Wrouseman, 112 (Callahan,) 60 to 1, second; Young Davis, 107 (Harris,) 4 to 1, third; time 1:28½. Mortlake, Prince Ching, Mountebank, Prince Frederick, Merlingo, Respirator, Phyz and Bauble also ran.

Five furlongs: Airs, 107 (Preston,) 7 to 10, won; Dulcinea, 107 (Grand,) 15 to 1, second; Commida, 107 (Boland,) 7 to 2, third; time 1:01. Slancer, Lady Kitty, Athenia, Mirabel, Star of Runrymede, Chico, Maxim Gorky and Sixful also ran.

Mile and seventy yards: Reservation, 104 (Singleton,) 5 to 1, won; Oratorian, 103 (Fischer,) 3 to 1, second; Atkins, 102 (Finn,) 8 to 5, third; time 1:45½. Uncle Henry, Los Angeleño, Golden Light, Bushwhacker and Pink Garter also ran.

Santa Catalina Selling Stakes, seven furlongs: Varieties, 99 (Gargan,) 12 to 1, won; Pantoufle, 115 (Booker,) 5 to 1, second; Entre Nous, 99 (Carroll,) 15 to 1, third; time 1:27½. Ed Ball, Don Domo, Supreme Court, Arimo, Judge Treen, Bryan, Jersey Lady, Right and True, Critic, Toupee, Lilie B., Sly Ben, The Irishman and Atlantico also ran. Revolt scratched.

Futurity course: St. Or, 108 (Kunz,) 4 to 5, won; Remember, 99 (Riley,) 12 to 1, second; Livius, 101 (Hudlin,) 6 to 1, third; time 1:12. Budapest, Premium Rose and Hipoteca also ran.

Mile and fifty yards: Cotillion, 109 (Booker,) even, won; Netting, 109 (Singleton,) 5 to 1, second; Freesias, 109 (Boland,) 8 to 1, third; time 1:47. Moor, Invictus, J. V. Kirby, Viona, Baldo, McGrathiana Prince, Lucrece, Gentle Harry and Tizona also ran.

Peerless

Certainly did draw a crowd to our store Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

We Were Pleased—So Were They

Why have owners of Peerless Cars since 1902 continued to buy Peerless Cars whenever they purchased new models?

Must Be a Good Reason

Twenty-Two 1906 Peerless

Cars were sold in Los Angeles, this past year—and you didn't hear much of a HOORAH! about it either—even tho' that was a good many more than was sold by the other TWO cars in its class.

THIS COMING YEAR
We Will Sell 25 of Them
We Can't Get Any More

But we take BETTER CARE of those twenty-five cars than other dealer will do—and WE HAVE THE Car and the PLACE to do it with.

FIND SPRIGS VERY SCARCE.

Unusual Conditions Noticed Last Wednesday.

How an East Wind Upset the Best Calculations.

Dogs on a Duck Marsh and Use of Pump Guns.

For the first time this season, duck hunters last Wednesday found sprigs a scarce bird on local marshes. unusually well represented, thus far, hardly a day has been recorded but the better shots on a dozen different clubs returned with a preponderance of big ducks in their bags, if they chose to pick their game rather than bowl over all the teal and spoonies that came along. Last Wednesday the big duck hunters were at a discount, and those who waited for pintails waited in vain, for they might as well have lain in ambush for canvasbacks.

Spoonbills, and green and cinnamon teal formed the bulk of the bag on all the southern preserves. Aided by the late waning moon, the big birds all struck out for the ocean at the first fire with their crops full of grain and water. There they sat in solemn bliss, congregated in rafts many acres in extent, and apparently sound asleep, waiting for the pangs of hunger and thirst to send them inland long after the gunners had quit in disgust.

Even the widgeon stood pat. Gadwell, generally a marsh duck, and fond of traveling with the spoonbills, were common at previous shoots, but they, too, remained out at sea.

Limits, needless to relate, were scarce. Twenty-fives were good bags everywhere. Many cinnamon teal helped somewhat to fill in the gaping chinks between the flights that didn't fly, but sky-scraping at high spoonies and an occasional "rampse" at a packed band of teal up in the clouds in hope of landing a single one afforded the only excitement. More long shooting was done than on any previous day of the season.

The conditions that govern duck shooting and tend to lend it its great charm of uncertainty were splendidly illustrated a week ago yesterday when the moon was at its full, shining brightly until just before daybreak. The extenuating circumstances in the present case were high easterly gales. The wind came up before daylight and by shooting time had increased into a northeaster of no mean proportions. It was blowing thirty miles an hour, and the ducks had enough of the ocean at the first trip. The waves were running high and the tumbling whitecaps soon sent the big birds back in great bands, slowly but steadily battling their way inland against the storm in serried ranks, flying much lower than usual. Only too glad of any haven in a gale, they pitched on the first ponds they saw and only moved on when forced to do so. Over the blinds in singles and droves they sped, breaking at the shot and whirling down wind only to reform and beat their bewildered way back against it, and often over the same path again. Small wonder that all the men who had westerly blinds carried home the limit, or at least recollection of chances to get it.

MANY BIG BAGS.

In the Chico country, all the clubs of any consequence had limit shooting. The Blue Wing members did not come down the night before as is their custom, but left on the 7 o'clock car in the morning, and even then going home with their limit, which is thirty-five. On the Christopher, Godfrey Fritz and two other guns killed the limit with ease, Fritz picking mainly big birds and passing up the smaller trash fowl. The shoot was one of the best ever. On the Chico, five limits were reported. Gen. Last killed the limit on the Green Wing with his sixteen, and could have had as many more. Joe Singer, a guest at the Green Wing, piled up thirty-six. Gus Winstel and Harry Hyatt, who shot there Wednesday, had fair sport, also, twenty-five being high.

On the Canvasback Club, Saturday last, six guns were out, four having limit shooting, and using sixteen-gauge guns. Big ducks predominated, an unusual number of gadwell being killed. Last Wednesday five shooters were out, and twenty-five proved high, Harry Snowden, a guest, killing one of the fine birds after which the club has been named.

The Westminster Club is getting in better shape every day, now, and of late has been enjoying some good shooting as is its neighbor the Golden West. Even the little Center Club, and the Sunset Club to the north have been reaping a very respectable harvest of ducks.

The Bay City Club, which was organized this year is getting a little water in some of its ponds, but has had better sport with plover than with ducks, thus far. Plover are very fond of following sheep and find the hills around the Bay City shack just to their liking.

MORE SNIPE COMING IN.

Snipe have been fairly plentiful on all the marshes for a month, but of late a new flight has come in, and gunners are taking some number nine shot out into the blinds with them in consequence. Nobody will overlook a fat long-bill when he comes flying by, although it takes a good aim to get him. The snipe are sufficiently plentiful to warrant one in tramping about over the marsh after them when the duck shooting is done, and some nice mixed bags have been reported as reward for effort at this sort of sport.

In the Ballona where it is the fashion to shoot Thursdays and Sundays very fair luck was reported last week, particularly by the Recreation Club which had a taste of old times again. Some limits were reported by returning members.

Periodically—aye spasmodically—the Ballona comes to life again and puts forth a good shoot. Windy days, especially, are beneficial. The clubs have the available territory quite well taken up, and they look after it zealously. The Del Rey, Centinela, Recreation and Santa Monica are all getting some good shooting since the widgeon came in.

The clubs between the city and Long Beach have been holding up very well, big birds in plenty being shot every week on the Cerritos and Green Wing. These institutions are bothered considerably by poachers, who seldom succeed in killing anything, but sometimes prevent the clubmen from doing so either—a form of dog-in-the-manger business that buys nothing for anybody.

PLACES FOR OUTSIDE HUNTERS.

Such of these unattached gentry as have a desire to kill a few ducks without tramping upon an inclosed and posted preserve can find something to their liking around the headwaters of any of the bays that indent the south coast. To those who feel willing to take a week's trip, many good openings present themselves. Up the coast by Hueneme there is some excellent open shooting, to be reached by boat from Santa Monica or Redondo, or even San Pedro; or better still, if one's stomach is hung on a hair trigger, by train to Oxnard. Some sportsmen of the beet sugar metropolis have a club there, but do not control all the land. This is one of the best places in the State for duck shooting, back of Point Magu being a big fresh slough, where the fowl delight to congregate between raids on the barley and bean fields of Ventura county.

Inland, the Buena Vista country of Kern county, the Tulare overflow, the Delano artesian country, all beckon to the hunter. Southeast of this city lies Elsinore, where all kinds of shooting is on tap. North is Elizabeth Lake, where big bags of mallards and canvasbacks and redheads are made.

The claim that there is no longer any open duck shooting in Southern California is thus disproved without reference to the Imperial-Brawley country.

Close to town there is little open shooting, for the reason that there could not be. The army of inexperienced gunners that sallies forth each Sunday would chase away every duck that might happen to settle upon any unoccupied pond. Yet he who is willing to travel thirty miles or so can reach fair sport, provided always he knows how to hunt the fowl and can kill them when in range. For the bay shooting game, a duck boat and a retriever dog are almost necessary, as well as several dozen decoys. There are many places where one can enjoy excellent sport of a windy day.

DOGS ON A DUCK MARSH.

The argument that in most cases a dog on a club duck marsh does more harm than good by chasing all the birds out of the country and keeping incomers from coming down, does not apply to a good dog. The difficulty is that every man thinks his dog is the best dog in the country. It is harder to break a dog to become a perfect retriever than to teach him any other branch of his work in helping the gun, and the really good ones may be counted on one's fingers. That a evry small percentage of a total of thousands of dogs, And many of the good ones, strange to say, happen to be dogs of no breeding whatever—little better than curs—catch crosses. One which did excellent service in recent years was half Chesapeake Bay and half spaniel; another was a mixture between a setter and a curly-coated English retriever—an excellent dog, seldom seen in this country.

The club duck hunter does not want a big dog—any such throws too much water. In fact, the average hunter figures he loses more shots in fussing with a dog than he saves ducks, and prefers to let the keeper bring out the animals when he comes to pick-up. Yet all the argument falls flat when a really first-class dog—such a one as John Hauerwass's "Nig" is concerned. This is a little black fellow, mostly cocker, but a long ways apparently from the standard of that breed. He is trained to order, does not break shot, gets a duck as quickly as possible and is back again out of the way. Such dogs are a real help, for when the hunter drops a duck he can count the bird almost as surely as if it were on his string.

But the ordinary canine, barking, yipping and yelling every time he sees a duck, dashing frantically after everybody's birds and carrying a bucket of water into the blind every time he returns—and such dogs never were known to shake themselves until they had approached you as closely as possible—are almost worse than none. A good dog may be judged by the businesslike efficiency with which he performs his work. Such know when a bird is hit as well as their masters, and watch every duck with shining eyes. When it comes down, they make no frenzied bolts for liberty, but await orders, and then get the birds at once without any unnecessary ranging about the entire pond.

PUMP GUNS TABOOED.

Many hunters are objecting to the use of pump guns, which militate against the sport of everybody by the great number of shots they put at the command of the gunner, and the greater bombardment that then ensues. There is no law against a man shooting a pump gun if he cannot afford a good double-barrel. In but few instances they use pump guns through hoggishness. If they do, then the double-barrel ejector is the gun for them, for it is the more deadly of the two. Pumps will stick at times, while the average man can shoot a double-barrel more accurately than a pump.

Nearly all clubs have legislated against pump guns. In most cases it is an unnecessar ylaw. None who is familiar with a double gun turns from his ejector back to the pump. Automatic magazine guns, of course, are excluded from the argument, for no sportsman will have one.

Many are advising the use of the sixteen bore. Some claim it to be the gun of the day, as it is no longer a freak, but recognized as standard, and ammunition in any desired combination or quality can regularly be had for it, even at materially reduced cost. Some are even shooting twenty bores this winter, and doing good work with them, apparently, too. Those who use them say that none who have ever tasted the pleasures of cutting out their birds clean with a sixteen, as against the slobber-shooting of a heavier piece, will ever change back again.

TO TALK OVER FISHING LAWS.

CHANGES IN GAME LEGISLATION NOW IN PROSPECT.

Rod and Reel Club Soon to Meet to Talk Over Protection of Fish and Other Subjects—Menaces in Proposed Districting of State, With Chance of Opening Seasons.

Another meeting of the Southern California Rod and Reel Club will be held a week from tomorrow night to hear reports of delegates returning from the State Game and Fish Protective Association's meeting, and to discuss legislation calculated to conserve the remnant of surf fish, croakers, yellowfins and similar shore-frequenting fishes of the same family, which have been growing scarcer for several years past.

It is reported a most favorable sentiment exists up North, and there is believed to be no difficulty whatever about passing a reasonable protective measure, and nothing unreasonable has ever been desired at this end of the State. Some regulation of the size mesh of nets used has been found a very successful measure in the vicinity of San Francisco, and in all probability something of the same sort can be made operative in Southern California.

The matter of districting the State, for which an amendment was passed at the next to the last State election, has complicated the game laws somewhat, owing to the failure of the Legislature to fix these districts after they had been decided upon, but the consensus of opinion favors making three districts, to consist of what is generally known as Southern California, possibly including Kern county; Northern California, and the central sections of the State, following in general the lines of altitude, for it is that, rather than latitude, that affects game conditions in California.

More or less bickering is to be expected from this districting job, and it is certain to present a number of disadvantages, but many adherents of game protection feel that the end desired cannot be come at successfully in any other way. Just what variance there will be in the seasons cannot be determined, but it is feared each district will want to make laws to suit itself, which might result in a practically open season of seven months on ducks. Up North the hunters want to shoot ducks all through March, and many would like to be able to hammer them in the spring, while down here many have maintained that the duck season should open not later than the middle of September—a theory that cannot appeal very much to the experienced duck hunter, who realizes that the first month of the present season involves shooting at the same birds, which have been reared hereabouts. As these fowl become pretty well educated in a couple of weeks, it is not reasonable to look for much shooting between the time the ducks take their degree and the first big flight in from the North. So it is hard to figure any practical relief for the hunters by such a change, while it would be a distinct step backward, and a blow to game protection, which always tends to limit sport, rather than throw it wide open.

A majority of local duck hunters are well satisfied with things as they are. Some think that the two weeks left in February might be opened to give some cinnamon teal shooting, but this winter the cinnamon birds have remained on hand unusually long, doubtless on account of the number of clubs which kept their ponds awash all through the summer.

At the coming meeting of the Southern California Rod and Reel Club, among other things, plans will be formulated for the coming fishing tournament, which it is proposed to hold in the spring. Work upon this has gone ahead slowly during the winter months, but it is proposed to hold sessions from time to time during the winter, and make arrangements for competition that will cover all classes of sport followed by local marine anglers, instead of confining the competition to trolling exclusively, as has been the custom in the past. Surf fish, yellowfins, croakers, will certainly be included.

AIR-PILOTING FOR GLIDDEN.

BALLOONING TAKES HOLD ON WINDY CITY.

Effort Being Made to Bring Next Aero Gordon Bennett to Chicago. Percy Pierce and Glidden Outline Plans for Coming Glidden Tour. Auto Gossip of Middle West.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Among prominent Chicago motorists there is much talk of making concerted effort to bring the next Gordon Bennett aerial race to the West. It is believed that a locality admirably adapted for the event could be found not far from Chicago. No positive or official action has been taken as yet, however, and in general Chicagoans appear to be content that easterners should take the initiative in the development of the air craft. John Farson, president of the American Automobile Association, who would naturally be regarded as one of the most likely Chicagoans to adopt the new craze, has declared himself a convert to the new methods of navigation, but in theory only. He is not yet ready to take up ballooning personally.

Charles J. Glidden, the indefatigable globe-motorist, before he left Chicago Thursday, for the City of Mexico, whither he will travel in his steel-flanged Napier, over the rails of the Rock Island, International and Great Northern, and National of Mexico, announced his determination of taking up ballooning. "My itinerary is complete for several months in advance, and cannot be altered," he said, "but as soon as a brief respite is afforded me, I shall sail for France and engage in ballooning." Mrs. Glidden openly accused her husband of being in jest, but the latter was emphatic in his protestations of his sincerity.

In conversation with President Farson of the A.A.A. and Secretary Gorham of the same body, Mr. Glidden outlined his plans and desires for the next Glidden tour. He made it clear that he preferred some plan by which a pleasure tour preceded the contest proper. The views of Percy Pierce, present holder of the Glidden trophy, who was in Chicago a few days earlier, were also made known to him. He approved regulations designed to limit repairs to such repairs as a tourist—not a skilled mechanic—could make, and penalize all other difficulties. Mr. Pierce found much that was commendable in the Herkomer tour rules, in spite of his protests against some of the details connected with the final award.

Fred E. Dayton, Chicago manager of the Electric Vehicle Company, has compiled a handsome souvenir of the record-breaking San Francisco-Los Angeles run made by Fernando Nelson in a Columbia. The booklet will be issued in a limited edition, profusely illustrated and containing reproductions of numerous newspaper accounts of the run, which broke all previously existing records by several hours. The fact will be emphasized that the car was privately owned.

Residents of Newcastle, Ind., are awaiting with bated breath the verdict of the Maxwell-Briscoe Company. President Briscoe and Vice-President Maxwell have visited the city and pronounced it an admirable site for the large plant which the Maxwell proposes erecting. It remains for the board of directors to ratify the recommendation which it is believed that the officials will make that the Newcastle location be picked. Newcastle is a small town, and the establishment of a plant employing 2500 to 3500 men, as it is proposed the new Maxwell factory shall do, would give a tremendous impetus to the development of the place.

M. J. Budlong, president of the Electric Vehicle Company, who visited Chicago last week, announced that the demand for electric vehicles for winter use is in excess of the estimate originally made by his company. The demand for electric broughams, especially, he said has been so great that it has somewhat delayed the marketing of the Columbia electric Victorian phaeton.

CARD AT OAKLAND.

LONG SHOT WAS FEATURE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—The feature of the Emeryville card today was the Crocker Selling Stakes, with $2000 added. The winner was Don Hamilton, neglected in the betting at 8 to 1. The Don easily led the procession until near the finish, when Mary F. gave him a brush. Corrigan, with W. Miller up, took show money.

Results:

Seven furlongs: Fred Bent, 104 (A. Brown,) 7 to 2, won; Comilfo, 104 (W. Miller,) 6 to 5, second; Governor Davis, 101 (Brussell,) 16 to 1, third; time 1:36 3-5. Michael, Banposal, Talamund, Rolla, Rosearo also ran.

Five furlongs: Mansard, 102 (W. Miller,) 7 to 10, won; Billy Mayham, 107 (A. Brown,) 10 to 1, second; Aaron J., 108 (Robinson,) 5 to 1, third; time 1:01. Judge, Tim Hurst, Sid Silver, Achilles also ran.

Five and a half furlongs: Ethel Day, 108 (Robinson,) 11 to 10, won; E. M. Brattain, 115 (L. Williams,) 5 to 2, second; Dutiful, 92 (Sandy,) 13 to 1, third; time 1:08 2-5. Prince, Jack Richelieu, Paddy Lynch also ran.

One mile: Don Hamilton, 106 (Williams,) 8 to 1, won; Mary F., 95 (Brussell,) 5 to 2, second; Corrigan, 106 (W. Miller,) 5 to 1, third; time 1:40 3-5. Princess Titania, Logistilla, I'm Joe, Joe Coyne also ran.

Mile and fifty yards: Jackfull, 104 (Sullivan,) 2 to 1, won; Dolinda, 99 (Hunter,) 8 to5, second; Inflammable, 104 (Graham,) 10 to 1, third; time 1:45 1-5. Dewey, Darthula, Anvil also ran.

Six and a haf furlongs: Tony Faust, 112 (Dugan,) 3 to 2, won; Native Son, 113 (Williams,) 7 to 5, second; Huerfano, 101 (W. Miller,) 30 to 1, third; time 1:21 2-5. Woolma, Gromobol, Kogo, Burning Bush also ran.

MAKES SLOW TIME.

RIVERSIDE TRACK HEAVY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A heavy track prevented sensational bursts of speed at the race meet of the Riverside Driving Club this afternoon, but some good sport was furnished. The Binder cup, offered for the best time in the three-minute class, was won by Axel Nelson's McO. D. The two heats were made in 2:46 and 2:38.

The best time in the first event, the 2:40 mixed race, was made by Adalantha, owned by G. W. Prescott. The last two heats and the race were won in 2:46 and 2:42. In the 2:30 class, W. A. Hayt's speedy little Lauretta won in two straight heats; time 2:30 and 2:28. The winner of the road race was Alex Wilson's Pelee; time 2:58 and 2:52.

BAD FOR JOCKS.

Seven Riders Killed During the Past Twelve Months, as Compared With Nine Year Before.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sixteen jockeys have been killed in the last two years. Some of them were victims of accidents outside the race tracks, but most of the little fellows met death while sporting silk.

The latest fatality in the ranks of the riders occurred when fate marked Levine Sewell, one of America's most famous riders, for a cruel end. He was killed while riding a 100-to-1 shot at Aqueduct. Besides Sewell, George Shilling was thrown and received injuries from which he died the same night, at City Park, New Orleans, April 5 last. On September 21, at Gravesend, Bertrand Freisson, a popular young eastern rider, was killed while riding a horse named Joe Levy. Gus Faust, a steeplechase jockey, died on August 7 from injuries received some weeks previous, while riding in a steeplechase at Coney Island.

Last March at Bessemer, Jimmy Cocolo died, after lingering some months from injuries received at the race meeting at Memphis. While trying to prevent his horse from jumping on a young man who was crossing the track at Portsmouth, O., during the fair races in that city, Johnny McCune was thrown in the fence and killed. The other rider who joined the silent majority this year through an accident, was Tony Massett, who was killed in a race ran October 29, near Jamaica track. Nine jockeys were killed in 1905, while the year previous only three met death on the turf.

BRUSHES WITH THIEVES.

Thieves stole some clothing and a pair of silver mounted military hair brushes from the room of William R. Grundon at No. 804½ South Spring street Friday night, and the matter was yesterday reported to the police.

The French naval division commanded by Admiral Touchard has arrived at Tangier. A Moorish warship with government troops is expected December 11.

MURPHY READY WITH THE CASH.

Says He'll Pay Twenty-five Thousand for Good Men.

Leaves Early for New York to Buy Players.

Not Content to Stand Pat With Champions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The local National League club is willing to pay $25,000 in addition to throwing in several players, if necessary, to complete a deal to strengthen the champion Cubs next year, provided the right kind of players can be secured. Such an expenditure would set the high-price record for baseball players.

President Murphy of the local club left today for New York to attend the annual meeting of the National League. He started early in order to meet any other magnates that may be on the ground for the purpose of talking trades or in any other way promoting the interests of the game. At the meeting of the league last year President Murphy made one of the best trades that have ever been pulled off in the history of the game by being early on the ground and watching for opportunity.

"Yes, I may make the biggest deal ever pulled off in baseball," said President Murphy, just before he boarded a train for New York, "but if I do, it will be several days before it can be finally consummated. Manager Chance and myself have decided that additional strength will be added to the Chicago National League champions whenever it is possible to do so. We do not inetnd to follow the example of McGraw and Collins, who had world champions and stood pat. We have the record-breakers of the world, but if I could land a couple of players and should not be able to get them by exchanging players of nearly equal strength, together with a bonus, I would give $25,000 for them. We are not afraid to spend money for star men, because it comes back through the turnstile."

SCHEDULE ARRANGED.

FIRST BASEBALL IN MARCH.

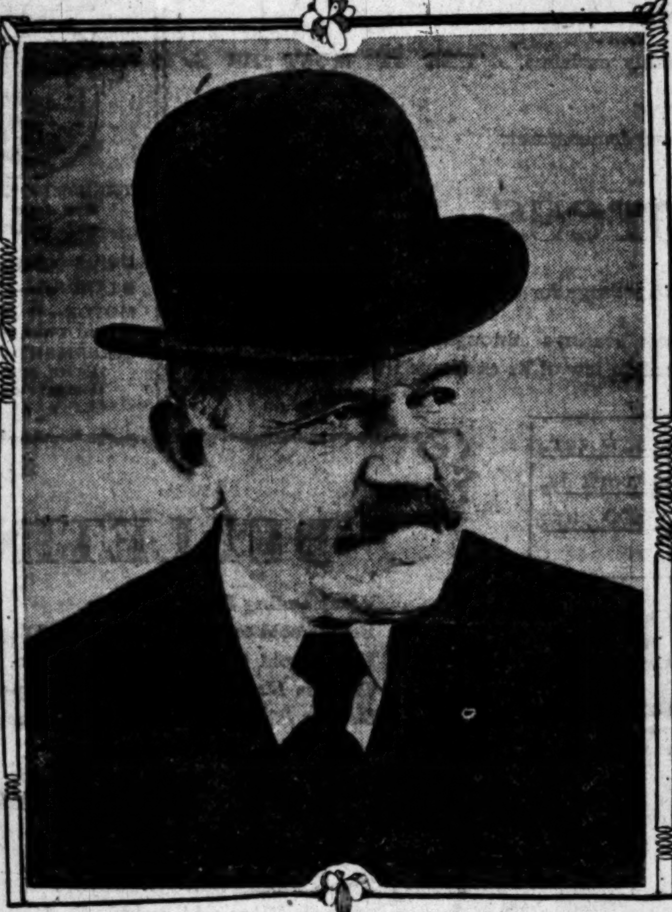
The directors of the Pacific Coast League held a meeting yesterday but did little besides agree upon the draft of a schedule for next season, which will be announced later. Some of the visiting directors left for home yesterday, and the others will remain for several days to clean up what routine business may develop.

It is understood that the schedule will provide for thirty weeks of ball, the same as last year, and the season will begin March 30, and end October 27, one week on each end earlier than the past season. Los Angeles will open here with Oakland and close the season with Seattle. If there are seventeen weeks of ball, according to the new schedule, this will be one less than the past season, which had eighteen weeks here. President Bert thinks the coming season will be a great one in every way and there is apparently no reason why it should not be. It is said that several of the clubs will have new parks, but Los Angeles will doubtless remain at the Chutes, as an understanding has been reached with the people that control that place.

CASEY WON'T GO TO BOSTON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There will be no "Casey at the bat" sung by the Boston American team, if the Fresno baseball player stands by his present determination. Casey, who played last year with Fresno, was invited by President John I. Taylor of the Bostonians, to become a member of his family of base chasers, but Casey has demurred. A message has come to the frozen East from the sunny West, "No tail-ender for mine," says Casey, and though negotiations are still pending, the Fresnoan's prejudice against playing with last year's tail-enders will keep him away from Boston.



Umpire Jack Sheridan, who will officiate in today's game.

MIDWINTER LEAGUE.

Baseball Games Scheduled for Today in Out-of-Town Points—No Contests Here.

No games will be played by teams of the Southern California Midwinter League in Los Angeles today. This is partly due to the factt hat Chutes Park is taken up with a championship game between Stockton and San José of the State League.

Games are scheduled at other points, however. The Los Angeles Pacifics meet the Olives. The Los Angeles Morans will clash with the San Diego bunch on the latter's diamond. The Hambrugers are to engage the Meyers on the Pasadena diamond. The Hoegees will play in San Bernardino. The Tufts-Lyons will lock horns with the Santa Barbaras.

No action has yet been taken regarding the admission into the league of the Los Angeles Uacifics, the meeting, which was to have been held last Mondaly, having been postponed because of the election excitement. It is expected to be cleared up within a few days.

Unfortunately for the Pacifics, they have lost their best pitcher, Harkness, he having become afflicted with the "gold fever," and has gone to Rhyolite, Nev. Manager Hammond is planning to pitch Jessen in his place in today's game with the Olives. The other men will have their usual places.

Following will be the line-up at San Bernardino.

Hoegees.		San Bernardinos.
Snodgrass	Catcher	Myers
Gamble	Pitcher	Garvin
Thompson	Pitcher	Hitt
Wilkinson	First Base	McCarty
Adams	Second Base	Shells
McCann	Third Base	Waters
Lamar	Shortstop	Warner
Moriarity	Right Field	Priddy
Cunningham	Center Field	Cox
Goodman	Left Field	Johnson

MANAGER BLEE RESIGNS.

Raymond Crane Will Handle Business of Occidental Athletics—Carver Hit With Shot.

Robert Blee, the student general manager of athletics at Occidental has resigned his position, and Raymond Crane, '08, has been elected to fill the vacancy.

In previous years there has been a manager for each branch of athletics, but at the beginning of this term the office of general manager was established, and the other positions abolished. The present system has been very successful, as the general manager is remunerated for his work, and is expected to manage things in a business-like manner.

Blee was forced to resign on account of being unable to perform the duties of the office and keep up in college work, and the office may have to be filled by two students before the end of the year.

Track Capt. Bird is planning cross country runs for track candidates, and the outlook for a successful season grow brighter as the men don track togs. Carver, who was expected to make good in the mile, this year, was hit in the back with the twelve-pound shot, Friday, while practicing on the field, and may not be able to run this year. However, there is a number of good men for the distances, and his loss would not be keenly felt.

Meets have already been arranged with U.S.C. and Pomona, and St. Vincent's and Los Angeles High School will also be challenged. The Presbyterians and Methodists will meet February 22, and Pomona will meet Occidental at Claremont, March 9.

BASEBALL A BUSINESS.

Enormous Sums Expended Each Year by Major League Clubs for Grounds and Players.

The last season has been a notable one in baseball. Values have ascended to such a height that only a well-financed concern may pose as a baseball owner is shown by the sale of the Boston Nationals' franchise, George Dovey forking over $275,000, it is reported.

At no time during the history of the great American sport were such princely salaries and such phenomenal prices paid for good players, the deals involving the shifts of "Cy" Seymour, "Spike" Shannon, Jack Taylor, and prices offered for such players as "Young Cy" Young, Tim Jordan and other stars being more numerous and far higher than any recorded in major league baseball, with the exception of isolated cases such as Mike Kelley and a few others.

There was a surprising endeavor on the part of big league managers to corral the best players in the game. Money was no object. The skill of the player was sought to strengthen the team. All along the line, from the majors down to the minors, money was freely used for the procuring of skillful players.

All this enormous outlay of money surely had a meaning. Baseball today is one of the big industries of America. As much money is yearly invested in the pastime and as much revenue is derived from the sport as accrue from some of the important business interests of America.

Just how much money is tied up in baseball at present, how much it takes in and paid out and what the salary lists of the country amount to, it is impossible to say, but the figures run high. Take the big leagues which are at the top of the list. Rough estimates place the average salary list of the clubs at close to $40,000 a year. If this is true, it means that the sixteen clubs in the two leagues spend something like $640,000 a year in paying salaries to players alone. This does not include the money spent for the purchase of players, which will come close to averaging $10,000 alone. That means $160,000.

What it costs to run a park during a game it is hard to say, but gatekeepers and park employés usually run up a good figure, outside of incidentals. In addition to this, there is ground rent to be considered and interest to be made on stands and fixtures. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a low estimate on the amount each club is incorporated at, and, taking everything into consideration, the financial end of the game in either the American or National League cuts into the $1,000,000 mark.

Baseball never experienced a more successful régime, and it is safe to say the following years will witness the golden era of the game. Magnates and public are beginning to cry for pennant winners, and the public's desire for this great honor is goading the baseball owners the country over to greater effort in the way of securing the best talent on the market.

MONTANA BREAKS RECORD.

Last Year's Mineral Production Excels Any in History of State or Territory.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUTTE (Mont.) Dec. 8.—Montana produced in the calendar year of 1905 copper, silver, gold and lead to the value of $70,677,583. These values came from five million tons of ore, and the aggregate production was greater by $10,086,736, than the value of the output of 1904, which was approximately $10,000,000 greater than for the year before.

Last year's production of metals was greater in tonnage than the year before, and greater in value than in any previous year in the history of the State or Territory.

Great as is the increase of the output of 1905 over that of 1904, the increase of the present year over that of 1905, promises to be more marked.

The gold output of 1905 was $206,551 less than that of 1904. The silver output was $1,491,815 less (coinage value) than for 1904. The copper output was $11,754,967 greater, and the lead output $31,635 greater. Assayer E. H. Tatem's report says "The increase in 1905 is equivalent to more than 16 per cent. over the aggregate value of the output for 1904."

PROFESSOR SHELDON,
THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS HOME OFFICE, IN THE WINDHAM, 109½ SOUTH BROADWAY.
READ CAREFULLY.
AN HONEST PROPOSITION.
NO FEE IN ADVANCE.
IT IS JUST AS CHEAP TO SEE THE BEST.
REMEMBER THE NAME—SHELDON.
THE NAME SHELDON
A DOUBLE GUARANTEE.

MAN OF PSYCHIC GIFT POWER IS SHELDON.

The most critical test that one who practices a profession must submit to is the crucial test of time. No business that is ever so slightly tinged with fakirism or doubt can withstand the development of time and the interchange of ideas among those who consult, investigate and pass judgment. Professor Sheldon has been in California eighteen years. He has been consulted by thousands. The best evidence of his wonderful power is the testimony of his large clientele, who come from every walk in life; secondary to this is the true and brilliant work of eighteen years of restless activity and without exciting the hostility or failing to secure the admiration of every person who has consulted him. A man should be judged by his works, and so he is. Prof. Sheldon has been tried. He has met every expectation, every advertised promise, and his reputation is established.

I do hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false, tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away. How to succeed in business, speculation, lawsuits; how to marry the one of your choice; how to regain youth, health and vitality. Removes evil influences, cures drink habit, locates treasures, cures all nervous diseases.

How can I have good luck?
How can I succeed in business?
How can I make my home happy?
How can I conquer my enemies?
How can I marry the one I choose?
How can I marry well?
How soon can I marry?
How can I conquer my rival?
How can I make any one love me?
How soon will my lover propose?
How can I get a letter?
How can I get a good position?
How can I remove bad influences?
How can I control any one?
How make distant ones think of me?
How can I settle my quarrel?
How can I hold my husband's love?
How can I keep my wife's love?
Sheldon never asks questions?

STANDING CHALLENGE.
$5000—FOR HIS EQUAL—$5000.

SHELDON

has been a native of California for the last eighteen years and is legally ordained to one of the oldest spiritualist societies in the world.

My only reason for calling you by name and what you call for—I do this incidentally as a chain to read by.

He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

The following list shows purely and simply that Sheldon has been consulted by the most popular and most noted men and women of the world, and his reading of their lives was pronounced most wonderful—Julia Marlowe, Sarah Bernhardt, Helen Gould, Hon. C. H. Harrison, President McKinley, President Harrison, President Cleveland, Senator Depew, Senator Hanna, Senator Foraker, Senator Spooner.

No man has ever been consulted in more notable affairs than he. In Europe and America he has advised thousands in various walks of life, and always to their advantage.

Sheldon stands alone, possessing a force, a power, a gift—call it what you will—that none can explain, none can account for.

During the last ten months I have brought around through this wonderful power of personal control 721 marriages, 142 separations, without any after trouble, came by the mutual consent of opposing parties; located 16 buried treasures; located 19 wills and 11 deeds; success in gaining 810 pensions; reunited 118 separated; have helped 182 investors; there have been 714 cases of such private nature I do not feel like classifying; in fact, it suffices to only say there is no heart so sad or wish too great that your hopes cannot be speedily realized by the force of this wonderful power.

He can relieve your anxiety, care, embarrassment, can astonish, guide, comfort, cheer and strengthen you.

Make no change in business, do not buy or sell a rooming-house, do not buy mining stock, do not buy a lot, a farm, a ranch, or make a lease, without first seeing Sheldon. He will advise you to your advantage. He asks no questions.

SUCCESS AWAITS YOU.
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT YOUR DOOR WILL YOU ANSWER?

BEWARE

of pretenders and partially developed mediums. They copy his advertisement and in many smaller cities use his name. Please remember, Professor Sheldon can be seen only at his home office, in the Windham, 109½ S. Broadway.

My practice and professional reputation are built upon "honor," reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success for my clients have won for me the largest practice in the State of California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, England, may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon scientific principles, aided by years of earnest study and patient personal investigation. Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are exact, practical and to the point; give past as well as future events, and cannot fail to be of benefit to you. They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for, and lead you to wealth through information as to investments and enterprises, quite unobtainable through other sources.

Changes of business, losses and gains, lawsuits, deaths, marriages, divorces, and, in fact, all that life holds for you, is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(As Mrs. Mason's methods of hand-reading do not require the names of her patrons to be disclosed, they may rest assured of their identity being unknown, and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

KNOW THY FUTURE
BY CONSULTING THE WORLD'S GREATEST CLAIRVOYANT, PALMIST AND SPIRIT MEDIUM.

PROF.
MILBURN

PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS OWN HOME, 659 S. HILL ST., 659, CORNER OF SEVENTH ST.

Forty years a practicing psychic, known from ocean to ocean as the marvel of two hemispheres, press and public recognize Prof. Milburn as the foremost and most able clairvoyant and spirit medium now before the public. Where others fail he succeeds with ease and he positively will NOT accept fee for his readings unless you are perfectly satisfied and receive the information you desire. Marvelous demonstrations of second sight, that must be seen to be believed, so be sure and consult him at once. Elevate thyself! Know thy future. Positively no equal on earth in his profession. By his wonderful powers he will tell your full name, tells what you called for, tells what you want to know. If not correct, free, free. So positive am I of my power to tell the past, present and future that I will make NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, unless you obtain the information you desire and find me superior to all clairvoyants, palmists and mediums in this city.

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Realizing there are many skeptical people in Los Angeles, and that this city has been overrun with pretenders under the guise of clairvoyance, palmistry, etc., and that many of its best citizens would be only too anxious to visit a TRUE clairvoyant medium were they assured of satisfaction, therefore Prof. Milburn will (to convince the public of Los Angeles of his superiority over all clairvoyants) give his full readings to all, for seven days only, at

50C

WHEN CONSULTING A CLAIRVOYANT ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. AS A TEST IN THE READING HE WILL TELL YOUR NAME, AGE, OCCUPATION, WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY.

ASSISTANCE FOR TROUBLED OR UNFORTUNATE—If you are in trouble of any kind, discontented, unhappy, or not satisfied in life, or have domestic, love or business troubles, you will be told how to overcome all trouble. WHEN OTHERS FAIL HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE.

HE GIVES ADVICE ON BUSINESS, speculation, investments, insurance, changes, travels, health, sickness, love, divorce, marriage, lawsuits, separations, wills, deeds, mortgages, patents, claims, collections, mining, etc. He will tell you what trade, speculation, or profession you are adapted for.

LAWSUITS, WILLS, DIVORCES—He can render you assistance and give you advice in a way that will bring success in business transactions, property speculation, investments, mining, etc.

LOVE, COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE—Gives truthful revelations of all love affairs, troubles, marriages, restores lost affections, reunites the separated, settles lovers' quarrels, etc.

Tells how to WIN the man or woman you love, and how to make your husband or wife be true to you, and how to overcome all your enemies.

WHY CONSULT AN INFERIOR MEDIUM WHEN PROF. MILBURN, THE ACKNOWLEDGED LEADER OF THEM ALL, IS HERE AND HIS FEE NO HIGHER THAN THOSE LESS COMPETENT.

His past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guaranty for his future work and have won the good will of the press and public.

READING BY MAIL, ONE DOLLAR.
SEND DATE OF BIRTH.
REMEMBER THE REDUCED PRICES FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

HOURS—10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily and Sunday. Satisfaction garanteed or no pay. All business sacred and confidential. Lady in attendance. Private parlors and office.

SPECIAL READINGS

25C

FOR FOUR DAYS ONLY.
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.

REGULAR FEE, $2, $3 AND $5.
ALL READINGS REDUCED THIS WEEK.

If you contemplate consulting a life-reader, several things should be taken into consideration, ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON-SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

These things, taken under consideration, will place a thinking public in a position to judge for themselves and not be misled, imposed upon or their time thrown away.

WONDERFUL—ASTONISHING—CONVINCING.
ST. ELMO WILL tell you your full name, age, occupation, your mother's maiden name and whom and when you will marry and what you called for, without asking you a question; will tell you the name of your sweetheart, or anything you want to know. He sends you away much wiser and happier than when you called.

IT IS NOT ONLY WHAT CAN BE SAID BY AN ABLE LIFE-READER, BUT WHAT CAN BE DONE, for besides the wonderful gift of second sight, Mr. St. Elmo possesses the secret knowledge of reconstructing unhappy domestic affairs, of making the home happy, of gaining the one you wish in marriage, of making the one you love admire and love you, of overcoming rivals and enemies, gives you the secret power of influencing others (without their knowledge,) into doing your every wish. LEARN THE EAST INDIA METHOD OF FASCINATION.

WANTED—
A practical machinist to take two-fifths interest in iron works, now crowded with orders; the interest is worth nearly double what is asked, besides getting good pay. The present owner is aged and wishes to retire; price $3500; will take good realty.

Partner, lady or gentleman, in old established business in preparation for the toilet; skin foods, massage creams, medicated soaps, hair tonic and other articles on which the profit is enormous.

Incoming partner will be taught the business and take charge of the office and sales; this is a splendid chance to get into a good business; only $900 required; will take part in trade.

Partner in manufacturing company, established several years, doing a special class of work, which pays well; only $275 needed, and a worker to take charge of office work.

Partner, with $250 in electrical contracting business; have contracts for over $1000, partly completed; want a man who knows something about wiring and willing to work, and money can be made.

NOBLE, with Harris & Jones,
9 133 S. Broadway.

WANTED—
If you desire to connect yourself with a nice, clean, highly profitable and thoroughly established manufacturing business, this will prove no disappointment to you.

This prosperous and rapidly growing enterprise is well and favorably known among local building circles, being at once recognized as standing second to none in its line, having extensive business relations with the leading builders of the city and indeed, the city of Los Angeles itself stands among its best customers.

The fact that a controlling interest can be secured for an investment of only $6500 should appeal to any wide awake business man desiring an active interest in a live local manufacturing business of similar proportions.

The proposition, of course, carries with it a good salary, in addition to which your investment will return handsome dividends. The balance of stock is held principally by active members and workers in the concern which virtually insures the institution against labor troubles. Its many thousand dollars' worth of contracts ahead is an immediate guarantee of continued success and prosperity, while its field is practically unlimited.

I. M. HOLLINGSWORTH, 304 Fay Bldg. 9

MY MAGAZINE, "INVESTING FOR PROFIT," (which I'll send free) is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small; who has money invested unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit.

It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money—the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses.

It shows how to invest small sums and how to make them grow into fortunes—the actual possibilities of intelligent investments.

It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how one can make the same profits safely.

It explains HOW stupendous fortunes are made and WHY they are made—how $1000 grows to $22,000.

To introduce my magazine write me NOW, mention this paper and I'll send it SIX MONTHS FREE.

EXCITEMENT WILD IN NEVADA—
Daily fresh fortunes are wrested from mother earth. Tenderfoots and inexperienced men have become millionaires overnight, while a few weeks ago they labored for days wages. You can do this also. The chances are better now than ever before. The early youth of '07 will see more and quicker huge fortunes made than since Comstock days. This is not speculation, the gold is there. We are right where you need us—in San Francisco, where the market for Nevada shares is made. Our fingers are constantly on the pulse of the mining stock situation, and we have accurate knowledge of the good stocks. Write now for our free Market Letter. And when you get our tip to buy or sell, be ready to act.

FOR SALE—THE REASONS WHY YOU should see me at once are:
You want to increase your principal and income. You want to invest your money safely. Your best place to invest is along with those who will take good care of the money. An element of safety is in getting in a good company of strong organization. An element of safety is in something for which there is a constant demand. An element of safety is in a business where credit risks are eliminated. An element of safety is in big profits.
All of this is offered, and a large sum is not needed to become interested. Would be pleased to give detailed information.

A VERY REMARKABLE OPPORTUNITY for a man with $500 to engage in manufacturing a staple building material, the demand for which is increasing every day, everywhere; profit averages 100 per cent.; no risk, no partnership; control of business entirely in your own hands; can be established in any town; presents unusual advantages to a carpenter, stone mason, brick-layer, architect, builder or contractor, although previous experience is absolutely unnecessary, and any one can engage in it; one man in Indiana did a business of $15,000 the first year and doubled it the next year on an original investment of $500, and this is but one of many similar successes. Full particulars and unquestioned references to those who show evidence of being in earnest. Address P.O. BOX 770, South Bend, Ind.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

We have for sale one-half interest in a business on Spring st., doing both wholesale and retail, that is one of the best legitimate business openings in the city. Has a very fine 5 year lease at low rent. Doing a fine business. The price is $2250 and of this the owner will reinvest $1000 in the business. With good partner and the additional capital this business can more than be doubled. Would prefer incoming party to be able to speak both German and English, this however is not absolutely necessary. BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY SPECIALISTS.
If you are looking for a business of any kind why not come and see us. Mr. Weaver of this firm has lived in this city for 21 years and for the last eight years of that time was city salesman for leading wholesalers, and on this account is thoroughly familiar with the condition of trade in every locality, and will give true representation. You can make no mistake if you advise with us before buying any business and it may save you from failure and misfortune. We have many good stores for which we can take part and others for which we can take all property in exchange. Our lists are so large and varied that we can quickly locate you in exactly what you want. All wholesalers as reference.

$450—Dry goods and notions. Good, south. rent $10; one living-room, take good lot in exchange.
$400—Grocery, 9th st., 3 living rooms in rear and 10 rooms above; rent $40; can rent rooms and get your own rent free.
$350—Bakery route, clears $30 week; all day work; includes horse and wagon.
$650—Confectionery and soda, clears $100 monthly; fine location, room large enough to branch out in other lines.
$750—Restaurant, Spring st., good location, lease.
$850—Delicacy, close in, 8th st.
$900—Grocery, very nice little store south; large living-room, rent $25.
$1200—Grocery, south, rent $35, including 5 living-rooms. We recommend this.
$1500—Grocery, sacrifice, must sell quick; will rent store to you for $15; this must be sold Monday or not at all; Ninth st.
$1500—Here is a good one; all cash store trade, $35 daily, rent $33, including living-rooms. See this.
$1600—Grocery, southwest, another good one; rent $20; sales $32 cash daily.
$1700—Grocery, southwest, rent $30, including 6 living-rooms and furniture.
$1750—Confectionery and soda, Pico st. Make our own candy and cream. Cheap rent, long lease, a money maker.
$2500—Grocery, turns entire capital every month; owner owns property and is retiring but will only sell to capable party who can hold trade. It is to his interest to have you make a success and will give you every assistance.
$3000—Grocery, exceptional protected location. Swell district, rent $30; this is a new business, but now doing $40 daily. Property 135x148 to alley, including new 7-room house and store building; can be purchased for $15,000. This is a corner and is the only unrestricted property in the whole tract. A pretty proposition for some one.
$3000—Country store, turns entire capital every month, rent $25. This is one of the best propositions on our books. You can stay in this as long as necessary to convince you that it is as represented.
$3750—General merchandise, country, another good one.
$6500—Grocery, largest and best on Pico st., $6500 a month business; rent $50, 3 years' lease.
$7000—Department store, exceptional opportunity. Sales year ending September 1, $79,080.40. Cleared 8½ per cent. Can be made to do better.

We have hundreds of other good stores on our lists. Prices ranging from $500 to $20,000. Why do they want to sell? Because mankind is never satisfied, and always thinks he can do a little better at something else.

Groceries are a commodity that every one has to have, and the business is easily learned. There are many men who, starting in a small way, have raised themselves to positions of affluence, in this line and in this city.

We also do a general real estate and brokerage business and make a specialty of good investments. Come and get acquainted with us.

HERE'S A RARE OPPORTUNITY.
If you desire to connect yourself with a nice, clean, highly profitable and thoroughly established manufacturing business, this will prove no disappointment to you.
This prosperous and rapidly growing enterprise is well and favorably known among local building circles, being at once recognized as standing second to none in its line, having extensive business relations with the leading builders of the city and indeed, the city of Los Angeles itself stands among its best customers.
The fact that a controlling interest can be secured for an investment of only $6500 should appeal to any wide awake business man desiring an active interest in a live local manufacturing business of similar proportions.
The proposition, of course, carries with it a good salary, in addition to which your investment will return handsome dividends. The balance of stock is held principally by active members and workers in the concern which virtually insures the institution against labor troubles. Its many thousand dollars' worth of contracts ahead is an immediate guarantee of continued success and prosperity, while its field is practically unlimited.

FOR SALE—

OLINDA.

Olinda Land Company stock is the best buy on the market at present prices. It is reported that the company is about to sell 2000 acres of its agricultural land at $60 per acre, reserving over 2000 acres of its oil land clear of any indebtedness. The present income from oil leases and the money which will be realized through the sale of land should permit the company to pay a handsome dividend about the first of the year.

HAVE YOU STOCKS OR BONDS FOR SALE? If so, you want our help. Our methods are not guesswork. They are founded on the safest and surest plans known. We do not allow our clients to waste postage, our plans mean that you send direct to interested parties. We have spent months and money in getting in touch with men all over the East who want to sell stocks. They furnish the names of those they believe they can interest, and they agree to follow up by a personal call any matter sent. Do you know of a more sure plan than this? We have other ways. Stop wasting money and time; call in and let us show you, what we are doing for others we can do for you. Considering our service, you will find our charges low.

FOR SALE—THE REASONS WHY YOU should see me at once are:
You want to increase your principal and income. You want to invest your money safely. Your best place to invest is along with those who will take good care of the money. An element of safety is in getting in a good company of strong organization. An element of safety is in something for which there is a constant demand. An element of safety is in a business where credit risks are eliminated. An element of safety is in big profits.
All of this is offered, and a large sum is not needed to become interested. Would be pleased to give detailed information.

People's Ice & Cold Storage, block 24,000 shares was offered at $35,000

E. Mac Dermott, the president, just received the following telegram as we go to press—
Edward Mac Dermott, 114 S. Broadway,
Los Angeles, aCl.

General Manager Vickers inspected all leases yesterday and wires as follows—

"Mohawk Florence Leasing and Mining Corporation—three shifts cutting station on two fifty level of Florence and preparing to crosscut. Expect sensational values any time. Also we are down seventy-two feet on C.O.D. This lease looking splendid and growing richer every foot. Also making good progress on Jumbo extension and still hoisting sulphide ores.

Mohawk Gold Bar—our February shaft on Goldfield Mining Company nearly all timbered. Hoist delayed by storms but here in a few days. Then look for big results. All Spearhead shaft well under way and cutting values. Ontario strike on Kewana Number three, four hundred feet north, is a bonanza. Truitt on Velvet, four hundred feet south in good shipping ore. Hassel-Warner on Velvet, one hundred feet south in good ore. Refused one hundred thousand dollars for lease.

Malcomb MacDonald, Schwab's partner, says our Spearhead will soon be in ore rich enough to startle Goldfield.

Several of our brokers have their allotments oversubscribed. Close quickly or we cannot guarantee delivery. Mohawk Gold Bar is making the quickest succes of the camp.
R. L. BERNIER.

The public calls at 11 o'clock were crowded this week and the orders have come in faster than they could be filled. Come to them and you will get a square deal.

114 South Broadway.
E. MAC DERMOTT, The Successful Broker. 9

HAVE YOU TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS TO invest in a legitimate mining proposition in the very heart of the famous Goldfield district, where phenomenal strikes are of almost daily occurrence? This proposition bears the unqualified indorsement of two of the best known local mining experts; it is a chance to secure a substantial interest in a group of claims of almost certain fabulous richness. Don't answer this ad unless you mean business, and have the cash available to act at once. See me before 11 o'clock Monday morning. No information will be given except on personal interview. This is the chance of a lifetime.

WE ARE OFFERING YOU AN OPPORtunity to make an investment that should easily bring you $100 for every $10 invested; you certainly will make money on the Gold Bug Johnnie mining stock, at one cent a share. CHAS. M. FRYE, 236 Mason Bldg. 9

COEUR D'ALENE MINING & DEVELOPING COMPANY.

A. J. RICHARDSON.

610-11-12 Chamber of Commerce Bldg.

We handle all Coeur d'Alene Stocks.

I have had 10 years' experience in the Coeur d'Alene District and am anxious to give my clients the benefit of my knowledge, and put them into promising properties that will soon come into dividend payers. We only sell treasury stock of the different companies we represent and money invested with us goes to bringing the properties to paying mines.

The Snowstorm Copper Mining Company of the Coeur d'Alene is the first big Copper producer of the district and has demonstrated it as a great copper belt.

We were fortunate enough to secure the adjoining property to the Snowstorm. We refer to the "Snowstorm Extension Copper Mining Company." We have placed 100,000 shares of treasury stock, giving the company sufficient funds to prosecute development work with all possible speed for one year. We are 100 feet in on the tunnel, and copper stain and mineralization is increasing every foot. We do not think we are saying too much when we state we expect this to be a second Snowstorm and in a much shorter time because we have the benefit of all the experimental work of the Snowstorm, and can develop our property with a great deal less money.

In sixty days this stock will be worth 50c to $1.00.

Heretofore we have confined our efforts principally to properties in the Coeur d'Alene District, but we have made one exception, for the reason that it was too good a chance to let slip. We refer to the

"D. & W. MINING COMPANY"

Its property is located very near home, only taking three days to examine the property and return. This is a copper property in the Whipple Mountain District, forty miles south of Needles, Cal., and 7 miles from the new railroad, "The Arizona-California." We just received a shipment of ore from the "D. & W." of 60 pounds. From assay made by Beaverstock and Staples we received a return of 45 per cent. copper ($198.44) per ton. We have the ore in the office and would be pleased to have you call to see it. The new district in which this property is located is known as "Copperfield."

If you are interested in mining you will make no mistake by seeing us. We have made money for local clients as well as elsewhere and can make it for you. We handle nothing but first-class mining properties, those which we have personally examined or had examined by our expert.

Four Good Investments.

The Searchlight-Parallel Gold Mining Company raised over one hundred tons of high-grade ore during the past month. Very little waste has been coming to the surface. This company will soon be producing gold bullion. Take a look at the last Searchlight map, and you will find the ninety acres belonging to this company are situated right in the heart of the noted Searchlight District. The stock is worth three times the present selling price.

Combination Extension—
The property belonging to this company joins the famous Combination Mine, at Goldfield, Nev. The development work is progressing as fast as men and money can push the work, both night and day. Look out for a big advance on this stock shortly, as the predictions are that it will be a second Mohawk. We have a limited amount of stock at fifty-five cents per share.

Greenwater Red Boy—
The property of this company consists of five claims situated in the wonderful Greenwater District, and adjoins Schwab, Kuntze's and all of the big ones. The work is progressing night and day. We can furnish a little stock at fifty cents. It is worth one dollar today.

Quartette Mining—
This company is located at Searchlight, and has been averaging for the past six years about $50,000 per month in gold bullion. It is considered the third largest free milling gold mine in the United States, if not in the world. A splendid investment at present prices, as we have every reason to believe that the large dividend now being paid will be increased very shortly.

We carry over one hundred different securities.

GREENWATER-ELY CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY.

About 30 days since 400,000 shares of this stock was placed on the market and was oversubscribed 100,000 shares at the close of November. The price is now 3c a share and may be advanced at an early date to 5c owing to the good reports on our property, which comprise the sale of some claims adjoining our property, being only prospects, for $10,000 cash. The development work is going on all around us and we are only a short distance from the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company and the Giroux. We are in the mineralized belt. Our ore lies under the lime and iron capping of the district. We also have several claims in the Greenwater district adjoining the Copper King. These were carefully selected by Mr. Mingus, our president. Mr. Mingus is an old prospector and a good mining man, very energetic, honest and capable and he will give the development of this property his personal attention. It is a rare opportunity to get in with as competent a man as Mr. Mingus. He will go to the properties the coming week and will send us some ore, which will be on exhibition at our office. Remember the price now is 3c and only a very limited number of shares at that. Call early and make your reservations because the price will surely be advanced at an early date.

JOHNNIE-GREENWATER CONSOLIDATED COPPER CO. (INC.)
A month ago a half-million shares of this stock were placed on the market and were OVER-SUBSCRIBED. The price was advanced to 1½ cents a share on December 1.
Mr. B. T. Hickman, the president, on his return from the BLACK HAWK GROUP, recently, brought with him some ore taken from just under the iron capping and only a few feet from the surface, which assayed as follows: Sample No. 1, a general average, $16.28 in copper; sample No. 2, shipping grade, gold, $33.49; copper, $28.16; total, $61.86. There is now at the mines a piece of ore weighing 1600 pounds that is largely copper glance and will go not less than 30 per cent. in copper.
Mr. Hickman has returned to the mines and it is the intention to push development work on this property. We have four other groups, the Elko in the Manhattan district, which has assayed as high as $300 per ton, a group of claims in the Buckskin district, a large body of high-grade ore, and adjoining the Ludwig mine, which is producing $80,000 a month and is reported to have been purchased by Senator Clark. Buckskin is pronounced to be the best of all the new districts.
Then we have four claims in the Greenwater district; also have a group of four claims in the East Wallace River mining district. The Walker River district is now attracting great attention. Mr. Hickman said in less than 30 days the public will be tumbling over themselves to get this stock, for development is bound to show them to be splendid properties. He has a force of miners at work on these claims and it will be increased as developments require. It is his intention to follow the ore body with an incline shaft. In the mean time he is piling up the shipping ore.
Another block of stock is now on the market at 1½ cents, but a limited number of shares will be sold at that price, as the development work at this time warrants a much better price.

FOR SALE—

A SPLENDID COLLECTION OF SLIGHTLY USED AUTOS.
AT WONDERFUL SAVING.

If you buy an auto without visiting us and letting us demonstrate to you our ability to save you money, you make a great mistake. Our collection embraces all sizes and makes and every auto is priced away below value. Note the following bargains, which are but a few taken from our extensive list.

One Gale runabout, practically new. Has been run a little less than three months. Two oil lamps and one gas lamp. A powerful, attractive runabout and a splendid buy for $425.

One Queen, 2-cylinder, with top and full extra equipment. Tires in fine condition. For an immediate sale will sacrifice at $725.

One 1905 Buick, has been repainted and thoroughly overhauled. Looks and runs like a new machine. Has top, full lamp equipment and one extra casing. If you wish an A No. 1 machine at low price secure this at $500.

One 1906 2-cylinder Tourist, with full lamp equipment. Recently overhauled and is practically a new machine. Let us demonstrate to you that this is a snap for $850.

One 4-cylinder 1906 Tourist, has top, Gabriel horn, two gas lamps, three oil lamps and French horn. This car, when new, cost $2750, and has only been run 1500 miles. A really extraordinary buy for $2100.

We also have several 2-cylinder and 4-cylinder touring cars. We know we can please you and solicit your inspection.

MINING—

INVESTORS, TAKE NOTICE.

El Rey Gold Mining Company offers almost an absolute certainty for quick and profitable returns. We placed 2000 shares of stock on sale last Sunday at FIFTY CENTS a share, almost half the allotment has been sold. DO YOU REALIZE that our company is capitalized at only $10,000, divided into 10,000 shares, and therefore ONE SHARE of El Rey Gold Mining Company stock represents the same property value as 100 shares in a company capitalized at $1,000,000? Ponder on that, figure it yourself.

We are running tunnel for bedrock on our 80 acres of rich placer ground; we may strike rich streak at almost any time that will send our stock jumping to $5 or $10 a share; $2,000,000 has already been taken from neighboring claims; we have plenty of water and timber, and our claims can be worked every day in the year. If you desire to invest in something that will be paying dividends certain within a very short time, that will continue to pay them month after month, and that you can depend on, you should surely investigate our proposition; consider this point, that with our company paying a profit of only $500 a month, each dollar you invest now will be earning you 10 per cent. monthly; this isn't hot air, it is cold facts. If you are from Missouri, or Texas, either, we can satisfy you. Remember TEN SHARES in a company capitalized low and paying dividends is better than thousands of shares in companies that die shortly after they were born, and whose officers are hard to locate. Think it over, but don't think to long; EL REY GOLD MINING CO., 429½ E. Ninth st. W. F. Carr, secretary. 9

INVESTORS, ATTENTION!

WANTED—10 MEN WITH $2500 EACH, TO INVEST IN A MINING AND WATER POWER ENTERPRISE THAT IS RIGHT IN LINE WITH THE PRESENT EXCITEMENT IN AND AROUND DEATH VALLEY.

THE BOND OF THE PROPERTY WAS SECURED A YEAR AGO, BEFORE THE REMARKABLE DISCOVERIES THAT HAVE RECENTLY BEEN MADE IN THAT VICINITY, AND THE PROPERTY IS NOW WORTH MANY TIMES MORE THAN THE PURCHASE PRICE.

WE INVITE THE CLOSEST INVESTIGATION OF THIS PROPERTY AND HAVE SPENT ALL WE CAN AFFORD ON DEVELOPMENT, SO MUST INTEREST OUTSIDE CAPITAL AT ONCE OR FORFEIT OUR BOND. ENGINEER'S REPORT AND FULL INFORMATION ON HAND. ADDRESS V, BOX 176, TIMES OFFICE. 9

WE OFFER 100,000 SHARES OF OUR COMPANY stock for 5 cents per share, 1 cent cash, balance in 6 and 12 months. If purchaser cannot meet the deferred payments, stock will be issued to him for the amount already paid. Our mine lies near the Gold Roads, which is taking out $100,000 per month. Ours will pay $3000 per month; the ledges showing values from $25 to $300 per ton. Besides this property we have a lease on seven claims for one year, with a privilege of renewal, on which there are large bodies of ore in sight, which will average from $15 to $50 per ton. We have a 15-ton plant ready to be installed and expect it to be in operation within 40 days. This offer embraces not only a chance to invest in an enterprise that will give immediate and profitable returns for your money invested, but also in a property that will no doubt develop into a very rich mine. For further information call on R. F. KELLAM, 213 Lankershim Bldg. 'Phone Main 5374. 9

HAVE YOU STOCKS OR BONDS FOR SALE? If so, you want our help. Our methods are not guesswork. They are founded on the safest and surest plants known. We do not allow our clients waste postage, our plans mean that you send direct to interested parties. We have spent months and money in getting in touch with men all over the East who want to sell stocks. They furnish the names of those they believe they can interest, and they agree to follow up by a personal call any matter sent. Do you know of a more sure plan than this? We have other ways. Stop wasting money and time; call in and let us show you what we are doing for others we can do for you. Considering our services, you will find our charges low.

Consolidated Gas Company Pays Highest Rate for Standard Oil, Yet Rockefeller Is Director.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Investigation of the books of the Consolidated Gas Company by the corporation counsel's office is alleged to have revealed that the gas company pays 4.58 cents a gallon for oil to the Standard Oil Company, a price 1 cent higher than any other gas company pays, that gas according to the company's books, costs 52.50 cents per 1000 instead of 74.81, as the company claimed, and that William Rockefeller, James Stillman and other wealthy men are directors in both the Consolidated Gas Company and the Standard Oil Company.

The rate will be 3 cents per word for classified announcements to run in the magazine section of this special issue. "Liner" copy will be received up to and including Dec. 27th.

PRETTY GIRL IS ARRESTED.

WILL BE TAKEN TO MISSOURI ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

She Is Needed as Witness Against Man Who Is Alleged to Have Deserted Family for Her—She Is Accused of Accepting Bribe to Disappear Before Trial.

Lulu Griggs, a handsome girl, is in the City Jail. This very silent prisoner is wanted in Paris, Mo., on a charge of receiving a bribe. Detectives Jones and Boyd yesterday arrested the girl and she will be held pending the arrival of an officer from Missouri, on whose description the arrest was made.

Yesterday the handsome prisoner refused absolutely to talk. She said: "I have nothing to say," and what is more, stood by the declaration. From the information in the possession of the local department, it appears that she is needed as a witness in an important criminal case in Paris. Some time ago she is alleged to have received a large sum of money provided that she left the State before the trial. She was with her brother in this city when the detectives found her.

The case in which she is wanted as a witness is one of the State of Missouri against Hugh D. Mudd, a wealthy citizen of Monroe City. Without her testimony, it is said, no case could be made against him.

It is alleged that the girl, when only sixteen years old, left Monroe City in company with Mudd, going to St. Louis and then to Hot Springs, Ark., where they were arrested. Miss Griggs claimed that she had been induced to leave home by promises of good positions in the city. Mudd, who has a wife and eight children, was at once indicted for enticing the girl from home for immoral purposes.

When the case was called for trial the State was forced to ask for a continuance on the grounds that the prosecuting witness had disappeared.

Sheriff Nolen is on the way to this city to take the girl back. She is the daughter of poor parents and is one of a large family of children.

TWO AUTOS STOLEN.

In One Case Chauffeur Is Kidnaped. Two Men Arrested Early This Morning on Suspicion.

Imre Clawson and Russel Cromwell were arrested at an early hour this morning by Detectives Chapman and Home on suspicion of having stolen L. A. Denker's automobile and kidnaped the chauffeur at the Civic Athletic Club pavilion near Naud Junction Friday night. The police thought for a time that the trio, which took the car robbed the saloon, but are now positive that they were mistaken.

After working all day Saturday, the officers found the automobile in front of No. 1023 Staunton avenue. They had some difficulty in locating the men, but finally secured trace of them. The officers are at a loss to know who the third man is. Denker was called from his home at No. 228 West Twenty-fourth street to identify the car.

R. C. Hillman of No. 143 East Avenue 43 reported to the police early this morning that his automobile had been stolen from in front of No. 635 South Westlake avenue. The police are working on the case, but have not located the machine.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION.

Edward Mollenhouer was arrested on the Salt Lake tracks, near Downey avenue, late yesterday afternoon on a charge of suspicion. The policeman said that he noticed Mollenhouer carried a bag and, upon investigating, found that it contained several lead sewer traps, some brass and other pieces of junk. Mollenhouer said that he had been staying at the Salvation Army Hotel, but failed to describe the place. The officer said he believed Mollenhouer is a young tramp making his way to Los Angeles.

SKULL IS FRACTURED.

Edward Johnson of No. 2110 Sacramento street fell from the loft of a barn at No. 1223 Santa Fé avenue early this morning and fractured his skull. He is fatally injured. According to the officers who investigated the case, Johnson is employed by a company which keeps its horses at the Charter Oak barn on Santa Fé avenue. Johnson went into the loft and fell asleep. When he awakened, he attempted to leave the barn and fell. He was sent to the Receiving Hospital.

SANGUINE OF PROOF.

The police claim that they have seven cases of room-working practically proven against Dan Sullivan, J. W. Howard, and John Valentine. Sullivan is the "gentleman burglar" who left a note in a victim's house several nights before his arrest. The other two men were arrested two days ago. All are members of one gang, according to the police, and had been pillaging rooms throughout the downtown and inner residence and apartment-house districts in a systematic manner.

MOTHER SEEKS LOST CHILD.

Mrs. Albert Zahnd of San Francisco, who is now staying at the Bentley House, corner of Central avenue and Second street, is here in search of her little daughter, from whom she was separated at the time of the earthquake. She heard that the child had come to Los Angeles with the wife of a San Francisco baker, but she can find no trace of her. The little girl is four years old, slender, with brown hair, blue eyes, and a sallow complexion. She is very fond of talking.

SAVED BY FENDER.

José Escorral, a Mexican laborer, was caught by the fender of an inbound Washington-street car at Second and Alameda streets last night about 7 o'clock and was slightly bruised about the head. The Mexican was sent to the Receiving Hospital. Surgeons said that he had sustained slight concussion from his fall.

MAY BE "BLIND PIG."

Henry Saver was arrested on Satello, near San Fernando street, yesterday on the charge of violating the liquor ordinance. According to the arresting officers, Saver had been conducting a resort where liquor was sold without a city license. The police have been endeavoring to secure evidence against the place for some time.

CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY.

The auxiliary of the Children's Home Society will meet on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at No. 901 East Twenty-fifth street. The object of this society is to find homes for children who for various reasons may be left in the world without homes.

MOTHER WOUNDS CHILD.

Frightened by Supposed Burglar She Secures Pistol Which Explodes in Her Trembling Hands.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8.—Fearing robbers were trying to gain entrance to her house last night, when a deaf neighbor, who had a message from her husband, kept knocking at the front door, after she had inquired who was there, Mrs. Christimp of Fair Oaks, Pa., called to her young son to bring her a revolver.

While she was examining the weapon it was accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through the stomach of her eleven-year-old daughter, Katherine, and inflicting what is considered a fatal wound.

DOCTOR WANTS WEDLOCK CURB.

SAYS NO OTHER PLAN CAN REDUCE DEFECTIVE CLASS.

His Theory Is That All Candidates for Matrimony Ought to Be Examined and Secure Not Only Certificate of Personal Health but of Sound Ancestry.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—State regulation of marriage was advocated last night by Dr. Frank Billings, president of the Illinois State Board of Charities in an address before the National Conference on Truancy. His audience was largely made up of experts in charity and reformatory lines and his declaration while it created surprise, was greeted with applause.

He was speaking on "Should wards of the State be separated from the public school children?" and drew a picture of backward methods of instruction which the State Board of Charities had found in certain institutions.

"But we physicians believe in getting to the root of a disease," said Dr. Billings, bringing his address to a close. "There is no use in taking any other point of view. The root of this trouble lies in the existing freedom of marriage.

"I do not believe there should be any such freedom of marriage. I am no lawyer, but I would like to see society put on its statute books a law forbidding two people to be married not merely until they had secured a certificate of health from a reputable physician, but until they had obtained a certificate of inheritance showing their antecedents.

"This sounds drastic, but the increase in the defective classes is so impressive as to warrant such a conclusion. Two per cent. of the population of Illinois is insane. The number of defectives is increasing 3 per cent. annually."

RUSSIA BUYS HARVESTERS.

American Agricultural Implement Companies Send, Six Shiploads to Czar's Domain.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Record-breaking exports of agricultural machinery, it is said, are about to be made to Russia by the International Harvester Company. Nine chartered steamships will be dispatched to the Black and Baltic Sea ports. British, Swedish and Norwegian vessels will be employed. The first vessel is scheduled to sail next week.

In addition to these complete shiploads, part cargoes will be forwarded by regular line boats which will bring up the total shipments to North and South Russia to close to 100,000 tons this season.

This will mean the loading of nearly 3000 cars of material, representing a value of fully $5,000,000.

Six entire cargoes of reapers, mowers, harvesters, rakes, etc., will be forwarded to Odessa and Novorossik on the Black Sea.

ANARCHISTS CAPTURED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ODESSA, Dec. 8.—A band of anarchists today made a daring attempt to attack a mail train between Odessa and Vosnessensk, but were driven off by a military patrol. The troops captured fourteen of the anarchists, all of whom carried bombs and revolvers.

BAND BROKEN UP.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WARSAW, Dec. 8.—A military raid on the Rakoff Iron Works at Czenstochowa today resulted in breaking up an extensive revolutionary organ. Eighty-seven members of the band were arrested, including fifteen terrorists, suspected of participation in recent murders and robberies.

HONOR FIRST FLYERS.

Experts and Neighbors Support Wright Brothers in Their Aeronautic Claims of Precedence.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Wilbur and Orxill Wright of Dayton, O., whose claims to have been the first men to fly, are supported by Octave Chanute of Chicago, former president of the Western Association of Engineers, and by witnesses in their home town.

They were the center of attraction yesterday at the Aero Club show. Both Wilbur and Orville Wright declined to make any comment on the recent dispatches from abroad regarding their negotiations with the French government. John Brisben Walker gave a dinner last night at the Century Club in their honor, at which Chanute and others were present.

CUTS OFF GIRL'S HAIR.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Dec. 8.—Michael Kurovik of Homestead, Pa., attacked Edna Story, 17 years of age, in her home tonight, and cut off her hair with a razor. He narrowly escaped lynching.

Miss Story met Kurovik in the hallway, and without a word of explanation, he seized her by the hair, and with on slash, cut the greater part of it off.

The girl's cries attracted a crowd, who captured Kurovik, and were preparing to hang him, when he was rescued by the police. Surrounded by the mob, which fought them for the prisoner, officers rushed Kurovik to the Police Station.

WAGNER'S WIDOW ILL.

BEYREUTH, Dec. 18.—Cosima Wagner, widow of Richard Wagner, is lying exceedingly ill here.

PROPOSE NOVEL CORPORATE TAX.

REVENUE COMMISSION OFFERS A NEW PLAN OF ASSESSMENT.

If Legislature Approves, Public Service Companies Will Pay on the Basis of Gross Earnings—Banks Will Settle Through Stockholders for Price of Shares and Surplus.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—A gross earnings tax on public-service corporations, to be paid to the State in lieu of the political form of local taxation on these concerns, is one of the innovations the commission on the reform and revision of the revenue laws will propose to the Legislature next month.

The commission's proposal is to separate entirely State from local taxes. The idea is that with a gross earnings tax on public-service corporations the State would not levy a tax on general property, as it does now. And while the several communities would lose the revenues they now derive from the local taxation of these corporations, it is estimated that the proposed plan would work to them an annual saving in excess of $4,000,000. The corporations the commission proposes to withdraw from local taxation are railroads, including street railways, car companies, express companies, heat, light and power companies, telegraph and telephone companies, banks and insurance companies.

The banks are not to be included in the general gross earnings scheme. They are to be taxed through their stockholders, the commission proposing a rate of 1 per cent. on the amount paid in on stock subscriptions, plus accumulated surplus, the banks to be allowed credit for any local taxes paid on real estate.

BERIBERI AND SUICIDE AT SEA.

TWO SHIPS MAKE TERRIBLE VOYAGES FROM CHINA.

Crew of One Vessel Is Infected by Diseased Coolies in Mediterranean and One Passenger Jumps Overboard—On Another Religious Fervor Crazes Mohammedan.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Death from beriberi and suicide marked the long journey of steamships which came to their piers here yesterday. The ships were the Foxley from China, and the Den of Mains from Java. Hardly had the Foxley left Algeirs on her way home when beriberi appeared among the coolies in the crew. As the vessel passed Gibraltar half the crew were in their bunks unable to move a limb. On November 9 one of the men died. The next day another was dead and the day following a coolie, crazed with delirium, committed suicide by throwing himself into the sea.

It was while the Den of Mains was off Mecca in the Red Sea that her troubles began.

Manobin Sahid, with hands uplifted and a look of religious fervor on his face, suddenly cast himself into the sea, uttering a prayer to Mohammed. In a twinkling the other thirty-four Lascars in the crew prepared to follow him. Capt. Sawyer and his officers quieted them with difficulty.

G.A.R. TO TALK OF ENCAMPMENT.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MAY ABANDON SARATOGA.

City Selected at Last General Rally of Veterans Has Not Complied With Certain Conditions and Meeting Will Discuss Feasibility of Change to Some Other Site.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 8.—A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Grand Army of the Republic was called today by Commander-in-Chief H. B. Brown at Zanesville, O., January 7, at which definite consideration of the location of the national encampment next year will be taken up.

The national encampment of 1906 voted to meet next year at Saratoga, N. Y., but it is understood certain conditions in regard to the encampment have not been met by the city, although an extension of time was granted and the location of the encampment at another city is a possibility.

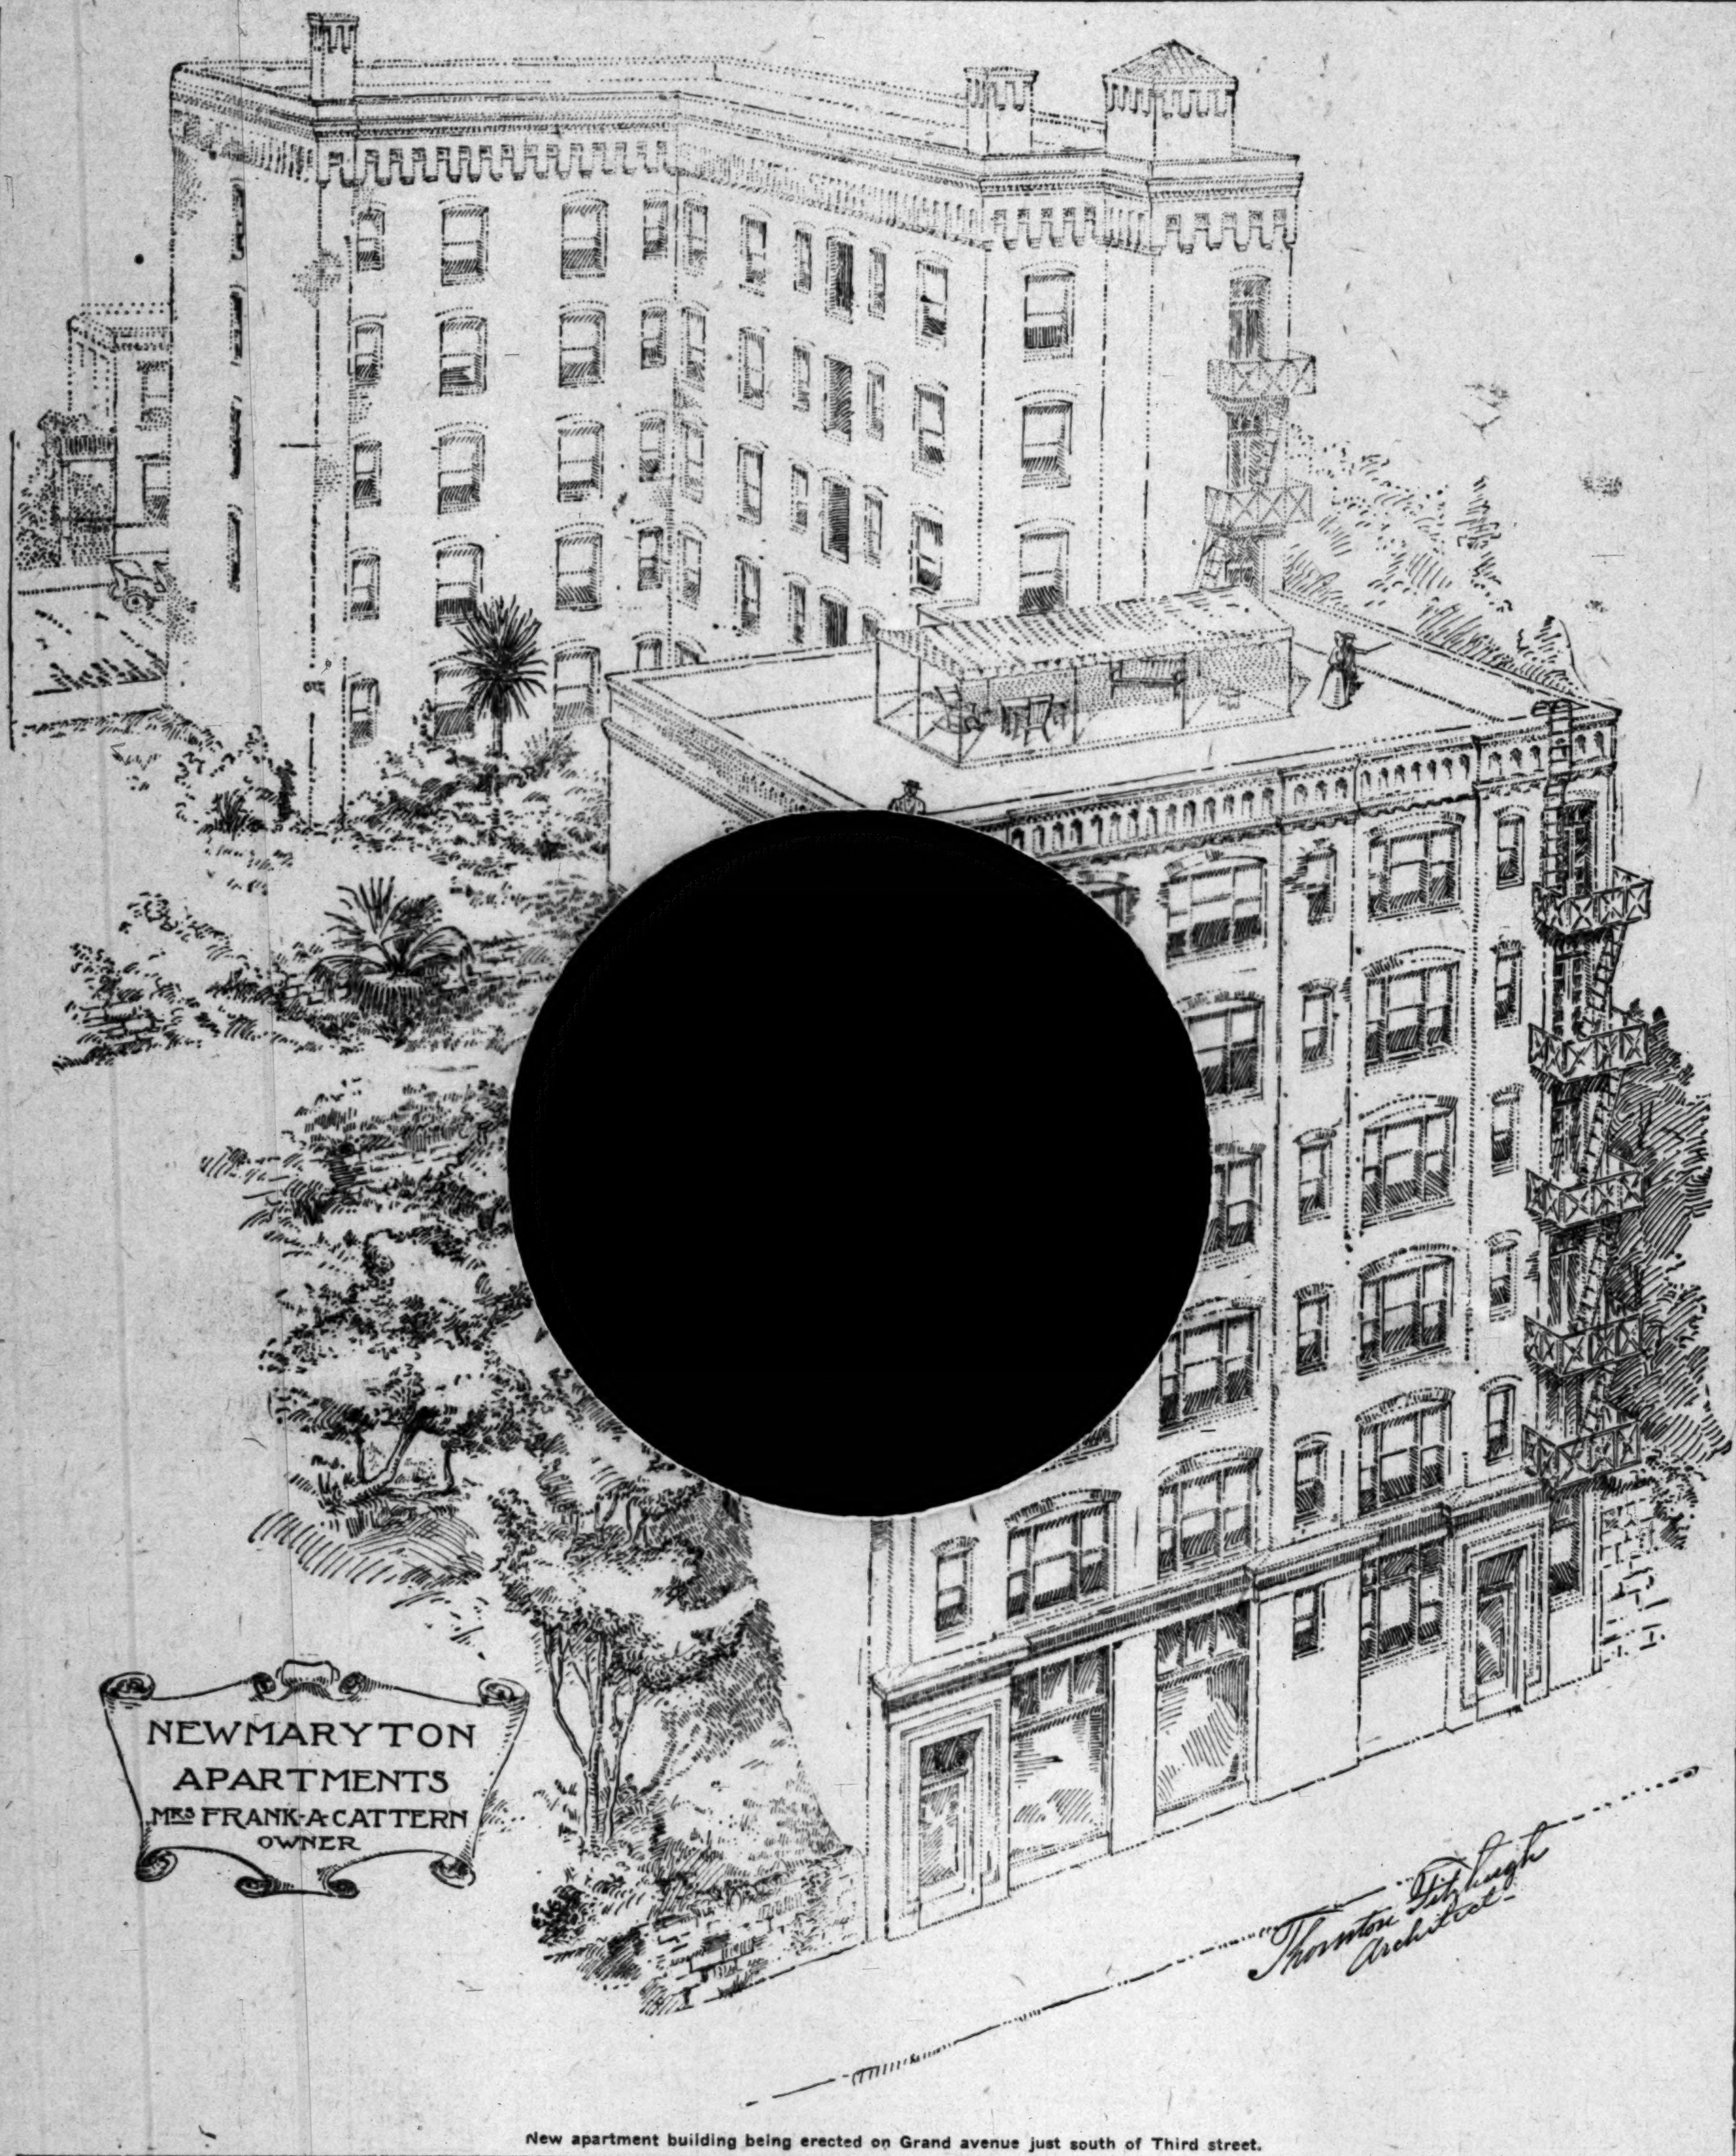
there has been no possibility of reaching an adequate conclusion which might settle this controversy. The foundations of the hotel are believed to be still covered up and uninvestigated. Until the whole ruin is removed to the foundations, it will be impossible to form a thoroughly proper judgment. A commission, to be composed of some thoroughly intelligent person, interested in brick, a similar person interested in concrete, and then filled up with three or five or even seven architects of high reputation, would probably be able to arrive at some definite and just conclusion. Probably a committee of nine would be better than a committee of five.



New apartment building being erected on Grand avenue just south of Third street.

—o—

The Importance of This Subject.

Of course the main importance of settling the controversy is that from the standpoint of the capital which is being put into these reinforced concrete buildings and the danger, not only to wares housed under the roofs of them, but also to the lives of the people who do business in such structures. But beyond this the matter is a vital one to this community. We have little or no interest in the wooden material which goes into buildings, all that coming from far distances and taking money out of the country. We have considerable interest in the skeletons of steel frame buildings, for this material is largely made at home, is a local industry and gives employment to a great many worthy and industrious people. We can make all the brick and terra cotta material that the city will ever need right at our own doors, keeping our money at home and going to enrich in a further way the whole community. The same facts are just as true about the concrete. Nearly everything going into the formation of a reinforced concrete building can be manufactured here at home and out of raw material at hand. It will save millions of dollars a year to the community to use the local manufactures or brick steel frames and reinforcing steel for concrete buildings and the concrete itself. There are vast beds and even mountains of concrete material all over Southern California. They would prove mines of wealth to their owners in years to come unless that material is found unsuitable for the erection of great modern buildings.

—o—

An Expert Opinion.

In the Engineering News of November 15 last, is copied from the New York Herald a letter written by Gunvald Aus, in which the writer calls attention to the "too long list of reinforced concrete structures that have failed." This engineer insists that these failures are due not to the material, but to the insufficiency of the material used. Quoted further we find this: "What would be thought of the architect who merely specified for a steel frame building that the contractor shall put in as much steel as he thinks necessary?" And yet this is precisely what is generally done with reinforced concrete structures and it is very much more dangerous with reinforced concrete to allow much latitude to the contractor because there are a great many patent constructions whose designers have a very erroneous opinion of the strength of materials, whereas in ordinary steel frames the permissable stresses are well established. If there is any truth in the statement made by the New York engineer surely there is here enough to account for all the failures that have taken place recently in the erection of concrete buildings. By the way, it will do no harm once more to call attention to the roof of the Pantheon at Rome, a great space of 140 feet in diameter made of common concrete without any reinforcement whatever, which has stood the test of 2000 years' use and is today without a crack.

—o—

Value of Comparisons.

Of course, in drawing conclusions from these comparisons, it is well to realize that this bit of property lies pretty close to the absolute business center of San Francisco. It is directly opposite the site of the Palace Hotel, where an immense building is about to replace that destroyed by the fire. It must not be forgotten that San Francisco still is looked upon as the metropolis of the Coast; that even although her population is perhaps not very much greater than that of Los Angeles at the moment, that it must grow very rapidly in the future; that its volume of business, as indicated by the bank clearings at the lowest normal figure, is nearly four times that prevailing in Los Angeles, and at the present time is quite five to six times as great. The business of the city is probably not very much less in volume than it was before the fire. There is another consideration in this connection, and that is the contracted area for business in the city of San Francisco. The only level land on the peninsula lies in a strip along the bay and stretching out Market street into the Mission section. Going in the Western Addition and up on Nob Hill the rise is too abrupt and sharp to allow business to climb that way. On the north, it is hemmed in by Telegraph and Russian Hills, and on the south, Rincon Hill tends to contract it a great deal. Now, while these things are true, there still remains the fact that the square-foot price paid for San Francisco property referred to above is approximately twice the highest price yet paid in this city. In all reflections upon values now we must remember that the growth of our population and business have been on an enormous scale. The conclusions drawn in reference to the city of 150,000 or 175,000; compared with a city of 250,000, and growing at the rate of 20,000 to 30,000 a year, are very different things.

A NOVEL APARTMENT HOUSE.

The "Newmaryton" is the novel name compounded by Mrs. Frank A. Cattern from the names of her two children, Newton and Marymae, for the novel apartment house which she is about to build.

The house will be situated on Olive street, 120 feet south of Third street. The lot has a frontage of 60 feet on Olive street and runs through to Clay street. By reason of this double frontage, with a difference of about 47 feet in levels of the two streets, and of the fact that the Clay-street entrance is but a three-minute walk from the corner of Third and Broadway, that entrance is expected to be most used, and the elevator is situated near to it.

The office, parlors and ample lobby and loggia are on the Olive-street level.

The building will be practically two separate brick structures, one of six stories on Clay street, and one of five stories on Olive street. The two buildings will be divided by a fire wall, with double fireproof, self-closing doors, each building provided with ample stairways, fire escapes, automatic fire-alarm gongs and every fire protective device available for this class of structure.

The building will be a notable departure from the majority of such structures in that the owner has not been willing to sacrifice sunlight for the purpose of getting the greatest possible number of rooms on the lot. The south court, with an area of 40x60 feet, insures not only light, but direct sunshine for every apartment in the building. Every Californian knows the importance of this feature, and the tourist is not slow in learning it.

The building will be provided with Marshall & Stearns patented beds, and the latest apartment-house conveniences in every particular, including the vacuum sweeper, now too well known to need description. Every apartment will contain a telephone connecting directly with the city service.

The basement will contain a large social hall opening into the court garden, as well as a room fitted with stationary laundry tubs and hot-air drying closets, in which such articles as the tenants of the house do not care to send out to a laundry may be locked for the half hour or so necessary to dry them.

The roof of the Clay-street section of the building is occupied as a roof garden, with an open-air reading-room, and is accessible directly from the hallway of the third story of the Olive-street building.

The building contains 113 rooms and 71 bathrooms. There is also a business room on the Clay-street front.

The architect, Thornton Fitzhugh, reports that the contract has already been let to F. W. Maule, and work is begun, with the expectation that the building will be completed in about six months. The cost is about $85,000.

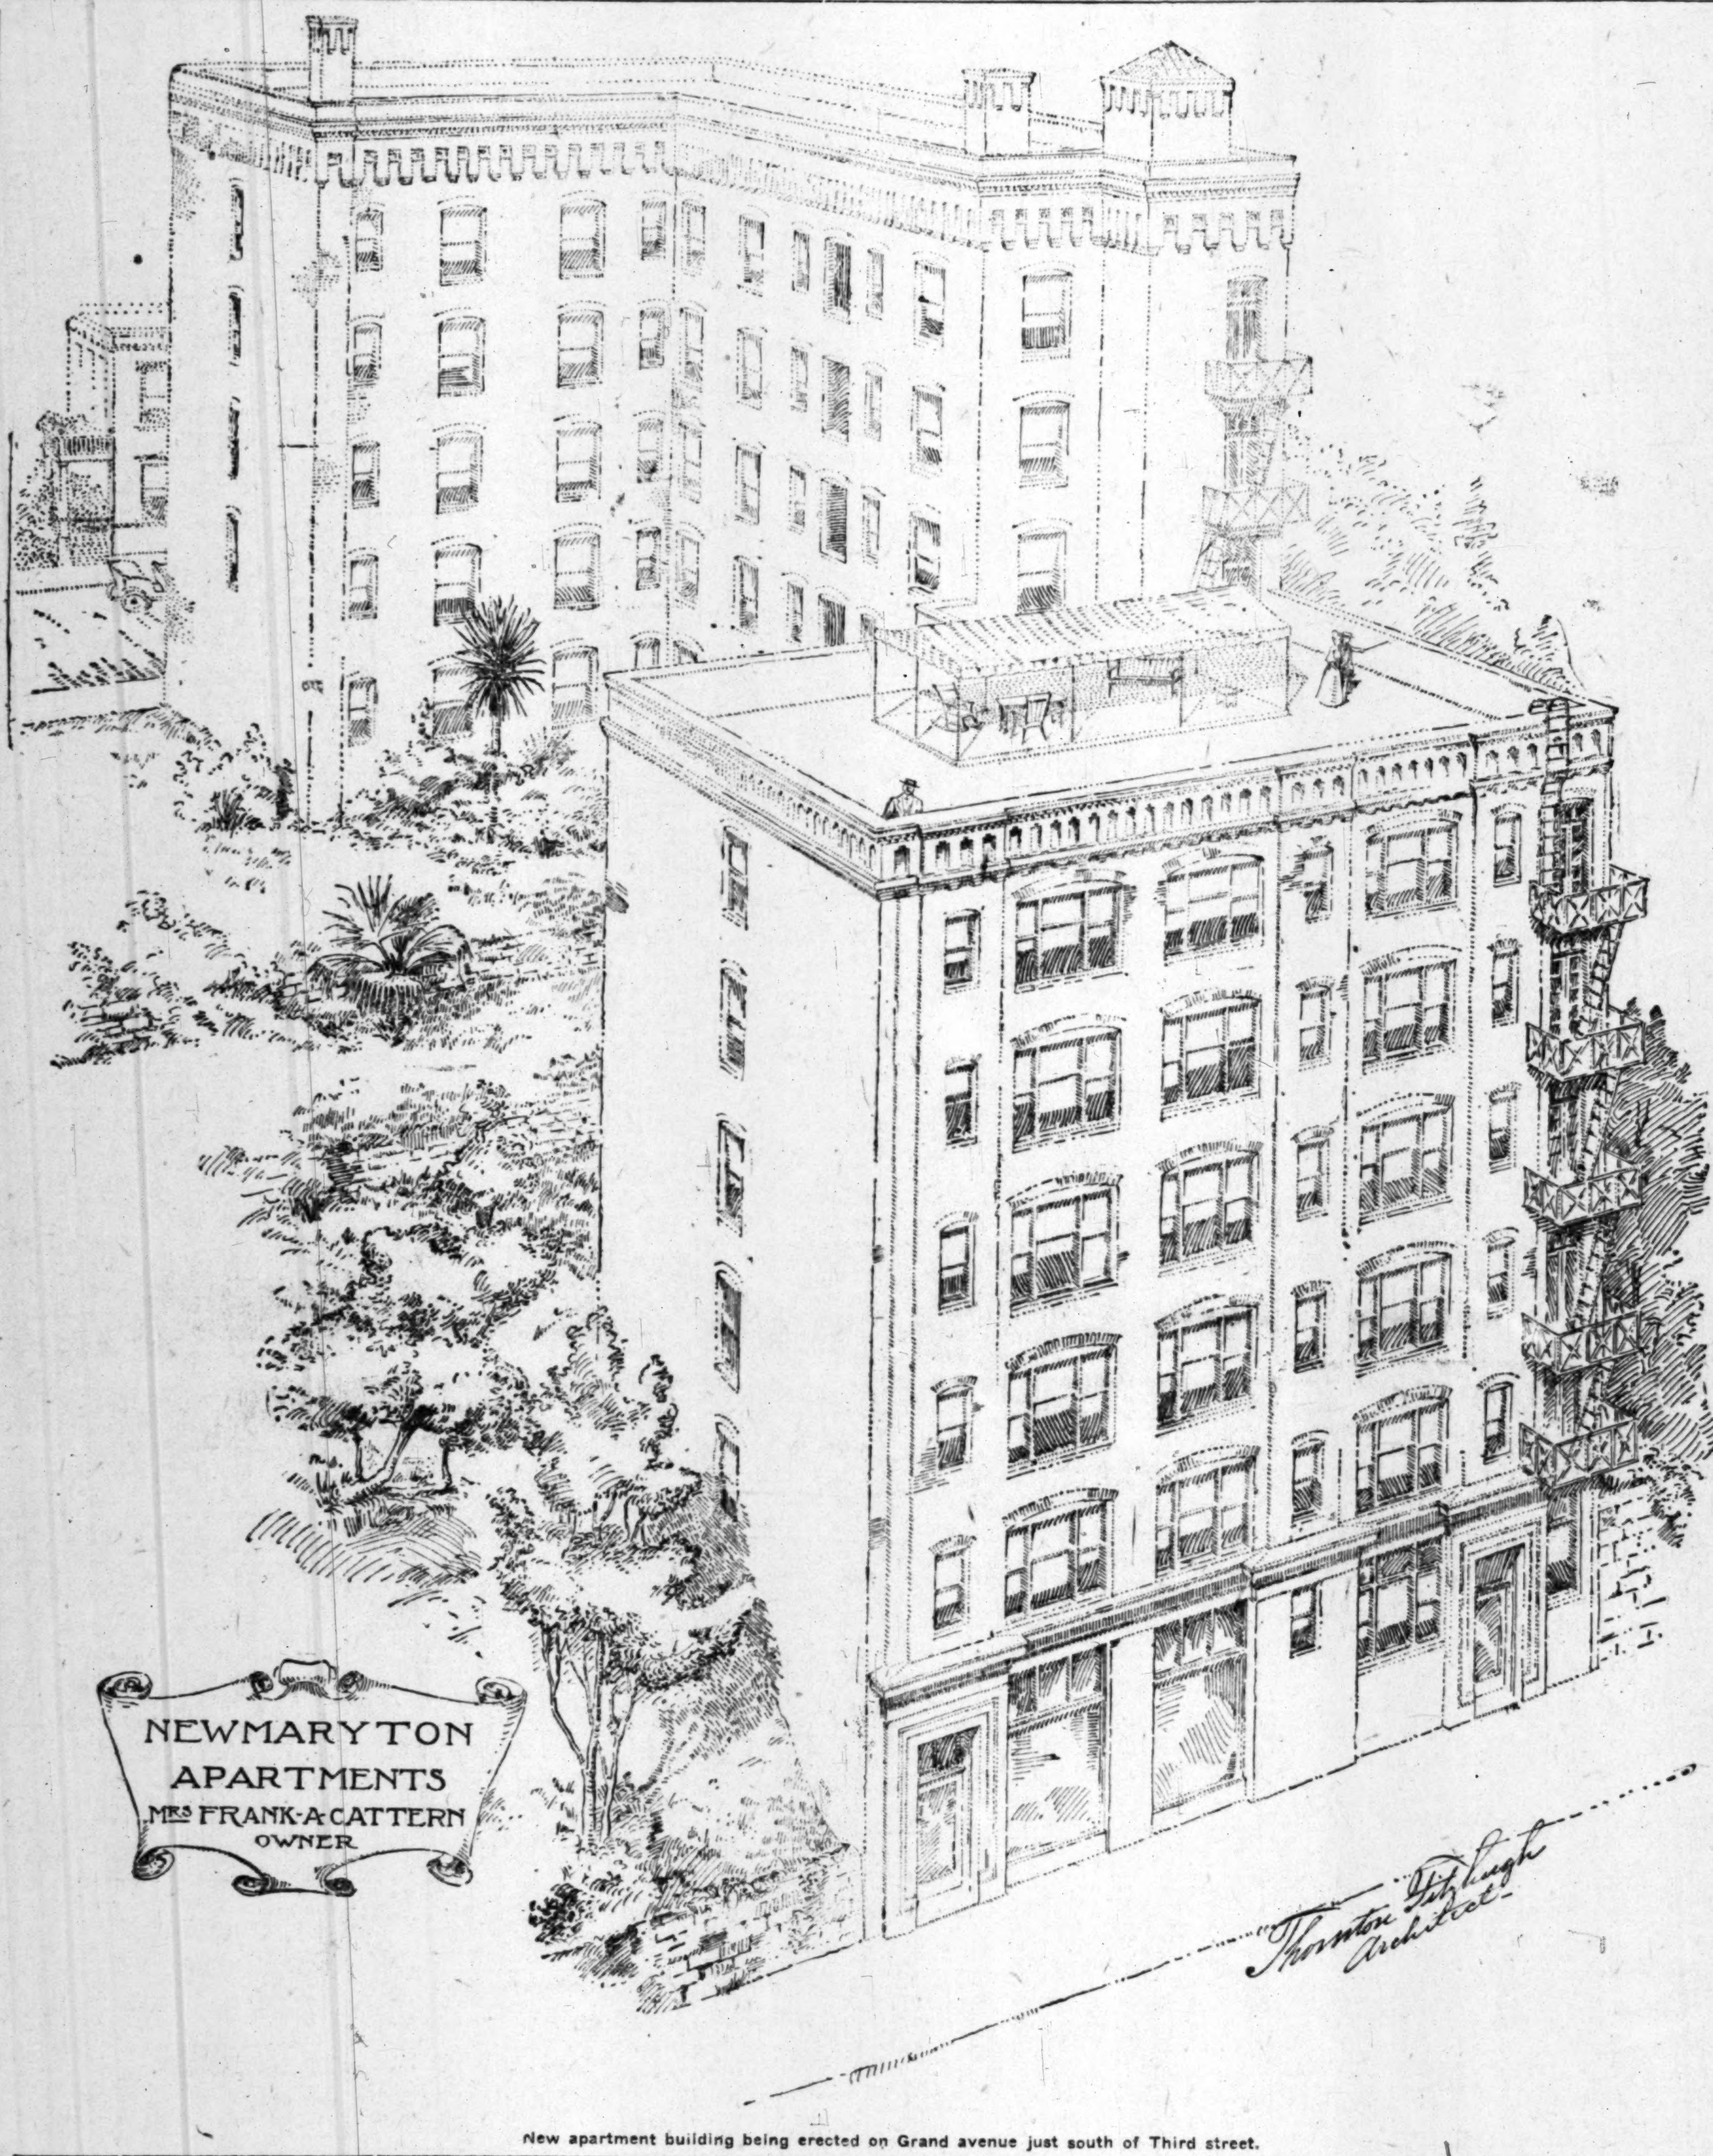
Now, while these things are true, there still remains the fact that the square-foot price paid for San Francisco property referred to above is approximately twice the highest price yet paid in this city. In all reflections upon values now we must remember that the growth of our population and business have been on an enormous scale. The conclusions drawn in reference to the city of 150,000 or 175,000, compared with a city of 250,000, and growing at the rate of 20,000 to 30,000 a year, are very different things.



New apartment building being erected on Grand avenue just south of Third street.

A NOVEL APARTMENT HOUSE.

The "Newmaryton" is the novel name compounded by Mrs. Frank A. Cattern from the names of her two children, Newton and Marymae, for the novel apartment house which she is about to build.

The house will be situated on Olive street, 120 feet south of Third street. The lot has a frontage of 60 feet on Olive street and runs through to Clay street. By reason of this double frontage, with a difference of about 47 feet in levels of the two streets, and of the fact that the Clay-street entrance is but a three-minute walk from the corner of Third and Broadway, that entrance is expected to be most used, and the elevator is situated near to it.

The office, parlors and ample lobby and loggia are on the Olive-street level.

The building will be practically two separate brick structures, one of six stories on Clay street, and one of five stories on Olive street. The two buildings will be divided by a fire wall, with double fireproof, self-closing doors, each building provided with ample stairways, fire escapes, automatic fire-alarm gongs and every fire protective device available for this class of structure.

The building will be a notable departure from the majority of such structures in that the owner has not been willing to sacrifice sunlight for the purpose of getting the greatest possible number of rooms on the lot. The south court, with an area of 40x60 feet, insures not only light, but direct sunshine for every apartment in the building. Every Californian knows the importance of this feature, and the tourist is not slow in learning it.

The building will be provided with Marshall & Stearns patented beds, and the latest apartment-house conveniences in every particular, including the vacuum sweeper, now too well known to need description. Every apartment will contain a telephone connecting directly with the city service.

The basement will contain a large social hall opening into the court garden, as well as a room fitted with stationary laundry tubs and hot-air drying closets, in which such articles as the tenants of the house do not care to send out to a laundry may be locked for the half hour or so necessary to dry them.

The roof of the Clay-street section of the building is occupied as a roof garden, with an open-air reading-room, and is accessible directly from the hallway of the third story of the Olive-street building.

The building contains 118 rooms and 71 bathrooms. There is also a business room on the Clay-street front.

The architect, Thornton Fitzhugh, reports that the contract has already been let to F. W. Maule, and work is begun, with the expectation that the building will be completed in about six months. The cost is about $85,000.

Why not buy one of these splendid properties? If you are looking for a home you could not do better than choose from this list. Ask us about them.

6-ROOM COTTAGE.

This extraordinarily large cottage is located on W. 37th st., one block from University of Southern California, half a block from both car systems; lot is 50x135 feet, finely improved; house is practically new, being wholly undamaged by the brief occupancy; you will find the rooms spacious, each bright with many openings; every convenience, and the property is a bargain; price $3800.

THE PRETTIEST BUNGALOW.

It has 6 fine large rooms, with oak floors in 3 rooms and hall; Flemish oak finish in living-rooms and front bedroom; white enamel in two bedrooms and bath; beam ceilings in living-room and hall; cream pressed-brick mantel and outside chimney; front bedroom opens to reception hall by sliding door and is planned as library if desired; dining-room beautifully paneled and finished with elegant buffet seat, bay window and plate rail; built-in hall tree, bookcases, etc.; very large closets; fine bedrooms; and very spacious living-rooms; the prettiest bungalow—that's it. Large terraced lot on W. 28th st. Price $4200.

NEAR BERKELY SQUARE.

Here is a splendid big home of 8 rooms, located near Hermosa st. in that carefully restricted portion of the Western Heights that holds the best of homes. This property is on the market for a quick sale or none at all. Therefore the low figure quoted; there are oak floors, basement and furnace, every modern convenience, and very large rooms throughout; it is one of those square houses, the kind that have the best rooms and arrangement; price is only $6000.

WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS.

Near Washington st. and Western ave., fronting east, we can offer a splendid, new, 9-room home that will please any woman. The house has handsome exterior, stone and cement veranda and cement steps; beautiful entrance; large living-room, library, large dining-room, all in Flemish oak with oak floors and handsome fixtures; pass pantry, complete kitchen; servant's bedroom, or breakfast room, as desired; basement and furnace; all built-in ideas complete; above stairs are 4 fine sleeping rooms, all with big closets; large bath, balcony, etc.; laundry trays, rear stairs, polished upper floors, etc., etc. Price only $7500.

AN ELEGANT HOME.

A spacious 10-room residence, located in very closely restricted residence district, adjoining Adams st., in the best of the southwest. Here is a fine corner lot, handsomely and completely improved, and the house is as attractive as anything in the city. The entrance is from a pressed-brick veranda, which adds a striking touch to the beauty of the home. There are hardwood floors upstairs as well as down; Flemish oak finish; built-in appointments very complete; basement and furnace; no stairs; floored attic; five fine sleeping-rooms, partly inclosed large balcony; auto barn and oil-house; many flowers, etc.; just a complete, well-established home ready to move right into; price $8250.

HOME AND INVESTMENT, TOO.

This spacious 9-room mission-style home is located near W. Seventh and Rampart sts., on very large corner lot; the house is now a splendid home, having 5 bedrooms and every convenience; it fronts east and the neighborhood is unexcelled; but values are changing so rapidly that this corner cannot fail to be wanted for business or apartments reasonably soon, so to buy here now will surely make big money for the investor. The property would demand large rent if offered for that today. The price is only $10,500.

ON MAGNOLIA AVENUE.

Here is one of the most beautiful homes it has been our good fortune to offer. It sits in wide grounds, 70x140 feet to alley, and the locality is one of the best the city affords. The lower floor arrangement includes living-room 17x30, with pressed brick mantel and fireplace, seats, etc., dining-room, at the front, with brick mantel, buffet, paneled walls, etc., spacious reception hall, paneled and beamed in harmony with living-room and dining-room, so that it is a splendid addition to the beautiful arrangement of this home; two steps lead down to the den, in the rear of the reception hall, and this apartment is paneled, carefully appointed and has brick mantel. The floors are all oak, the lighting fixtures very fine, every appointment carried out in elegant harmony; above the ornamental stairs are four very large bedrooms, and a floored attic, large enough for two fine rooms. This property is very cheap at $10,000.

NEAR WILSHIRE BOULEVARD.

In this splendid residence of 10 rooms we confidently offer one of the most complete and artistically finished homes of this beautiful city. The location is ideal, just off the Boulevard and close to car service, in the heart of the already established home district. The appearance of this house in its charming environment will challenge your admiration and ready interest. The entrance is artistic; the large, spacious rooms open with beauty, and every appointment to meet the critical eye is placed with taste and skill. The lower floor arrangement includes living-room, library, dining-room, secluded den with outside entrance, pantries and all domestic apartments complete, servant's room, etc. Above stairs are 4 splendid sleeping chambers, balconies, bath, etc., with opportunity for cosy second bath also; this home is, of course, finished with the beamed and paneled effects, the built-in seats, bookcases, buffet and sideboard, complete; the hardwood floors; and the richest, most perfect Flemish oak we have seen. Price is $11,500.

WHY LOOK FURTHER?

Here, on Westlake ave., we have just secured this remarkable home of 12 rooms at a figure that should sell it tomorrow. The arrangement of both floors is the very perfection of taste and convenience, the lower being planned with spacious ideas of entertaining and pleasure, that above for pure comfort and ease. On the lower floor the reception-room, den, living-room and dining-room, all splendid apartments, open finely together and occupy the forward two-thirds of a very large floor plan; to the rear are the rear hall, leading to side entrance, the breakfast-room, pantries, laundry and kitchen. Each one of these rooms is fitted with every idea modern invention has conceived to complete the best of homes. There are 3 mantels and fireplaces, all built-in appointments, many broad windows, etc., etc., ad libitum. There are 6 fine bedrooms, opening en suite; 2 baths; lavatories, seats, etc. Oak floors both above and below stairs. The attic is finished to billiard-room and servant's bedroom; spacious closets everywhere. The property is only 2 years old and in splendid condition. Price $12,000.

FOR SALE—

IDEAL HOMES.

If you are looking for one of the best houses in the city, we will show you either of the following, both of which are in that class.

Residence near Adams and short distance west of Hoover, of eleven rooms, walls hand decorated in beautiful designs. Has four fireplaces, furnace and every convenience. The lot is particularly large, being 90x215 feet.

Price $12,500. Will take a mortgage back for part.

Up-to-date, 12-room house, southwest. Lot 100 feet by 140 feet deep to a 15-ft. alley. Wide veranda on two sides of house. Large screen and glass room. Fine tiled bathroom, with elegant tub and fixtures. Two toilets and eight closets. Attic over main portion of the house, with room finished off for servant. Has large parlor with alcove, music room, large reception hall, library, dining-room, nursery, kitchen, pantry, screen room, toilet and two closets downstairs. Second floor has four large bedrooms with a dressing-room and four closets; bathroom about 12x12 feet and balcony. On the third floor is one bedroom, trunk room and large room about 30x40 feet. Five rooms downstairs have oak floors, 3 rooms have all woodwork in solid oak, 2 parlors are in maple and light wood. Four large double sliding oak and maple doors throw five rooms together. Cove ceilings and beautifully decorated walls.

Combination gas and electric fixtures all over house. Fixtures are very best. Two beautiful gas fireplaces, and one brick fireplace. The house is heated by furnace and also by gas heaters in each room, with ventilating flues through walls to roof. Good cement cellars. Gas water heaters, stationary tubs, solid oak built-in buffet, full length mirror in solid oak door.

Driveway of cement from street to barn in rear of lot. Fine barn, ceiled throughout, two box stalls, one carriage room, auto garage, harness closet, room finished off for man and hay loft. Has cement floors, drains, water and electric lights, also corral. Lawns and shrubbery are hard to beat, and house is one of the most desirable residences in the city. Material used in the place was selected by the builder from lumber used in erecting four large buildings, and there are not a dozen houses in the city with as choice material as this house contains. All the pine used was finished with a wax filler after being thoroughly dressed, redressed and sandpapered.

Price $16,000, and will take back mortgage for part, if buyer desires.

BARGAINS IN HOUSES.

EASY TERMS.

$100 cash, ONLY $100 cash and the balance at $20 per month. A modern 5-room cottage on a lot 50x150, located on 8th street, near Oregon ave., Santa Monica. Price $3000, and you can not buy it less for cash.

OUT WEST 29TH.

FIVE-ROOM MODERN COTTAGE, nicely finished, modern in every way. Lot 50x130; the location is fine and in a section that values are increasing very rapidly. Price $3000, only $600 cash.

WEST 45TH STREET.

It is just like finding money to buy this elegant six-room bungalow for $2700. Just think of the places that you have seen at $3200 and you will have a fair idea of this. Beamed ceilings, paneled walls, polished oak floors, laundry tubs, fine electric fixtures, and a lot 50x148. It sounds too good to be true, but let us show you.

OUT IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Story and a half bungalow, six fine large rooms. The work and material is strictly first-class, excellent plan, large lot, and as good a place for $4250 as you will find for more money. Would be pleased to call for you and make good our assertion that it is a good buy.

328-329 BRADBURY BLDG.

PHONES HOME A4063; MAIN 4063.

IF YOU ARE IN THE MARKET FOR AN UP-TO-DATE HOME IN THE WEST OR SOUTHWEST IT WILL PAY YOU TO LOOK OVER THE ONES WE ADVERTISE TODAY AS THEY ARE ALL FIRST-CLASS AND MOST OF THEM ARE ENTIRELY NEW.

A SIX-ROOM BEAUTY.

$4000—This entirely new six-room bungalow is located in the S.W. section of the city and surrounded by pretty homes. Large living-room with beamed ceilings, brick mantel flanked by two pretty built in bookcases; dining-room with handsome paneled walls and beamed ceilings, brick mantel, built-in buffet and window seat; nice pass pantry and kitchen and screen porch; three pretty bedrooms in white and dainty tinted walls; this home has a very artistic exterior as well as interior; terms $1000 cash and $25 per month.

ONE AND ONE-HALF STORY.

$4250—$1000 cash, entirely new and right up-to-date; veranda across entire front; very large living-room with brick mantel flanked by two pretty built-in bookcases; the dining-room is large and has paneled walls and beamed ceiling; complete kitchen and screen porch with two stationary tubs; upstairs are three nice bedrooms and bath; lot 50x125; the floors in the living-room and dining-room are 7-8-inch oak (not the ordinary 3-8-inch.)

A BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW.

$5000—This is one of the best bungalows to be had in the S. W. section of the city; it contains six large rooms and reception hall; the lot is 60x135. The entrance is from a large veranda into hall on your right through pretty archway to living-room with handsome brick mantel, built in bookcases and writing desk; through sliding doors into large dining-room which is paneled and has a very handsome built-in buffet; three very pretty bedrooms, two of which are finished in white; nice large kitchen with cabinets; also pantry with cabinets and bins. Attic with stairs from screen porch which makes a fine storage room. Fine lawn and flowers. This house has only been completed about four months.

EIGHT ROOMS.

$5000—$1000 cash; this nearly new, modern, 8-room house is located in a nice section of the S.W. near the Washington car line. Reception hall with built-in seat, living-room, library with brick mantel and bookcases, dining-room has pretty built-in buffet, all these rooms have the dark finish and oak floors. Upstairs are four nice bedchambers and bath; lot 50x135.

SEVEN PRETTY ROOMS.

$5400—Just completed, modern 7-room residence, and located only one block from the West Adams car line on an elevated lot 50x136; large living-room with massive brick mantel and beamed ceiling; the finish in this room is weathered oak. The dining-room is paneled, has built-in buffet, and the Flemish oak finish; kitchen and pantry in white; screen porch with two stationary tubs and extra toilet; cemented cellar and furnace; upstairs are four nice bedrooms with ventilated closets all finished in white.

NEAR BERKELEY SQUARE.

$6250—You may look the city over and not find the equal of this, all things taken in consideration. Nearly new, modern, 7 large rooms and large reception hall; you enter from nice porch into reception hall, on your left through pretty archway into living-room, through sliding doors to dining-room with built-in buffet; all these rooms have the weathered oak finish and hardwood floors; nice kitchen and pass pantry; three fine bedchambers and bath on second floor; lot 50x150 to alley and improved with good lawn and fruit trees; pretty little barn.

A PRETTY EAST-FRONT HOME.

$6500—This home of eight rooms is entirely new and never occupied; located near the W. Adams car line and surrounded by pretty homes. The reception hall, living-room and den occupy the whole front of the house and are only separated by beautiful archways; the living-room and den are paneled with Spanish leather; handsome dining-room which has beamed ceiling, paneled walls and built-in buffet; these rooms have the dark woodwork and oak floors; pretty pass pantry in white enamel; on the second floor are four pretty bedchambers and bath all finished in white enamel and have white maple floors; handsome lighting fixtures; lawn in; lot 50x135.

HOME AND INVESTMENT COMBINED.

$6850—This is a fine double house, which has been built less than two years; it's modern in every particular; location S.W. near Adams on a fine wide avenue; reception hall, living-room, dining-room, with built-in buffet, nice large kitchen and pass pantry; upstairs there are two nice bedrooms, bath, sewing-room and trunk room. The above description is only of one-half of this house, the other half is practically the same. This is an exceedingly fine opportunity for one that wishes a nice home in a fine residence district, and still get a fair rate of interest on the money invested and free rent; lot 50x150.

VERY ARTISTIC NINE-ROOM HOME.

$8000—This entirely new, modern, nine-room house is located on the high ground in the West Adams Heights district. From a veranda with cement floor that extends across the entire front you enter into a pretty reception hall; on left of hall is the living-room with handsome brick sandstone mantel; the library has paneled walls, and built-in bookcases with leaded glass doors; the dining-room has beamed ceiling, paneled walls and a very artistic built-in buffet; all these rooms have the dark finish and oak floors. The kitchen and pass pantry are very complete having bins, cabinets, hot water heater, etc. Nice bedroom, lavatory, and screen porch with two set tubs complete the first floor. On the second floor are three fine bedchambers with very large closets, sewing-room and large bathroom; all the rooms are finished in white. Cellar with furnace to heat all the rooms. If you are looking for an artistic up-to-date home let us show you this.

A FINE NINE-ROOM HOUSE.

$7250—It's located on the heights, near Berkeley Square; large reception hall with built-in hall rack with large mirror; pretty living-room with cove ceilings and decorated walls, library with built-in seats and bookcases; dining-room, paneled walls and beamed ceilings, built-in buffet; all these rooms have the dark finish and oak floors; nice pass pantry, kitchen and screen porch. Upstairs are five nice bedchambers; all have polished floors. Large attic. House heated with furnace. Nice two-story barn; fine lawn; taking into consideration the price of building material and the price of lots in this locality one could not duplicate this place for less than $8000 today.

ON BEACON STREET.

$7500—This modern, 8-room house is located on Beacon st. between Ninth and 10th. Reception hall, living-room, library, dining-room, kitchen, pass pantry and screen porch on first floor; on the second floor are four nice bedchambers and bath; nice lawn front and rear; two mantels and furnace. This is close in, and in a fine residence district. If you are looking for property in this locality we know it will pay you to investigate this.

NEAR WILSHIRE PLACE.

$11,500—This beautiful, new, modern, 10-room home is located on a fine east-front lot, just off Wilshire Blvd. Large living-room with handsome brick mantel, built-in bookcases and seats, beamed ceilings and paneled walls; library paneled with Spanish leather; beautiful dining-room with an elegant built-in buffet; a very cosy little den; nice kitchen and pantry; servants' room downstairs; upstairs there are 4 fine bedchambers and bath; hardwood floors throughout the house; furnace; nice lawn; lot 50x170. If you are in the market for a home of this class, let us show you this.

ON WESTLAKE AVE.

$12,500—This modern home of 12 rooms is located on Westlake ave. near Alvarado Terrace Park; large porch with cement floor; handsome reception hall; large living-room with white pressed-brick mantel; pretty dining-room with built-in buffet; library with mantel and built-in bookcases; all these rooms have the dark finish and oak floors. A butler's pantry, pass pantry, kitchen and breakfast room complete the first floor; on the second floor are five fine bed chambers and two bathrooms; on the third floor is one bedroom and very large billiard-room or amusement-room. This home is located in an exceedingly fine section of the city and the price is at least $2500 under value.

Are you thinking of building? If so, can you beat the above price? Go take a look at the ones I am now building and see for yourself how they look to you. How about a modern 7-room 1½-story for $3000, with oak floors like the one I am now building at 157 Thorp st., or a 11-room residence like the one I am building on Prospect ave., Hollywood? Why pay a large price for plans that you will not build by after your home is started, when I furnish plans free of charge. Come in and I will take you to almost any size house you want that I have built, and it is so much easier to tell the changes you want made and then you know just what your home will look like when completed. Am I not right? Ask the parties I am now building for.

—$18,500—
FACTORY SITE, WAREHOUSE,
INDUSTRIAL SITE.
We offer for a QUICK SALE, the southwest corner of ALAMEDA and TENTH STS., 206.6 feet on Alameda street by 125 feet on 10th street. This is an ideal location for FACTORY, WAREHOUSE OR INDUSTRIAL SITE, or, if you are in the market for a property where you can make a handsome quick profit, this surpasses anything in the city. This class of property is very scarce, and as this property has the great frontage with switching, we predict in six months this property will sell for $150 per front foot, our price is but $90 per front foot. IT'S A BARGAIN.

PAID FOR FAITH.

Many make money because they profit by past experience. EVERY INDICATION POINTS TO GREAT PROSPERITY. A person of small savings has an opportunity to make every dollar multiply in value many times by investing in good substantial lots in a growing locality. Quarter-acre lots for $300; $10 monthly payments, in Corinth Heights, is just the chance for you. While you are paying for it, the value is constantly increasing. This increase due to the improvements going on in Corinth Heights, also adjoining property.

It costs you nothing to go. Just a pretty ride of 20 minutes from business center. In a few months you will be richly repaid for your faith. Free tickets at our office. Tract office open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

FOR SALE—

200 FT. ON VERMONT AVE.

ALL IN ONE PIECE.

Cornering on one street, and facing another. There is nothing that appeals to us so strongly as that elegant block of property of full width lots and running back 175 ft. in depth that is CLOSE UP TO THE SANTA MONICA RAILWAY and the PRESENT BUSINESS CENTER OF VERMONT AVE., the converging point of all the University car lines. And we offer here the cream piece, and the only such piece of property on Vermont.

A 200-FOOT CORNER, $10,000.
ONLY $50 PER FOOT.

We feel it necessary to call to your mind the distinguishing points of this property. For any length of time past property has been incessantly advertised around 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th and beyond along VERMONT AVENUE, sales being recorded as high as $3750 for what is 45th, and any number of corners often less in size than 48 ft., selling for all the way from $3000 up, every one of these sales being around $50 per ft. to $75 per ft.

To tell you plainly that the streets so named are one and all BELOW VERNON AVE., 1 FULL MILE to a mile and a quarter south of the SANTA MONICA-VERMONT AVE. BUSINESS CENTER, and then to tell you that this 200 ft. corner we offer for $50 per foot is right up within two blocks of where the business is done today, where the brick buildings are, that dominate and will always hold the main part of the business transacted at least for some years on Vermont.

Also to tell you that residence property on the real or "upper" 49th st., itself a 110-ft. parked boulevard, brings $2000 a lot ($40 a foot for residence property only,) and a veritable forest of houses springing up around it.

If any of you have been attracted to those "way-down" properties, where it is "all in the future" IS IT SIMPLY BECAUSE YOU HAVE NOT KNOWN? or is it because "OH, I WISH I HAD ONLY KNOWN?"

WE ARE OFFERING THIS WEEK
200-FT. CORNER ON VERMONT AVE.

SPRING ST., NEAR FOURTH.

60x150 TO 20-FOOT ALLEY.

This lot with a 16-story building on it would cost about $750,000; this would be $150,000 each for a syndicate of five; the income would be about $114,000 a year; deduct your own or your architect's ideas of what the expense connected with such a building would be, and you will see about what the net income per month would be for each of the five. And, too, it would be in that class of investments which is most highly prized by that class of investors who have the largest funds to place, and who seek ABSOLUTE SAFETY first, rate of interest next.

However, in this case you get the ABSOLUTELY SAFE feature with a rate of income which, if offered on the streets of one of the money centers of the East would create a scramble for it that would push clear off the face of the map any scramble you ever saw—all the way from the mix-up of both teams over a fumbled football up to the scrimmage of the patriots who throw themselves into the breach for immolation upon the altar of their beloved city when she is threatened with the triennial pending vacancies in the various chairs of her "City Hall."

Yes, sirree, and then some. So, if it's a good income you want, coupled with a safety cinch, just anchor your wad to this location, and you'll not get stranded with the driftwood upon the shores of financial failure. Why don't I do it, then? There you go again. There are two kinds of fellows in this village about whom, when they die, might be written the time-worn epitaph:

"Here lies a man who did no good—
And, if he'd lived, he never would;
And where he's gone and how he fares
Nobody knows and nobody cares."

They are the fellows who, when they read the facts laid down in such ads as mine—they do one of two things—either say, "If it's so good and going to grow so fast, why don't you keep it?" or else they compare the price (now $6500 per foot) with what I asked for IT TWO OR THREE YEARS AGO; instead of comparing it with what is asked for OTHER LOTS NOW. And say, Bud, let the old man drop a word or two into your eye right here; if you want to get rich on Spring and Fourth street property, don't try to "get funny," but "get busy." I offer you an opportunity. I'm getting to an age now where I don't like to carry debts, but, in answer to your question as to why I don't put up that 16-story building, I'll say this, that I'll be one of five to build it—$150,000 each; if you can pull four of yourselves together and want me to be the other fellow, I'll promise to be the fifth, unless some of you are so pesky ornery I don't think I could get along with you. Anybody can get along with me. So now, if some four, or even eight of you nice fellows, like—like, well, say like "mile-wide smile" Rob Rowan or Busy Boniface Billicke or Happy Hooligan Holman, or Goodfellow Marshmallow Marsh, or a few other choice spirits with whose names I would take liberties except for the fact that I only started in to give "samples," I say if some four or eight of the dozen or two fellows who know a good thing when they can get time to figure on it will take this matter up seriously, I'll go in with you (or let you take five fifths if you prefer,) and we can put up $75,000 each and borrow the balance and have a wonderful tower down there. It would be between the Trust building and Hellman building on the north, and the elegant buildings on the south at Fifth and Spring, and the ones to go up later on Fifth, which, of themselves would surround us with such improvements as would keep us in the "center" long after the "edges," no matter how good their buildings are, realize that you can "shift" a business center from such surroundings as protected First and Spring an awfully lot easier than you can pull tenants from such buildings as the Hellman, the Union Trust, the Rowan-Billicke Syndicate, or the Spring St. Syndicate's sixteen-story.

If you've got $75,000 in cash and $75,000 in nerve, then you call me up and I'll make an appointment to separate you from the cash and put you next to a monthly rent check that will furnish you a mansion "on the shady side of easy street," in the summer with money enough for your winter months to enable you to retain a "floor" of the Alexandria, where you can sit in the California morning sun and watch "that 16-story building" GROW—into a 20-story. For further details come and let's talk it over.

BOAZ DUNCAN,
447 Wilcox Bldg. 9

P. S.—N. B.—That is to say, read this, too. If you are one of these "subdividing fiends," always on the lookout for "acreage for subdivision," then see about 1200 acres at Rialto; within about 2600 feet of the hotel—in the center of town.

And now just remember this; I've been offering it at $85 per acre, or $100,000 for a month or two, but I'm doing it MONDAY ONLY, with fear and trembling. For this reason; I fear that if it IS taken, an electric car line clear through the center (one mile) will be announced within a few weeks, and I will probably have lost about $65 per acre (making only $150 per acre,) or $78,000 by not having held it a few weeks or months longer. I was on a lot on Spring st. the other day, which I sold for $25,000 (by hard licks and tear-stained ads,) which the tenant says would now easily bring $125,000. I sold another near it for $48,000, which would sell now in an hour for $125,000; another for $93,000, which DID SELL in about four years for $205,000, and would today sell for $480,000; so you see the old man hasn't skinned the "other fellows" so bad that he has to take up collections for 'em when winter comes around. But I'll tell you right now that the prices when I did sell "looked high," as much so as $6500 a foot or $85 an acre does now.

SO IT MAY LOOK HIGH AND STILL MAKE A FORTUNE FOR YOU.

This 1200 acres is as fine a piece of land and lies as beautifully as you ever saw; if you doubt it, lets go and look at it. I believe you'll buy it if you go. If you do you'll have to take the 580-acre water proposition with it, price $10,000. If interested see me on Monday only— that's honest and bona fide. I thought yesterday I'd withdraw it from the market till the electric road is announced, and I think now that I WILL DO SO VERY SOON, and wouldn't bind myself beyond Monday. See me then, or see

THIRD ST. 100-FT. FRONT. THIRD ST.
$130 PER FRONT FOOT
CHEAPER THAN ADJOINING PROPERTY.

Third st. in the vicinity of San Pedro st. and Central ave. affords one of the best opportunities for safe and profitable investment. It has and will have more substantial business houses than East Fifth st. The specific property that I am now offering is about 200 feet west of Central ave and thus most favorably situated in one of the most active business centers in Los Angeles. Numerous street car facilities. Large business blocks already occupied. Any property there is cheap at $600 a foot, and I can sell 100 feet at $470 a foot—or only and $12,000 cash will handle it. Beat it if you can for present value, safety and profit.
$47,000,

XMAS
PRESENTS

CHRISTMAS REAL ESTATE.

Why don't you switch off this year and buy the frau a choice bit of real estate for Christmas The accumulating profits on it would buy another piece of Christmas realty every year hereafter.

We have got the choicest lot of Christmas presents in the business district you ever saw. Nice big real estate snaps that would tickle the heart of old Santa Claus if he could only get them into his basket and down the chimney and into the lady's stocking. Buy one of 'em and hang the deed on the Christmas tree, and surprise the wife into the realization that there is something original about you. This has been a prosperous year, and you can afford to go in for something nice like the following.

STOCKING FILLER.

63½x115 feet, at the northwest corner of Seventh and Flower streets, where all the fuss has been kicked up lately; $125,000; next Christmas you wouldn't take $200,000 for it. This would just tickle the wife to death.

CHIMNEY CHASER.

Almost small enough to go down your chimney. Buy it for the little boy; start the young man in life with a bit of land all of his own. 25x110 feet, close to union depot, for $6000; situated at 611 Ceres ave. Contains a modern cottage. Let the kiddie go down and collect the rent. Give him some practical business ideas. And then there is a heap of consolation in hearing him say: "Dear old dad," when you hand him the deed. (Wish I had one of my own to hand it to.)

HANG IT ON THE TREE.

55x100 feet at southeast corner of 4th and Towne ave.; $500 per foot, $27,500. One block from the union depot, and one from the market bank. How would this do for the daughter? One year's profits on it would send her to Europe to study music.

THIS FOR YOU, OLD MAN.

You know you deserve it, so don't overlook yourself this year; $75,000 is all you need to buy 4th and Figueroa, 120x165 feet on the southeast corner it's so devilishly close in, old chap, ye know, etc., that it's bound to please you by duly increasing in value as the months roll on.

THIS FOR YOU, OLD MAN.

You know you deserve it, so don't overlook yourself this year; $75,000 is all you need to buy Figueroa and 4th, 120x165 feet, at the southeast corner; it's so devilishly close in, old chap, ye know, etc., that it's just your size and shape. Prosperity just sticks out all over it.

A CHRISTMAS CORKER.

Nothing like it ever offered since the Neolithic Age; 100x136 feet at the southwest corner of Los Angeles and 8th; $125,000; one block from same size, Los Angeles st. corner held at $250,000. One block from another held at $200,000. One block from Easy street. Just next door to Old Man Opulence.

How's this for a Christmas tree? Ever see anything like these bargains? Call us up for terms. Money is easy now, and any amount of it obtainable.

ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.
3000 ACRES.

In subdivisions 5, 10, 20-acre lots up, $175 to $250 per acre, ¼ cash, in the famous San Gabriel Valley, the garden spot of Los Angeles county; admittedly the finest walnut and alfalfa section in Southern California; the most abundant water supply; the deepest and richest soil; get in on the ground floor; this is positively our last subdivision of Lucky Baldwin's famous rancho, La Puente, and the last chance to get choice acreage at first cost direct from the owner. During the past 12 months we have sold about $1,000,000 worth of land for Mr. Baldwin in this district, and in nearly every case to practical farmers. And while alfalfa and walnut growing continues to be the chief attraction, this soil is equally adapted to the growing of potatoes, corn, berries, and all other kinds of garden truck; 1600 inches of water have been developed on this great ranch during the past year, and the growing crops of alfalfa, the beautiful young orchards, attest to the richness and fertility of the soil. This tract is close to Los Angeles, traversed by the Southern Pacific, close to the Salt Lake, and convenient to the Los Angeles-Covina branch of the Pacific Electric. Are you aware that Mr. H. E. Huntington has purchased 1000 acres in this district recently. That means quick development and speedy doubling of values. Reader, this is your opportunity. Come into our office and see maps and get further particulars. Remember, the terms, only

FOR SALE—

A FEW WORDS ABOUT GRAPE CULTURE IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Any one looking for a profitable home will do well to consider the wine industry in Northern California, which is only in its infancy at the present time and offers opportunities for investment that are not equaled in any other branch of agriculture in this or any other State.

A good vineyard yields a larger and more certain income in proportion to the amount of capital invested than anything else we know of. Northern California is particularly well adapted to the growing of wine grapes and is already fast becoming one of the great wine-producing countries in the world.

We have made a special study of vineyard lands and we have on our list some splendid properties, both improved and unimproved.

For those who wish to start from the bottom and work up we can offer first-class unimproved land near railroad and good town, for from $15 to $50 per acre. We have one tract of 300 acres that we can sell for $50 per acre, that is all grape land. Another of 600 acres for $18.50 per acre, that is only 3 miles from railroad and county seat of one of the most prosperous of the northern counties. Then we have small improved ranches with some vineyard already started and lots of land still to be planted; for example, we have 50 acres of hill and valley land, 3 miles from railroad station, that has 7 acres of bearing vines, 3 acres of orchard, 6-room house, barn and outbuildings, that we can sell for only $3000. This is a good start for a small investment. For $5000 we have a splendid property of 159 acres, 2½ miles from railroad, 20 acres in vines, house, barn, etc., together with 8 head of stock and complete farm implements, there are beautiful shade trees around the house and fine water; this is a good start and can soon be made worth twice the amount. For $7000 we have a 500-acre ranch, with 22 acres in bearing vines, 80 acres farm, 5-room house, barn, etc., all fenced, has some fine redwood trees and living springs of water. If you want a smaller home and one that is all improved we have 15 acres in full-bearing vines that we can sell for $12,000; a fine 9-room house, a stone wine cellar (150,000 gallons' capacity), wine press, wagon, horse, farming tools, etc., close to town and railroad station.

For the man that can afford to purchase a first-class improved vineyard, we have a beautiful place on which all the hard work of getting started is already done and is producing a fine income. We have an ideal country home, consisting of 194 acres, near the railroad, within 100 miles of San Francisco; it has 45 acres of full-bearing choice wine grapes and nearly all the balance is good grape land, has a modern 13-room Eastlake residence with 2 bathrooms, beautifully finished and decorated, situated on a wooded knoll, surrounded by lawns, shrubberies and ornamental trees, and has 3 beautiful fish ponds. The house commands a grand view of the surrounding mountains and valley; there are 2 large barns, a nice farmer's cottage of 5 rooms and bath, stone dairy house, cellars, etc., water piped to all the buildings from mountain springs. The price $35,000, and it is really a beautiful home and will pay a large interest on the money invested from the start. We have many other properties, both large and small, and we should like to show them to any one interested in purchasing a home in Northern California. FOR SALE—
The compliments of the season to you, and, say! Did you attend the Parade of Products at Santa Ana in Orange county on the 5th inst? Wasn't that a stunner? For an all-round, honest, straight up and down common sense display of practical, money-making, what-you-need-every-day products of the richest soil and most glorious climate of this world or any other, Orange county took first prize. From oranges, walnuts, oil wells, celery, all the way down through the fruit and vegetable kingdoms, to eggs and peanuts, Orange county is in it, with both feet. The parade was indeed a revelation to many strangers who were not familiar with the unbounded possibilities and great diversities of Orange county's products. But what I want to say at this time is, I have been in the real estate business at Orange—the garden spot of this banner county for twenty years. I have all the best bargains on the market and can give intending buyers several practical pointers as to where and what to buy as an investment. Orange, walut, apricot and mixed ranches, all sizes and prices. Also some very desirable chicken ranches from $700 to $2100. Good buildings, easy terms. 5 acres good rich soil, water stocked at $125 per acre. Then in town property I can sell you a nice, modern, 5 or 6-room cottage and large lot, which would cost you $4000 in Los Angeles, for $1500 to $1800. At the top of the heap I am offering a 41-acre orange grove of young Valencia and Navel trees. Income past season $4000. Fine building, only $625 per acre. On terms. A description and picture of this last named bargain will be sent you on application. For further information write me.

FOR SALE—
THE GREAT CATHERINE DUNNE RANCH.

We have this large tract of land, known as the CATHERINE DUNNE RANCH, subdivided into 10 and 20-acre lots, located in the FAMOUS SANTA CLARA VALLEY, for sale in small tracts, where you can raise anything that grows without irrigation. The small farmer can MAKE BIG MONEY on 10 acres. The fine property is located only 20 miles south of San Jose, on the Coast line of the S. P. Ry. and adjoining the thriving little town of Morgan Hill. Read the government report on soils of 1904—

"In the way of natural attractions and possibilities in intensive horticultural and agricultural pursuits the San Jose area offers excellent advantages to the homeseeker of moderate means and industrious habit, while those of little or no means may readily obtain labor of their more fortunate neighbors, and by careful investment themselves become independent. . . . The fertile soil, favorable climate and fortunate location in regard to markets and facilities for transportation have rendered this section one of the most important horticultural and agricultural districts of the Pacific Coast."

Then come in and talk to us about the wonderful possibilities of this section; also get our prices and terms.

ALHAMBRA.

FOR SALE—

THE HOME PLACE

of Los Angeles county is Alhambra, and all you need to prove this to your own satisfaction is to come out and see what Alhambra means. We are having a steady growth in our population, because the beauty of our location in the famous San Gabriel Valley, combined with the advantages of fast electric transportation and 85-cent gas and electric lights, and all other things which make life worth living in an up-to-date community are here.

We have some choice locations for homes, one at $2100, near the car line and 176-foot lot to an alley, frontage of 105 feet. We consider this one of the choicest opportunities in Alhambra, and would be a fine place for the location of a department-house, of which we are very much in need. Every house is rented as fast as it can be finished, and a continual demand for more.

A choice corner on First street, which street would be a credit to any community, can be had for $3000, if taken right off. First street is closely built up, and very little property is for sale, and a purchase here would be one of the best investments.

$2500 for your choice of two modern 5-room cottages, with all modern improvements; cement work done, lawns, right close to the car line, and in the best rental section of the city.

From $2000 to $5000 we have several choice bargains in new and modern houses, with all up-to-date improvements, in very fine localities. If you will spend a few hours with us looking the ground over, it will be worth your while.

GET A FOUNDATION

for that home of yours, by buying a lot at Alhambra, where lots are the most reasonable in price, considering advantages offered, of any one in the county.

We can offer you lots near the car line, with all street work in (and street work here means the very best that can be made,) at prices from $500 to $700. Lots of full size, 50x160 and deeper. A number of locations, all of them very attractive, and from almost all of them you can have the most beautiful view of the mountains, for which the valley is so famed.

If you want to build, we will build a house for you with a very moderate payment down, and afterward you can pay for it as easily as you can pay rent.

DON'T FORGET ALHAMBRA ACRES.

DON'T FORGET ALHAMBRA ACRES.

You will miss one of the most beautiful sights in the county if you do not see the Palm Drive section of this fine subdivision, which has been attracting a great deal of attention, and is now completed with the street work, and ready for inspection and sale.

FOR SALE—

The active market of the last few days has confirmed our statements of the WISE INVESTOR. The GATEWAY OF THE SAN GABRIEL VALLEY has been the scene of great activity for the last week. ALHAMBRA THE GATEWAY is the logical place for a home and investment. The beauty of the scenery, the car service, the educational advantages and the social conditions are such as to recommend ALHAMBRA.

We have some good buys which we offer for the coming week at prices which should speak for themselves:

$400 for a good 50-foot lot near the cars and schools. This is a low price today, and won't last long; half cash.

$1150—A good corner of 100-foot frontage with an east front and with sewer connections. This is a GOOD ONE, and would be a good buy.

$1150—Here is a good one; a 5-room house plastered, near the car line, close to schools and surrounded by good neighbors. This won't last long, so get busy. Easy terms.

$1650—For a newly finished 4-room house on a good street; extra deep lot and with excellent view of mountains.

$3250—For an eight (8) room house, new and modern; all conveniences, and on the whole a fine home for some one. The terms are good, and it is one that should sell quickly.

$3500—8 rooms, old house with 4 lots, each 150 feet deep. An excellent home for a little money. The place cannot be duplicated for the money in California. It will grow in value and should be investigated.

The lots on the C. & M. Tract are of the BEST. The mountain view is superb. The street work is all done. The lots are covered with fine, healthy orange trees. They will make good home sites. Terms to suit all.

LITTLE FARMS. THE HUBBARD RANCH TRACT. Some prefer small pieces of acreage for truck farming. This is the place for berries and vegetables. Near to car line and on good road. Terms are easy and inducements to homeseekers.

AN EXCELLENT VILLA SITE; 150 feet by 300 feet, with large OAK TREE, near to car line and well located. This is near to South Pasadena and the OAK KNOLL SECTION.

Another week of phenomenal success has been chalked up on the credit side of the score board of events, in the career of that grand old man, "the wizard," the best trader in the United States. He has gladdened the hearts of many of his clients in the past six days, by exercising his remarkable ability of trading property that they did not want for property that they did want. That is pretty strong, isn't it? Well, that is his hobby. He has made a life study of this work, and that is just what he does. His trades embrace property in every State in this great Union, and he is truly a "wizard." The word "failure" is not in his vocabulary. He has brought success and happiness to others; why not you? His treasure box is just brimming over with good things this week. Here are a few of them. Pick them out and DO IT NOW.

1272. A first-class vacant lot, 50x140, southwestern Los Angeles, one block from West Adams st.; fine location; price $2100 and clear. Would like to exchange for a lot in the west or northwest, of a little higher value. Will pay $500 difference.

1286. 7-room modern house, porcelain bath, gas and electric light; Highland Park. Mortgage $2100, 7 per cent. Price $3300. In exchange will consider a vacant lot in the southwest not over $1500 in value. Will make the difference. Put a cross on this.

830. 7-room cottage on West 20th street; lot 50x131; mortgage $1600; price $4500. Want ranch of same value.

442. 6-room modern cottage on South Flower st., porcelain bath, gas and electric light, mortgage $2000; price $3000. Want beach cottage for equity. This is peaches and cream for somebody.

1284. Here's a fine lot. Central avenue, 51x145; price $8500; mortgage $3500. Owner will accept in exchange any good Los Angeles property and will assume. You will have to be quick for this one.

1157. A 9-room house, modern in every appointment, S. Grand ave., between 37th and 38th sts. Lot 51½x142, with a 4-room cottage in the rear. Will be good renting proposition. Mortgage $3900; price $7,800. Wants Los Angeles cottage or lots for equity.

220. 10-room modern residence on W. 30th st., between Hoover and Vermont ave.; hardwood floors downstairs; lot 50x137. This is a fine location and a nice piece of property; mortgage $1700; dirt cheap at $6000. In exchange wants a small ranch between Los Angeles and the ocean, on a car line preferred. Will pay as high as $3000 difference. This is the real thing; don't delay.

1285. We have 13,000 shares of manufacturing stock, par value $1. We have it under market price and can turn it in on Los Angeles or good ranch property, with $2000 in cash. Price 30c a share. Grasp your opportunities.

1283. 32 acres of fine land, water in abundance, in the Imperial Valley. This will make some one independent in a few years. Price $1600. In exchange want Los Angeles, Alhambra or other suburban. Will assume and pay cash difference up to $3000. A snap!

1282. 80 acres one mile from El Centro, Imperial Valley; 25 acres in barley; 40 shares of Imperial water stock; $3500 and clear of incumbrance. Want Los Angeles or suburban. Will assume.

1280. 320 acres of the finest kind of fruit land in Tulare county; free from alkali; close to the railroad; is all under cultivation. Price $12,800; mortgage $1200. Want ranch or city property close to Los Angeles. You can't beat this.

1274. A ten-acre country home and fruit ranch, near Stanford University, about 30 miles from San Francisco; set to apricots four years old; 7-room house, other buildings and improvements, which cost between $5000 and $6000. Price of this property is $10,000, and it is clear of incumbrance. In exchange want Los Angeles property or vicinity.

1278. First-class business, consisting of a complete stock of dry goods, groceries, shoes and general merchandise, in a fine little town in Southern California; stock will invoice $18,000. This business is clearing $250 a month. In exchange want ranch, near San Dego preferred. Would like small cash difference. More "peaches and cream."

1276. Income property in Bakersfield; four stores and an eight-room residence. Income about $125 a month. Price $15,000; mortgage $3000. Los Angeles or beach cottages, clear, will take this. Join the happy throng. Here's the ticket.

1267. We have about 50 half-acre lots, 20 minutes' ride from Los Angeles; a southerly suburb of the city; fine water; streets graded and oiled; fine soil. They are put in on a cash basis from $300 up. Clear. The owner will consider orange groves, good farming property in the northern part of the State, or improved city property. Another ticket.

1275. 95-acre ranch, two miles this side of Whittier; 45 acres in walnuts; water in abundance; income about $3000 a year, and the grove is young; price $30,000; mortgage $11,500, 6 per cent. Would like to exchange equity for Long Beach improved property, or Los Angeles. Investigate this.

1279. 174 acres in the Imperial Valley, about 6 miles from Hopeville; 40 acres in alfalfa; 160 shares of water stock; mortgage $1600. Price $6960. In exchange wants Los Angeles or suburban. Will assume $1600. Might pay difference.

1239. 15-acre orange grove at Corona, full bearing. There is a crop worth $2000 on the trees now. This is one of the best groves in Southern California. Mortgage $4000; price $15,000. In exchange will consider Los Angeles residence or income property. Chances like this come once in a lifetime. Nail it!

582. 2½-story frame house at Cherryvale, Kan.; nice home; two blocks from the main street. Price $2600, clear of incumbrance. Want Southern California property.

1209. 3-room plastered cottage at Yuma, Ariz.; lot 192x150; rents for $15 a month; price $3000. Want Southern California and will assume up to $500. This is a snap.

1217. Brick store building at Brighton, Iowa; metal roof, lot 44x132; spot cash valuation $1500, clear of incumbrance, $20 a month rent. Los Angeles or good Southern California property will be accepted.

1266. 940-acre stock ranch, with running water through it; five miles from railroad station, in Kansas; house, barn, etc. Timber, wire fences; fine locality, price $7680 cash. Will consider ranch property. Prefers the neighborhood of Fullerton. Put a pin.

1257. Three houses in Scranton, Pa.; near Park Place; lot 90x186; one 7-room and two 6-room houses; all modern; rent $35 a month. Price $5000 and clear of incumbrance. Will consider good Southern California or unimproved land near Los Angeles or vicinity. If you want a bargain, here it is.

1243. Two 2-story houses, in good condition; lot 45x150, Minneapolis, Minn.; income $50 a month; price $6000; mortgage $1450, long time. Will consider Los Angeles rooming-houses or acreage, clear. Here's 10 per cent. on the investment.

1218. 143 acre ranch near Mayville, Chautauqua county, New York; 1½ miles from Lake Chautauqua; including stock and implements; fine proposition; dirt cheap at $10,000, clear. Wants an orange grove.

855. 240-acre ranch near Washington, Kan.; 3-room house, barn, granary and sheds; mortgage $3200. Price $12,000. This is a good stock proposition.

3001. We have four fine lots in Washington Heights, Chicago; first-class proposition; cash price $4000 for the bunch; will consider Los Angeles city, or acreage. You can't miss on this.

It's all right to let the other fellow get SOME of the money ALL of the time, and it's all right to let the other fellow get ALL of the money SOME of the time; BUT DON'T LET THE OTHER FELLOW GET ALL OF THE MONEY ALL THE TIME.

This is a part of them. Pick them out. If there is nothing in the above that is to your liking, send in your lists, and we will give you property that you do want for property that you don't want. This grand old man has it. Remember that. Fall in line and join the ranks of his happy clients, and let the "wizard," the best trader in the United States, make you happy, too. Don't procrastinate!

FOR SALE—PIANOS.

PIANOS AT HALF PRICE THIS WEEK.

Why not get one for the family Christmas gift? You don't have to pay cash—a small payment down and we will promptly deliver the piano you select. This week we can give you the privilege of selecting from a splendid list of slightly used pianos that are priced at about half their value.

This list includes such leaders as CHICKERING BROS. WAGNER
KNABE BRADLEY

Two dollars will do the work of one for prices are reduced on that basis.

We also have some unusual bargains in organs and piano players. Organs are priced at $10, $15, $18 and up. Piano players at from $85 to $150; upright pianos at $85, $100, $120, $150 and up.

We will accept payments of $5 to $10 down and as little as $6 a month. We further agree to take back the instrument within two years at the purchase price, provided it is given in exchange for a new instrument.

HIT EXAMINERS IN MEDICIN

Unlicensed Physicians P Attack on State Law.

Will Meet Here to Find W to Get Into Harness.

Board Member Stands Up Statute's Provisions.

Once more the medical law of State is to be attacked by phys who have practiced in other S but who have failed to pass the amination required by the Califo Board of Medical Examiners. A number of these physicians have fied their intention of meeting in Angeles next Thursday evening to steps for testing the constitution of the law.

Through their attorneys, B. P. and W. W. Wideman of this city, eral of the doctors who want lic but cannot get them, assert that law of this State is so framed make it extremely difficult for of their number to practice. Veiled charges of unfairness are against the examiners, but the la are not paying so much attentio this phase of the question as to effort to have the law declared

HIT AT CONSTITUTIONALI

The point to be attacked is pertaining to the nine medical iners. The law provides that these shall be elected by the Society of California, two by the Homeopathic Society and two b Eclectic Medical Society. It is tended that this method of ch officers is in conflict with the C tution, and the matter is to be for the first time before the Su Court. The examiners, it is a should be elected by all the pe appointed by the Legislature.

A list of sixty-three unlicensed sicians in various parts of the has been compiled, and it is e that most of them will be repr at Thursday's meeting at the of their attorneys in the Cop ing, on Broadway.

Several of these doctors relat experiences yesterday. Some of had taken the State examinatio and had failed to pass. FREE LECTURES DRAW CROWDS.

"WIGGINS VAUDEVILLE SHOW" ONE OF CITY SIGHTS.

New Attractions to Be Added This Week Lengthen the Programme Considerably at Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Get More for Less Money Than Anywhere Else.

With the addition tomorrow of two new lectures to the free course at the Chamber of Commerce building there is added attraction at that palace of wonders for tourists and residents. The "Wiggins vaudeville show" now is one of the principal drawing cards down town.

The latest additions to the bill include several counties north of San Francisco Bay, which have combined in the employment of a lecturer to set before the local resident and floating population the charms of that district. This lecturer comes provided with stereopticon slides and a vast fund of information on agricultural possibilities and other attractions.

Redlands, too, sends a lecturer to picture the attractiveness of that charming little city and its environs. Other counties taking part in the continuous performance, which begins at 2:30 o'clock p.m., and closes at 5 o'clock, include Fresno, Stanislaus, San Diego, Orange, Riverside and Los Angeles.

More than 300 slides are shown on the screen in the course of an afternoon, and in addition there are several sets of moving pictures. These lifelike scenes depict the Los Angeles Fiesta, the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, the chariot race in connection therewith, and the Ostrich Farm.

The duration of each lecture is about thirty minutes, and at its close the lecturer is subject to the call of visitors who may desire additional information regarding the county he represents.

That a number of the northern counties have engaged in this method of attracting the attention of Los Angeles visitors is eloquent testimony as to their estimate of this city's preëminence as a tourist center. It also demonstrates that the local Chamber of Commerce is not jealous in any degree of the pulling powers of other parts of the State.

The lectures serve to draw to the Chamber large numbers of people who in many instances spend almost the entire day in viewing the Coronel collection of relics of the mission days and in an inspection of the exhibits of the varied products of this county.

While this promotion of publicity is going on at home, the beauties of Los Angeles county are being displayed and explained in at least five courses of lectures that are being delivered in various parts of the East. Two of these courses are being presented now in New York State, and one each in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Minnesota. Several scores of slides are used in these lectures and the Chamber of Commerce is hearing daily from persons whose attention thus has been attracted.

Railroad companies and bureaus of information in all parts of the country, especially in the Atlantic States, are sending for Los Angeles literature in large quantities. Much of this printed matter is going into localities that it never reached before.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE.

Articles of incorporation of the Los Angeles Real Estate Exchange, with a capital stock of $75,000, have been filed, and the institution will be in running order before January 1.

There have been secured quarters on the third floor of the building occupied by the Wiley B. Allen Music Company on Broadway, between Fourth and Fifth, and workmen now are engaged in fitting up the big room for the purposes intended, which includes an immense blackboard running the entire length of the room. On this blackboard each member of the exchange will be permitted to list three pieces of property, but there will be no limit to the number of such pieces that may be listed with the secretary of the exchange, and to which all members will have access.

Membership in the exchange is obtained by the payment of a small initiation fee and quarterly dues, and the income from this source goes to defray the expenses of the institution. The object of the exchange, as outlined by the prospectus, is to form a convenient place where buyer and seller may be brought together for the inception and completion of all the details of the transaction, and to eliminate the commission feature of the real estate business.

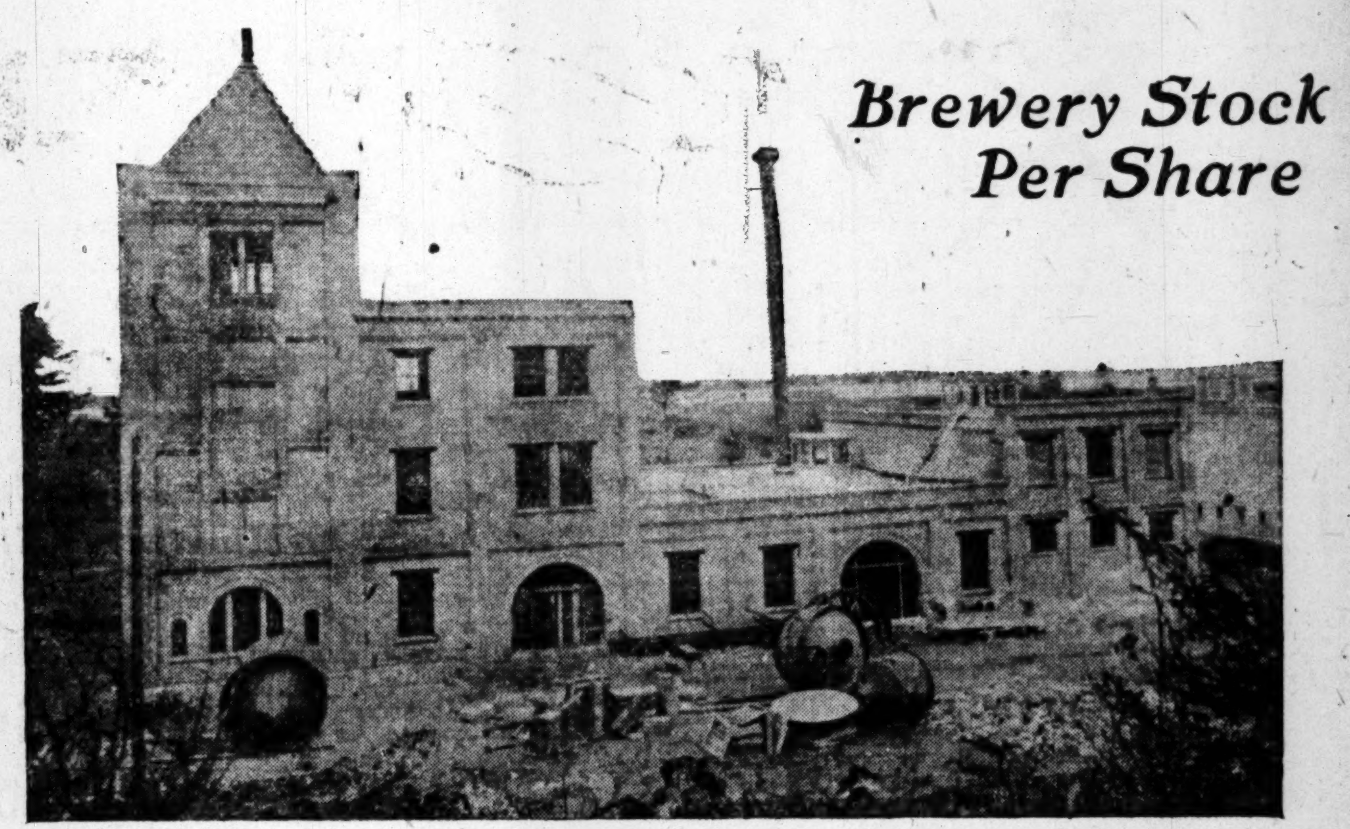
Brewery Stock $6 Per Share



The above cut gives but a faint idea of the colossal building recently completed for the Humboldt Brewing Company. The building is of stone, brick, ce and steel and is absolutely fireproof. It is the intention of the management to make this, by means of lawns, fountains, gravel walks and summer garden, o the sights of Eureka, Cal.

Humboldt Brewing Co.

Location, Eureka, Cal., on the Humboldt Bay, in Humboldt County. One of the best counties in California. Eureka is a thriving town of 16,000, 200 miles north of San Francisco, with numerous surrounding towns of from 200 to 8000. The city of Eureka alone has 70 saloons where beer is sold, and now is importing $16,000 worth of beer monthly. This business will all be controlled by our company, we being the only brewery in the county.

In addition to the local business we have an assured sale of 25,000 barrels of beer the first year in San Francisco.

Eureka is noted for its pure water, without which good beer cannot be made. The good water, difference in taxes, cheap water transportation and other expenses will enable us to make a better beer and deliver it in San Francisco for less than it can be made there.

$6.00 Per Share

Non-Assessable

We Guarantee Twenty Per Cent. First Year

To complete payments on above properties a limited number of shares will be sold at $6 per share until sufficient stock is sold to pay for property, after which time the stock will absolutely not be sold for less than $7.50 per share, if sold at all. If you can find time to call at our office we will take pleasure in showing you photographs of our various buildings and explain to you the advantages of this unusual investment. If you cannot call, write us and we will send you full particulars.

It will pay you to investigate this and remember the $6 shares are limited.

The Humboldt Brewing Co.'s property Eureka, Cal., consists of about 10 acr land and five separate buildings, one which has just been completed and is ing equipped with the most approved chinery known to the brewing busi The building is modern in every res absolutely fireproof, and has a capa of 40,000 barrels per year, but can be a small outlay, increased to 70,000 rels should occasion require.

A very conservative estimate of net profit on beer is $2.00 per barrel, $80,000 for the first year's output. to this the profits from the Steam Br ery, Ice Plant and Bottling Plant, wh should be at least $20,000 more, $100,000, or 33 1-3 per cent. on the capitalization. $100,000 is 10 per cent $1,000,000, which would be the value of the company's properties, sold at that price would bring to stockholder $3 for every $1 investe 200 per cent. Do you know of any imate enterprise that offers as good investment as this? Investigate. us up. Bank references on request.

An opportunity to purchase Brewery stock is seldom offered the general public. Of the three Breweries in Los Angeles not one share of their stock can be chased at any price because it pays too well. An English syndicate had $7,000,000 invested in Breweries in San Francisco because it was the best investment could find. The Rainier Brewery grew from nothing to $6,000,000 in 17 years. Be wise, come in with us while you have the chance. It will not be offered you

All Electrical Manufacturing Companies Are Immensely Successful

The Financial Opportunity of Your Lifetime to Get Into a Money-Making Electrical Manufacturing Business on the Ground Floor.

Permanent Factory Electric Heating and Manufacturing Company Now Completed at Dolgeville, Built Entirely of Brick

What We Are Doing Now and What We Propose Doing in the New Plant

Public Demonstrations

Public demonstrations of these appliances are being conducted all this week at the store of Parmelee-Dohrmann, 436-44 So. Broadway. Don't fail to call and see them.

The business of the Electric Heating and Manufacturing Company represents the latest and most important achievement in electrical development. It is the practical application of electricity to the every-day needs of the people in cooking and heating. It is the kid-glove method of doing the ordinary work of the kitchen, for there is no soot, no smoke and no dirty cooking utensils. Further, it is economical, for with all its pleasing innovations, it costs less money than any other known fuel. The Electric Heating and Manufacturing Company is incorporated with a capital stock of $250,000, divided into 250,000 shares of a par value of $1 each. All the stock is fully paid and non-assessable. There is no preferred stock. The company is now working at its temporary plant, 657-659 San Fernando street, Los Angeles. We manufacture under patents secured to us, various heating and cooking appliances, every one of which is ordered today and every day, far beyond our capacity to furnish. In the simple matter of our electric flat iron alone, orders swamp our shop, although we are turning them out now at a rate of more than a thousand a month. Electric room heaters, pancake griddles, bake ovens, bread toasters and other kitchen and heating necessities are demanded by the people and by the trade in quantities that our present overworked facilities cannot begin to supply. Our new factory at Dolgeville, which is now in course of construction, will not only increase our producing capacity, but also our dividend paying capacity, as the business is one of the most profitable industries on the coast. Its output sells at a profit of fully 300 per cent., assuring big returns for every share of stock in the company. The new plant will be modern in every respect. Our business is an absolute monopoly, as no other individual in the world has the right to manufacture our patented articles.

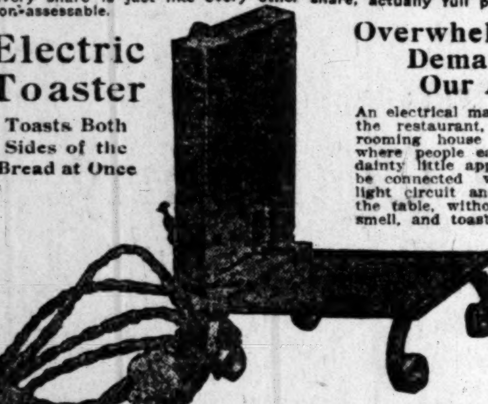
The Most Profitable Industry On the Coast

MACHINERY NOW BEING INSTALLED IN THE ABOVE FACTORY

As shown in the picture above, the new factory at Dolgeville is now completed. The money of the company is being wisely, ably and conservatively managed. Business principles apply, and we pay as we go. There are no assessments on our shareholders for unforeseen conditions or unexpected contingencies. Every share is just like every other share, actually full paid and absolutely non-assessable.

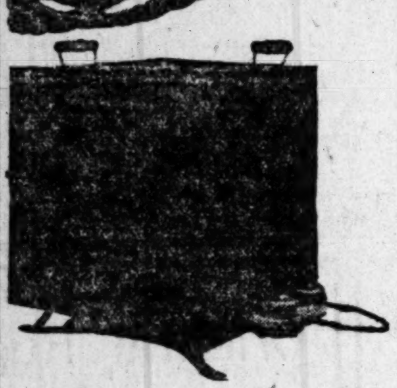
Electric Toaster

Toasts Both Sides of the Bread at Once



Overwhelming Demand For Our Appliances

An electrical marvel for the home, the restaurant, the hotel, the rooming house and every place where people eat and cook. A dainty little appliance which may be connected with any electric light circuit and placed right on the table, without smoke, soot or smell, and toasting to a turn.



Put Your Money to Work

Let us put your money to work for you. It is the only way you will ever get ahead in this world. No man or woman in the world ever got rich unless he put every cent he could rake and scrape together into some kind of a business where the money worked for him. We want to do that for you. We have a business that is safe, honest, sure and without speculation. It is a business that has been in operation for some time past, and has proven an immense success.

Three Vital Points

There are three vital points in the success of any manufacturing enterprise. First, to invent something practical and necessary; second, to manufacture it economically and cheaply; third, to sell it easily. Failure of any of these will balk an enterprise.

This company has surmounted all of these difficulties. We have the inevntion; we own our own machinery, and our success in selling has been proven by the large number of orders on hand.

An Oven That Solves the Baking Problem Forever

The distribution of heat is absolutely uniform. That rare, even brown, on top and bottom, so much desired by careful, painstaking cooks, is secured without effort in this Twentieth Century Oven. Makes perfect bread and bakes biscuits in from eight to ten minutes.

Electric Flat Irons

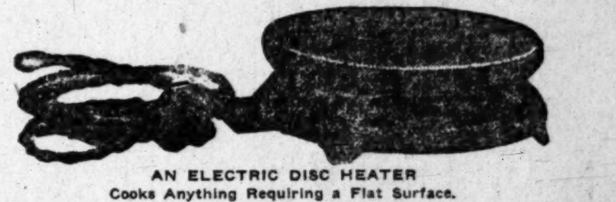
The Electric Flat Iron

Ironing is a pleasure with this new invention. Whether in heavy commercial work of the laundries or in the finest of light work in the home, this flat iron relieves ironing of all its troubles.

Every Appliance A Success

The test of any new invention is the degree of its acceptance by the people. Reflect that, work as we do, we are unable to begin to meet the demand for these appliances and you can realize the success awaiting us in our new factory, where every facility will be provided.

Every Article is a Household Necessity



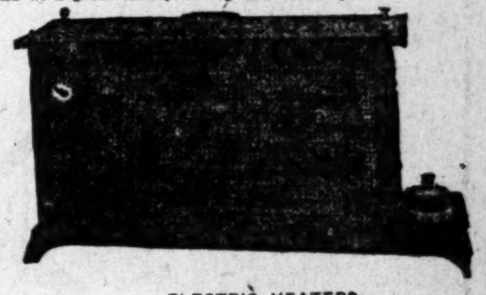
AN ELECTRIC DISC HEATER

Cooks Anything Requiring a Flat Surface.

This takes the place of our ordinary stove griddle and is suited to all cooking purposes requiring a flat surface. It will boil water in five minutes and may easily be transferred from room to room or house to house.

A Heater Without an Equal For Satisfaction and Economy

This heater perform every function of the coal or gas stove heater, without dust, smoke or soot and at a great money saving and economy.



ELECTRIC HEATERS

Made in Several Sizes.

There Is Just a Limited Amount of Stock to Be Sold Below Par for Construction Purposes.

It is the intention of the company to sell sufficient stock to fully equip its plant at Dolgeville. The success of the business, even with the overcrowded condition of our present factory, has been phenomenal. The temporary structure, now in operation at 657 and 659 San Fernando street, is running to its fullest capacity and is still far behind its orders. New machinery, which will arrive before the completion of the new works at Dolgeville, will be installed immediately in the present plant, which even then will be insufficient to supply the demand for our electric appliances. This is an opportunity for investors, large and small, to take shares in an industrial company in which returns are certain and big. Our profits are fully 300 per cent. Our expenses are merely nominal. Many people of means who find in this country many opportunities to speculate at a risk, but who realize that the industrial development of the country is as yet limited, should investigate this. It will be found that every advantage claimed here is claimed conservatively, with no effort to mislead. That full and complete returns are accorded for the most searching investigation. That every stockholder enters the company on an equal footing with every other stockholder, without any preferred stock. That the ratio of profits is exactly as presented here. That the company is absolutely unable to fill its orders by reason of contracted facilities. That the money realized from the sale of stock is actually being used as represented, and last, but not least, that the whole field of industry on the entire Pacific Coast presents no other business so sure, so safe, and so profitable for every dollar invested in its shares of stock.

Those of limited means seeking to improve their condition will find in this stock the opportunity of a lifetime. Remember that the stock advances to 65 cents a share in a few days. Applications for it should be made at once—today—now.

THE "HINMAN" SALE.

W. M. Garland & Co., give the following details of the sale of the "Hinman," noted in The Times several days ago:

"One of the notable sales of the past week was that of the Hinman apartments, at the corner of Seventh and Figueroa streets, for $250,000. It has 114 rooms and is said to be the most perfectly appointed apartment-house west of Chicago. Harry G. Holabird, with W. M. Garland & Co., who negotiated the sale, states that the sale was made to local investors who purchased it for investment purposes, as the property pays a handsome rate of interest on the price."

DIES AFTER INITIATION.

Death of Charles Sharp Is Mysterious.

Story of Fight in Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Azusa Wrought Up, Inquest May Follow.

Charles D. Sharp is dead in Azusa, and the manner of his death is the talk of the town. It is talked in whispers, however, and in groups of only two. Rumor charges a gathering of Odd Fellows with conduct which contributed to the causes of Sharp's death, and Azusa is a strong lodge town. The Odd Fellows are urging a post mortem examination, and the fear of offending the order seems to exist mostly in the minds of those who are not members of the organization.

Many persons in Azusa, when induced to make a statement, declare or admit that the inquiry should not end with the autopsy.

Charles Sharp, a painter and paper-hanger, who was a resident of Azusa for fifteen years, went to be initiated into the order of Odd Fellows on the night of December 1. Later in the evening, in the Brunjes Hotel, where he lodged, it was known that he was ill. For three days he kept his bed. On Thursday he went out on the streets and spoke with many acquaintances, who noticed that he did not look well. In the afternoon he went for a drive with Dr. S. A. Ellis, who was attending him. Friday morning, suddenly, he died. Then the rumors began to fly. Mystery had brooded about his illness.

LEARNS OF MYSTERY.

Rev. Charles F. Richardson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Azusa, learning of Sharp's death before receiving word of his illness, wondered why this was. The dead man had been a member of his church, and his friend. He went out among his parishioners to learn the reason, and found the mystery, and then the explanation. At first there was definite purpose, here and there, to keep the mystery dark.

"Yes, I have heard that story of ptomaine poisoning caused by eating tamales," said Mr. Richardson, when questioned, "and that long continued vomiting produced a strain on the heart, which caused death. I cannot help feeling that the rumor was started with deliberate purpose, to cover up the ugly facts. I do not know who started it, but I can say that the leaders of the Odd Fellows here do not sanction concealment of the facts. These facts can put no blight on the order, which has many of the best men in my congregation as members, but it is unquestionably true that poor Charley Sharp was badly treated last Saturday night.

"I stand somewhat in the relation of confessor to many persons here, and I cannot give names, though only one of those who have talked with me of this tragedy, has asked me not to repeat what he has said. A man whose word I would take for anything, told me that he spoke to Charley Sharp on Thursday, asking him if he had the grippe. Charley answered, 'N—no, not that,' and after further questions, he told of being roughly treated at the initiation, and resenting it, and the affair ended in a fight, many against one. 'They tore my clothes off and knelt on my chest. The fact is, I think one of my ribs is broken. There is severe pain in my chest all the time.'"

Mr. Richardson reported other conversations which had been repeated to him, to the same effect.

PTOMAINE TAMALES.

The tamales which formed the basis of the rumor referred to were eaten by Sharp on Thursday, causing ptomaine poisoning, which induced violent vomiting. According to Dr. Ellis, it was the strain of this vomiting that brought about the heart failure, ending Sharp's life. Dr. Ellis further states that Sharp was a victim of lead poisoning, developed by working with paints for many years, and that this had weakened his constitution.

In regard to the tamales, Mr. Richardson said: "I have not seen any one who says Sharp vomited after eating the tamales, though that is not saying he may not have done so, but many have declared that he was vomiting frightfully on Sunday, long before he ate them. I am told that Sharp's trouble was acute indigestion; I am told more authentically, as a matter of fact, instead of opinion, that Sharp's chest was bandaged, and that he complained constantly of pain in his chest. That is not indigestion. I think for the sake of the order of Odd Fellows, as for other reasons, the matter should be cleared up, so the blame shall rest where it belongs, instead of on the order. As it is, I am sure an effort has been made to shield those who mistreated poor Charley."

SHAMEFULLY TREATED.

T. W. Collopy, who attended Sharp during his illness, said: "Oh, yes; there was a rough-house up there all right. Charley told me that. He said he got mad and went after the fellows. What? No, what would they lose their temper for? There were enough of them to handle him. I don't know whether he vomited before eating the tamales or not. I know he vomited. The doctor was treating him for poisoning; I know that. No, I didn't see any bandages on him. He had pains in his chest, yes. He died of heart failure, of course."

Once Miss Brunjes, daughter of the hotel proprietor, interjected sharply: "They treated him shamefully!"

And underneath the quiet, where quiet is maintained against the natural impulse to discuss the mysterious and shocking, there is a strong feeling that that even if Charley Sharp did start a rough-house in lodge hall, he was treated in a manner which demands inquiry. A post-mortem examination is to be held, and an inquest may follow.

Charles D. Sharp was the son of a Congregational minister in Boston, who survives him. So far as is known, he leaves no relatives in California. He was 45 years of age.

SEEK SPECIAL BOUNTY.

Ex-Prisoners of War Working for Bill Allowing Two Dollars a Day for Time in Prison.

Members of the Union Ex-Prisoners of War Association are hard at work pushing their proposed bill to be submitted to Congress, in which the dominant idea is that all surviving ex-prisoners shall be paid at the rate of $2 a day for each day during which they languished in Confederate prisons, also that they receive a pension of not less than $30 a month.

The bill was indorsed by the Southern California Veteran Association at its meeting at Huntington Beach last October. The reasons the ex-prisoners give for this bill are plausible. They assert that while they were pining in prison they were deprived of the opportunity of securing promotion; prevented from re-enlisting and getting a big bounty; being broken in health by their hardships and often discharged upon their return and forced to spend large sums to regain their health.

Prof. George Young, president of the association, who lives in Santa Monica, wants to hear from all ex-prisoners of war. Another object of the association is to oppose the erection of a statue to Capt. Wirtz, who commanded the Confederates at Andersonville, who was convicted of murdering Union soldiers.

Third Great Sale of the Poole & Jones Tract

The many difficulties which delayed the improvements in this splendid tract have all been overcome and cement work has now been going on for nearly two weeks, and all work will be pushed steadily forward until final completion without any more delays. Some eight weeks ago work stopped because it had gone as far as possible until the city could approve and establish the grades and owing to the large amount of work ahead we found it would be the last week of November before work could actually begin and we regretted the delay keener than any one else. However, it is all past and we desire to thank our many parons and friends for their forbearance and consideration. The majority of those who purchased in our first great sale in this tract, have resold at profits of from $250 to $400. City water pipe is now laid in Kenwood avenue, Normandie avenue, Budlong avenue and Jefferson street, and will be laid in all other streets as fast as needed. Telephone and electric light systems are already completely installed on the entire tract. Gas will be supplied on application. A number of fine homes will be commenced in the immediate future, plans for several being already prepared. An era of active building and great advancement in this unparalleled tract will begin at once. Purchases made now at the company's prices will show good profits in a short time. We now offer in this thrird great sale 8 splendid lots at $1800, 12 splendid 50-ft. lots at $1900, 39 splendid 50-ft. lots at $2000, 9 splendid 50-ft. lots at $2100. $400 cash and $20 per month. Thus placing this magnificent property within the reach of all.

Full Particulars Regarding All Others.

If you are seeking investment or are in the market for a beautiful home site in the most ideal city, you owe it to yourself to see the gem of all high grade residence districts, Wilshire Boulevard. This locality is shortly to be served by one of the best car lines in the city, namely, West Sixth Street. The construction of this line is rapidly nearing completion. We invite you to trace its route and judge for yourself as to the environment through which the resident of the Wilshire district will pass to and from the city. Central Park, Westlake Park, the fashionable hotel districts, Sunset Park, with its beautiful sunken garden, Chapman Park, and numerous majestic private residences are but a few of the attractive features offered a patron of the new West Sixth Street car line. In addition, you might note the absence of gas house, cemetery, livery stable and morgue. No apology necessary for conducting your friend to your home in the Wilshire Boulevard District. Where all other tracts are equal, these are great advantages.

In the Wilshire Boulevard District, "other things" excel. There streets are widest, lots largest, walks broadest, building restrictions most carefully guarded, all street improvements of the very best materials and workmanship, and the buyers of future home sites here are representative business and social celebrities.

As a field for profitable investment, this district has no equal. We absolutely recommend it, we must believe in it, we take pleasure in conducting you comfortably through it, giving you the benefit of our information and experience and do not urge you to buy. We simply urge you to investigate and if the information gained does not prove of decided value to you, certainly no harm can have been done.

Lots range in price from one thousand dollars up to ten thousand dollars. Terms most advantageous.

Ask to be informed especially regarding West Seventh Street Tract, Norton Place, Wilshire Terrace, Boulevard Heights and Wellington Place. These tracts present special attractions.

FOR THE CITY'S POOR.

Daily Opportunity Club Arranges Comedy-Drama Benefit to Be Given Thursday.

Thursday evening the Daily Opportunity Club will present the comedy-drama "The District School," at the Gamut Club Auditorium. The cast will include about thirty persons. The little drama, portraying as it does the school of about fifty years ago, will afford an abundance of amusement for to both old and young. In addition to the play, however there will be a number of interesting specialties, a quartette from the Ellis Club will give two vocal selections, "There's no Time Like the Old Time," and "The Old Oaken Bucket." Samuel L. Todd will give a character song, Charles Hendricks, the blind tenor, will sing "I've Wandered to the Village, Tom;" James I. Bailey will present a character impersonation, and Frank Fay Pratt will render a monologue.

The Opportunity Club is purely philanthropic in character. Its members personally visit among the poor and after careful investigation, seek to relieve destitution and distress, no member receiving any compensation whatever for services. This entertainment is to be given to raise funds for the work of the club, and especially to bring a little Christmas cheer to some to whom the holiday season would otherwise be cheerless.

FOR I.O.O.F. RELIEF.

Under the auspices of the General Relief Committee of the I.O.O.F. of Los Angeles a benefit will be given in Simpson Auditorium Friday evening for the relief fund. There will be a musical programme and recitations. The committee in charge are: T. J. Berry, J. S. Underwood and J. E. Ellis.

Activity of Sales Increases

CALL AT ONCE—BUSINESS MEN ARE SELECTING SITES FOR THEIR HOMES

One of the Most Beautiful Show Places in the World

While it may be true that every foot of property in Southern California is a good investment, yet you will admit that it is prudent to buy in those sections where there is an active demand.

Beverly Hills is not a real estate speculation, but a substantial business enterprise. Glance over the list of Directors and Stockholders, and ask yourself whether or not such men lend their co-operation to any enterprise unless he enterprise rests on the most solid foundations. Already dozens of purchasers who select sites at Beverly Hills have sold at attractive advances.

Water, Gas, Electricity, Sewer, Telephones Finest Car Service

When you build at Beverly Hills you do not sacrifice any city conveniences, but you gain conveniences which even the city does not give you.

Beverly Hills is just the right distance from the smoke and dust of Los Angeles. Its location on the foothills commanding the Wilshire Boulevard district affords a sweeping view and a climate that is unsurpassed. With its broad curving avenues, its oil tamped roads, its wide park-ways and sidewalks, its building restrictions, and the beautiful shrubbery and trees which will be planted—Beverly Hills will be the most beautiful residence spot in all California.

WHILE THE SUCCESS OF BEVERLY HILLS WAS ASSURED BEFORE A SINGLE PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT APPEARED IN THE NEWSPAPERS, YET IT WAS NOT EXPECTED THAT ACTIVE SELLING WOULD BEGIN FOR SOME TIME. THE IMMEDIATE DEMAND FOR PROPERTY—OVER $200,000 WORTH ALREADY GONE—INDICATES HOW BEVERLY HILLS WILL BE SOUGHT AFTER WHEN THE PUBLIC AT LARGE LEARNS EXACTLY WHAT IS BEING DONE. NOW IS THE TIME TO SELECT BUILDING SITES.

We will be pleased to take you to Beverly Hills. It will place you under no obligation.

MONROVIA GROWS FASTER

Monrovia Gains in Population

Postal Receipts For November Increase 40 Per Cent Over Last Year

Big Demand For Houses

An Opportunity

The demand for houses in Monrovia has reached such a point that no other city in Southern California offers so great an opportunity for builders.

What's the secret of Monrovia's prosperity—the solid substantial growth.

Population is now probably in excess of 4000.

At the present rate of increase, the population will reach 10,000 long before 1910.

Now's the time to secure a location for your home, or as an investment.

Monrovia needs several more rooming houses and a new hotel—at least one hundred houses could be filled immediately if they were available.

Monrovia, the most beautiful and prosperous suburb of Los Angeles—grows without booming. You can duplicate most towns. Monrovia cannot be duplicated.

—o—

Eclipses the Huntington.

A story appearing in The Times this morning will create a good deal of sensation in a general way, but centering on Hill street. The Harriman building outlined there, on which work will begin soon, is stated by the projectors to be a more magnificent thing than the Pacific Electric building on Main. It is said that this building for the Los Angeles-Pacific Railroad will cost upward of a million dollars. It is on the same block with the Wright & Callender building, on the corner of Fourth and Hill. These two buildings will set the pace for that thoroughfare. There are several other projected structures on Hill street and from now on other developments on a maginficent scale all the way from First street to Pico on a street which five years ago was looked upon as only a possibility in the distant future.

—o—

City and Country.

I. N. Richards has sold to a local syndicate ten acres on the corner of Florence avenue and San Pedro street for $15,500. To E. G. Brockman the southeast corner of Central avenue and Twenty-fourth street, a lot 50x101 feet, improved with a two-story pressed brick building, for $18,500. Twenty acres in San Gabriel Valley, some few miles from Puente for $3500. To F. and M. E. Pfiefer, twenty acres on Central avenue, south of Florence, for about $1200 an acre. To Mrs. Alexander, a lot in Alamitos Heights, and lot at Glendale for $2550. To Dr. Riddle, lot at Casa Verdugo, $850.

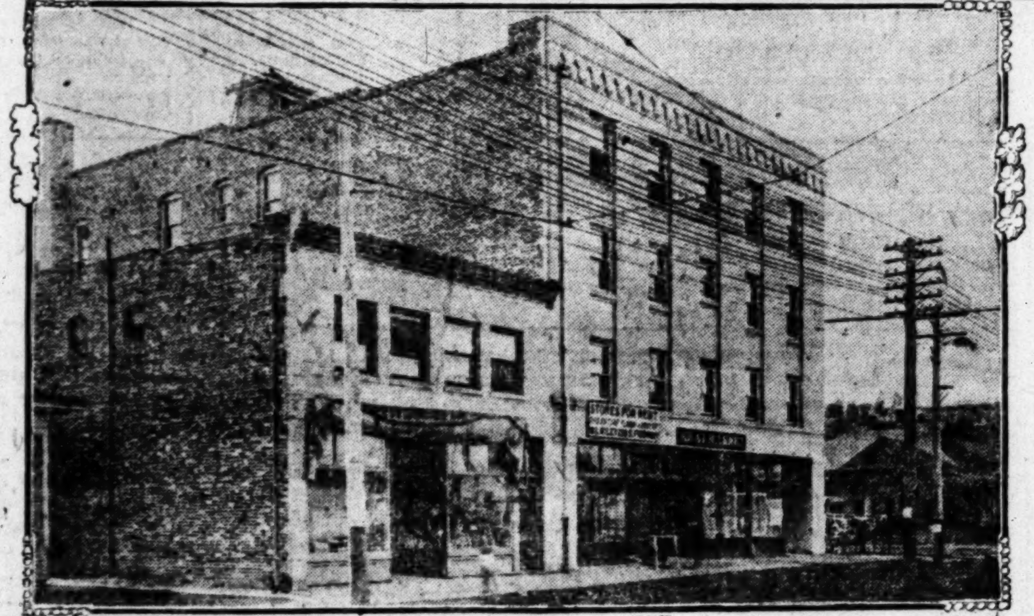
Apartments, corner Figueroa and Second.



Brick business block corner Fremont and Second Apartments, Figueroa near Second

Brick block and two apartment buildings just completed west of tunnel.

WEST OF THE TUNNEL.

A few days ago a story appeared in The Times telling of the beginning of boring for oil around the old Second-street Park some fifteen or sixteen years ago and the recent removal of the last derrick from the district. This section of the city is growing with great rapidity. It will probably surprise hundreds of those living inside of the city limits to scan the groups of fine buildings presented on this page, representing structures just being completed west of the Third-street tunnel.

The least pretentious of them is a beautiful three-story frame apartment building on Figueroa street, between Second and Third. The front of the building occupies a space of fully fifty feet and it is rather more than 100 feet deep.

The mission building, plaster over steel lathing, is on the corner of Second street and Figueroa. It is a beautiful three-story and basement building, with stores on the ground floor and the other floors used for apartments. It is an immense and very artistic structure. The stores are of ample space and well lighted. The apartments above are all bright and airy, with large rooms, and fitted up in every way becoming an up-to-date affair of this kind.

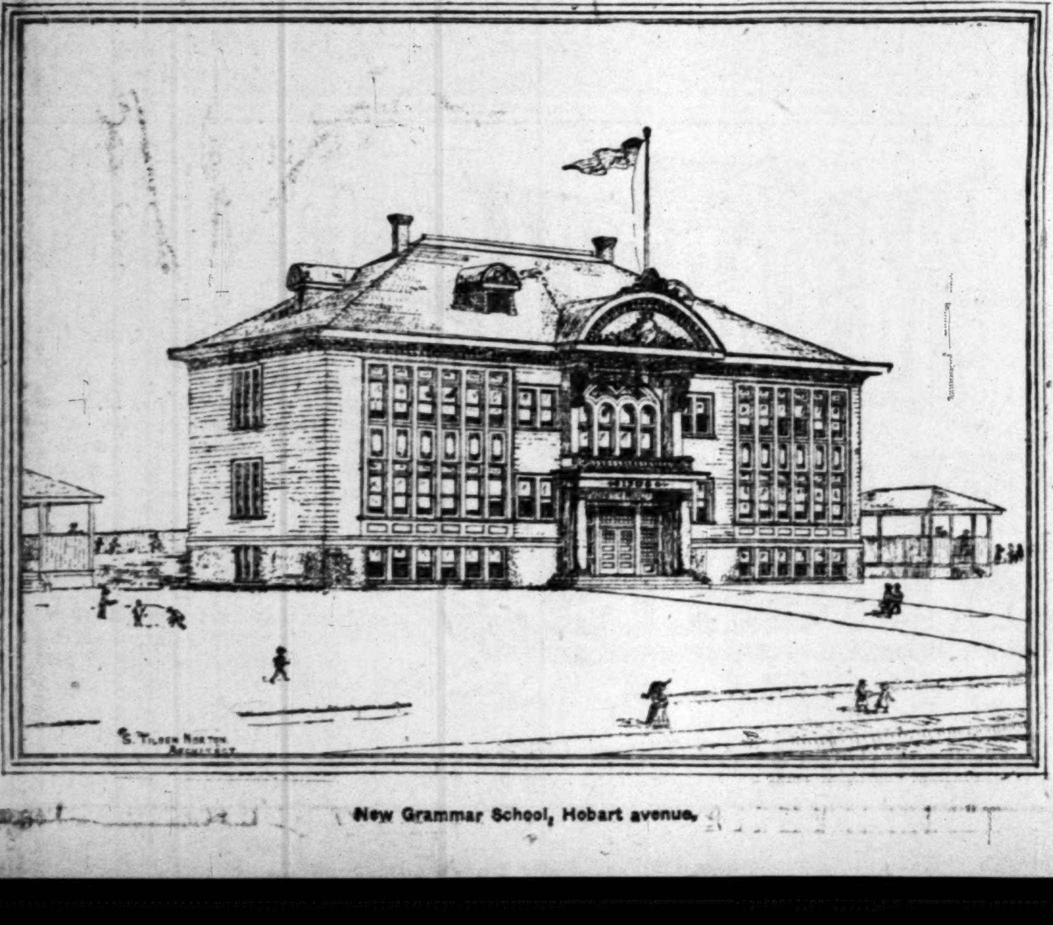
The third building is a great four-story brick structure, the front being in cream-color pressed brick. It is on the corner of Second street and Fremont. The whole lower part is devoted to stores, and the upstairs will be rented for rooms and apartments. It is an exceedingly solid structure.

This and the building mentioned just above cover a space of sixty feet or more on Second street and run back, one on Figueroa and the other on Fremont, a distance of perhaps 150 or 160 feet.

These are only specimens of a great number of apartment buildings and flats that have been erected in this part of the city during the last few months. None of the three is quite finished, but all of them are almost completed.

A NEW PUBLIC SCHOOL.

The illustration accompanying this little sketch represents a public school of the grammar grade just being finished for the city. It is on Hobart boulevard, in the western part of Los Angeles, and has been built after plans drawn by S. Tilden Norton. This building is 70x105 feet, and contains eight classrooms and offices for the principal. It is fitted up in every way with all the modern devices belonging to an up-to-date schoolhouse. It is heated by a hot-air furnace, and cost about $22,000. It is one of the typical new schools, of which so many have been built during the last year to try to keep pace with the great growth of the city. The building is placed in the center of a lot large enough not only to set it off, but to furnish ample playground for the boys and girls who attend this school. The grounds embrace nearly half a city block.



New Grammar School, Hobart avenue.

SIXTH NEAR OLIVE.

Good Lot Commands Handsome Price in Growing New Business Center of the City.

Mines & Farish and Robert Marsh & Co. have just closed a deal by which Louisa Y. Platt conveys to Anna L. Leach a lot 55x130 feet on the south side of Sixth street, just west of Olive. The lot is vacant, and the price $70,000. This is $1272.50 per foot. Teams are already at work excavating the lot as if to build.

EAST FIRST STREET BLOCK.

Sells for Fifty-two Thousand Dollars. It Is Covered With Pressed Brick Block.

Robert Marsh & Co. and Dan Miller have sold for R. B. Bennett to local investors Nos. 319 to 323 East First street, a lot 54x130 feet, for $52,000.

The Drama—Players, Playhouses, Gossip of the Stage.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

THE town needs a great band as a regular feature of the winter months.

We need an organization that will maintain, in its own field, a sort of symphonic reputation; an organization like Ellery's, or Chiaffarelli's first band—but alas! not like the futile excuse of his final musical seance at Venice.

Such a band will not detract from the Symphony's excellent work; rather it will add thereto, for thousands will hear it to hundreds who can afford to hear the Symphony. As a means of education—popular education, so called—the bands of Ellery and Chiaffarelli, and the not-to-be-forgotten Innes, have proved of great service.

For instance, how many of the Ellery patrons, last winter, knew the beautiful music in the first "Peer Gynt" suite, of Greig, until it was voiced by the splendid instruments of his band? Such band music, far from being mere noise, a cacophony of military tempos or a tiresome blasting of sentimental tunes, is a splendid artistic factor whose advantages cannot be underestimated, save by the voice of prejudice or the testimony of mercenary spite.

Such a band will supply the one artistic feature that the present Los Angeles lacks.

We have numerous temples of drama and the promise of still more.

We have had one grand opera season, and the promise of two more.

We have a symphony orchestra and two chamber music associations.

We have one large choral society, two splendid bodies of women's voices, an almost incomparable male singing organization and several smaller associations of great promise.

We need the band——

And the director is in town.

He is Francesco Ferullo, ex-leader of Ellery's band, and one of the most brilliant, finished and masterly conductors in the United States today. Ferullo has that which most Italian leaders have not—a sympathetic insight into the music of other races. His Wagnerian interpretations are intensely German, he is a master of modern French music, and his reading of Grieg's compositions, in absolute orchestral style, was in true Scandinavian spirit.

What makes Ferullo so desirable to Los Angeles is the very fact that he doesn't need the job.

The fortune of love has removed the young director from the field of personal want, for he is at present spending the winter with his rich father-in-law, who lives in the fashionable Westlake district.

His situation has enabled Ferullo to collect one of the finest directorial libraries to be found in this country. He estimates the value of the scores at present in his home at $3000, with a large number which have not been shipped out from the East.

Further than this, his prominence will enable him to get together a band of splendid artists.

Within twenty days he can bring here Antonio Decimo, the great clarinet player; Liborio Lomonte, with the exception of Arthur Pryor, one of the greatest trombone soloists in the country, and a player of Pryor's caliber; a celebrated oboe soloist, and an equally celebrated baritone.

Giuseppe Curti, the wonderful baritone of the Ellery band several years ago, is in Italy, awaiting Ferullo's call.

"If I have a band," says Ferullo, "it must be a good one. I can't take a contract for a mere noise. I would ruin my reputation and disgust my patrons. If a band doesn't stand for art, and the interpretation of the best music, it has no excuse for existence.

"I must have a band with all the parts complete. I must have woodwind sufficient to drown all the shrillness of the brass; I must have first and second baritones, first, second and third trombones, bass clarinet, the quartette of French horns, the full saxophone complement—capable leaders of all parts.

"My scores, in fact, are all made for such a band; they are made, as close as possible, to simulate orchestral effects.

"In the summer I shall go East, where my engagements have already been made; my time here is limited, and a band of the caliber I should like to form here, and shall certainly form in the East next summer, would do its best business in the months of January, February and March."

Now, it mustn't be understood that Ferullo is personally exploiting himself for a Los Angeles season. The director, with his family, has shunned the newspaper offices ever since his arrival, more than a month ago. He had no intention of directing at all this winter, as it is his first vacation from strenuous duty in many years. The Times has sought Ferullo, and by request, he has expressed himself.

With him is Palma, brass soprano of the purest, most limpid tone imaginable. If Ferruilo has a band, it is of course Palma for the first chair among the cornets.

Ferrullo's organization will be a compact one, established upon a solid basis, and with a strong idea of permanency.

Local musicians resent very much the influx of outside players, especially Italians. This is not to be wondered at, especially when the troop is brought here in as hopeless a manner as was Chiaffarelli's company, with no hope of ever getting out of town again. The musicians become a drug on the market, and even competition is killed.

But here's the situation; the town needs a winter band. The moment has been passed by everybody else, and Ferullo appears the proper man to seize it, if it is to be seized at all. Ferullo's extraordinary personal advantages—absolute genius of interpretation—make him all the more desirable.

If his band is formed, he will be offering the town something which it has not, and which it needs.

Neither he nor his players will interfere with the local scheme of things.

How long will it take to assemble Ferullo's band? Ferullo himself says he can get forty-five strong men and half a dozen soloists in twenty-five days. Further, he can have them in playing condition in that time.

Who's to do it? Will it pay?

There are two great "Ifs" that stand in the way.

If conducted along the right lines, perhaps that of the Garden Cafe as it existed at Venice under Lawton's management, the scheme looks profitable.

Who will do it? That's the biggest question of all. Yet there are plenty of places. Whether skating will last the winter out is a very serious question to a number of promoters.

Yet, after all, is it an idea that appeals to the local amusement-makers—personally, and to their pocketbooks? Perhaps so; perhaps decidedly the reverse. There's no way to find out, save by asking.

Mr. Behymer says it appeals to him.

ROBERT EDESON,
as Strongheart, the educated Indian, in the play of that name. The photograph shows Edeson in the second act, at the training quarters of Columbia University, between the first and second halves of the big football game of the year. An act of treachery has been discovered, and the guilty ones direct suspicion toward Strongheart, who afterward proves himself innocent.

FRANCESCO FERULLO,
the brilliant and versatile ex-director of the Ellery band, who is spending the winter in retirement here. Ferullo says if the music lovers want a band for the next three months—a band of orchestral timbre and proportions—he is willing to get it for them.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Robert Edeson, who has not been seen in Los Angeles since his presentation of "Soldiers of Fortune," four years ago, will return to the Mason Operahouse for the week beginning tomorrow night, in William C. DeMille's comedy-drama "Strongheart."

It is said that Mr. DeMille has provided for Edeson a vehicle that is unconventional in every sense, and its central figure is a type new among stage characterizations. Strongheart, an educated Indian, is introduced by the author at Columbia University, where he figures prominently in its bustling life, and becomes a hero of the gridiron. Indeed, through his winning personality and manly qualities he becomes a general favorite, and is welcomed into the best homes. He climaxes his college career by falling in love with the sister of his chum—and here racial prejudice is aroused and the white men reject his suit. His fight to place himself upon a basis of social equality is said to be one of the very best scenes written into American drama of the past few years.

"Leah Kleschna," promised at the Burbank today, is the most interesting stock offering of the month.

The masterly writing of the play and the artful cast which first presented it in Los Angeles have made it a favorite with local patrons of the best productions.

It is of great difficulty, owing to the subtlety of its lines, its small cast and the strange quietness of its most intense scenes ;but great care has been taken in casting it, according to the managerial assertion.

Miss Katherine Willard, Mr. Morosco's new leading woman, will make her début in the title-part, Mr. Mestayer will play the degenerate son, Raoul.

"Old Heidelberg" is again proving its claim as the most popular piece in the Belasco's repertoire.

Business compels the management to continue this excellent presentation through the coming week.

The week's headline attractions at the Orpheum are ventriloquist Trovollo and monologist Charles F. Semon. The latter was formerly of the well-known team of Falke and Semon.

Lina Pantzer, of the well-known acrobatic family of that name, will be seen in a "bounding wire" novelty.

The musical Avolos, xylophonists, and Dillon brothers, who sing their own songs and dispense cheerful nonsense of various sorts, complete the list of newcomers.

The holdovers are Knight and Sawtelle, eccentric dancers; Long and Cotton, in a new act, and the Japanese acrobats.

The perennial "Yon Yonson" will return this afternoon to the Grand Operahouse.

A new comedian, George Tomson, from the royal comedy company of Stockholm, will be seen in the principal part. The support also includes Lois Arnold, of the original "Trip to Chinatown" company.

Black-face minstrelsy will be the attractions at the People's Theater for the week starting with this afternoon's matinee.

A good company is promised, with a band and a number of vaudeville features.

MISS ISABELLE CURL.
Excellent music has been given each year by the First Congregational Orchestra, under the direction of William H. Mead. The first concert of the present year will be given Tuesday evening, at the church, Miss Curl being the soloist. She will sing an aria and rondo from "La Sonnambula," and a song by Sir Henry Bishop. A rare orchestral programme is promised, including Balfe's "Well of Love," Victor Herbert's "Badinage," some themes from the celebrated Smetna's "Bartered Bride," the gavotte from a violin suite by Ries, three dances from "Henry VIII," and the "Nibelungen" march—Wagnerian.

Dramagraphs.

Lulu Glaser's next play is to be called The Arrow Club, and is by Sidney Rosenfeld.

Guy Standing will leave the cast of "The Love Route" to appear in Mrs. Dane's Defense, with Lena Ashwell on tour.

Andrew Robson resigned from "The Duchess of Devonshire" company on Nov. 10 and returned to New York.

The "Wizard of Oz" was sold last week to Hurtig and Seamon. The sale was ordered by Julian Mitchell and William R. Gray, trustees of the theatrical portion of the estate of the late Fred Hamlin

St. Vincent's Catholic Church of Chicago, is to have a model theater, capable of seating 1200 people. The new theater, which is rapidly nearing completion, will open in March under the direction of Edward McGillan, instructor of dramatic art in St. Vincent's College.

A copy de luxe of Leoncavallo's "Viva l' America" march—the outside cover in heavy satin with embossed designs by the artist John Frew—was recently presented to President Roosevelt (to whom the march is respectfully dedicated) by Rudolph Aronson on behalf of the famous Italian maestro. The music is etched on heavy vellum.

When Madam Grisi and Signor Mario were singing in the opera at St. Petersburg the prima donna used to promenade daily with her three little girls. One day the late Emperor Nicholas met them on the Nevski Prospekt and greeted Grisi with: "Madam, I see you are airing your Gri-settes," to which the singer quickly responded: "Nay, sire, they are my Mario-nettes."

Paul Wilstach's play, "Keegan's Pal," has been renamed "The Eastman Case," and will be presented at the Lincoln Square theater, New York, tomorrow evening, exploiting Charles Cartwright as a star. Katherine Gray, Dorothy Revell, and George Fawcett will be the leading members of the supporting company.

Robert Mantell has received from Mounet-Sully a superbly bound copy of the latter's prompt book of King Oedipus, in a translation of the French arrangement of the great tragedy, in which he acted here in the season of 1903-1904. On one of the fly-leaves is a dedication to Mr. Mantell by M. Mounet-Sully, headed, "From a French Hamlet to a human Hamlet."

Owen Davis has practically completed the dramatization of Arthur Stringer's recent novel, "The Wire Tappers," and arrangements are now under way for its early production. The dramatist, it is said, has not neglected to take advantage of the novel and up-to-date criminal features of Mr. Stringer's story; so, besides being a play of the "Leah Kleshna" type, "The Wire Tappers" is likely to prove a novelty on account of its background of electric effects.

Smith College students of the Dewey and Hatfield houses, Smith College, gave the first important dramatics of the college year Nov. 24, in the presentation of "The Shoes That Danced," by Anna Hempstead Branch, and "The Little God and Dicky," by Josephine Daskam Bacon. The plays were of especial interest, being the work of the two Smith alumnae who have become best known as writers since leaving college. Miss Branch graduated in 1897, and Mrs. Bacon in 1898.

"Dream City" probably will be the name of the new offering at Weber's, which, after a brief preliminary tour, will be presented to New Yorkers for the first time on New Year's eve. The book and score are by Edgar Smith and Victor Herbert respectively. The company engaged for the presentation of the piece is an undeniably strong one, and includes such prominent entertainers as Otis Harlan, Cecelia Loftus, Lillian Blauvet, Cora Tracy, Lillian Lee, Lois Ewell, "Billie" Norton, Maurice Farkoa, Will T. Hodge, Frank H. Belcher, and Joe Weber.

The Countess De La Grange, known on the stage as Lea Dasco, who was a famous beauty during the Second Empire, was found in her room in her zoölogical garden at Cimiez, a suburb of Nice, France, on Nov. 20, shot through the heart. The Countess had recently gone into bankruptcy, but asserted that she had obtained money sufficient to pay her debts. The police think the shooting was accidental.

The Musical World.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Gabrilowitsch and Schoenefeld's version of "The Messiah" will divide leading musical honors this week.

Gabrilowitsch, whose personality, style and accomplishments have already been featured in The Times' musical columns, will appear in a piano programme at Simpson Auditorium on Thursday evening.

The young Russian's programme numbers are a Beethoven Rondo and prelude, a Bach serenade and Gavotte, Schubert's "Moment Musicale" and minuet in B minor, a Chopin sonata and the Marche Funebre, two Arensky preludes, Leschetitzsky intermezzo, and a new "Gabrilowitsch" theme and variations.

"The Messiah" will be given at the Auditorium on Friday night. Mr. Schoenefeld's soloists are Mrs. Catherine Collette, soprano; Mrs. Elizabeth A. Fonda, contralto; Abraham Miller, tenor, and Dr. Henshaw, bass.

The chorus will number 250, the orchestra 40, and the whole will be assisted by Mr. Kingsley at the organ.

—o—

Miss Bartlett's Recital.

Miss Bessie Bartlett will give a recital of mingled music and readings on Wednesday evening, at Gamut Hall. Mr. Sessions will be at the piano, and Miss Bartlett will be further assisted by Miss Estelle Catherine Heartt and Mme. Elsa von Grofe-Menasco.

—o—

Wilczek Concert.

Franz Wilczek, the Austrian violinist, will be heard in concert at Simpson Auditorium on Tuesday evening. His principal number will be the Bach Adagio and Fugue, from the G minor sonata for violin only.

—o—

Organ Opening.

Mr. Kingsley's organ opening has been fixed for Thursday evening, at the Auditorium.

The great instrument, previously described at length in these columns, is one of the finest specimens of organ building in this country.

BRUCE GORDON KINGSLEY.

The magnificent new organ of the Auditorium will be formally "opened" this week in a recital by Mr. Kingsley. His programme, a well-arranged one, reflects the orchestral tendency of present-day organ players, and is likewise eminently modern. His numbers will be the overture to Weber's "Euryanthe," Beethoven's "Adagio Cantabile," Guilmant's "Nuptial March," a Bach gavotte, the dream music from Humperdinck's "Haensel und Gretel," Lemmen's "The Storm," Tschalkowsky's "Danse des Mirletons," and—Wagnerian—the overture to "Rienzi" and Huldigungs' march.

—o—

Mr. Sessions's Recital.

Tomorrow evening, at Christ Church, Mr. Sessions will give a concert, assisted by Arnold Krauss.

Mr. Sessions's numbers include compositions by Bach, Caelliaerts, Pere Martini, Guilmant and Widor.

Mr. Krauss will play a Vieuxtemps concerto and Beethoven's Romance in G minor.

Massenet's "Ariane."

During the past week the attention of the French musical world has been centered on M. Jules Massenet, whose new opera, "Ariane," was given its first production at the Opera last week, says the Musical Leader. Massenet has long been a hero of the French operatic public, and since the death of Gounod he has easily held the first place among the operatic composers of the nation. Whatever may have been the lack of attention paid his work in other countries, in France his popularity has been steadily on the increase, and the past four years have seen a great advance in the number of productions of his works.

For "Ariane" the critics have only words of praise. Gabriel Faure, the brilliant director of the Conservatoire, writing for the Figaro, describes the work as one of unusual beauty, in which Massenet has employed all the qualities of grace and charm which distinguish his music above all others. Between the lines it may be read, however, that despite the splendor of the orchestration and the employment of all the musical devices of which Massenet is master, the task of setting such a classic as the story of "Ariane" is fraught with danger for the modern composer. M. Faure himself knows something of these difficulties, for he had one experience of the sort a few years ago without increasing his reputation thereby. However, the reception by both critics and public has been of the most cordial sort, and even if M. Massenet has not created a work which will enhance his reputation he has at least produced the most notable French addition to the grand opera repertoire in recent years. The Opera gave a splendid interpretation of the score, with Mlle. Lucienne Breval, Mlle. Grandpean and MM. Delmas and Muratore in the leading roles. The orchestra, under the direction of M. Paul Vidal, was unusually excellent, conducted with the authority which has marked M. Viday's work through the years of connection with the Opera.

"Ariane' received two performances last week, and will have an equal number this week, while three are promised for the week to come.

With "Ariane" at Paris and "Therese" at Monte Carlo, M. Massenet will be the leader providing operatic novelties for the season. It may here be said that M. Massenet is not in the habit of producing two operas per year. For several years he has maintained his record of a novelty each season, but last year showed nothing to his credit, this being on account of the slowness of the Opera in staging "Ariane."

In this connection it may be interesting to note the great number of works of this ever-busy composer. The list opens with "La Grand Tante," produced at the Opera Comique in 1867, and following come "Don Caesar de Bazan," 1872; "Les Errinyes," 1873; "Marie Magdeleine," 1873; "Eve," 1875; "Le Roi de Lahore," 1877; "La Vierge," 1880; "Herodiade," 1881; "Manon," 1884; "Le Cid," 1885; "Esclarmonde," 1889; "Le Mage," 1891; "Werther," 1892, "Thais," 1894; "La Navarraise," 1894; "Le Portrait de Manon," 1895; "Sappho," 1897; "Cendrillan," 1898; "Griselidis," 1901; "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," 1902; "La Terre Promise," an oratorio, 1903; "Cigale," a ballet, 1904; "Cherubin," 1905; "Ariane," 1906; "Therese," 1907.

The above list does not include the less important ballets, while to give an idea of the composer's work one must call attention to the fact that in between he has found time to write nearly a score of works for orchestra and over two hundred songs.

A large proportion of the Massenet operas have never been given extensively outside of France, but on the French stages, which include those of Belgium, of Holland, of Algiers and of Egypt, their popularity is unbounded.

FRANZ WILCZEK, who is the most recent addition to the local ranks of violin virtuosi; will be heard in recital this week.

Javanese Like Japanese.

"In many respects the Javanese resemble the Japanese, especially in their love for flowers, perfumes, music dancing and poetry, while their reverence for rank and age, and their elaborate courtesy are just as marked among the common people as among the Japanese," writes Lady Lawson, describing "My Tour Through Java." "They are a gentle, friendly and intelligent little people, with soft voices and graceful, supple bearing; and the traveler who leaves the beaten track to visit this paradise of the Indies will always retain an affectionate remembrance of the friendly and primitive life close to the heart of nature in the sunshine and warmth of the tropics."

Girl Reading, by Bessie Potter Vonnoh. This is one of the charming figurines by Bessie Potter Vonnoh, which will be shown in the exhibit of the Fine Arts Association, Blanchard Hall, in two weeks. Mrs. Vonnoh is one of the cleverest and best-known of our American women sculptors.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Lines to a Stupid Picture.

Five geese,—a landscape damp and wild,—
A stunted, not too pretty, child,
Beneath a battered gingham;
Such things, to say the least, require
A Muse of more than average Fire
To adequately sing 'em.

And yet—Why should they? Souls of mark
Have sprung from such;—e'en Joan of Arc
Had scarce a grander duty;
Not always ('tis a maxim trite)
From righteous causes comes the right,—
From beautiful the beauty.

Who shall decide where seed is sown?
Maybe some priceless germ was blown
To this unwholesome marish;
(And what must grow will still increase
Though cackled round by half the geese
And ganders in the parish.)

Maybe this homely face will hide
A Staël before whose mannish pride
Our frailer sex may tremble;
Perchance this audience anserine
May hiss (O fluttering Muse of mine!)
May hiss—a future Kemble!

Or say the gingham shadows o'er
An undeveloped Hannah More!—
A latent Mrs. Trimmer!
Who shall affirm it?—who deny?—
Since of the truth nor you nor I
Discern the faintest glimmer.

So then—caps off, my Masters all;
Reserve your final words,—recall
Your all too hasty strictures;
Caps off, I say, for Wisdom sees Potential possibilities
In most unhopeful pictures.

The Ruskin Loan Exhibit.

It cannot be denied that the women of the Ruskin Art Club have done and are doing much for the growth of art appreciation in Los Angeles. They are giving time, thought and money in our behalf, and some of us, I trust, are duly grateful. Of course, we all criticise and find fault occasionally—mainly, I think, because we are Americans, ever painfully on the alert for self-improvement, even as the Ruskin women themselves are. Then, too, we like to let others feel that we are not nearly so ignorant about art as they seem to suppose.

The Ruskin Art Club had many and divers troubles of its own with local painters and a local jury last year, so for the sake of peace, they decided to give both the go-by this year. Perhaps they were wise—but I, for one, applauded heartily the courage they showed twelve months ago.

The jury's decisions raised a storm of abuse and vituperation, but it set the air about us into motion—and ever since that cyclonic period we have had ozone in the artistic atmosphere. The result is that none of us will be able to breathe freely again in the stagnation of the past.

But the club, now the recognized maker of cyclones in artistic circles, must not fear too much any future disturbances. Peace and calm are good, but war and tempest are sometimes better—for they sweep aside and destroy false gods with exhilarating neatness and dispatch. Los Angeles has now grown to be an impressively big and important city, and should no longer be content to smirk and smile under the foolish and easy laurels of a parochial art.

Therefore, as the Ruskin Art Club has generously given us a loan exhibition of the works of outside painters, let us stand up straight, heel to heel with these men, and be measured. We shall find, I think, that many of our own men, though not yet so smooth and polished as the most of the outsiders, have girth and height and strength quite equal to theirs, and are able to "speak up" with a fine Western self-reliance unrivalled anywhere. In other words, if our men haven't always style, they have character—and some of them have both. Some, not all. But when did a Westerner remain satisfied till he became possessed of everything worth having?

There are ninety-five pictures in the exhibition now on view at the Blanchard gallery. The most of the canvases are good, many are very good, and only a few are positively bad. Not many—perhaps none—can be called masterpieces, though some were painted by men who are known as masters.

The exhibition will be open till the fifteenth of the month during the daylight hours, and also on Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

It shall be my pleasure to say something of these pictures in detail in next Sunday's art and artists.

The Painters Club Exhibit.

The pictures now being shown by the Painters' Club at its gallery, No. 313 Broadway, are interesting in many ways and for various reasons. They were contributed by the different members of a club whose existence is for the purposes of criticism. Many of these painters are artists of acknowledged reputation and standing; others are mere beginners with the brush, who have shown earnestness and talent enough to be taken into the club.

There is no jury. Any member may show any picture that he has painted, but all canvases must pass under the eyes of the entire club, which makes itself into an "Advisory Committee of the Whole" as to whether a picture ought to be shown or not. The artist accepts or rejects the advice of the club, as he chooses. The plan works admirably, as will be seen by those who attend this the club's first exhibition. While the showing is not so strong as it will undoubtedly be later on, it yet holds a number of canvases of great merit. Some of them have been seen before at other exhibitions in Los Angeles, many of them are new.

Norman St. Clair's beautifully painted water color, "Arroyo Seco," is new, as are S. E. Bierach's crisply and cleverly handled pastel, "The Flirt," and his "Going for the Mail," a deftly painted oil in which the chill of a snowy day is well rendered.

Carl Oscar Borg shows a water color, "In the Fog," which has both strength and delicacy, and Joseph Greenbaum has two of his clever chalk drawings on brown paper, "Eucalypts" and "Eastlake Park." C. P. Neilson's well-painted water colors, "In Old Mexico," "Morning Near Monterey" and "Hilltops in Spring" have already been reviewed in these columns.

Martin J. Jackson's "Autumn in the Adirondacks" is full of feeling and sentiment, and the same may be said of A. C. Conner's gray bits, "The Oaks" and "A Gray Day." David Dunn's "Twilight Hour" and "A Quiet Nook" are also excellent things in the way of loving study from nature.

Charles P. Austin's "Resting" is technically very clever. Frank Elwin Evans gives us a water color in delicate grays and browns, "The Scissor's Grinder," in which the revolving wheel of the grinder really seems to buzz. Frank R. Liddell shows us a cool "Wood Interior," carefully and conscientiously painted.

Hanson Puthuff's "Drizzle" is a fine transcript of nature, truthful and convincing, and his "Oaks and Sycamores" has also the charm of excellent and fearless painting. John W. Nicoll's "Old Baldy in Winter" is a well-painted canvas showing oaks and mountains touched by a sunset glow, while Benjamin Chambers Brown's "Venetian Canal" is also a sunset sketch whose water has movement and whose red towers are convincingly given.

William Swift Daniell has two water colors, "Autumn" and "Capistrano," both painted with feeling and understanding. Frank Conner's "Afternoon in the Cañon" shows some well-studied grays.

The exhibition, on the whole, is a very creditable one, and there can be no doubt that our painters are growing technically stronger day by day. As for their other equipment—where, indeed, should a man become an artist if not in Southern California?

ART NOTES.

Lilian Vosburgh has just closed a very successful exhibition of her tiny water color sketches at the Ebell Club. Few as were the square inches of these bits from nature, they were yet enough to show that Miss Vosburgh has a genuine feeling for color and a most unusual gift for composition. Many of the tinted scraps of paper glowed and sparkled like jewels.

Nona L. White is holding an exhibition of her water-color studies of flowers and gardens, at the Atelier d'Art, Blanchard Hall. Miss White has a crisp, sure touch in the painting of flowers. She loves and understands them, and the result is that her impressions are truthful and full of that nameless charm we call feeling, notably in her rendering of white roses. This exhibition, which is held under the patronage of Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. Sarah D. Easton and Miss Olive Percival, will continue till the 15th of December.

Elmer Wachtel, who has been doing some of his strongest work lately, will send about twenty-five of his canvases to Thurber's, Chicago, in March. Two of his canvases will also go to the Corcoran exhibition in Washington, to be held during February. William Wendt and Gardner Symons will also send to the Corcoran.

Leonard Lester has been ill at his studio on Sichel street. The pleasant report goes forth that he is now convalescing, however.

The Art Club of South Pasadena held an exhibition of paintings by its members on Thursday and Friday, this week. A number of loaned pictures were also shown.

William Swift Daniell will bring a number of his recent water colors to Riverside tomorrow, showing them for about two weeks. Mr. Daniell's recent exhibition in San Diego proved to be very successful.

A few of Marion Holden Pope's etchings are being shown at Miss Rucker's gallery, as well as a charming lithograph from her pencil. Some of Emily Rutherfurd's excellent work in wood carving is also to be seen at this little gallery.

Carl Oscar Borg, whose exhibition of oils and water colors has just closed at the Little Corner of Local Art, will show, on the 10th of this month, and for the two following weeks, about forty of his beautiful and characteristic monotypes.

Hazenplug's original drawings for Olive Percival's book, "Mexico City," were recently shown at Fowler's. They are strongly drawn, but have not the charm and color of the book itself.

D'ANNUNZIO'S FAILURE.

Never within the memory of Rome had there been such a fiasco as d'Annunzio's new play, "A More Than Love." Zacconi, who played the hero—one of the most despicable characters ever presented on any stage, had to sit down at times and take a cordial, before he could go on with his part, so outrageous and continuous were the hisses from every part of the house, even from the boxes. And these hisses continued even when all was over, and the spectators were far up the streets without. This exit, however, had its comic side; for as the people were streaming and hissing out of the theater, two carbineers happened to pass by, and then all the people cried out: "Arrest the author." Zacconi had a terrible task to play the hero, who says of himself: "I have all the devils of hell within me." He has no good will for the lover, friend or foe. This, however, might have been passed in silence. But what most outraged the audience was a love scene between a brother and sister. Zacconi wanted to omit certain words in this scene, but d'Annunzio would not hear of it, and he has reaped his reward, to the satisfaction of every honest man and woman in Rome. On the second night, many entire speeches were cut. But the evil had been done—and nothing could ever save the piece from damnation. The theater, also, was nearly empty. One episode was reduced from fifty minutes, the time taken to play it on the first night, to seventeen minutes on the second night. A whole cantata was left out, and also a hymn to Africa. A few more cuttings, and this tragedy might have become a nice—or nasty—curtain-raiser. As for the actors, they were quite eclipsed. The public was indignant. Better not to have given a second performance at all. D'Annunzio is furious and intends to publish the play with a preface, in answer to his critics. Better leave it alone. The greatest critics in Italy came to Rome on purpose to be present at the first representation. Several automobiles also came from Vienna, filled with artists and critics—all eager to see the first performance of d'Annunzio's new play.

The French Society of Dramatic Authors has won a victory in its contention with two managers who thought to break the power of the dramatists. It is well known that this society of dramatic authors has long been in a position from which it could practically dictate terms to producers of plays and managers of theaters. One of the beliefs of the French dramatic authors as a body is that it would be inimical to their interests for any manager to control more than one theater. Two managers, who separately controlled the Athenée and the Foliés Dramatiques, had a notion that they might better themselves if they could get control of several other theaters. Possibly a well-known American example of "cornering" theaters appealed to them on the score of its pecuniary possibilities. Negotiating with several owners, these managers secured control of the Palais Royal and the Variétés, whereupon the Society of Dramatic Authors tabooed them utterly. The managers needed plays for their theaters, but any member of the authors' society who should supply them from his own works would be expelled. Actuated probably by promises of the two managers three authors decided to cast their fortunes with the new scheme. These five persons, however, proved powerless to make way against the order of things established by the authors. The managers were confined to the three deserters from the society for their plays, while the deserters had only the two managers with whom they could market their plays. The outcome recently chronicled was inevitable. The managers capitulated, acceding to the terms of the society, which agreed to take the superfluous theaters off their hands, and the deserting playwrights, after discipline, were reinstated in the society. At present the Society of Dramatic Authors is supreme in France. Of course, any monopoly is undesirable, but a monopoly by those who furnish the material upon which the theater must live is less objectionable and more intelligent than a monopoly of those who control theaters could possibly be, and thus it is the lesser of two evils.

Miss Chamberlain's Debut.

The Ebell Clubhouse on Friday afternoon was aglow with lovely flowers and lovelier women, the occasion being the reception given by Mrs. Lee Chamberlain of No. 4001 North Vermont avenue, to introduce her very charming young daughter, Miss Lois Chamberlain to society.

Under the direction of Miss Forman, the rooms were transformed into veritable fairy bower. The great reception room contained waving bamboo and masses of potted plants and ferns and on the center table a great rustic basket of American Beauty roses was fetching. Enchantress carnations and beech loaves mingled with the greens. Over the brown beamed ceiling of the tearoom smilax was garlanded softly and the huge fireplace was banked above with deep red beech leaves and huckleberry greens, while within a great log burned right cheerily. The large round tea table contained a long handled French basket tied with tulle bows and filled with nodding Madame Chetney roses. Tall crystal candelabra with a pink and silver shade, lit the table, and coffee was served from a silver coffee urn, a heirloom in the family. In the punchroom, masses of bright greenery were used and here blossomed many flowers, gifts from friends to the fair young debutante. The punch was served from a bowl set mid a mound of autumn fruits. De Nubila's orchestra discoursed sweet music through the afternoon.

Assisting the hostess in receiving were: Mmes. Rufus H. Herron, E. P. Clark, J. Ross Clark, A. G. Wells, Stephen C. Hubbell, W. C. Patterson, Henderson Hayward, William Horace Day, C. A. Bashford, Curtis Williams, C. D. Pillsbury, Homer Laughlin, Jr., and Misses Lucy and Mary Clark, Gwendolen Laughlin, Hazel Patterson, Edith Herron, Ella McClary, Mary Hubbell, Helen Wells, Helen Chaffee, Katherine Bashford, Ruth Bulkley, Helen Wells and Mrs. Roy Pinkham.

At the punch bowl, a number of pretty young belles presided, including Misses Alberta Denis, Katherine Banning and Julia Murray.

About three hundred and fifty guests greeted the hostess and her daughter that afternoon.

Godin-Kimball Wedding.

The wedding of Dr. Arthur Godin and Miss Blanche Kimball is to take place on Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Kimball, of Patton, Cal. Miss Kimball was formerly a nurse at the California Hospital, and her friends in the hospital gave her a delightful party lately, at which she was showered with many useful gifts. Mrs. L. W. Godin, mother of Dr. Godin, entertained with a dinner for the couple recently. After a short honeymoon the couple will be at home at No. 724 Beacon street. Dr. Godin is prominent and popular among the medical profession here, and is an instructor in the medical department of the University of Southern California.

—o—

Miss Holson's Party.

Miss Harriett Holson of Durango and Flint avenues entertained on Thursday evening with a charming evening party in honor of Harold Church, who will convey the Carnegie telescope to Mt. Wilson. Supper was served and the home most attractively decorated in pink carnations and greenery.

Besides Miss Holson and Mr. Church, guests included: Misses Rose Cook, Marjory Burbank, Buelah Kirby, Mabel Smith, Helen Dickinson, Winston, Maude Kay, Beulah Sturgess, Gertrude Millard, Gertrude Hanbela and Messrs. Bill and Jordan Stone, Dain Sturgess, Harold Wright, Harry Good, Edmond Cahen, Roy Burbank, Elmer Pascoe, Dick Hollingsworth, Dr. Loren Hollingsworth and Mr. and Mrs. Lee.

—o—

Miss Bartlett's Debut.

In honor of Mrs. Bartlett's daughter, Miss Mathilde Bartlett, who is one of the charming débutantes, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett and Mrs. Frank Walsh will entertain on Wednesday afternoon with a large reception at the home of the former, "Fenton Knoll," No. 2400 West Adams street.

—o—

Mrs. Parker's Luncheon.

As a compliment to Miss Edith Herron, Mrs. C. C. Parker of No. 811 West Twenty-eighth street entertained yesterday with a prettily-appointed luncheon. Yellow centurias and maidenhair ferns decorated the attractive table, and places were marked with dainty cards.

Besides Mrs. Parker and Miss Herron, covers were laid for: Misses Susie Carpenter, Mary Hubbell, Helen Wells, Helen Newlin, Katherine Clover, Katherine Searls, Lois Chamberlain, Lucy Clark, Mary Clark and Ella McClary.

DRY GOODS
SPRING AND THIRD STS.

This week you can shop with comfort, even pleasure, choose from fresh and complete assortments. Next week many will be unable to get near the counters for the crowds. Be wise and shop this week.

To Christmas Shoppers:

Try and buy your presents early. Early in the day and early in the month. Your reward will be the satisfaction of knowing you have eased up the pressure on the workers behind the counters and those on the delivery wagons. It will be your biggest gift to the holidays.

Christmas Gloves

You'll not miss the mark in buying gloves for presents, they're always acceptable.

We sell the famous "Tampa" "Windsor" and "Renauld"—standards the world over; priced from $1 to $2 a pair. Every wanted style, color and size.

Christmas Novelties 16-button lengths in every fashionable kind and color at $3 and $4.

Silk and lisle gloves 12-button lengths at $1.25.

If in doubt about kind or color or size, buy a Glove Order and be on the safe side.

Christmas FURS

Guess we've sold more furs this season than any other concern on the Coast. That's not surprising though, because we had a bigger stock to begin with than any other store. Offered better values and the public had confidence in our furs and bought them eagerly.

Assortments are still unbroken, in spite of the spirited selling. Every kind and quality and style. Prices anywhere between $2.50 and $200.00.

Tea Gowns, Kimonas Negligees and Matinees

We bought these dainty, airy little house garments especially for this season's Christmas buyers—bought them for presents, because we knew they would please hundreds of particular women. See them.

Matinees and Short Kimonos of China silk, henrietta and albatross cloth in all the pretty light colors, tastefully trimmed with laces. Every price from $3.50 on up to $25.00.

Negligees and Long Kimonos in plain or fancy figured China silks; plain albatross and henrietta cloths, in black, white and dozens of soft evening colorings, all cut and trimmed after the very latest models, $6.50 to $35.00.

Short Kimonos of fancy Japanese cotton crepe in fan and pond lily designs; $1.00 to $1.50.

Long Kimonos of Jap. crepe cloth from $1.50 to $2.75.

Christmas Silks

At the silk counter you'll find everything that Fashion may suggest in the way of staple or novelty silks. Silks for dresses, costumes, waists, petticoats and wraps, as well as all the modern weave and color effects for holiday fancy work.

Woolen Dress Goods

A handsome woolen dress pattern will not go amiss at this season, especially a pattern from this Store.

We've some extraordinary things here for presents, in particular, some new black goods—and black you know is extremely popular just now. Fine unfinished Worsteds, Cheviots and Whipcords, 54 inches wide, for this special occasion, yd. $2

"Moravins," spot proof, all colors, 54 inches, yard $3

A Cut in Tailored Suits

Sixty Handsome Tailored Gowns
Values $40, $45 and $50, Each $35.00

This is not a "job lot" or a broken up line. It's a gathering of sixty late styled fall and winter suits we've picked from our regular stock and reduced, in order to spur on our Monday's business. Honestly, it's a chance you'll not likely get again this season. Tailoring of these suits is of the very best; materials the newest, and coloring the most fashionable of all the autumn shades. Black, brown, blues, greens, London smoke and grays. • Pony and blouse etons, long coats and coatees. Sixty to pick from if you come early enough. $35.00 for choice.

$10.00 to $12.00 Wool Skirts $6.00

A manufacturer's sample line of new woolen skirts; all the dark, seasonable colors in fancy indistinct stripes, plaids, checks and mixtures; side and box plaited models cut generously full and roomy. None worth less than ten dollars and from that on up to twelve. About fifty left for tomorrow's selling, each $6.00.

Good Table Linens

Any housewife will be pleased with handsome table linens—good table linens, such as these we show.

Here are two items taken from a dozen or two:

Miss Rank Engaged.

The news of the engagement of Miss Catherine Eleanor Rank and Frank K. Weidler of Cincinnati, which is made known by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rank, of No. 3820 Woodlawn avenue, comes as a great surprise to the many friends of the fair bride-elect in this city. Miss Rank is a handsome girl, and she and the groom-to-be are both popular in social circles of the city.

The ceremony will take place some time in early spring.

Many functions are being planned for the bride-to-be.

—o—

Franciscos to Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bond Francisco of No. 1401 Albany street will open their artistic home on Wednesday evening to entertain with a musicale in compliment to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Gemuender, who have recently come here from Chicago. Mr. Gemuender formerly lived here, and is a finished 'cellist, while his wife is a brilliant violinist. They will be among the contributors to the musical programme. Mrs. Francisco herself is possessed of a beautiful soprano voice and it is hoped that she also will sing.

—o—

Informal "At Home."

Mrs. Carl Kurtz of No. 1129 South Alvarado street and Mrs. Samuel J. Whitmore received informally on Friday afternoon at the home of the former.

—o—

Mrs. Thresher's Reception.

Mrs. George P. Thresher and her daughter, Miss Thresher, of No. 37 Westmoreland place, were hostesses at a delightful at home given on Friday afternoon at their handsome new residence.

The house was in holiday attire of hollyberries and scarlet satin ribbons and much green foliage.

About two hundred guests were received, and those who assisted the hostess in receiving were: Mmes. Maria Thresher Webb, James T. Fitzgerald, Lewis Clark Carlisle, Matthew S. Robertson, Laura Armstrong, B. R. Baumgardt, and Misses Arley Tottenham, Emma Marmon, Bessie Hellyar, Helen Thresher, Roberta McClurg and Maris McClurg.

—o—

Brilliant Function.

The handsome home of Mrs. Willis H. Booth at No. 1010 Magnolia avenue was alight with beautiful flowers and sweet music was discoursed to the galaxy of fair women who gathered as guests at the reception and musicale given by Mrs. Booth and Mrs. William James Chick.

Quantities of bright blossoms were utilized in the attractive floral scheme and in the reception-room pink carnations and ferns were effectively combined. At one end, where the receiving party stood, fluffy bamboo and potted palms formed an attractive background, against which baskets of Enchantress carnations were charmingly hung. The hall contained brass jardinieres filled with white carnations and asparagus ferns and smilax draped the windows and walls. In the library poinsettias glowed in striking array against the greenery. The dining-room was especially pleasing in yellow. The table was spread with a handsome lace cloth over yellow silk and in the center on a mirror was a candelabra shaded with yellow silken shades and bearing yellow tapers. Surrounding the mirror were tiny rose-shaped candlesticks bearing yellow tapers. At each corner were great high ones shaded with yellow and crystal shades and low crystal ones were placed beyond these. The chandelier was draped with cloudy yellow tulle and asparagus plumosus.

A most delightful musical programme was presented through the afternoon by Mrs. Robert Wankowski and William James Chick, assisted by Archibald Sessions at the piano.

Assisting the hostesses in receiving were: Mmes. Franklin Booth, J. H. Martindale, Harley Hamilton, Oliver C. Bryant, Glenn Spence, Oscar Mueller, Sumpter Zombro, Charles Perry Bagg, Fred Henderson, Wilson Butler, Thomas Lee Woolwine, Ross Smith, Seeley, Eugene Pettigrew, Charles S. Noyes, William M. Wallace, Simpson G. Wilson, Edward Paury, I. S. Thatcher, Roland M. Paul, and Misses Edith Kirkpatrick, Edna Foy, Lillian McLaughlin and Fay Hildreth.

—o—

Miss Davidson a Debutante.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson of No. 327 South Alvarado street has issued invitations for a tea next Wednesday afternoon, at which her young daughter, Miss Doris Davidson, will make her debut in local society. Miss Davidson returned several months ago from London, England, where she finished at a fashionable school for girls there.

—o—

Eschscholtzia Benefit Party.

Eschscholtzia Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. Mary Banning is the regent, is planning a large benefit card party for Friday afternoon at the Ebell Club, for the benefit of charitable work.

Mrs. William Wallace McLeod is the chairman of the committee in charge, and assisting her are: Mmes. Nathan Cole, Jr., W. E. Read, Freeman G. Cady and Miss Camilia McConnell. Bridge, five hundred and whist are the games to be played, and in charge of the bridge section is Miss Cammilla McConnell, who has as her assistants, Misses Gertrude Gooding, Beatrice Cutter and Mrs. Donald Frick. Mrs. Cady and Mrs. McLead, who have the five hundred tables, have as assistants, Misses Helen Kemper, Maybelle Rendall and Mrs. John H. Packham. Mrs. Cole is to have the whist tables, and will have assisting her, Misses Katherine Kemper, Mary Phelps, Augusta Lamb, Lucille Dinan and Gladys Cole.

Young girls who will assist include: Misses Nathalie Cole, Seriba McLeod, Pauline Eastman, Virginia Walsh, Jennie Winston and Forbes.

—o—

Mrs. Bangs Entertained.

Mrs. John Kendricks Bangs of New York was entertained this week by Dr. and Mrs. Adams and Miss Adams of South Flower street, while Mr. Bangs was lecturing in Arizona. Mrs. Bangs is a cousin of Mrs. Adams, and is as charming in personality as her distinguished husband is in wit and humor.

—o—

Honor Chaffees.

In honor of Gen. and Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Graves of No. 1047 South Figueroa street entertained charmingly at dinner on Thursday evening. The centerpiece for the table was a basket filled with fresh red berries and greens, resting on a duchesse doily. Places were marked with sachets in envelope form, ornamented with sketches of red berries and tied with scarlet ribbons. A huge scarlet bell was suspended from the chandelier by means of fluffy gauze ribbons.

Other guests were: Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Woolwine, Dr. and Mrs. West Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Will A. Strong, Mrs. Thompson and Josiah Jarvis of Louisville, Ky.

—o—

Mrs. Hamilton's Daughter

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Hamilton are congratulating them on the arrival of a daughter in their home. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton of Hamilton, Cal., have been spending a number of weeks with Mrs. Hamilton's mother, Mrs. W. H. Bonsall, and her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Albert McFarland, at No. 1340 Arnold street. Mr. and Mrs. McFarland are the proud possessors of six grandchildren, this pretty little girl being the latest, and they are very proud.

—o—

Miss Brady Engaged.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Brady of Philadelphia announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Brownscombe Brady of No. 2626 Vermont avenue, to Francis William Fogwell of Topeka, Kan.

Miss Brady has been here for several years attending the University of Southern California, and is a popular member of the Alpha Rho Sorority. She has always taken an active part in the college life and is a general favorite. For some time she was a member of the basketball team and prominent in atheltics.

The announcement comes as a surprise to the many friends of the couple. The wedding is to take place some time in January.

—o—

Bright Young Bud a Singer.

That Miss Alice Starr, one of the prettiest and most charming of buds, is possessed of more than ordinary vocal talents, is interesting many of her friends. Miss Alice is barely 17, yet she possesses an excellent dramatic soprano voice, with much innate fire and temperament to aid this. Her voice is sweet and with training will be a fine large voice as well. Last evening she sang at an affair given by L'Alliance Francaise, delighting her many friends there. She sang "Good-by" (Tosti,) and the leading part in the sextette from "Lucia." She is a pupil of Signor Buzzi, and he plans after a year or so more of training to send her to Italy to coach with some of the leading vocal teachers there.

Miss Starr is a handsome young girl, with shining dark tresses and sparkling eyes, and is a favorite socially.

—o—

Gamma Phi Betas to Meet.

Miss Edith Furrey, Bixel and Ingraham streets, will have as her guests on next Saturday afternoon, members of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority. The meeting will be held for the purpose of organizing an alumnae chapter, and all members, who cannot be present are requested to send their names and addresses to Miss Furrey.

—o—

Miss Snow's Wedding.

Interesting to many friends is the approaching wedding of pretty Miss Helen Grace Snow of this city and John Sherman Taylor of Portland, Or., for which invitations have been issued, to take place at the Church of the Angels, Garvanza, with Rev. Runkle officiating. Miss Hazel Tomblin of Ocean Park is to be the only attendant of the bride, and Alfred James Snow of Berkeley, brother of the bride, is to be best man.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Snow of No. 1234 New Hampshire street, and was one of the most popular co-eds during her attendance at Berkeley. Miss Snow is a sister of Miss Beatrice Snow, who graduated from the university a year ago, after making a brilliant record in classroom and in dramatic and literary circles.

Mr. Taylor is a lumber merchant of Portland, and after the wedding will take his bride to Portland to reside.

—o—

Pine Forest Club Entertains.

The Pine Forest Whist Club met with Mrs. George Beebe, No. 240 West Sixth street. Mrs. R. B. Williamson substituted for Mrs. Matthay, Mrs. W. E. Rice for Mrs. D. R. Brown, and Mrs. M. S. Myer, F. H. Nichols, S. W. Strong, M. P. Snyder, M. K. Suber, C. W. Sylvester, W. H. Wagner, and G. W. Perkins. The first prize, a handsome silver belt buckle, was won by Mrs. J. A. Copp; the second, a beautiful white fan, was won by Mrs. H. M. Myer. Mrs. Morehouse will entertain the club Tuesday, the 17th inst.

MISS CATHERINE E. RANK, whose engagement is announced to Frank K. Weidlor of Cincinnati.

—o—

Sunshine Society Meets.

The Sunshine Society met at the home of the president, Mrs. W. W. McLeod, at No. 640 West Eighteenth street, Thursday afternoon. The principal work done was the planning of the Christmas offerings to the poor, especially to the children. Gifts of books, clothing, if in good condition, toys, candies, etc., gladly received at and disbursed from the above address. The third edition of the Sunshine Year Book is to be issued for the Christmas trade, and can be had from Mrs. McLeod; proceeds of sale to be used for charity. A party on next Thursday evening is to be given at the Woman's Club House by four of the ladies of the society to help the good cause. Twelve prizes have been donated by other members.

MISS MATHILDE BARTLETT, who is to make her debut at a large reception given by her mother, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, of "Fenton Knoll," on Wednesday.

—o—

To Entertain Boys' Club.

The Girls' Glee and Mandolin Clubs of the Polytechnic High School will entertain the Boys' Glee Club with a dancing party at the Burford Conservatory, Friday evening, December 14. The hall will be decorated in the school colors, whiles the court will be decked with holly berries and mistletoe.

—o—

Gifford's Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gifford of No. 749 Lake street have as their guest their charming young niece, Miss Maude Taylor of San Francisco. Arthur Lee Gifford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford, will spend the Christmas vacation with his parents.

—o—

Hansons Visit Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hanson, a wealthy lumberman of Tacoma, and his wife, have been staying at Hotel Alexandria for a number of weeks, having come down here by automobile. While here they were entertained by their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Osborn of No. 2703 Raymond avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson left a few days ago for a tour of the southern part of the State. While in Del Monte their automobile took seven prizes out of twelve at the races there, and they give the credit to their expert chauffeur, who is an especially daring and at the same time trusty one. Many millionaires there offered him large salaries to forsake Mr. Hanson, as they were anxious to get him to run their own machines.

—o—

Miss Osborn Is Hostess.

Miss Florence Osborn of No. 2703 Raymond avenue was hostess yesterday afternoon at a charming party given for members of the S. M. Club. The home, which is a new one, whose hangings are all in pink, was decorated with masses of pink carnations and maidenhair ferns. Potted plants and ferns formed a pleasing background for the flowers. Score cards for the whist played were pretty little water-color sketches. The punch was served in the breakfast room from a cut-glass bowl set midst a bower of ferns. Prizes were hand-painted china. A splendid musical programme was rendered, and those who enjoyed the party were: Misses Dorothy Moore, Marian Dellamazzo, Pauline Barr, Oliphant, Winifred Ramsey, Ruth Baumgartner, Alice Atwell, Eleanor Bradley, Frances Wartelle, Frances Crowder, Grace Rockwell, Florence Wheelan, Mamie Young, Helen McCutcheon, Ethel Graham, Katherine Jones, Violet McDonald, Marguerite Seymour, Lucille Roberts, Mamie McGarry, Bernice Burrows, Anna Kellam, Lydia Kellam, Alice Beacon, Drevna Thomson and Mmes. Walter J. Wren, Robert Schroeder, R. H. Arnold and J. Birkel.

The Misses Viola and Laura Hanson, cousins of Miss Osborn, who have been visiting her, left a few days ago for their home in Redwood City.

—o—

Kansas City Folk Here.

Mrs. Grant White Kenney of Kansas City arrived in Los Angeles a few days ago, for a two months' visit with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Blanche Corby of No. 1129 West Sixth street.

One of the many jolly opera parties the first of the week was one which included Mrs. W. G. Nevin, Mrs. Blanche K. Corby, Mrs. M. J. Newmark, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Ella Lauman, Miss Kate Fay and Miss Grace Helen Kenney.

High-class Furs

Good furs make ideal gifts—gifts that can be put to practical use, year after, for a generation.

Notice that we say GOOD furs. The market is flooded with cheap trash that would never do as gifts. You might take chances with things bought for your own use, but never make a gift of anything of doubtful quality. Every sort of fur piece needed in this climate, in every grade of fur it is safe to buy. Seven-fifty to a hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Gift-Giving Looks Easy
When You Enter This Art Department

A leisurely stroll through this Art Department will settle many a perplexing gift problem. A few suggestions:

Glass Cut Cut glass is something that anybody can present to anybody with the assurance that it will be heartily appreciated. Prices are not prohibitive to people of moderate means, either. For instance, beautifully cut bonbon, jelly and olive dishes, nappies, etc., are to be had for as little as $1.25 and $2.25.

Water bottles in handsome shapes and really beautiful cuttings specially priced at $3.75.

Bronzes One of many rare values is an electrolier with graceful bronze figure holding a jewel-studded and bead-fringed light. $9.50 instead of $12.50.

Needlework 18 and 20-inch handmade Battenberg center pieces—some with lace edge and linen centers, some in allover lace effects—all surprisingly beautiful goods for so little money—50c each.

Wool Slippers Knit slippers with fleece-lined leather soles—just what's needed for lounging around when the floors are cold. Men's sizes, $1.50; women's and misses', $1.00 a pair.

Our Toy and Doll Depts. hold many a pleasant surprise for the little ones, and you can bring them here without getting into overcrowded, poorly ventilated salesrooms.

A Tremendous Bedding Business
And Why We're Doing It

For sanitary reasons we will neither exchange nor take back any article of bedding that has been out of the store over night. That rule is rigidly enforced. And it is because of thus safeguarding your health, as much as because of the price-inducements, that you are giving us the biggest bedding business enjoyed by any store in the West.

AT $2.50 INSTEAD OF $4—Eleven-quarter blankets of white mixed wool with wide silk binding and red or blue borders—good weight, warm and fluffy; $2.50 a pair.

PEOPLE WHO ARE UNFIT TO MARRY.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

In the Breach of Promise Case of Grover vs. Zook the Court Decided That Persons Afflicted With Tuberculosis Have Right to Terminate Engagement to Marry.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Washington that persons afflicted with tuberculosis are not fit to marry, and that to break an engagement in such a case is not ground for damages, is a matter of more than ordinary interest. The decision was rendered in the breach of promise case of Grover vs. Zook, from Kings county. The judgment of the lower court is reversed and the action ordered dismissed.

Zook, whose parents died of pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption,) who had a hereditary taint of the disease himself, became engaged to marry Miss Grover, who was seriously affected with the same malady. The Supreme Court holds that such an agreement between a man and woman thus afflicted is not binding upon either, and that either may withdraw therefrom without being liable in damages for breach of promise. The decision is based solely upon the ground of public policy—regard for the health and happiness of all concerned, and particularly in consideration of unborn children.

The opinion is written by Judge Root and concurred in by all the other judges. A large number of authorities are cited—both legal and medical—and copious quotations taken from many supporting this court's conclusions. Among other things, the court says:

"In the domain of morals it is a maxim that a bad promise is better broken than kept. Moral considerations must have a predominating influence upon such a question as now confronts us. In fact, they constitute the reason, the basis and the life of the law applicable in a case of this character.

"The most profound philosophers join with the wisest statesmen in maintaining the proposition that the home is the unit of the state, and that the character of a people and the stability and welfare of the nation must largely depend upon the healthful and wholesome influence of the home life. By reason of this we find the home and the members thereof, especially the young and dependent, sheltered by the protecting care of various statutes, all being evidences and expressions of that public policy which deems the home and its inmates appropriate objects of the solicitude and care of the state.

"The paramount consideration involved in the determination of this case is not that appertaining solely to the parties in this action (although as to each of them it is of great importance,) but it is as to the community, the state and to humanity in general. Here we have a man and woman engaged to be married. The man is of a family several members of which have died with pulmonary consumption. The woman is afflicted with the same disease to such an extent that it becomes necessary for her to go to a distant portion of the country to recuperate, which she does, returning with the affliction still upon her and with small, if any, assurances of recovery. Under these circumstances, if the marriage were to be consummated, what would be the natural consequences to be anticipated?

"Conditional promises of marriage exchanged by a man and woman imply conclusively that each is physically, mentally and legally competent to enter the status of matrimony and capable, so far as he or she knows or has reason to believe, of effectuating the principal purposes of the marriage relation. One of the most important functions of wedlock is the procreation of children. Offspring are the natural result and ofttimes the chief purpose of marriage.

"That the thought of bringing a child into the world should be one of the most serious that can engage the mind of a human being needs but to be suggested. Born amidst the most favorable environment, there lies before every babe a life of uncertainty so great that no worthy parent may contemplate it without a tremor of apprehension. Thus launched upon the sea of time and eternity, what parent can dwell upon the birth of his child without the keenest sense of anxiety and responsibility? If the child born in health and with a body of vigor be a matter of deep concern to a parent, what must be said of the advent of a babe burdened with the hereditary plague of consumption?

"That pulmonary tuberculosis is both contagious and hereditary, as well as infectious, admits of little, if any, doubt. That a mother seriously ill with that disease and a father with a hereditary taint thereof in his blood would bring forth a child exempt therefrom, is unbelievable. For parents thus afflicted to bring into the world a child would be not only detrimental to the welfare of the state and an offense to the instincts of humanity, but it would be, as against the innocent babe, a moral wrong most apparent. Such a child must of necessity be a burden to itself and others and devoid of the joys and blessings that make life endurable.

"In declining to carry out his promise of marriage, it may be presumed that appellant apprehended the natural and legitimate consequence of such a union. In addition to the thought of progeny, there would be also that of the aggravation of the disease as to himself and prospective wife, the medical expert evidence showing that the intimate association of married life would tend to augment the ravages of the malady upon each."

Illness Thins Each Hair.

A Japanese physician has been conducting a series of experiments to ascertain whether the growth of the human hair is affected by serious illness as is the case with the nails—and some seemingly remarkable results have been brought to light by his investigations.

He has discovered, for instance, that every serious illness has a marked effect in diminishing the thickness of the individual hairs, and by microscopic examinations he claims to be able to tell whether an illness has recently taken place and to give its duration.

According to the theories of this Japanese doctor the illness has the effect of making the hair thinner along part of its length, and the length of the thin portion indicates the length of time the patient has been ill. It is suggested that this fact, if its truth can be proved, may have important bearing in a question of identification.

Air in High Altitudes.

It is an error to think that the chemical composition of the air differs materially wherever the sample may be taken. The relation of oxygen to nitrogen and other constituents is the same whether it be on the heights of the Alps or at the surface of the sea. The favorable effects, therefore, of a change of air are not to be explained by any difference in the proportions of its gaseous constituents. The important difference is the bacteriological one. The air of high altitudes contains no microbes, and is, therefore, sterile, while near the ground and some hundreds of feet above it, they are abundant.

California Prunes for Plum Pudding.

Hundreds of boxes of Shasta county's prunes are now being packed to ship to London to fill an order for plums that are to be an important constituent of English plum puddings at Christmas time.

The prunes are faced and packed in neat boxes. They are delicious to look upon, and as the proof of the pudding lies in the eating thereof, and Englishmen have long been eating plum puddings containing no other fruit than California prunes, there is nothing reprehensible in the local packing-house putting up Anderson prunes under the label "California Plums," on the same principle that rolled oats contain no oats, and sheepgut fiddle strings are sold all over the world as catgut fiddle strings.

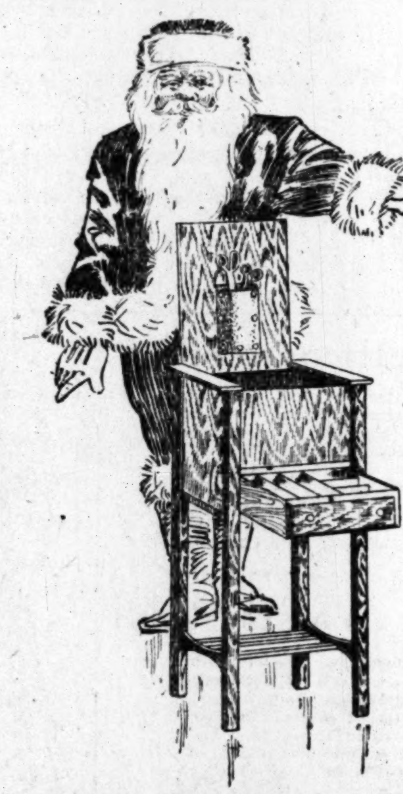
The average strength of the army during the fiscal year was as follows: Regular army, including the Hospital Corps, 3733 officers and 59,384 enlisted men; Porto Rico Provisional Regiment of Infantry, 26 officers and 548 enlisted men; Philippine Scouts, 115 officers and 5077 enlisted men; total, 3874 officers and 65,009 enlisted men.

Don't Make Gift Buying a Drudgery

Don't make it a task instead of a pleasure. Don't hurry. Take your time. Begin early—tomorrow. We are ready for you with the best stock of gift furniture we have ever had.

Every day you delay means smaller assortments to select from, poorer service and more trouble. Pick out what you want this week. Pay a deposit and we will hold the goods subject to your delivery order.

We make a few suggestions that ought to set you thinking.



How About a Work Table for "Her?"

Every lady in the land needs one. There's a place for everything used in doing fancy work—a place for the pieces in hand.

The one we illustrate on the left is made in mahogany. It serves as an ornament because of the beautiful lines of design and the perfect finishing. It is marked at $12.00—a modest price indeed.

We have other good bargains at $14.50, $21.50, $23.50, $29.00 and up.

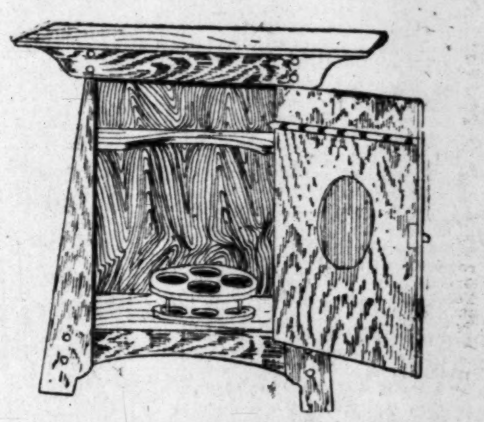
Investigate a little and see if a work table isn't just the thing that's wanted.

Chairs Are Acceptable

Rockers, Arm Chairs and Morris Chairs—Someone on your list will appreciate one or the other. Mighty few homes are so complete that a chair of some character wouldn't be welcome. We haye good assortments of all three. You can surely find one here that will please and come within the amount appropriated. Consider the chair question carefully.

Why Not a Cellaret for "Him?"

Most every man would like one and comparatively few have one. The one on the right is marked only $15.00—certainly a bargain price. It is made of quartered oak and the finish is weathered. We have another good one at $14.00, one at $18.00 and a good range on up to $32.50 and $42.00. We have them in all woods and finishes.



Or Perhaps a Shaving Stand

Another pertinent suggestion.

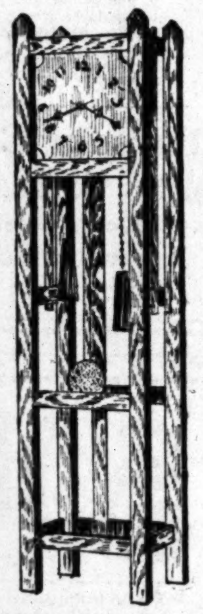
If you are in doubt as to what to give "him," look into the matter of shaving stands. Equipment, surroundings and conditions have much to do with the pleasure of shaving and a shaving stand provides every feature that's necessary. All woods here in a great variety of designs. Prices from $16.50 up.

Hall Clocks $32

Just like the picture on the right—a mission design in solid oak, weathered finish. It has a first-class eight-day weight movement, strikes hour and half hour on cathedral gong and is guaranteed. This pattern is good size, makes a fine appearance and is especially adapted for either hall or library. It is fitted with brass numerals.

We have some other good bargains in clocks.

Wouldn't the whole family be delighted with one?



Library Tables

If you, like many other sensible people, make gifts to the home, you may be interested in library tables. We have such a splendid assortment that we urge you in all confidence to come here knowing that you will find what you want at the price you want to pay. We have all sizes, finishes and prices.

A Few Suggestions

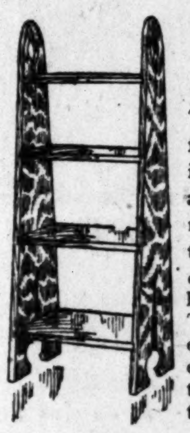
At first thought a Furniture Store holds comparatively little interest for Christmas shoppers. What a mistake it is. There are hundreds of really practical and useful things which will find a place on many a gift list. For instance:

- Book Cases
- Sectional Book Cases
- Magazine Racks
- Book Racks
- Plate Racks
- Rugs
- Buffets
- China Closets
- Sideboards
- Dining Tables
- Sewing Tables
- Music Cabinets
- Odd Chairs
- Morris Chairs
- Rockers
- Baby Chairs
- Baby Cribs
- Chiffoniers
- Dressers
- Dressing Tables
- Brass Beds
- Iron Beds
- Hall Seats
- Pianola Cabinets

And many other things which might be suggested.

Desks for "Her"

We have a splendid asortment this year—all woods, but a particularly good showing in weathered oak—Arts and Crafts designs. Prices range from $10.50. Keep your ears open for hints about a desk.



Magazine Rack $7.00

The handiest piece of furniture that can be put in a library. It provides a place for the many magazines that, no matter how many tables or desks you have, never have a place of their own. This one can be had in either fumed or weathered oak. The picture on the left tells the story of the design.

Newbro's Herpicide

An Army Officer's Report

"For sometime past I have been troubled with dandruff, and with hair falling out. My head itched continually while my hair appeared lusterless and dead. I tried several remedies without any permanent relief and had about reconciled myself to premature baldness. After using a bottle of your Herpicide, I have been greatly benefited. The hair has stopped falling out, and the itching has ceased and no more dandruff forms in the scalp. My hair is coming in thick and has a fine glossy appearance."

A "Square Deal" Doctor

"I beg to state that I have used the bottle of Herpicide that your representative left me and am thoroughly pleased with it. I have since bought two or three bottles for myself and other members of my family and have had the very best of results. I am now prescribing it freely to my patients with full confidence in the result to be obtained. I rarely ever give a testimonial for an advertised remedy, but yours is of such merit that it is onl yfair that I should do so in this case." (Signed)

PENNILESS BOY IN GOVERNOR'S CHAIR.

Edwin S. Stuart of Pennsylvania Saved His Party from Defeat in the Heated Campaign Just Ended—No Other Man Could Have Won.

THE second of American commonwealths will soon have for its chief executive officer, a man 1o began life with but 2 cents to b together, as an errand boy, at a ne of life when most boys are hard- more than started in their school reer.

Edwin S. Stuart, who has just de- ated, snowed under it might be ore properly said, Lewis Emery, ., the candidate of the reform party, one of the fiercest battles for the vernorship Pennsylvania has ever own, goes into the Governor's chair incipally because of the fact that is the most popular man in the ate.

Many Republicans had little liking r those who were identified as lead- s of the party that elected him. ne evils of Bosses Quay and Pen- se had the effect in recent elections allenating many thousands of vot- s who are strongly Republican on tional elections. A majority of half million for Roosevelt was turned to a minority of one hundred thou- nd when Berry, a Democrat, was ected State Treasurer in 1905.

Undoubtedly the Republican ticket, th the same political managers or sses at the helm, would have been wned again this year but for the rsonality of Stuart.

Just as soon as the danger became minent, party leaders turned to Stu- t as the one man who could save em.

"Everybody knows Ned," they said. 's popular with all classes, and his nesty has never been questioned. t us nominate him."

Mr. Stuart was not anxious for the ace. Since his retirement from the fice of Mayor, he has enjoyed the ivacy and home comforts that have me to him after a successful busi- ss life, but his popularity forced im to the front. Called to the aid his party, he could not refuse. His ection followed. Not only were the issatisfied Republicans won over, but emocrats quit party allegiance in rder to vote for him.

This is the man. No one would ever ave expected the boy to go that far.

There was nothing auspicious in his tart. His father died when he was youngster, leaving without means of upport a widow and four children, whom Edward was the oldest.

When only a little fellow, at a time hen he should have been getting the ducation that is the foundation of he success of most public men, the uture Governor had to go out and unt a job to help support his mother, rothers and sisters.

Fate led him to Leary's book store, quaint institution even in those days the Quaker City, much frequented y bibliophiles, and which save that t has expanded, looks much the same ow as it did then.

Edwin, hungry and eager for work, resented himself to the proprietor, nd asked fo job.

"What can you do?"

"Anything," was the answer.

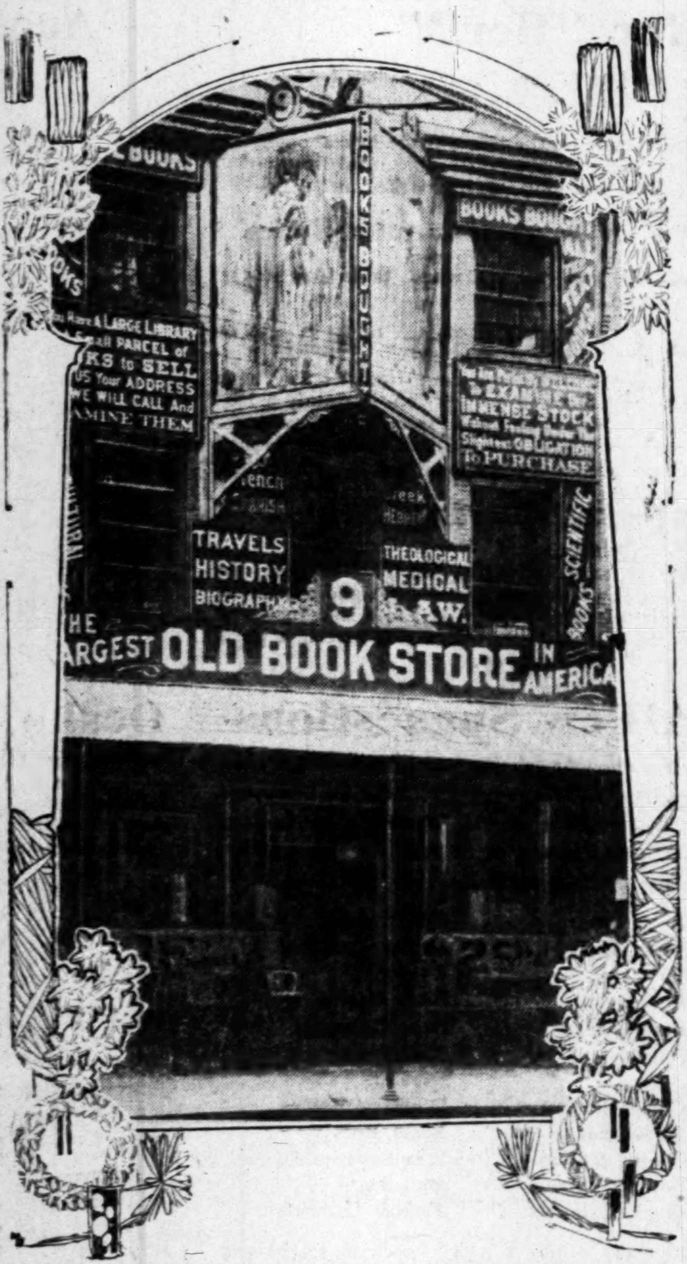
It won the place of errand boy at a alary of $4 a week. Young Stuart not only ran errands, swept out the store and did the chores around the office, but he also was put on guard to see that no books, freely exposed for sale on the outside, were stolen from the shelves.

Soon old Leary began to discover that his new errand boy could indeed do anything, and in a short time his alary was advanced.

As he grew, both in stature and the favor of his employer, it was felt safe to promote him to a clerkship, and thus he went up from step to step until he was the trusted head clerk.

This did not seem slow progress, but better was in store. Eventually the former errand boy was admitted to partnership, and finally he bought out his employer, and became sole owner.

This might have been expected to be the final achievement of a man whose training had been essentially a business one, who was not versed in law, usually the most easy step to political preferment.



Leary's old book store, where Governor-elect Stuart has spent his entire business career.

In fact, Mr. Stuart was dragged into politics, for just the same reason that all of his successive advances have come to him. He was so popular that people sought him out to take places of trust.

Before he had been in politics for a very long time, the proprietor of the old book store was president of the influential organization known as the Young Republicans. He became so popular in his post that the Pennsylvania State League of Republican Clubs chose him for president.

The tall, handsome, cheery, courteous merchant made friends on all sides, and soon became manifest a spontaneous demand to have him for Mayor.

There was no politics in the movement, it had no manager, no campaign fund, no promoting. Lots of people liked Stuart, and thought him the right man for the place.

Eventually they put him there.

During the years of his rise, Stuart had been essentially a mother's boy. His affection for his mother was the mainspring of his life, and he remained a bachelor in order to be with her. He is still unmarried.

Shortly before his election to the Mayoralty of Philadelphia, his mother died, and this spoiled much of the joy of taking a place of such honor.

Stuart had a trying administration. It fell to his lot to be Mayor when a trusted City Treasurer, John Bardsley, robbed the city of great sums of money. Other offenders of his own party, men who had helped in the movement to make him Mayor, were involved.

Many a man might have thought it political wisdom to shield the offenders, but Mr. Stuart had a rugged sense of old-fashioned honesty that was not to be compromised with. He instituted a most rigid investigation, and prosecuted the guilty without fear or favor. As a result John Bardsley went to prison.

Stuart had also to deal with rapacious trolley companies, but he forced them to concessions in the way of street paving in return for franchises that have made Philadelphia one of the best paved cities in the United States.

This was Stuart's record when he left office, and went back to private life.

Three Mayors—Warwick, Ashbridge and Weaver—have ruled in Philadelphia since that time, and Mr. Stuart held no public office in the interval.

All during his term of office as Mayor he had held on to the old book store, though the active management was entrusted mainly to his brother, William H. Stuart.

But although the former Mayor was willing to escape from the limelight, his friends still remembered his qualities and his services. Without having been a candidate he was chosen president of the Union League, perhaps the highest social honor that can come to a Philadelphian.

His next and highest elevation is the selection to be Governor.

Mr. Stuart has two homes, one in Oak Lane, a suburb, and the other in the southern section of the city, on Broad street.

Since the death of his mother, Miss Cora A. Stuart, his sister, has had charge of his home, and to her will fall whatever social duties devolve on life at the Capitol.

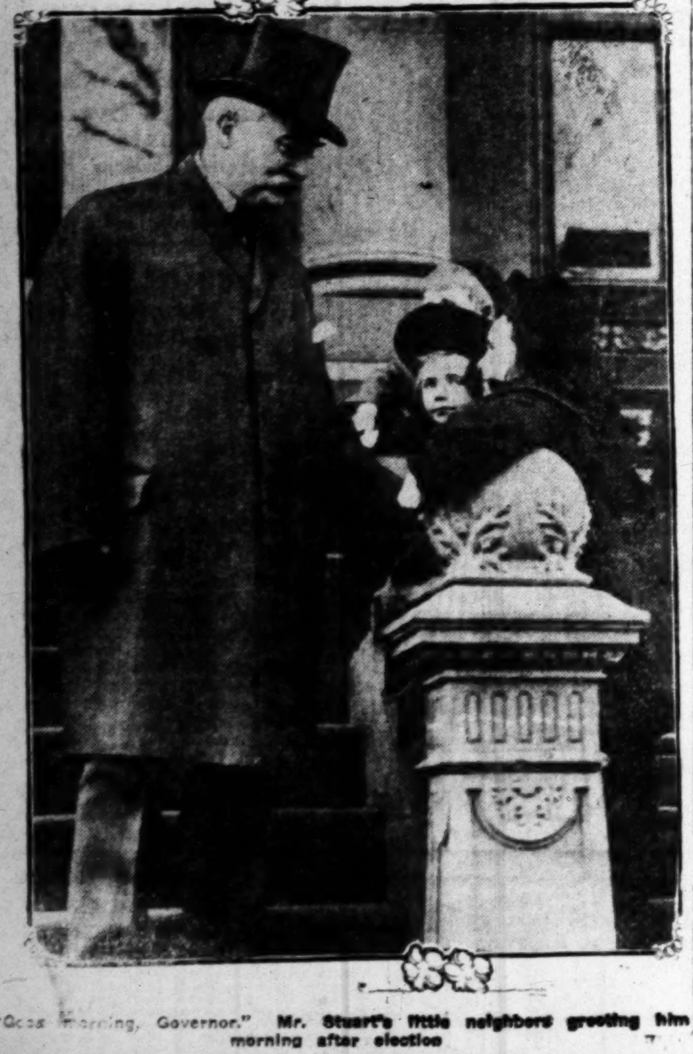
The Governor elect formed the habit of walking to his place of business when he was an errand boy, and could not afford to spend car fare. He has clung to it ever since, and scorning carriages or automobiles, he walks uptown every morning though he is fully two miles away from the center of the city.

His tall figure and kindly face are known to everyone, and man, woman and child delight to exchange greetings.

On the morning after his election the children of the neighborhood, knowing his hour for starting uptown, clustered around his step in order to be the first to salute him with the title of "Governor."

Mr. Stuart is a Mason, a member of the Board of City Trustees and a prominent clubman.

His success shows that a man can come up from nothing, and it proves equally that in the process he can still be kindly and honest, and not forget the rights or feelings of his fellow men.



"Good Morning, Governor." Mr. Stuart's little neighbors greeting him morning after election

CHINA FOR THE CHINESE.

ident Changes Among High Officials at Peking.

New Foreign Office Head Sympathized With Boycott.

No More Concessions to Be Granted Foreigners.

There have been several very important changes among the high officials China recently. That which most erests the people of the United ates is the appointment of Mr. ng Tah-sich, now minister in Lon, as the head of the foreign office the place of Mr. Tong Shou-yi, who as been transferred to the head of e newly-created bureau of communitions, which has jurisdiction over ilways, telegraph, telephones and amship lines, writes Wm. E. Curtis the Chicago Record-Herald. Mr. ng while not anti-foreign in disposin, is the recognized leader of the ina for the Chinese" party, and, e he has been at the head of the gn office has asserted his convic as well as his individuality in a nner that has caused the members f the diplomatic corps to sit up and en their eyes. He is perhaps the t aggressive, impetuous, uncomproing and independent of all public en in China, and loves a "scrap" as ch as any Irishman. Mr. Tong did t please the diplomatic corps by his itude during the boycott. Mr. Rock our Minister, was very much disfied with his independence. He the liberty to tell the envoy of United States that if the Ameri were not willing to receive the ese in their country they ought to complain if the Chinese refused y American goods, for what was for the goose was usually coned sauce for the gander. Mr. g, however, issued orders forbid discrimination against American s and otherwise did his duty in a ctly impartial manner, although he ot hesitate to justify the feeling sentment on the part of his fel countrymen and their right to re against the bad treatment of Chinese in the United States.

NO FOREIGN CONCESSIONS.

r. Tong does not know anything t railroads, telegraphs or steams but that is not considered essen in China. He has under him in bureau of communications several sportation experts, who will look r the details while he directs the ral policy of the government, ich is to grant no more concessions eigners and recover as many as ble of those that have already granted. Hereafter the Chinese build their own railroads; they develop their own mines; they tablish their own industries, ll do all of their own business r as possible. There are several way projects, and they will be out by the Chinese themselves capital so far as it can be ed, under their own control, and wn advantage. The future China for the Chinese." It that they will make many but the experience will be and national pride and pa will be gratified.

most important railway project under consideration is the con of a line from Chung-king, of navigation on the Yang the most important thor in the empire, to Myityna, of the English railway in Burma, near the boundary the two countries. Chung the capital of Yunan, one of the fertile and productive provinces with a population of 6,000,000 limited resources, is a city of population and one of the most in China. The surveyors that construction from the Bur boundary to Chung-king will be and expensive, but geograph political considerations ought ify almost any expenditure for purpose.

CESS TO HEART OF CHINA.

a railway would give Eng access to the very heart of China, would furnish the interior prov an outlet for their produce British territory, saving at thousand miles of transporta land and sea upon every of commerce with Europe. It able Chinese goods to reach in four days instead of four and divert the trade of a vast many millions of people Shanghai to Rangoon.

Great Britain made a treaty many, under which she agreed the Yangtse River free and the trade of all nations, but not interfere with the con of a railroad from Burma to Great Britain also has with France guaranteeing hts and privileges to all na southwestern China, but building a railway from her Asiatic colony, across border into the province si, and it would seem that should have as good a lay rails in the adjoining of Yunan.

are no means of transporta Burma across the Chinese beyond the railway terminus but a good deal of freight over the mountain trails of bamboo slung over the pack mules and bullocks. It by the Chinese, for the Bur enterprise and are indiffer commerce. From Yunan they horns, India rubber, raw bullion, jade, amber and materials, and take back goods of all kinds, cot woolen fabrics, wearing ap ware, drugs and many little which enter into the needs of people.

not be many years before the will be completed into of China and sooner or third line will be built down to on the Gulf of Siam.

ER WANG PROGRESSIVE.

Wang Tah-sich, the new minis affairs, is a very able man. He is ex progressive and energetic, and wide experience in diplomatic He has lived a large part of in Europe and is familiar with questions and all the fea of modern civilization. He was about a year ago, and months traveling about inquiring into matters. is no abler or wiser a man Tong, he is more of a diplo and his experience and educa all in the line of his fu Therefore he is by far the man who has ever been of the foreign office at Pe will be much less fric international relations of than formerly.

"China-for-the-Chinese" move not been so aggressive, or at has been no manifestation, within the last few months. That is not due to any lack of interest or patriotism, but because no occasion has been offered for a demonstration. The revolution, social, political, commercial, industrial, educational and military, which has been going on in China for the last few years is moving more rapidly than ever, and the results are becoming very apparent. In this revolution may be recognized a determination on the part of the Chinese people to manage their own affairs and to dispense so far as possible with the assistance of foreigners. They are not so audacious or "cocky" as the Japanese, but are gaining confidence in themselves very rapidly. The ease with which they adapt themselves to modern ideas and the zeal with which they develop them is astonishing.

ZEBROIDS THE NEW HORSE.

NEW YORKER TO IMPORT ZEBRAS FOR BREEDING PURPOSES.

Will Experiment With Hybrids on a Large Scale, Mating With the Best Strains of Blood in the United States—Interesting Questions to Be Settled.

[New York "Tribune:] From zebras which he has imported at great expense, Warner M. Van Norden, president of the Van Norden Trust Company of New York, entertains great hopes that the zebroid (as the hybrid offspring of the horse and zebra is called) will come to be generally and favorably known in this country.

"The zebroid," explained Mr. Van Norden the other day, "makes an excellent all-around animal for domestic use and I hope to introduce it in this country. It is already used in South Africa, where it has given satisfaction. I can not say just how speedy the zebroid will be, but those I shall raise will be from the finest stock, especially suited for driving purposes. These animals are much more strong and vigorous than the horse and live about twice as long. They will rank with any of the horses in general use today and in value will range from $800 to $1000. They will be very tough and able to endure twice the hardship the average horse can stand."

The parents, perhaps, of generations of American zebroids yet unborn are now contentedly munching hay in the barn at Mr. Van Norden's country place at Rye, N. Y., all unconscious of the weight of the responsibility resting upon their carefully-groomed backs.

In temporary quarters in one barn are three zebras, said to be among the finest of their species ever brought to this country. One of them is declared to be a genuine Grevy's zebra from Abyssinia and this animal alone is valued by Mr. Van Norden at $5000. The other two zebras belong to what it known as the Bohimil class. Two more, equally as valuable as those now in Rye, have been captured for Mr. Van Norden and will be shipped to this country early next spring. These animals are about 6 years old and, inasmuch as the life of the average zebra is about fifty years, they are as yet mere babies and are full of more life and tricks than young colts.

So much for the zebra parents of the zebroids. Their parents on the other side will range from a full-blooded Arabian mare down to little burro jennies, through a list of horseflesh including piebald, hackney and mustang.

The zebroids will owe their appearance in this country, however, not so much to Mr. Van Norden's desire to raise them for themselves alone as to his determination to solve the problem of telegony.

He is determined to demonstrate whether it is real, as breeders of blooded stock assert, or whether it is a vagary of the breeder's mind, as scientists declare. Explaining the object of his undertaking, Mr. Van Norden said:

"All breeders believe in telegony. It his always been their claim that if a female animal is bred to one of a different species but of the same family and is afterward bred to one of her own species, the second offspring will show resemblance to the first sire. Opposed to the claim of the breeders is that of the scientists, who say there 's no such thing as telegony and that the breeders are mistaken in their diagnosis.

"A man who stands near the head of the scientists in their contention that there is nothing in the breeders' fear of telegony is Prof. W. Ewart of Edinburgh University, and for years he has conducted experiments to support the correctness of his theories. Prof. Ewart is now experimenting with pigeons and rabbits. He asserts that no one has ever gone into the subject of telegony in such a manner as clearly to demonstrate the truth or falsity of the many claims made concerning it. The experiments of Prof. Ewart and others have thrown some light on the subject, but there is still much to be learned."

THE SOUTHERN IMMIGRATION.

Laws Have Been Violated by Offering Financial Inducements.

The 500 Belgians who recently came to South Carolina to make their homes were induced to do this by the offer, not only of financial assistance, but also of aid after they should reach this country. Under these circumstances they are here in violation of the immigration laws. Many of them, however, are well-to-do, some of them have money enough to buy small farms, and most of them had trunks full of good clothing and laundered linen. The entire shipload were of a class much superior in intelligence, education and material qualifications to the ordinary immigrant.

A second detachment, between 600 and 700 in number, and similar classes of people, is expected at Charleston in the middle of December. If they are unlawful immigrants, if the laws have been violated by Mr. Watson, the State Commissioner of Immigration, in offering them inducements to come, and if they are to be sent back upon arrival, they ought not to be allowed to sail. On the other hand, those who are interested in the upbuilding of the South will look upon this movement as of supreme importance and absolutely vital to the welfare of that section of the country.

WILL BATTLE PEAR BLIGHT.

Government Experts Soon Begin to Fight Pests of Orchards in Salano County.

Orchardists of Solano county are deeply interested in the arrival in this State of Prof. Merton B. Waite, head of the United States Plant Industry Bureau, and a corps of ten assistants, to make a determined and scientific fight against the encroachment of the pear blight in the orchards of that section.

It is now being arranged to inaugurate the work about December 1 and not only will the pear blight be fought, but the grape grower will receive valuable instructions to make an individual battle against the pests which inflict the wine industry of this State.

In connection with the efforts of the Growers' Association of California, which has volunteered its aid to do all in its power to assist the experts, Ralph E. Smith of the University of California and six of his assistants from Berkeley will also take an important part in the work.

Vaporizing Iron.

Henri Moissan, the French chemist, has recently continued his experiments in the distillation, with the electric arc, of various metals and metalloids. He concludes, as the result of these researches, that there exists no known substance which cannot be distilled in our laboratories. The ebullition of iron is very difficult to produce, yet Moissan has distilled 400 grams of iron in twenty minutes with an electric current of 1000 amperes at a pressure of 110 volts. In all cases the vapors of the metals condense in the form of a crystalline dust, possessing all the chemical properties of those metals when reduced to the form of powder. Moissan's experiments throw light on the probable temperature of the sun, where iron and the other chemical elements exist in the state of vapor. The maximum temperature of the electric arc is about 3500 degrees centrigade. But owing to the greater pressure produced by gravitation on the sun, it is probable that the temperature of ebullition of the elements there is higher than on the earth.

Tantalum by Squirting Process.

The manufacture of tantalum, one of the hardest metals known, into sheets and bars, is now, it is said, being practiced in Germany by the squirting process, the material in its original powdered form being mixed with water and gum tragacanth, and then successfully forced into rods and shapes as desired.

TITLES AND UNHAPPINESS.

MISERY RESULT OF INTERNATIONAL WEDDINGS.

The Recent Divorce Troubles of the Countess Castellane and Duchess of Marlborough Call Attention to Many Other Cases Where the Noble Spouse Has Been Unfaithful.

Whether or not it be true, in the jocular phrase of Chauncey Depew, that titles chase the girls, statistics are day by day heaping up to prove that the reaction has definitely set in, says the New York World. If the record of infelicitous international marriages in its appalling contribution to divorce court history means anything at all it may be regarded as an indication that the American girl of millions in the future will no longer chase foreign titles which for a generation have made this country the paradise of every impecunious nobleman whose high sounding name could buy him a wife and immunity from debt.

Daughters not alone of the newly rich element have sacrificed themselves at the altar of this craze for the distinction of a title, but those in whose veins ran the proudest blood of the republic have suffered not only unhappiness but shame and ignominy at the hands of the foreigners they have married. When Anna Gould became Countess of Castellane all the world knew her infatuation for the picturesque Boni, and it was believed, with the birth of the three sons she bore him, Jay Gould's daughter, in spite of the ups and downs of her matrimonial experience, must win the happiness she so richly deserved.

But in the divorce suit now practically settled it is the young countess who has shown herself adamant. Her love dead, her woman's pride outraged, she is willing to pay the highest price for freedom and the custody of her children.

In the dissolution of Helen Morton's marriage to Rosen, Comte de Talleyrand-Perigord, Duc de Valencay, the wife charged "ill treatment and neglect." This was the brief summing up of an unhappiness which ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton lost no time in ending for his favorite child. The alliance was one of the most brilliant of recent years and at the service in St. Mary's Church in London, Father Kelly's sermon was on the indissolubility of the marriage tie. The Pope had refused to annul the marriage before Mr. Morton took the matter to the divorce court. The Duchess sacrificed her title for her freedom.

Lady Grey Egerton, who was the beautiful Miss Cuyler of Morristown, N. J., a granddaughter of "Maid Anthony" Wayne, one of the most brilliant women in English society, appealed for divorce only after long years of matrimonial difficulties. A suit for a restitution of her marital rights had preceded it. Sir Philip Grey Egerton refused to obey the dictates of the court and the divorce was granted his wife last year.

The story of Julia Mackay's infelicities with Prince Colonna has practically passed into tradition. The stepdaughter of John W. Mackay had fulfilled her mother's ambitions in wedding the Italian nobleman, and she reaped a whirlwind of misery before she secured her freedom.

Miss Adele Sampson, who was Mrs. Frederick Livingston when she became the bride of Maurice de Talleyrand, Duke de Dino, was another who appealed to the law to sever her marriage tie. Like Princess Colonna and many other titled Americans she found that her husband went straight from the altar to the gaming table.

BLOW IN AMERICAN COIN.

At Monte Carlo American fortunes on the tables were the immediate sequence of so many dazzling weddings that the international alliance was regarded as the certainty of enormous stakes. After his marriage the Duke of Marlborough is said to have played elbow to elbow with the Marquis of Camden, a cousin, whom he failed to recognize. The two had not previously met and were too formal to speak without introduction. The Princess of Monaco, who was a daughter of Michael Heine, the New Orleans banker, has been for some years judicially separated from her dissolute husband.

A Knickerbocker descendant, Baroness Gertrude von Cortlandt de Graffenreid, adds another to the list of the mismated. Divorcing her first husband, Schuyler Hamilton, Jr., of New York, she wedded the Baron, only to find her marital woes increased rather than diminished. Suit followed.

After six years of almost constant inharmony, Countess Pieri, who was Marie Schroeder, an heiress of Red Bank, N. J., divorced the Italian husband she had married in Rome—a love match as every one considered. The Countess was her own detective, followed her husband to Paris and found evidence undoubtable.

DIVORCED AUSTRIAN HUSBAND.

Miss Carlotta Hart of Cleveland, after signing notes for $100,000 to liquidate the debts of her spouse, Baron De Takacs de Kis-Joka, an Austrian nobleman, was obliged to file a petition in bankruptcy. She then saved herself for the liability by a divorce granted a year and a half ago.

The Countess Festetics, one of the Haggin heiresses, is one more noble example of an international marriage severed by the courts. Collis P. Huntington's adopted daughter, Clara Spencer Huntington, gave her hand and fortune to Prince Hatzfeldt only to acknowledge the mistake when the Prince had made his absolute disregard for the marriage the talk of Europe.

In Genoa, where offense against the marital bond is punishable by imprisonment, the Countess Di Castelmenardo, who was born Edith Van Buren of New York, had her noble husband locked up for three months on a charge of unfaithfulness no later than last March. Miss Van Buren is a great-grand-niece of President Van Buren. She has achieved some distinction as a globe trotter, accompanying Mrs. Roswell D. Hitchcock to the Klondike in 1898. The two women wrote a book on their experiences.

When Miss Wheeler of Philadelphia and Count Pappenheim exchanged rings, according to his native Bavarian custom, in pledge of eternal fidelity, the lovely bride little realized what an empty farce that promise would become. The wedding guests included all the best names of exclusive Philadelphia, as well as those of New York's Four Hundred, the gifts were magnificent and the marriage settlements superb. But the Countess has now been for some time in the ranks of the divorcees.

Harold Courtenay, a kinsman of the Earl of Devon, charged that his wife, who was Miss Frances Cutting of New York and San Francisco, was insane at the time of their marriage. The couple had parted and Courtenay sued his father-in-law for $50,000, claiming he had married his wife under false pretenses, and that later she had attempted his life.

The Earl of Egmont, whose Countess was Kate Powell of South Carolina, formerly a barmaid, was arrested in London on a charge of intoxication, the woman with him attempting suicide. His marriage had preceded his succession to the title, but the habits acquired as a poor younger son never deserted him.

MLLE. JEANNE DEMAY, the French actress who was robbed of $12,000 worth of jewelry while staying at the Chateau of David Wolf Bishop, an American millionaire.

Miss M. R. Fusz, who rid herself of her expensive and dissolute husband, the Spanish adventurer, Count Penaloza, learned later that he had been arrested on a charge of forgery.

Mrs. Burke-Roche, the daughter of Frank Work, now the wife of the well-known whip, Aurel Batonyi, married the heir presumptive of Lord Fermoy, the Hon. James Boothby Burke-Roche. The story of their troubles is too well known to need repetition.

THE LIST IS UNENDING.

By a curious coincidence the separation of her daughter, the Marquise de San Marzano, from her husband did not alienate Mrs. Eccles Gillander of New York, the wealthy widow of a tobacconist, from her son-in-law. When she died she disinherited the marquise and left all to the marquis in her will, which was later contested.

The matrimonial adventures of May Yohe, the American actress, and Lord Hope gave much food for gossip and led to the divorce court, the actress's second husband being Capt. Bradlee Strong.

The list is unending. Sarah Phelps Stokes, daughter of Anson Phelps Stokes, became the Baroness Holkebl, only to seek relief in the courts. Miss Adelaide A. Cox was the victim of the bogus Baron Alphonsus Herman de Focke, who turned out to be the son of a Viennese bank clerk. Miss Susie Whittier and Prince Scage Beloselsky, Miss Benson and Comte de Chavanub, Miss May King and the Marquis of Angelsey, Miss Fitzgerald and Lord Fitzmaurice, Miss F. Audenreid and the Comte de la Forest Divonne, Miss Chaplin and the Comte de Villard Villars, Clara Ward and the Prince de Chimay, are all couples whose hands over seas marriages have resulted disastrously.

It is estimated that, in all, some 500 wealthy American women have married titled foreigners, and that the aggregate of their dowries exceeded $200,000,000. The most heavily dowered bride was the Duchess of Roxburghe (nee May Goelet,) with a fortune of $40,000,000. The others include the Duchess of Marlborough (nee Vanderbilt,) $10,000,000; the late Lady Curson (nee Leiter,) $5,000,000; Countess Castellane (nee Gould,) $15,100,000; Mrs. Vivian, $12,000,000; Baroness Halkett, $10,000,000; Lady William Beresford, $3,000,000; Princess Colonna (nee Mackay,) $2,500,000; Countess von Larisch, $4,000,000. Thirty British peers, or eldest sons of peers, and forty-four Englishmen with courtesy, titles or baronetcies married American women.

SOME RECENT DECISIONS OF THE COURTS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

A municipal corporation which gives a permit to use part of the street for the placing of building materials therein for use in the construction of a building on adjacent property is held, in Columbus vs. Penrod (Ohio) 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 386, not to be charged with the duty of seeing that the place is guarded, and not to be liable in damages to a person injured in consequence of the omission to guard the place with barriers or lights, unless it has notice of such omission, and after such notice it is guilty of negligence.

One who maintains an ash dump on his own property, remote from a thoroughfare, is held, in Fitzmaurice vs. Connecticut R. & L. Co. (Conn.) 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 149, not to be liable for injuries to a child of tender years who strays from adjoining property through a broken fence, and is burned in the hot ashes, where he has no reason to anticipate the presence of a child there, although he takes no precautions to prevent such accident.

One who makes a note purporting to be that of another is held, in Costello vs. Barhard (Mass.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 212, not to be liable to a third person who takes it for value, merely because he negligently permits it to pass out of his custody and control.

That the display of fireworks in a public park is not a nuisance per se is declared in Crowley vs. Rochester Fireworks Co. (N.Y.) 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 330.

The right of a lessee to maintain a suit to enjoin the maintenance of a nuisance to the injury of his business is sustained in Grantham vs. Gibson (Wash.) 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 447.

A partner in an ordinary mercantile house is held, in Bernheimer vs. Becker (Md.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 221, to have no implied authority to bind his copartner by his acts in detaining and searching a customer suspected of having stolen property from the store.

One who purchases a postoffice money order from an agent sent to cash it by an indorsee, who has not himself indorsed it, upon the mere indorsement of such agent, is held, in Moore vs. Skyles (Mont.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 136, to have no redress in case the indorsee again secures possession of it and obtains the money upon it.

Failure of a railroad company to give the usual and ordinary signals in approaching a highway crossing is held, in Cooper vs. North Carolina R. Co. (N. C.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 391, not to relieve a traveler on the highway from the duty of looking and listening.

One who steps upon a railroad track in open view of an approaching train, without looking to ascertain if a train is approaching, is held, in Schmidt vs. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 196, to be guilty of such negligence that no recovery can be had for his death, although the train is run in excess of the speed prescribed by the municipal ordinance.

Statutory authority to condemn lands for machine and repair shops and other structures necessary for railroad terminals is held, in Rainey vs. Red River, T. & S. R. Co. (Tex.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 590, to give the railroad company no power to act arbitrarily and without regard to injury which may be inflicted on others.

That a purchaser of grain has resold it, and has not refunded the purchase price on discovering a shortage, is held, in Denton vs. Fisher (Md.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 465, not to defeat his right to maintain an action against his vendor for the shortage.

A rule of a school board forbidding pupils to play football under the auspices of the school is held, in Kinzer vs. Toms (Iowa) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 496, not to be unreasonable or in excess of the authority of the board, although applied to conduct on holidays and away from the school grounds.

The service upon a judgment defendant of notice requiring him to appear and answer certain questions in supplementary proceedings in aid of execution, no order being made forbidding the transfer or other disposition of his property, is held, in McConnell vs. Wolcott (Kan.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 122, not to give the plaintiff a lien upon funds held by the defendant, or to prevent the latter from withdrawing such funds from the reach of his creditors by investing them in a homestead. The other authorities on lien acquired by service of notice in supplementary proceedings are reviewed in a note to this case.

Bonds of the United States held by a national bank as part of its capital are held, in Old Nat. Bank vs. County Court (W. Va.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 584, not to be taxable by the State or under its authority.

The validity of a statute forbidding brokers to traffic in tickets of railroad companies is sustained, in Ex parte O'Neill (Wash.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 558.

One holding property in trust to sell and divide the proceeds is held, in Winder v. Nock (Va.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 415, to be bound to exercise only the care of an ordinarily prudent business man, and not to be liable as for fraud and breach of trust if he secures the fair and reasonable value of the land.

If one buys property of another, and agrees to resell it to such other at an advanced price payable in the future, it is held, in Rogers v. Blouenstein (Ga.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 213, that such a transaction, actually made, is not illegal, but will be enforced.

Making the taking of more than 2 per cent. interest a month for the loan or forbearance of money a crime is held, in Re Berger (Mo.) 3 L.A.R (N.S.) 530, not to be beyond the legitimate powers of the legislature.

A vendor who, at the time of contracting to sell real estate, has not perfected his title to it, is held, in Wells, F. & Co. v. Page (Or.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 103, to have no right to claim a forfeit deposited by the vendee to secure performance on his part, upon the latter's repudiation of the contract before the time for performance arrives, unless he shows that he has perfected his title so as to be in position to perform his own agreement.

That a bachelor cannot claim the place at which he takes his meals as his residence for voting purposes, where he keeps a business office and a sleeping apartment in connection therewith in another ward, at which he spends most of his time, is held in State v. Sayre (Iowa) 3 L.R.A. N. S.) 455.

Her eyes are glowing, for she knows
  What joys the future holds for her;
Her cheeks are pink as any rose—
  What promise sets her soul astir?
Has some romance been newly born—
  Is it love's dawn that sweetly breaks?
Ah, no. She knows tomorrow morn
  She'll breakfast on fresh buckwheat cakes.

OLDEST STEAM RAILROADS.

UNITED STATES HAD THE FIRST IRON WAY IN EXISTENCE.

Interesting Facts About the Length of Lines, Long Runs and Fares on Several of the European Lines. Great Western Runs 246 Miles Without a Stop.

The oldest steam railway which is still in existence is the Stockton and Darlington, which was first opened in the year 1825, says London Answers. But America can boast the possession of an iron way still existing as part of the South Carolina and Georgia Railway, which was laid two years before that date, and which is perhaps the only passenger line that ever was worked by wind power. It is recorded that, with a favoring breeze, thirteen passengers and three tons of iron were carried at a rate of ten miles an hour.

In this country you find both the cheapest and most expensive miles of railway ever constructed. The eight-mile line known as the Wotton Tramway, and which was built to the order of the late Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, cost only £1400 per mile. It is of standard gauge, and is now used as a light railway.

The most costly piece of railway line in the world is that between the Mansion House and Aldgate, on the Underground, London. It cost nearly £2,000,000. Between Trinity Square and King William Statue the record rose to no less than 1000 guineas a yard, or about £30 an inch.

For cheap traveling the Trans-Siberian Railway holds a world's record. In order to encourage immigration into Siberia third-class fares are granted from any Russian station on the line to Tobolsk for a sum equivalent to four and sixpence. From Tobolsk on to the very edge of Manchuria you can travel for 9 shillings. Thus the emigrant can cover 6000 miles for 13s. 6d. This rate, which works out at about twenty miles per penny, is certainly cheaper than the fares on the California line, the Pueblo and Beulah Valley. Passengers by this railway are weighed and carried the whole distance for 3 farthings a pound.

The most northern railway line in existence is the Ofoten, built across the upper end of the Scandinavian peninsula by a British company, to tap the great iron ore beds which cover 300,000 acres. At the frontier station between Norway and Sweden an enormous hall has been built, into which the whole train runs bodily, and which can be closed as a protection against the weather. When crossing the Arctic circle the engine driver makes a point of blowing the whistle.

What is—or was, before being taken over by the Great Western—the smallest independent railway company in existence, was the Abingdon Railway, a mile and a half in length, and connecting Abingdon with Radley. It was a paying concern, and fetched a very good price when sold.

The Manila and Dagupan Railway, which is to be found in the Island of Luzon, has some claim to be considered the most elegant in existence. Certainly no other line can boast that all the sleepers are solid mahogany.

The London and Northwestern, besides being the richest of British railway companies—in fact, perhaps the richest in the world—can boast also of owning the largest engine works in existence. The inclosed space at Crewe is eighty-five acres, and a little over thirty acres is under cover. The Midland has at Derby twenty-six acres of covered workshops.

There is an Australian line which owns a most odd record. The New South Wales line between Nyngan and Bourke runs a distance of 126 miles in a mathematically straight line over a plain level almost as a billiard table.

Evening Hats $5.00

Exceptional values. A Monday millinery feature. $5.00 for pretty evening hats. New styles just out of their original cases, by express and out Monday for the first time. Just the prettiest hats you ever saw. Choose from light blues, pinks, white, and other dainty shades. Ordinarily they would be worth double what we ask for them Monday. Second floor, each $5.00.

Trimmed Hats $4.00

It's another value demonstration from the millinery section Monday. Trimmed and demi trimmed hats, the kind you will want for immediate wear.

You can choose from any color, and every hat is made by a prominent Eastern manufacturer of pattern hats. They would be worth $7.00 to $8.00 in the regular way. They have never been shown before. They should be snapped up quickly Monday. The saving represents close to half.

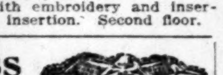
The Richness of Cut Glass



Makes it Especially Appropriate to Give

The unusualness of Broadway values makes it important that you buy cut glass here.

There's a glitteringly beautiful room IN THE BASEMENT, just teeming with gift hints. Visit it Monday. Some hints:

$5 Bowl at $3.98

8-inch ones, very finely cut; $5 values at $3.98.

Silk Waists $5

Samples Worth $7.00, $8.00, $9.00, $10.00

Out Monday in a great value demonstration—200 women's silk waists at $5.00 each. Waists that would retail in the regular way at $7.00, $8.00, $9.00, and even $10.00.

You know how important samples are from a value standpoint. The manufacturer puts his reputation back of them. And then think of the variety, mostly all different. It's like buying exclusive patterns.

Here are waists of silk in all plain colors, plaid waists, the new Roman stripe effects. Then there are a number of lace and net waists, plain tailored styles, too, with long sleeves, front fastenings. Also fancy evening waists, lace trimmed, short sleeve styles.

It's an opportunity to secure a splendid waist for evening wear. There's a good range of sizes, and the price is one to interest every woman with a waist want. There'll be plenty of enthusiasm, selling will be vigorous. Plan to come as early as you can. Second floor Monday.

Gloves for Gifts

If you are at all in doubt, give gloves for Christmas. We are ready to fill your wants with gloves of the dependable kind. Best makers are represented, and besides in many cases we import our gloves direct. That means saving of the middleman's profit to you. It's best to buy now while assortments are at their best. Early morning trading is much more comfortable and satisfactory, too. We've any number of good gloves at $1.00, and better ones at $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, and on up. Bear in mind, Broadway prices are lowest.

Give "Him" a Pair of Gloves

Learn the Truth About Credit Systems

And Be Sure You Get in the Right Store. Look for the Name, Brent's, on the Windows

Most stores, whether they mark goods in plain figures or not, have a sliding scale of prices; they have one price for a cash customer and a different price for a credit customer. In either case trust stores aim to get the maximum price out of every customer.

At Brent's all goods are marked in plain figures for spot cash. If you buy goods on credit we add 10 per cent. Our prices are the same to every one. Our arrangements are the same for every one. It is the only honest, satisfactory way.

We have secured all the rights to the largest Mica Mine in the world—only one other Mica Mine in the United States, and only one-tenth of the Mica used in the United States is mined here, balance all imported from India.

We can, with five men, take out one-half ton a day, and we shall put on twenty-five men—so you can figure the wealth of this mine, taking into consideration mica is worth from 60c to $14.00 per pound, or from $1,200 to $28,000 per ton.

In prospecting four weeks we have six tons of mica on the dump, and we have orders for all of it, and more too. We own the mineral rights to 480 acres of this valuable stuff.

We are incorporated under the laws of California for $300,000, par value of shares $1.00, with conservative men at the head. Broadway Bank & Trust Company, Depository and Davis, Rush & Willis, Attorneys.

We have placed on sale 50,000 shares at 50c per share, with a guarantee of two per cent per month dividend on par within ninety days after we get to work, which means four per cent per month dividend on the money you invest. We think we can make this stock worth $10.00 per share within twelve months. It should have been incorporated for Ten Million in place of Three Hundred Thousand Dollars, but it is a close corporation and only a small amount of stock is to be sold. Come to our office and let us show you the biggest proposition you ever saw. No gold mine in it with this mica.

Talks With Big Ones.

THE QUIZZICAL HUMOR OF SECRETARY BONAPARTE IS BAFFLING, BUT DECIDEDLY SALTY IN ITS FLAVOR.

By J. B. Morrow.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—There is a story in Baltimore, and it may be true, that Charles Joseph Bonaparte, after suffering beleaguerment and bombardment by reporters in person, over the telephone and through the postoffice for his views on some matter that was up, sent word to an editor that he was inclined to talk.

A man with long legs and good wind was hurried to Mr. Bonaparte's law office. Handed an envelope at the door he threw himself downstairs and sped away. The editor, aflame with victory, unfolded a sheet of foolscap and read: "Mr. Bonaparte, having been asked for his opinion in respect to so-and-so, said:" There was nothing more except a white wilderness of blank paper.

There is one element of accuracy in the anecdote. Mr. Bonaparte always writes out what he has to say to the public. He will not be quoted for the simplest statement of the most hackneyed or undisputed fact unless he is permitted to put his own hand to paper. Safe, indeed, he may be at all times, but he can never hope to be sympathetic, familiar or dramatic. He might be all three. There is but one way in which to interview a man and have the interview a picture to life and in every particular characteristic. The interviewer must do all the writing himself.

The Secretary of the Navy is a mixture of Patterson and Bonaparte. Because he is not undersized, being five feet and ten and of bold proportions, he is said to be wholly unlike Napoleon. Nevertheless, Italy is in his face and the blood of the first Bonapartes is to be seen in the elegance of his manners, his courage of mind and heart and his talent for public affairs. From the Pattersons of Baltimore have come his habit of plain speech and his faculty for business and the care of money, although his great grandmother Bonaparte, who was Napoleon's mother, a resolute and beautiful woman, was notoriously economical herself. Napoleon's eldest brother, Joseph, was a tall man of royal presence and much suavity of address. The Secretary of the Navy, his grandnephew, bears his name in part and has inherited his agreeableness of personal bearing as well as his avidity for reform.

Received with marked courtesy, I told Mr. Secretary Bonaparte my business. He smiled most hospitably; but there was no sign of that. The smile universal, it might be called. It is in court when the battle is the bloodiest. It is on the stump in Maryland when each sentence is an exploding harpoon or a sword thrust. It is present in every relation of life. At no time a smirk, it is a lure, nevertheless. The full, dark eyes were cordial and kidliness, even, was in all the lineaments of the round, olive face.

"Bring in your questions," he said, "and I shall try to answer them." The voice was hearty, thick, but not heavy, and distinctively foreign. There had been preparation against a day indefinite, and the questions were produced. "Very well. Leave them with me and I shall dictate answers to such as I care to make reply. That will be a saving of work to you and of time for me." The smile was dangerously winning but categorical responses, the laconics of the busy man who seeks brevity and precision, not to say escape do not constitute an interview of human interest. I wanted to chat. So I said: "Will you look them over?"

A HARD ONE TO CRACK.

"Surely."

There was a jerky buzz of inarticulate sounds. By and by a stop. Mr. Bonaparte leaned back in his chair, held the paper at arm's length and read: "How can a young man achieve success at the bar?"

Scrutinizing me across the top of his eye-glasses he replied:

"Early to bed; early to rise;
Never get tight; don't advertise."

But the ice had not gone out of the river. The involuntary and momentary lapse of the exalted public functionary, of the accomplished lawyer, of the reputed millionaire, of, in short, dignity and repression, back to the natural man himself, was followed by more droning as the questions were read to the end. "Have you any personal recollections of your grandmother, Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte? All accounts agree that she was not alone a woman of brilliancy and wit, but was wise and successful in matters of business?"

There was an opportunity here for history, anecdote and love in memory. Mr. Bonaparte hummed the last inquiry, the fifteenth on the list, to himself and then read it aloud. "It would not do for her grandson to say that she had neither brilliancy nor wit," he replied. "As a matter of fact, however, she had both. Yes; and she was successful in business. I am living on her money now, or a part of it."

Whereupon, there was some fencing; I to talk on the spot; he to write it down at his convenience. I could not say: "You will ruin the interview, take its vitals out and make it punctilious and curt." And Mr. Bonaparte was too urbane, too considerate, to tell me I ought to be thankful for what I got.

So the questions were put under a paper-weight, in plain sight, and there was a promise that the replies would be forthcoming within the week. But Cuban liberty was upset and spilled out like water in a bucket. The navy, accordingly, was busy. Besides, there were several speeches to make. In a month I went again. Mr. Bonaparte had forgotten; had been crowded for time, but he would keep his word. The next morning the answers came, on heavy paper, in purple ink and typewriting

"Do you remember the first fee you earned as a lawyer? Did you have the usual period of waiting and watching for clients?"

A commonplace inquiry, but intended merely to call out of the past some particular experience which might be curious or illuminating.

Answer: "I do not remember the first fee which I earned as a lawyer. I did not have to wait as long as most young lawyers for clients, since circumstances led me to be connected very soon after I came to the bar, with several cases of considerable importance, although of no very great profit to me individually."

No library reformer, but a rough fighter using humor, invective and satire, I asked: "What caused you to become interested in the political conditions of Maryland?" This, too, was to be a prod to memory, an opening for personal discourse.

Answer: "In 1875 I was counsel for the contestants in the contested election cases arising out of the election in Baltimore for that year. This caused me to become acquainted with the political methods then prevailing in Maryland, and led me to think it very desirable that these methods should be changed. From that time until the present I have been very much interested in matters affecting the good government of my native city, State and country."

PARTY GOVERNMENT.

"Do you believe every good citizen should be a member of either the Democratic or Republican party?"

"I believe that every good citizen ought to be a member of some party. If he does not find a party that he can conscientiously join, he had better found one for himself. For practical purposes, however, with a view of improving existing conditions in government I think it will usually be found advantageous, and even indispensable, to use existing parties as instruments of political action."

There was a purpose to draw from Mr. Bonaparte some utterance on the evil practices of the day when he was asked: "You have been fighting dishonesty—graft it is now called—for many years. Have you observed any improvement in the moral standards of public men and of men engaged in business?"

But Mr. Bonaparte remembered that he is soon to be Attorney-General of the United States, the government prosecutor of trusts, corporations and individuals who break the law and so he was alert and prudent and only said: "I have observed a very decided improvement in public opinion and in the standards of thought and conduct on the part of public men in regard to several questions of great importance since I have been interested in public affairs. Among these are civil service reform, honesty at elections and the subordination of partisanship to the public interest. I am not prepared to say anything of the standards of men engaged in business."

"What are the first obligations of citizenship?"

"The 'first obligations' of citizenship are to discharge all the duties imposed on the citizen by law, faithfully and zealously and with a sole regard to the public interest."

"Eminent as a civil service reformer, have your opinions changed, now that you are in the government and have had practical experience with officeholders?"

"My opinions as a civil service reformer have so far changed since I have become an officeholder myself, that I am slightly more thoroughly convinced of the necessity of the reform than I was previously. I really do not see how the business of the government was carried on before the merit system was introduced."

"Should the United States maintain a navy which is strong enough to meet all possible contingencies?" A slovenly way of asking a question. Mr. Bonaparte, said to be a specialist in words, replied:

"The United States should certainly maintain a navy which is strong enough to meet all probable contingencies. To say 'all possible contingencies' in the sense of all conceivable contingencies, would be imposing an unreasonable burden and one which is borne by no other country, but the United States ought to be prepared at all times to discharge the duties imcumbent upon one of the world's great powers, and for this purpose a strong and efficient navy is clearly indispensable."

"You have been called 'the most eminent Catholic layman in the United States.' A considerable number of Americans believe there is a hope, if not a purpose, to make this a Catholic country?"

RELIGIOUS DREAMS.

Answer: "I do not know whether I have been called 'the most eminent Catholic layman in the United States. I certainly do not deserve the designation, and I do not remember to have seen it applied to me. There may be some Catholics who believe that all the Protestants, Hebrews and agnostics in this country will be converted to their faith in the near future but I fear that such persons take an optimistic view of the situation. I presume that all zealous members of the communion would like to see this result brought about, but I hardly think it can be said that many of them expect it soon to occur."

"It is said you will oppose a friend as quickly an denergetically as you will an enemy if you think him to be wrong."

"I don't know who has said that I 'will oppose a friend as quickly and energetically as I will an enemy if I think him to be wrong.' Whoever said it paid me a compliment which I should like to deserve but fear I do not wholly merit. I certainly think, however, that this is what a thoroughly conscientious person would do and what everybody ought to do."

"You are represented as saying that free schools are as great an evil to the people as free food or houses would be?"

"If I am represented as saying that 'free schools are as great an evil to the people as free food or houses would be,' I am misrepresented. I have always been in favor of compulsory education, and I do not think that because education is compulsory it should necessarily be gratuitous. I have also long advocated that the character of education in the public schools should be adapted to the needs of the children taught and not based upon a uniform and unvarying curriculum for all alike. When I first announced these ideas publicly they were very unpopular among certain classes of people, and the question undoubtedly contains an echo of some of the criticisms to which my views were then subjected. I have noticed, however, that within the past twenty-five years the ideas I then advanced have been, in a considerable measure, adopted in different parts of the country."

Trusts and monopolies were in mind when I inquired: "Do any dangers menace the republic?"

The Attorney-Generalship must have been in Mr. Bonaparte's mind when he answered. "Some dangers unquestionably menace our republic," he wrote "but I am disposed to think that we shall be able to deal with them as they successively arise."

The formal reply to the inquiry about a young lawyer's success at the bar was in Mr. Bonaparte's serious and correct style of public composition but it was less attractive and really meant no more than his burlesque poetry.

"A young man can achieve success at the bar," he said, "first, by being fitted by nature and education to practice at it; secondly, by working hard, attending to his business, avoiding bad habits, bad company and extravagance, and doing well all the work that he gets a chance to do. According to my observation, he is almost sure to get a practice in time, if he deserves to get one, and if he lives long enough."

There was a desire to provoke some talk about President Roosevelt, to arouse recollection and thus produce an incident or a fact historically important. Therefore, I asked: "When did you become acquainted with the President?"

As well might some other man than Moses have smitten the Rock of Horeb. "I became personally acquainted with President Roosevelt in February, 1889." Exact as mathematics, but lifeless and dreary as an African desert.

"You have never visited Europe?" nephew of Napoleon should live for fifty-five years and keep away from France. Perhaps he woul tell the reason. Wouldn't he like to see Paris? The famous Bois de Boulogne, its water, trees and flowers? The Champs-Elysees, where the French legions, back from conquest under Napoleon, heard the raptured shouts of the nation and where liberty was wrought out in the oratory which preceded revolution? And the Louvre made still greater and more magnificent by two Bonapartes, both emperors? Poetry, romance and tragedy were within the husks of the question. The answer was a linguistic vacuum.

"It is true that I have never visited Europe," Secretary Bonaparte wrote. "I expected to do so immediately after leaving college, but circumstances prevented my going at that time, and I have never found any leisure since."

BONAPARTE-PATTERSON.

While Napoleon I. was ringing the bells of Christendom and calling the world to arms or into the streets, Jerome, his youngest brother, a naval officer, whose ship was blockaded by English cruisers in a port of the West Indies, succeeded in getting to Boston, whence he purposed to sail for France. But cupid caught him. Seized upon by the public and society, paraded through the East because of his name, he met Elizabeth Patterson, the daughter of a rich Baltimore merchant and ship owner. He was past 19 and she was two months and twenty-one days younger. Archbishop John Carroll, head of the Roman Catholic church in the United States, married them. In a year they sailed for Europe in one of her father's vessels.

The sad fate of Betsy Patterson was more than one of the minor crimes which blackened Napoleon's reputation. Madame Bonaparte was forcibly prevented from landing on the continent of Europe. Her husband, leaving her side, hastened to Paris to appeal in person to his brother. She saw him no more. He traded his heart, and it is not denied that he loved his wife, for the crown of Westphalia. Abandoned, Madame Bonaparte found refuge in England. There, soon after, her son was born. The son, also Jerome Bonaparte, lived much in Europe with his mother, once met his father by appointment, later was admitted to Harvard, where he excelled in mathematics, and at the age of 23, married Susan May Williams of Baltimore, whose family had come from New England. This man was the father of the Secretary of the Navy.

It is said that Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte crossed the Atlantic Ocean sixteen times. She divided her life between Europe and Baltimore. But her wit, her irreproachable conduct, her wisdom and her tact and readiness in every circumstance of life were more celebrated abroad than at home. Her husband offered her a title and $60,000 a year. She rejected both. Napoleon had broken her heart but she admired his genius, declared him to be one of the greatest men in history and accepted an annuity of $12,000 from him. "I would prefer," she is said to have remarked in this connection, "to find shelter under an eagle's wing than to be suspended from the bill of a goose."

When Napoleon was sent to St. Helena she returned to Paris where she was ardently welcomed by the aristocracy of France. Indeed, she was highly esteemed and gladly received in all the capitals of Europe, and her marriage, sanctioned by the Pope, was everywhere recognized except among the Bonapartes. Her last years were spent in Baltimore and in a boarding-house, so her local history runs, although she was the owner of many buildings, much land and other property. She drove good bargains, carried a red cotton umbrella and wore a yellow feather in h

The warmth of the welcome given to Speaker Cannon as he entered just before noon was unmistakable. "Uncle Joe's" face beamed with pleasure as he waited with gavel in hand for the applause to subside, and the smile had not entirely disappeared when, later in the day, he was seen wending his weary way to the family home on Vermont avenue, where a loving daughter awaited his return with a welcome prompted by an affection deeper even than that shown by his colleagues in the morning.

A somewhat smaller though not less interesting crowd of spectators witnessed the second day's opening of Congress, when, according to threadbare custom, the President's message to the country-at-large, and the lawmakers in particular, was read at each end of the Capitol.

When the reading began the gallery known as the "Gentlemen's" was filled with masculines representing various stages of the prosperity supposed to be abroad in the land. As usual in a gathering of "mere men" there was great similarity in the matter of dress, and, let us be thankful, positively no color contrasts in their outer garments. How different was the ladies' gallery, where human butterflies of all ages and sizes, all races and nearly all nationalities were assembled! There was the flannelless, lingerie-wisted girl beside a dowager hostess looking comfortable and elegant in a velvet robe, her coat of ermine thrown gently back from the shoulders. There, too, was the autumn bride, arrayed in one of Fashion's latest modes, with the tiniest hat she could find, completing the stylish, if not too becoming outfit. A little to her right sat a demure person whom everybody seemed to know or wanted to meet. The tout ensemble of her costume was so perfect that no detail obtruded itself, and one was vaguely conscious that here was a woman stylishly gowned though apparently not in style. Each was typical of a class and is to be found in almost every representative gathering of femininity.

Mademoiselle Des Portes de la Fosse, daughter of the first secretary and councilor of the French embassy, who has just returned from a four months' visit to Paris, appeared in the gallery kept sacred to the use of members of the Diplomatic Corps, and was clad in the most ultra garment seen at the Capitol that day, or in fact, on the streets of Washington this season. It is of garnet cloth, very heavy and shiny. The skirt is of the circular variety, trimmed at the hem with three wide, very full ruffles of the cloth, each headed with black silk braid about three inches wide. The jacket comes well below the hips, and ends in a decided ripple, without a line to suggest the loose effects which American tailors have forced on unwilling victims from Palm Beach to Portland, and from Boston to Los Angeles.

A picturesque contrast to mademoiselle's costume is to be seen almost daily in the neighborhood of the Dutch legation here. It is worn by the nursemaid of Mme. Von Swinderen (née Miss Glover of Washington,) and consists of the gay head-dress and embroidered finery of the Dutch peasant class. The maid's yellow skirt, fully three inches from the ground, shows to advantage, a pair of wooden shoes which came straight from Holland, and which her mistress hopes cannot be duplicated in this country. A necklace of gold and silver beads, with a stiff-looking wrap on very cold days, completes the outfit of an individual who is sure to be the cynosure of all eyes when she appears on the street with her tiny charge.

It is not a long call from this carefully-tended youngest member of the diplomatic colony to her father's colleague, the senior Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary, so we leave the Dutch legation and its nursery, to take a glance at the official home of Sweden, where the last order of King Oscar is being carried into effect. Here all is commotion for Mr. A. Grip, for seventeen years its chief, is preparing to leave this country forever, in response to his King's request. Mr. Grip has been very popular during his residence in Washington and sincere regret is expressed at his recall. He came accredited to the Harrison administration as Minister from Norway and Sweden. When the north countries dissolved partnership, more than a year ago, he was the only native of Norway in the joint diplomatic service who remained loyal to the older government, and was continued here as the representative of Sweden, while his secretary, Mr. M. Hauge, also a Norseman, cast his lot with his fellow-countrymen and was made the Minister from Norway, soon after the coronation of King Haakon.

The going away of Mr. Grip will elevate another bachelor, Mr. Constantin Brun of Denmark, to the rank of senior Foreign Minister to this capital. In former years this position carried with it great prestige and the title of dean of the Diplomatic Corps, but now there are nine Ambassadors who, though their term of office be much less than his, ranked ahead of the senior Minister on the social calendar.

A flutter in local diplomatic circles has been caused by the recent criticisms in London of the British Ambassador to Washington, whose retirement has a touch of mystery about it, quite incomprehensible to his friends in America. To be sure the German Ambassador is on a more familiar footing at the White House, but jealous Britishers might remember that the friendship between Baron Speck von Sternberg and the President antedates the coming of the former as the highest German official in Washington. Moreover, the latter's wife is an American, so that if Mr. Roosevelt and the German Ambassador call each other "Specky" and "Teddy," when not on dress parade, it is no reflection upon Sir Mortimer's ability as a diplomat or Lady Durand's success as mistress of the British embassy.

Society has finally said good-by to Hon. Lady Alan Johnstone, wife of the British Minister to Denmark, who sailed for Europe on Saturday, after a six weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Pinchot of New York and Washington. While in this country Lady Johnstone was royally entertained and it is doubtful if her personal friends or the confreres of her distinguished husband in the Diplomatic Corps could have done more for her had they known that Sir Alan was being urged as the next Ambassador from Great Britain to the United States. As it was, she was the most socially honored guest of the fall season, among her hosts being the present British Ambassador and Lady Durand, who gave a dinner of thirty covers for her at the embassy.

Heirs Wealth and Title.

D. L. Bathurst, a clerk in the New York postoffice, expects soon to secure a goodly share of $3,000,000 and wear the title of baron of Lachalde. He has just returned from England, where he established his claim, and is now awaiting the necessary legal process to come into his own. He discovered that he is the eleventh baron of Lachlade, being a direct descendant of Sir Francis Bathurst, fifth baron of Lachlade, who came to America with Governor James Oglethorpe of Georgia in 1733. Bathurst says he will make Pueblo his home.

THEY AIM TO STEP TO HUNDRED YEARS.

ONE of the most interesting and novel features of woman's club life in this city is the One Hundred-Year Club. It meets oftener than that, however. The object in giving it that long-time title is the hope each member shall live to be a century old, and that the club will live forever and a day. The women believe they have found the secret of prolonging life—the philosopher's stone, perhaps—and this elixir so much sought after by alchemists in the Middle Ages, is simply bodily exercise, mainly walking. This Hundred-Year Club meets once a month and selects a route for a walking expedition. They discuss the various picturesque sections near Los Angeles away from the railroads, and resolve to go in a bevy on a stated day. There are thirty-five members, and nearly all are on hand when these sprinting pilgrimages start. The extent of the journey is from ten to fifteen miles and return ordinarily; but, if there are accommodations en route, the excursion is extended to two days, the distance footed being fifteen or twenty miles a day, according to the condition of the roads or trails. Their plan, in visiting a remote interior point, is to go by rail to the nearest station, and foot it the remaining distance. At the village they change street dress for walking costume. The paraphernalia of the women is piled on a burro, and this is driven along ahead of the pilgrims like that of a prospector in search of a mine. The women leave nothing to chance. In addition, a supply of coffee, chocolate and fruits is taken along, and when a halt is called for rest, luncheon is in order.

The last expedition was up the Mt. Wilson trail. In negligee costume the women started for the 6000-foot climb from Sierra Madre, the burro in the lead with their street wardrobes. As they continued along the zig-zag path, winding along precipices and skirting cañons, new wonders were revealed. At this season, bordering on winter, the lowlands are splotched with red, green, yellow, and other colors, like the figures of an Oriental carpet. The trails lead in and out of deep cañons and pine forests, and at one point, about half-way up, a beautiful vista opens—the San Gabriel Valley below and the grand Pacific Ocean thirty-five miles beyond.

About half way up is picturesque Cañon del Noche (Cañon of the Night.) It is so named because the forests of great trees cast their long dark shadows over the cañon, giving to it the gloomy appearance of night, even at mid-day. At this somber and silent spot the women quickened their pace, and those whistled who could. Not that they were scared, but they felt less lonesome, like the boy who whistles in passing a graveyard.

A mile beyond Orchard Camp, four and a-half miles up the trail, the unexpected happened. The walkers had not consulted the Weather Bureau, and, perhaps it would have made no difference if they had. Mountain weather does not fit guesses for a lower altitude. The weather was raw, and a very fresh breeze blew in from the ocean. Then there was sleet, hail, finally snow. Some of them had never seen the fleecy article at short range, and Mrs. Weibers, the captain of the expedition, had not seen snow in twenty years, except the white mantel on the summit of Mt. Antonio, from Los Angeles.

While the snowstorm was at its worst the burro began to kick, and started down the trail—with the wardrobes. This created a panic. They did not faint, nor scream, but several did lively sprinting, and brought the rebellious beast back, thus avoiding the awkward predicament of returning to the city in their mountain costume.

The trip of four and a-half miles was made in two hours. It was not a speed contest, but for pleasure and exercise. The walking was at a quickened pace, and there were stops at the various picturesque points for rest and to view the magnificent scenery. The return trip was made in three-quarters of an hour. The women unite in saying that it was a "lovely outing," even considering the snowstorm, which is an event in one's life in this almost snowless land; and, as for the burro—well, that was amusing, too!

In these walking outings they do not run foot-races, nor are there speed trials. They are mapped out for exercise, which gives health. In walking, says Mrs. Weibers, the president, "the entire body is exercised, all the muscles are properly developed, the lungs are made stronger and healthier, and breathing is better regulated. We consider this form of exercise more beneficial than gymnastics, dumb-bell exercises, calisthenics, or the more violent athletics, for walking is natural, and if the body is held in proper position a person can walk a long distance without the least fatigue. The exercise is healthful in every way. One of the members of our club is 70 years of age, and at the end of a journey, she shows no more fatigue than the others. We walk with the body erect, head up, breathing naturally, and place the foot square upon the ground, slightly resting upon the ball of the foot. The great majority strike the heel on the ground, which jars the body and soon gives one the headache. Walking is the best and most healthful exercise one can take."

The other officers of the Hundred-Year Club are: Mrs. Emma Edgerton, first vice-president; Mrs. McCollough, second vice-president; Mrs. J. F. Duane, treasurer; Mrs. Lulu P. Little, secretary.

Gen. Shafter on Fat Men.

Weighing scarcely less, if not more, than 400 pounds, Shafter had a profound aversion for fat men, either as enlisted men or officers.

"They're no account for soldiering," he would bluster in his tremendous basso. "They pant, they wheeze, they snort, they choke, they grunt, they groan, they waddle, they slouch through the world. Not a particle of good on earth, fat soldiers—would not have one of 'em around if I could help it."

"Er—but—er—you would not exactly—er—call yourself slight, would you, colonel?" a venturesome major once asked Shafter after one of these outbursts.

"Slight?" No!" Shafter thundered in reply. "H—ll, no. I've been a fat, blobby old nuisance ever since the day I tipped the beam at over 200 pounds, and right then I ought to've been court-martialed and cashiered for outrageous and malicious adiposity, sir—for scandalous corpulence to the prejudice of military discipline."—[Washington Star.

Woman Wants Cure for Glass in Her Stomach and Husband Forgets His Wife's Name.

[Washington Post:] When Mrs. Virginia Garland, thirty-two years old, entered the office of Inspector Boardman, at police headquarters, last night, with an empty condensed milk can in her hand, and urged the inspector to go to the nearest drug store and purchase for her a bottle of patent medicine to cure her of "glass in the stomach," the head of the Washington detective force was, to use his own words, "flabbergasted." But when, at the First precinct station, an hour later, the woman's husband, William Garland, employed at the Central Union Mission, solemnly declared that although she was his wife, he had forgotten her name, Desk Sergt. Sanford nearly fell off his swivel chair.

Mrs. Garland was locked up at the First precinct station charged with insanity. When her husband was summoned to the station to identify Mrs. Garland, he declared instantly that the woman was his wife. Desk Sergt. Sanford said a few appropriate words of sympathy and then asked for her full name.

Garland scratched his head reflectively, and replied:

"I dunno. I clean forgot it."

"Say, my dear sir," exclaimed Sanford, impatiently, "this is no time for levity. Tell me your wife's name. Her last name is Garland; now what is—"

"But her last name isn't Garland," interrupted Garland; "it's Darling—D-a-r-l-i-n-g. That is, I think it is, but I don't remember distinctly."

"You mean," said the sergeant, sympathetically, "that her maiden name was Darling."

Whereupon Mr. Garland replied emphatically that he did not mean anything of the kind; that he knew what he was talking about, and that although his own name was Garland, his wife had one of her own, and he had forgotten it.

While Garland was holding his conference with the mystified desk sergeant, his unfortunate wife, in the female ward upstairs, was explaining her troubles to the matron.

"Some time ago," said Mrs. Garland, "I ate a few pieces of glass to cure mydyspepsia. It never did agree with me, so, having heard of a certain brand of patent medicine which is good for it, I have been buying it at the different drug stores here. But each bottle of medicine has been tampered with, so I called on the police to get me a bottle of the real stuff. The police requested me to wait here, and the chief has sent out fifty mounted officers to investigate."

Mrs. Garland will be sent to St. Elizabeth's Insane Asylum. Her husband has been requested by the First precinct authorities to rack his memory and see if he cannot find the name which has slipped his mind.

THE DEAF MADE TO HEAR

The Story of the Electrical Engineer, George P. Way, Whose Lost Hearing Was Restored by His Invention

About eight years Mr. Geo. P. Way, electrical engineer of the Detroit Young Men's Christian Association, could scarcely hear the roaring of his own engines and dynamos as he passed among them. Today he is to all appearances possessed of perfect hearing. Yet when he removes two tiny devices from his ears he is quite as badly off as before.

Mr. Way's deafness had been increasing for years, until it had reached the point where he was unable to hear his wife's voice across the dinner table, and his usefulness as an engineer was seriously threatened. It happened as Mr. Way tells the story, that he was at his post in the dynamo room one day nearly eight years ago, and as the buzzing in his ears bothered him more than usual he placed a curiously shaped tuft of cotton in his right ear. Then a most thrilling thing happened. In the midst of the perpetual silence that is the torment of one shut off from the sounds of the busy world, there came a terrible crashing sound, as of an earthquake, and Mr. Way bounded across the room, terror stricken. Then the amazed engineer sat down in his chair and tried to realize what had happened. Unconsciously he pulled the tuft from his ear. Instantly he returned to the eternal silence that had enveloped him for years. The sound of the machinery came to him as far away; he no longer heard his assistant's curious questions. Then the truth came to him and he realized that a new day had dawned for him. Mr. Way rushed home to tell his wife the good news; they were all amazed. Then for five years, he experimented constantly to put his accidental discovery to use.

The Way Ear Drum was the result of his labors, and he wore it with splendid results. Others, of course, heard of the marvel and he was overwhelmed with requests for one of these little ear phones from friends as well as from people whom he never knew.

SHOWING POSITION OF DRUM IN THE EAR

Literally thousands of the drums have been sold in every part of the country, and the present volume of sales runs into hundreds of pairs weekly.

With these little ear drums in the ears it is almost impossible for any catarrh to take place. Mr. Way, whose home office is in the Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich., believes that there are very few cases of deafness that his drums will not relieve.

Mr. Way will be in Los Angeles at the Angelus Hotel, December 10th to 15th, inclusive. All who are deaf should be sure to call on him, as it will cost nothing to learn whether he can help you or not.

Take the elevator and the attendant will show you to Mr. Way's parlors.

After residing in Los Angeles for 17 years I have chosen the Wilshire Boulevard District for the location of my home. I am satisfied that it has the elements of an ideal home section—high, thoroughly restricted, close in. I am at present erecting a residence on my property.

WORKERS' PAGE—California Walnuts Superior to Those Grown in France.

Walnut Growing in Southern California.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDUSTRY FROM THE SELECTION OF TREES TO GATHERING THE NUTS.

By Will A. Smith.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

BIGNESS is a California characteristic. The State itself is big; its industries are big, and so are the revenues which they return to their owners. One of these industries—the growing of English walnuts commercially—brings into the State each year more than two million dollars. The bulk of the crop is sold outside of California, and adds more than a million dollars to the purchasing power of the State.

Walnut growing has much to commend it to the investor of moderate means, among its special advantages being the following: First, the margin of profit is large. It is a common saying that the California walnut grower picks gold dollars from his trees. Good authorities say that a ten-acre walnut orchard will show four times the profit of the same acreage planted to alfalfa, five times that of corn, and year after year will do fully as well as either oranges or lemons.

Second, when well established, the walnut orchard needs far less care than oranges or lemons, or almost any other orchard, often leaving the rancher three-fourths of his time for other work.

Third, overproduction will never threaten the industry. This is certain for several reasons. Land adapted to walnut culture is limited in area, while both demand and consumption are constantly increasing. For the past ten years the crop of nuts has grown bigger with each succeeding year, and yet we are not yet able to supply the demand for the nuts in America alone.

Fourth, the marketing of the product of a walnut orchard presents fewer problems than does the output in any other branch of horticulture. If conditions are not right to bring the grower high prices in the North or in the East, the nuts can be shipped to a more favorable spot, or held in good condition for months. Compare this for a moment with almost any other orchard product undergoing the same test, and the advantage needs no further elaboration.

It has been said that the walnut tree is the longest lived of any orchard planting. This statement has yet to be proved in California, as the industry has assumed commercial importance in recent years, but scattered trees of uncertain age and statistics from other countries would seem to indicate its truth.

THRIFTY OLD TREES.

On the old Passon's ranch at Rivera stand some of the oldest walnut trees in Southern California. They were planted fifty-four years ago, and are giants for size, their gray branches giving the appearance of an age far greater than that claimed for them.

A few years ago this orchard was considered past its profit-bringing age. The trees bore only a few nuts, and those were of inferior size. The owner of the orchard planned to cut out the old trees, and actually did cut down most of his orchard. Other work proved pressing, however, and a few of the trees escaped, to stand almost alone, and bathed in sunshine where before their crowded condition allowed but little sun to penetrate their branches.

What was the orchardist's astonishment at the next harvest time to find that the old trees had responded amazingly to this treatment, yielding more nuts, and of a superior size. Thus the old trees vindicated themselves, proving that they had refused to bear abundantly before, not because of old age, but by reason of starvation in both root and branch. Now, with careful and thorough cultivation, judicious pruning and with far more root-room and sunshine, they bid fair to set a new record for California's trees.

Ferdinand Valla, a walnut rancher of Los Nietos, whose grandparents were walnut growers in France, is authority for the statement that French walnut trees often live and bear for several centuries. His grandfather's orchard was one of these old ones, having been planted, says Mr. Valla, in the fifteenth century. The trees are said to be still alive and vigorous.

One difference there is, though, in the French and California methods of planting which would tend to the advantage of the foreign orchard. In France the trees are planted along roadways, around paths and beside streams. Here each tree has far more sunshine, and a practically unlimited area in which to expand its roots and branches. In our own State the growers are now studying this question more closely than ever before, and are planting the young orchards so as to give each tree more room.

The history of the walnut tree is interesting. It is a native of Armenia and Northern India, and was introduced long centuries ago into Greece, Italy, Spain and France, and at a much later date, into England. In all these countries it still flourishes, and is grown for the nuts, the oil (pressed from the nuts much as is olive oil,) and for the wood.

THE WALNUT'S ADVENT.

To our own sun-warmed country the walnut was brought by the Spanish priests, along with the orange, lemon, lime, olive and grape. These fruits have stood the test of centuries and California orchards are today a living monument to the far-sightedness of the mission padres.

From the walnut trees of the Fathers came the old hard-shell nuts, planted so extensively in past years, which have proved veritable gold mines for their owners.

Of late years this nut, good as it is, has been relegated somewhat to the background, giving way to the soft-shell. This latter has been planted on thousands of acres and is one of the prominent features of most California landscapes.

The soft-shell was introduced into California in this way: About fifty years ago a vessel sailed from Chili, bound for San Francisco. In its cargo was a small consignment—only three sacks—of Chilean walnuts. These were purchased by a Mr. Sexton of Santa Barbara, who planted some of them on his ranch. As the years went by the trees grew and bore and their nuts were marketed in San Francisco. Finally one dealer, more shrewd and progressive than the others, demanded that all nuts sent to him should be of a certain standard, both as regarded size and softness of shell.

Sexton investigated his orchard, and found that only a few of his trees bore nuts of this required standard. Thereafter these softer-shelled nuts were kept separate and sold for a better price.

Here, then, began the California soft-shell walnut, and from this it has grown and flourished till it is known in every civilized land.

In the Rivera—Los Nietos section—the oldest walnut district in Los Angeles county, these nuts, known as the Santa Barbara soft-shells, have been grown for the past quarter century. The founder of the industry here was L. L. Bequette, who still lives at Rivera and markets each year a goodly quantity of walnuts. Twenty-five years ago this veteran was the owner of a large nursery, devoted to the propagation of choice roses, oranges, etc.

He obtained a quantity of the Santa Barbara nuts, planted them and soon had a greater demand for the young trees than he could supply. His nursery was part of the eighty-eight-acre ranch, known as the Bermudez tract, on which the townsite of Rivera is now situated. From the walnut orchards of this section, now covered by miles of waving walnut branches, comes an annual income of three-fourths of a million dollars.

CARE OF THE ORCHARDS.

Each grower has his own problems and his own favorite method of planting and caring for his orchard. But all are agreed upon the following points: First, the soil should be at least ten feet deep and free from hard pan. Second, the location should be nearly if not quite frostless (a well-drained slope with a mixed alluvial and adobe soil, not too dry, seems ideal for the tree.) Third, the irrigation method of caring for the trees is by far the most satisfactory, although not necessary, as is proved by several La Habra orchards which have never been irrigated, and which are both thrifty and profitable. Fourth, the trees should not be set close together—crowding has caused the ruin of more than one orchard. Speaking of this, Secretary H. A. Montgomery, of the Walnut Growers' Association of Southern California, and an orchardist, who has studied the questions relating to this industry from the broad standpoint of a successful rancher and business man, says: "I consider that walnut trees on rich land should be planted seventy feet apart to get the best results. Twenty-year-old walnut trees, set ten to the acre will approximate a ton of nuts to the acre, while trees of the same age, set twenty to the acre, will average a production of half a ton to the acre."

The nut harvest comes during October and November. The cool, foggy nights of the fall cause the husks to become loosened, and the nuts fall to the ground. Pickers go through the orchards at least twice, and at the last beat the trees to get the few nuts which have failed to drop. Men, women and children unite in this work, Mexicans and Indians, coming from no one knows where for the two months of harvest. The camps, under the gray branches of the walnut orchards, are picturesque in the extreme, the swarthy campers, around their campfires looking quite like a gypsy gathering. After the work of the day the pickers gather for the inevitable game of cards, an out-of-door dance, or a barbecue. When the harvest is over, the pickers disappear again, and the orchards once more assume their normal appearance.

BENEFIT OF CO-OPERATION.

Diverse as may be the growers' opinions as to the proper method of caring for their orchards, on the marketing question only one answer seems to have been found. This answer is coöperation, as it comes through the Walnut Growers' Association of Southern California. Included in this organization, which yearly handles three-fourths of the State crop, are included twelve associations with a membership of about one thousand growers. The association's are scattered through Los Angeles, Orange, Ventura and Santa Barbara counties. The oldest is the Los Nietos and Ranchito associations, with headquarters at Rivera, and a second packing-house at Los Nietos. This organization has been doing business since 1887 and each year disburses one-third of a million dollars to its three hundred or so members. The other associations are the Fullerton, Golden Belt with headquarters at Placentia, Santa Ana Valley, Mountain View with headquarters at El Monte, Santa Paula, Saticoy, Santa Barbara county, Oxnard, San Gabriel, San Fernando Valley and Pasadena.

These twelve associations aggregate an output of six hundred cars, handling three-fourths of the California crop, and distributing to their thousand members one and one-half million dollars each year.

The coöperation idea finds expression in the preliminary processes, as well as the marketing proper. The rancher has but to pick, wash and haul the nuts to the packing-houses. Here the grading, blending, bleaching, packing and shipping are attended to for him at a far smaller cost than if he did the work for himself.

The writer had a chance to inspect the up-to-date machinery for handling the nuts at the Rivera walnut house recently, and very interesting he found it. The great American public, which clamors for a bright red tomato catsup and really green canned peas demands also that the shells of the walnut be lighter in color than nature provides. Happily this consumer can be accommodated without injury being done to the meat of the walnut. Bleaching machinery, to dip the nuts in a chemical bath, and then to again wash them, is now installed in many of the walnut houses. This process has displaced one for a similar purpose in which sulphur was largely used. After the bleaching and grading of the nuts, they are passed onto a wide, elevated belt to big bins. At the Rivera house the twenty-two bins, each with a capacity of four tons, testify to the rushing times which this house witnesses each autumn.

Then comes the sacking of the nuts. Each spring Secretary Montgomery sends to Calcutta, India, for specially woven sacks, the number ordered being well above 50,000, and costing a small fortune. Each sub-association has its own brand stenciled on the sack, that of the Los Nietos and Ranchito associations being the totem of the State—the grizzly.

Buyers for big eastern firms place their orders for nuts early, and so even is the quality of the brands and so perfected the system of marketing that each association receives checks for its shipments as soon as the nuts are in the cars. Think what this would mean to the orange or lemon grower—the elimination of all possibility of "red ink" sales. Is it any wonder that the walnut growers consider the marketing question solved?

PRICES GROWERS RECEIVE.

Prices received for the nuts vary somewhat each year, but have invariably left the grower a good margin of profit. This year's schedule of prices is as follows: 11 cents per pound for first grade soft-shells; 10½ cents per pound for standards; 3 cents less for second grades.

The cost of marketing the harvest (the items including maintainance of building, interest on investment, work of bleaching, grading, blending and making ready for shipment) in the Los Nietos and Ranchito associations is barely 1 per cent. of the crop value. Some years it has been much smaller, dropping to one-half of 1 per cent., but with the installation of more expensive machinery and better methods of handling the crop, has come a slight increase in cost.

No more progressive set of ranchers are to be found than the members of the Walnut Growers' Association. They have not solved all their problems, any more than have other business men, but they are working hard and in union at the puzzles with a good chance to solve them. With a fine record in the past, with the present outlook satisfactory and all kinds of good things prophesied for the future, is it any wonder that the growing of walnuts is regarded as one of the most interesting and inviting branches of horticulture in which one can engage in Southern California?

POWER FROM WASTE GASES.

German's Have Been Making Considerable Progress to Utilize Them for Auxiliary Work.

Enormous possibilities for power generation exist in the waste gases discharged by blast furnaces, coke ovens and other metallurgical furnaces. Much greater progress has been made to utilize these in Germany than in other countries, says the Forum. It is estimated that the so-called lean gases discharged from the blast furnaces of Germany are capable of developing 1,000,000 horse power. There are now built and under construction in Germany gas engines for this purpose, aggregating 400,000 horse power. These are mostly in large units, one firm alone having constructed 140 engines, totaling 120,000 horse power.

The utilization of coke oven gases has proceded more slowly, although the gas discharged from such ovens is of a much higher calorific value than the lean blast furnace gas. The richer gas enables a greater power to be obtained from an engine of a given size than is possible with the poorer furnace gas, but the lean gas permits a higher degree of compression to be used without danger of premature ignition, this giving the somewhat paradoxical result that the poorer gas enables the higher thermal efficiency to be attained.

There is little doubt that the apparent reluctance on the part of iron manufacturers and metallurgists to install great gas power plants is largely due to the fact that the manufacture and sale of power is an altogether different business from any of the metallurgical industries and that in many instances a power plant is dependent upon local industries which have to be built up in the vicinity. Although a portion of the power of Niagara is transmitted to Buffalo, the greater part of the output is taken by the electro-chemical and other works situated near the power-house. The same plan is needed to obtain the best results from the utilization of furnace gases, since only a small proportion of the total power available is needed for driving blowing engines and other machinery about the iron works, and a profitable outlet must be provided for the remainder. To develop the 1,000,000 horse power which it is estimated is now being wasted in the discharge gases of the British metallurgical industries might well be the work of an altogether separate commercial organization.

A Negro Department Store.

A business organization of negroes, known as the Metropolitan and Realty Company of New York City, announces that it has bought a building which would be remodeled and operated as a modern department store for negroes. The company has a capital of $1,000,000. The treasurer of the company is a graduate of Hampton Institute and the New York Law School. Already a number of enterprises have been started.

ALL AROUND MEN ARE NEEDED.

SHOULD KNOW MORE THAN ONE PART OF A TRADE.

Reason Why Men Who Adhere Closely to One Thing Are Unable to Obtain Employment at Times—The More a Man Knows the Better for Himself.

"This is certainly a bum town for a man out of work," said the man with the overalls under his arm. "They told me when they made me quit over at my old job that it wouldn't be any trick at all to go out and find a job in a couple of days or so. Couple of days! Here I've been walking around with my overalls rolled up for two weeks and haven't had a chance to unroll them yet. This may be a good town for some kinds of work, but for a machinist it's worse than poor. Why, I haven't even had a scab job offered me. Not that I'd take it, you understand, but it would show that there was something doing in my line, at least. But, no. Not a whisper of anything. I don't know just what I'm going to do this winter. Certainly no show for a job around here—not in my line."

"What is your line?" asked the man whom he had made his wail to.

"Machinist,"I said.

"And you can't get any work?"

"I said I couldn't."

"Well, I've got a friend who is in the manufacturing business on a small scale. He makes oil cups. I happen to know that just now he wants a man in his shop, some one who can run an emery wheel, and a drill machine, and make himself generally useful at the vise and bench. It's a small place, and what he wants is an all around handy man in a machine shop. He'll pay the scale, too, and maybe a little better. I'll give you his address and you can go up and see him if you want to."

"O, well, I don't know if I could suit him. Might not do any good to go up. I'm a lathe hand, that's my trade. I never had much experience with anything else. I'm all right when I'm put on a lathe with a piece of work before me, but I don't know if I could make good on the kind of a job that you're speaking about. You know a machinist isn't supposed to know all about a shop. He learns his trade, and that's about all. I don't do much besides running a lathe; that's my trade."

"Then you couldn't take this job even if it was offered to you?"

"No, I don't think so. I probably couldn't make good even if I did take it. It's out of my line, you see."

"But it's a job."

"Yes, but when a fellow gets used to doing one thing he doesn't like to change. He can't change without a whole lot of trouble. I've had lots of chances for jobs like this—where it was to do something besides what I was used to. I couldn't take them. What was the use? I couldn't do the work."

And yet this man honestly believed that it was his trade, and conditions in this city that made it so hard for him to get work. He was as intelligent as the average man of his trade, and he probably was an efficient workman at his particular work. But there his qualifications ended. He could not or would not adapt himself to anything beyond the mere requirements of his trade. Had a job as lathe hand been offered him he would have taken it, filled it satisfactorily, and been among the prosperous army of the employed instead of the dilapidated one of those who walk the streets in a vain search for work. Had he been an all around machinist, willing and able to adapt himself to other work, he would have secured work without the slightest trouble. But he wasn't, he wasn't the "handy" machinist, so he stood on the curb and grumbled while other men went by on their way to work.

It doesn't matter much what industrial conditions are, how plentiful machinists are, and how apparently scarce employment is, it is safe to say that there always is a place for the handy machinist. This is the age of machinery, and of machine workers. Never was there such a time for mechanical invention and progress, never such a time of opportunities for the mechanical vocations.

"But," said the leader of organized machinists, "the trouble is that too many of our men construe this fact in the wrong way, and become 'mechanical' themselves. For the capable, all around man who can do almost anything around a small shop the trade is a good one, full of opportunities, and one in which he always is sure of steady employment at fairly good wages. For the other kind of machinist, the kind who lets himself degenerate into simply an intelligence for the direction of some machine, it is a poor one. He will find it hard to secure a position once he is put out, and he never will advance to anything worth while."

"Well, what do you call the all around machinist who can do this?"

"The fellow who keeps his eyes open in the shop where he learns his trade and who afterward keeps himself up on the things of his trade. In other words, a man who can do a whole lot of things that he doesn't have to do to hold a job as a machinist in a shop where each man has a certain kind of work to put through and nothing else. The trade probably is divided into half and half in this respect—one-half is handy, the other half is not. The latter class furnishes the great majority of machinists who are out of work for long periods.

LOGIC OF THE EMPLOYER.

The difference in the opportunities for employment and advancement between these two types of one trade hardly can be realized until the employer is heard from. It is the employer always who knows why a man is hired and why he is rejected.

"Look at my place here," said the owner of a machine shop who was approached on this subject. "I need three regular lathe hands, two drillers, three men at the wheels, and for the rest of the men—twelve in all—the work is of a diversified nature. They've got to do almost anything and everything about the place. There isn't work enough to justify any one particular kind to justify me in employing specialists for that alone. There is, however, enough work when the different kinds are put together to give employment to the dozens of men that I have mentioned. When a man comes in and seeks employment my first question is, 'What can you do?' While it is maintained in other lines of business that the reply of the applicant usually is to the effect that he can do everything, here it is quite different. As often as not the man admits that there is only one thing that he is skilled in. Some of them take a pride in this. It's a poor sort of a pride here. If they are all around men and able to fit in at the different kinds of work here they have about four times as good a chance for being engaged as if they were specialists.

MUCH EXPERIENCE NEEDED.

"Then, again, in the matter of advancement, the man with the general experience has the advantage over the other fellow. The fact that he has adapted himself to several kinds of work, and that he has the mechanical talent to do them satisfactorily is, of course, a big recommendation to begin with. It shows that he is of the right kind, interested in his work, and all that.

"The man who is not interested in his work is the fellow who only takes trouble to learn the things that are directly necessary to his work. Naturally he is not fitted for success in this line. Practically the whole thing is summed up in the assertion that the machinist who is going to help himself up through his trade should be one with talent and interest in his work. He'll find a way for something better somehow, unless, of course, he is lacking in the qualifications for success that rule all sorts of vocations and men."

The machinist often bewails the lack of opportunity for anything but "making a living" that prevails in his occupation. The probability is that the trouble is not with his trade any more than it is with himself. He has chances if he will only see them; and it devolves on him, to see them and make the most of them if he wishes to succeed.—[Jonas Howard in Chicago Tribune.

POISON IN FRESH EGGS.

French Chemist Says Many Persons Are Poisoned by Freshly Laid Eggs.

That many people are poisoned by eggs, and not by spoiled eggs only, but often by those that are freshly laid and apparently good, is asserted by Dr. Andre le Coq, a French chemist, says the Literary Digest. Numerous cases of poisoning due to eclairs, or cream cakes, have occurred recently in Paris, and it was in the course of an investigation of these that Dr. Le Coq came to the conclusion that the toxic action was always the fault of the eggs in the custard, never of mineral poison introduced accidentally or of the other ingredients of the cream. Fresh eggs, he asserts, often become infected before they are laid. Says the Revue Scientifique, which derives its information from Dr. Le Coq's article in the Bulletin Commercial de la Pharmacie (Paris, July;)

"The white plays a more important part than the yolk and is generally at fault when the poisoning is due to fresh eggs, since it is commonly beaten up raw, while the yolk is sterilized by cooking. The microbes in it find in the sugar, milk and gelatin of the custard an extremely favorable culture-medium.

"The yolk does its work when the poisoning is due to decomposed eggs, for cooking cannot destroy the toxins and ptomains of putrefaction.

"Chemical analysis shows the presence, in the poisonous cakes or in the bodies of their victims, of alkaloidal substances not identifiable with any hitherto known, but as these analysis have been made after a considerable lapse of time, it cannot be positively affirmed that these toxins are not simply due to putrefaction.

"To guard against poisoning of this kind it is simply necessary to cook all parts of the egg, especially the white, in making the cream, prolonging the process sufficiently to insure perfect sterilization."

SHEEP DOG'S INTELLIGENCE.

Has a Personal Acquaintance With Each Member of the Flock.

What a herd dog has first to learn is to know everyone of 200 or 300 sheep, and to know them both by sight and smell. This he does thoroughly. When Watterson was running sheep on the plains he had a young collie not yet put to the herd, but kept about the pumping plant, says a writer in Harper's Magazine. As the sheep came in by hundreds to the troughs, the dog grew so to know them that when they had picked up a stray from another band he discovered it from afar off, and darting as a hornet, nipping and yelping, parted it out from the band. At the time no mere man would have pretended, without the aid of the brand, to recognize any of the thousands that bore it.

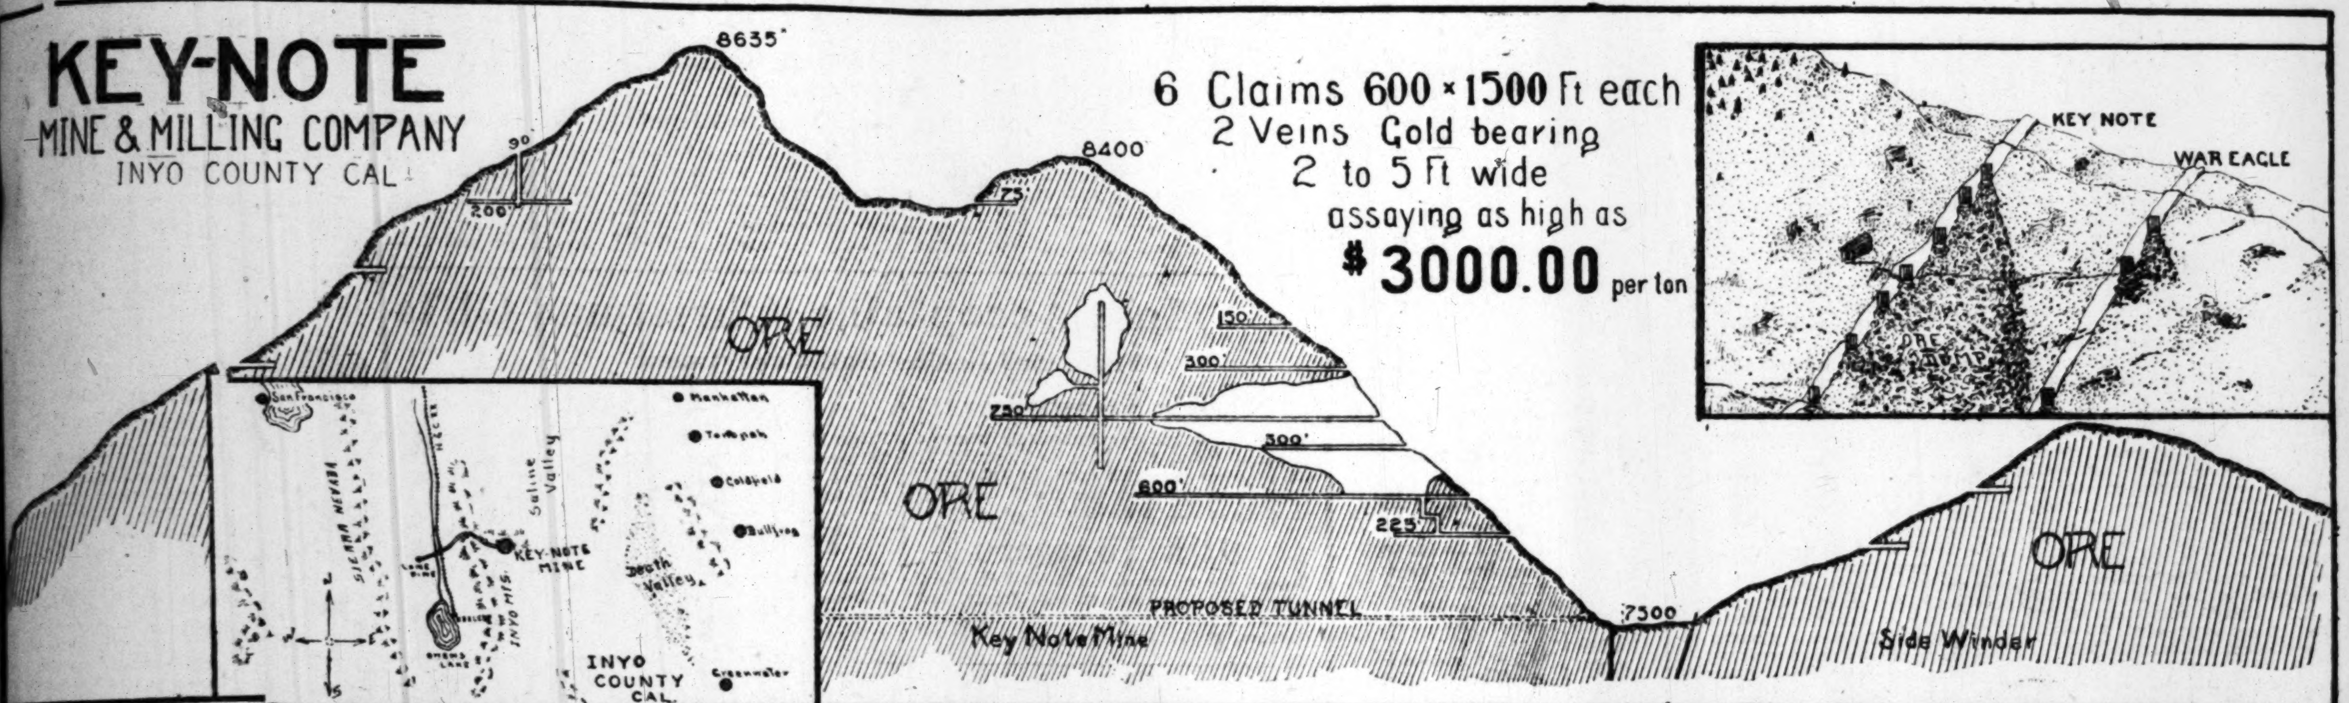
How long recollection stays by the dog is not certain, but at least a twelvemonth, as was proved to Filon Girard after he had lost a third of his band when the Santa Anna came roaring up the Lone Pine with a cloud of saffron dust on its wings. After shearing of next year, passing close to another band, Filon's dogs set themselves unbidden to routing out of it, and rounding with their own, nearly twenty head, which the herder, being an honest man, freely admitted he had picked up on the mesa following after Filon the spring before.

Quick to know the willful and unbiddable members of a flock, the wise collie is not sparing of bites, and following after a stubborn stray, will often throw it, and stand guard until help arrives or the sheep shows a better mind. But the herder who has a dog trained at the difficult work of herding sheep through the chutes and runways into boats and cars for transportation is the fortunate fellow.

There was Pete's dog, Bourdaloue, that, at the Stockton landing, with no assistance, put 800 wild sheep from

The Greatest Opportunity for Investment Ever Presented to the American People-KeyNote 20c

Our first offering of the treasury stock of the great Keynote Mine of Inyo county at 20c per share.
Twenty thousand tons of ore now on the dump, which will plate better than $8.00 to the ton. Waits but the erection of a mill.
Not $8.00 by assay, but by actual mill test.
Figuring your stock at 20c per share, the value of this dump alone would mean 50 per cent. on the investment.
Actual value of ore in dump is really more than $160,000, enough to pay better than 10 per cent. on the entire capitalization of this company at $1,500,000.
Two great parallel true fissure ledges, with more than 2500 feet of tunneling at various places, showing ledge matter that will assay as high as $3000 in places, and this means that thousands of tons of ore are practically awaiting development.
The millable ore now in sight will run better than $20 to the ton.
Only small block of stock at 20c per share. Cash or installmetn of 10 per cent. down and 10 per cent. per month. Act quickly.
Authentic history and State reports show that this mine has produced millions practically at the surface.
These reports are in existence and are open for the inspection of any one. Why buy stock in a mere prospect or a lease when such inducements confront you?



e upper right-hand corner is an illustration showing the relative position of the two great fissure ledges, both 4500 ft. long, or expcsing 9,000 feet of traceable ledge matter. The larger illustration shows the sectional view of the great Key Note Ledge, which is practically the same as the War Eagle. On one of these veins, not far from the surface, was extracted in one place over a million dollars. The illustration in the lower left-hand corner shows the geographical position of these mines.

he Great Key-Note Group Of Gold-Bearing Ledges

eir Status—Past, Present and Future

Statement of O. S. Williams

he property of the Keynote Mine & Milling Company con- of seven (7) full sized claims, each 600 feet by 1500 feet; a appropriation comprising a stream known as Hahn's Creek, Upper Springs and Keynote Springs, which appropriation more than sufficient water for all economical purposes; ate in close proximity to the mine workings, and a government permit for the cutting of all timber necessary.

These holdings are located in the Beveridge Mining District, County, State of California, on the eastern slope of the Inyo ains, at an elevation of 7500 feet and approximately 12 es east from the station known as Lone Pine, on the & Colorado Railroad.

From the mine one can look down and across to the famed Valley country, and on further to well-known camps of g, Goldfield, and Tonopah.

The Keynote ledge was discovered and located some twenty ago, and previous to its acquirement by the Keynote Mine ing Company the development of the mine and the extraction of the ores therefrom was of a greater or less spasmodic . But notwithstanding the waste of time and labor, the machinery in service, and the misapplied efforts of the ors, this same mine has produced over One Million Dollars bullion. If one will stop to consider that this bullion was ed by the primitive method of harnessing a mule to a heavy and slowly dragging such stone over other stones and on which was thrown the ore after having been broken by hammers to the size of an inch or such a matter, there will be some realization of the immense richness of these

That this production was bona fide can be proven by authen- ocuments now in our possession, consisting of certified ents made by bankers who handled the bullion and al reports issued from the office of the State Mineral- all of which are open to inspection.

The excessive cost incurred by such methods precluded any ity of working at a profit any ores of less value than $30 , and such ores, of which there were thousands of tons ngled with the high grade ores, were thrown over the as practically worthless.

The Keynote Mine & Milling Company, incorporated under s of Arizona, acquired by bond and purchase the property referred to and since such acquirement has proceeded tically with the development thereof.

There are two main veins similar in size, formation and . These veins are parallel, about 600 feet apart, six or thousand feet long, and running north and south with the of the mountain range; dip west into the mountain at a 42 degree angle, are from two to five feet wide, with a ned talc selvedge or clay gouge on each of the walls, a true fissure vein indicating permanency and depth.

croppings are traceable, coming down on one side of the spur, crossing the canyon and going up the opposite a distance of nearly 2000 feet, then descending into the ing canyon for nearly 4000 feet, thus cutting directly the spurs for a distance of six to seven thousand feet.

The ore is a quartz, brittle, friable and yellow in color ed by the oxidization of the iron); part of the ore is highly and decomposed, and free gold is often seen with the e, the pay being very evenly distributed. Pyritic iron and sulphides of copper occur in some of the ores, the concentrates from which are exceedingly rich and in volume run about 3 per cent.

The pay chutes as proven run from 100 feet to several hundred feet in length, are close together, and vary in width from a few inches to the entire width of the vein.

All the openings on the property for a distance of over 3000 feet along the course of both veins show pay ore in practically unlimited quantities.

There are excessively rich streaks and bodies of ore that frequently occur in the vein and assay well into the thousands of dollars. The gold is free in form, about 70 per cent. of the values being saved by amalgamation and thousands of tons have been ground and tested.

The poorest ore gives a value averaging anywhere from 8 to 15 dollars per ton, while the rich ore goes from $30 into hundreds. The ore has been tested in a small mill many times, and the plate and assay value has averaged over $20.

The method of developing this property by tunnel and all work to date has been by a system of tunnels run in on both veins, beginning at the canyon level, the tunnels varying in length from 20 feet to 750 feet, being some nine or ten in all. Seven of these tunnels are on one vein and three on the other, and from 100 to 500 feet apart. These tunnels for a course of over 2000 feet disclose thousands of tons of ore. The main tunnel above the bottom of the canyon shows in its inner workings fine values that are 800 feet underneath the surface. Two other tunnels are in over 200 feet each on ore, all being modern work, there being all told some 2500 feet of work, every foot of which shows the vein and ore to be strong, permanent, and promising. By the tunnel system, all shafting and hoisting is done away with; and in stoping, the ore falls by gravity to the ore bins and from thence will be sent to the mill in cars.

In the early days, all ore that went below $30 per ton was thrown away, also all concentrating ore, and there remains today a large dump of ore about 700 feet long, 150 feet wide, and in the center about 40 feet deep, containing many thousand tons of fine, first-class free-milling ore of a plate value, averaging about $8 per ton.

All this ore is immediately available for a mill, in addition to the ore shown up by the tunnels in the mines themselves. The mill being erected at the mouth of the lower tunnels, and the transmission of all ores being by gravity, insures a low cost of operation.

The development work completed to the present time, together with the ore on the dump, guarantees an ore production more than sufficient for the continuous operation of a 20-stamp mill.

The following assay samples were taken from various workings and claims, and show conclusively the value contained in the ore proper, in tailings and in concentrates.

REPORTS MADE BY MR. J. B. CONTERNO, E. M.

Mr. Conterno is thoroughly conversant with this property, having made numerous assays covering the entire ground and having personal supervision over the test mill runs, the results of which are given below.

Test mill run, 16 tons, produced bullion value of $380.14, an average of $23.75 per ton.

Test mill run, 20 tons, produced bullion value $467.53, an average of $23.25.

The ore milled in these test runs was taken from numerous places in the mine workings and from the ore dumps, the idea being to obtain exact data regarding the possibilities and probable profit to be derived from mining operations.

Mr. Conterno writes regarding the Key Note Group:

"SECRETARY KEY NOTE MINE & MILLING CO.

"Dear Sir:—After careful and exhaustive examination of the Key Note Group, I consider same as promising a mining proposition as has ever been my privilege to report. The vein in the face is about 4 feet wide, walls being 5.5 feet apart, walls diorite, vein carrying high values.

"Have taken out a number of tons, all of which assays high and is first-class free-milling rock.

"I have personally examined and tested the rock in every tunnel, drift, stope, shaft, winze and cut, finding them as represented, carrying large values as a whole, the veins having every indication of being true fissures of great depth and permanency.

"The dumps alone, principally the one from the main tunnel of the Key Note, containing approximately some 25,000 tons of ore averaging $10, sufficient to keep a 10-stamp mill running day and night for something like three years.

"This dump has practically that amount of ore already mined, only awaiting to be milled. The other dumps contain several thousand tons more, besides large numbers of tons that can be extracted from the old workings averaging $20 per ton up.

"The War Eagle is a parallel vein identical in every respect to the Key Note in value, etc., and both can easily be traced for nearly a mile, crossing both sides of the canyon.

"There are numerous smaller veins on the property, all carrying values that should be considered high-grade milling, lowest assays being $12.00.

"Would propose starting a tunnel at the bottom of the canyon near the south end center, thereby getting a stoping back of nearly 2000 feet, stoping out everything to the surface on both veins, as all ore would then gravitate to the main working tunnel.

"These tunnels would disclose vast quantities of high-grade ore, possibly other bodies not cropping out on the surface, as these veins have hardly been touched.

"The values are very evenly distributed throughout the veins, there being very little difference whether taken from mouth, stope or breast, and can be mined and milled for about $3.50 per ton, very likely less in time, as it is purely a milling and concentrating proposition.

"Plenty of timber, water and wood for all mining and domestic purposes on and near by the property.

"A good wagon road may very easily be brought to the proposed tunnel, thereby overcoming the transportation problem, a very important item when contending with Mexican packers.

"I consider this property one of the finest, capable of being developed and made one of the most famous producers in the state, as it has everything in its favor.

(Signed) "J. B. CONTERNO, E. M."
(Signed) "O. S. WILLIAMS."

In the foregoing matter we have endeavored to present this proposition from a mining standpoint alone. Mr. O. S. Williams, who is President of the Key Note Mine & Milling Co., has certified under oath to the correctness of every assertion made, and further than this he assures us that any interested party can at any time make a thorough inspection of this property, and make any test which will tend to verify the claims made.

FROM AN INVESTMENT STANDPOINT.

Technical mining information does not always appeal to the prospective investor, and the actual operation of a mine is of but little interest.

To one who invests his money the prime question is, "What do I get for it?"

Allow us to sum the proposition up and make answer to you. We are giving you an opportunity to invest in the shares of a developed mine. This is no prospect in which you are asked to place your hard-earned dollars and gamble with them.

On the ore dump, awaiting the erection of a modern stamp mill lies 20,000 tons of ore which will average $8.00 per ton net, making a value of $160,000.

In the underground workings, taking into consideration the two principal veins similar in all respects, there is exposed by various tunnels approximately 110,000 tons of free milling ore, which should mill $16.50 net, a bullion value of $1,815,000.

If you will consider that this estimated tonnage only includes such ore as is practically exposed by the longest tunnel, now in 750 feet, and at a depth of 900 feet, and that it is further proposed to carry a new tunnel at a depth of 1100 feet, cutting through the mountain a distance of some 5000 feet, you can form some idea of the immense ore reserve contained in this property.

The Key Note Mine & Milling Co. has exploited this mine in every conceivable manner; by expert examination; by innumerable assay samples; by milling tests; by actual development work; in fact, every method which might prove that the property would make a profitable mine.

To make these various tests has called for an expenditure of thousands of dollars, and such funds have been furnished by the present owners. They have accepted all the chances and have now a proven mine, with thousands of tons of ore, but awaiting the installation of a stamp mill.

The corporation is capitalized at $1,500,000. We are selling the present allotment of stock at 20 cents, making a theoretical valuation of the property of $300,000, which is by many dollars far below the real intrinsic value.

But allowing for this theoretical valuation of $300,000 only a 20-stamp mill would give results as follows:

20 stamps, crushing 2½ tons per stamp daily, 50 tons.

50 tons daily at $20 per ton	$ 1,000
50 tons daily, mining and milling expenses	175
Net profit daily	$ 825
300 days per year	$247,500

$247,500.00 per year profit on an investment of $300,000 yields an interest rate of 82½ per cent. per annum.

Sounds too good to be true, doesn't it? But remember that old time-worn adage, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Apply it to this particular proposition in any way you choose. Send an expert to the mine with instructions to examine to the minutest detail; have him call at our office and go over engineers' reports, assay certificates, bankers' letters regarding bullion received; Wells-Fargo & Co.'s agents' letters regarding bullion shipped; state mineralogist's reports showing development of the mine and amount of ore extracted; in short, have him investigate thoroughly this proposition from every possible point of view, and if you are then doubtful we can make no further argument.

We are selling this stock to those who care to make money and we want none to come in who might be disappointed should their wealth increase.

Now, after reading this advertisement, if you are still in doubt as to whether you will buy Key Note stock, let this proposition sink deeply into your system.

First, take the amount of your subscription; put it in any national bank; immediately have the properties of the Key Note Mine & Milling Company examined by any practical and experienced mining engineer or expert of good repute, and should such engineer or expert fail to find on said properties ore of an average value of $15 in sufficient quantities for the continuous operation of a 20-stamp mill for a term of at least 300 days (a milling year,) your subscription shall then be returned to you, and we agree to pay all the expenses incurred by such examination, provided that the liability for such expense shall be limited to the amount of 10 per cent. of your subscription, and that said examination shall be made within 30 days from the date of your order. This is the strongest and most liberal offer ever made by any sane promotion or mining company in the history of mining.

What you will, but the fact remains that Practical Mining Engineers say there is enough ore already mined and piled on the dump waiting treatment, to guarantee every dollar invested in this property.

IN THE SMOKING COMPARTMENT

BY C S YOST

"I wonder what would have happened to us if that fellow should have gone to sleep at his post," said the hed-headed man in the corner as the train stopped for orders at a way station, through the windows of which the night telegraph operator could be seen busy at his key.

"We might be unfurling our wings in the New Jerusalem," suggested a flippant tourist from Cincinnati.

"More probably we would be calmly smoking our cigars, just as we are now," said a commercial traveler, whose suit case had the word "Chicago" in black letters on the end. "Every train order isn't a matter of life or death and it isn't as often as most people seem to imagine that the fate of a train load of people rests entirely in the hands of a single operator."

"Yes, that's true enough," assented the red-headed man, "but the fact remains that once in a while a sleeping or careless operator does cause a terrible disaster, and no one may know how often his life may be held in pawn by a youngster at a lonesome station."

"You're right, there," put in a passenger who had shown the conductor a Pullman pass as well as a railroad annual. "In spite of all the block signal systems and other safeguards much still depends on the individual watchfulness of the telegraph operator, and the public doesn't appreciate his loyalty, and devotion to duty as it should. There are tens of thousands of railroad telegraph operators at work in this country and they receive hundreds of thousands of train orders every day. The wonder is that the railroad business is conducted with such a small percentage of loss of life. If you don't mind, I'll relate a little incident to illustrate this."

"That's the stuff," cried the red-headed man. "It's the picture business that makes things move nowadays. Give it to us."

"Well," resumed the man with the annual, "I'm a telegraph operator myself, although I haven't been doing anything in that line for a long time. But about fifteen years ago I was night operator at a little place up in Iowa. The station was some distance from the town, so that after 9 or 10 o'clock at night I was left pretty much to myself. I had a twelve-hour watch, 7 to 7, and if you've ever had to sit up all night alone, you can imagine how time drags when one has to do that thirty nights in the month. You've got very little work to do, but you must keep within hearing of your instrument. This confines your diversions to a small area and though books are the night operator's mainstay, even they pall on one after five or six hours. If it wasn't for the arrivals of trains, the calls from the train dispatcher and the ceaseless chatter of the instruments the life of a night operator at such a station would be unendurable. As for keeping awake that is mainly a matter of habit. After a man has been in the business a few years a night operator has no more desire to sleep while on duty than a day worker has to take a nap while the sun is shining. But it's pretty hard on the raw beginner and he has to resort to desperate measures sometimes to keep the drowsy god from getting the best of him.

"That little station up in Iowa was my first night job and while I was chesty with the importance and responsibility of my position, I was also at the age when the temptations of the flesh pull the hardest on a fellow. My chief delight was, therefore, not the hustle and stir which attended the arrival of the midnight express, but the big basket of lunch that I waded into as soon as I had reported the departure of that train. Being young and healthy I would eat until I could hold no more and then, of course, I would get drowsy. I was in that condition one cold night in January when I was aroused by the excited way in which the train dispatcher was calling the next station west of me, a place called Lancaster. He was making the wire fairly boil, but could get no answer. I knew by the sound that something important was on hand and all my drowsiness was gone in a moment. Pretty soon the train dispatcher called me. 'Sure No. 5's gone?' he asked. No. 5 was the midnight express, west-bound. I went out and looked, just to be sure nothing had held her at the switch. 'Yes,' I answered, 'clear out of sight.' 'O.K.' he said, and then commenced calling Lancaster harder than before. Still no answer. 'Man at NA must be asleep,' I said to myself. 'Guess he'll be lookin' for a job tomorrow.' Presently the dispatcher called me again. 'Is there any sort of a private line over to Lancaster?' he asked. 'Yes,' I said, 'there's a—' and then he broke me off. 'Get to it, quick,' he fairly hollored over the wire,' and 'have somebody wake up the operator there or flag No. 5.' I didn't yet know what was up, but I didn't have time to ask any questions and wouldn't have dared to do it if I'd had a week. I fell into my overcoat and got out of that station like a streak of greased lightning. A couple of young fellows had rigged up a pony line between my town and Lancaster just for amusement. It was half a mile to the house at my end of the line. It was blowing a gale cold as blue blazes and the snow was six inches deep on the level, but I didn't know it. 'Talk about seven league boots! why, I felt as if I had wings and I was at that house and hammering at the door in no time at all. I soon had the cub out of bed and was pounding at his little amateur instrument. Luckily the boy at the other end was up and in his room where the instrument was. I had to send slow, fearfully slow, but at last he got my message, or at any rate he answered 'O.K.' and closed his key. 'He lives right across the street from the depot,' said the youngster at my side, and then I hustled back to my office nearly as fast as I had come, and reported to the dispatcher. 'Good,' he said, 'maybe we can save them yet,' and then he explained that the operator at Rolla, the second station west, had been instructed to hold No. 12, an east-bound fast freight, until arrival of No. 5, but his red light had gone out and the freight had passed without stopping. Unless No. 5 could be stopped at Lancaster there would be a collision. He told me all this in ten words and two seconds and then he went on calling 'NA,' but now his call was slow and hopeless. It was evident he no longer expected a reply. I waited in breathless suspense for the tragedy I felt certain was about to occur. I hardly thought it possible the boy over there had time to prevent the disaster even if he understood my message, which I doubted. But just as I had given up even that slender thread of hope the circuit was broken. There was a halt of a fraction of a second that seemed like a week, and then slowly and haltingly, with many breaks came this message: 'Have—flagged—train—found—operator — unconscious — at — desk.' 'Thank God!' the train dispatcher jerked out.

"After everything had been straightened out I learned that the operator at Lancaster had been taken suddenly sick and before he could call for help or notify the dispatcher had fainted away.

"No one on that express ever know how near to death they had come and yet but for the chance existence of that amateur line no earthy power could have saved them. It was, of course, a combination of circumstances that wouldn't happen again in a thousand years, but circumstances have a curious way of combining every once in a while, and when a disaster results the railroads are blamed for it, although every possible device may have been adopted to prevent it. The wonder is, as I said before, that accidents are so few, when one considers the millions of passengers carried every year."

"Yes," said the red-headed man, "I believe statistics prove that a man is safer on a railroad train than at home in bed, but although I have been traveling for twenty years and never had a scratch I still prefer to risk the bed."

There was a meditative silence for a little while and then a voice from the seat next the window broke through the smoke clouds.

"That story brings back old times to me," said the voice, "particularly what was said about the desperate measures young operators sometimes take to keep from going to sleep. A long time ago, so long that I have almost forgotten it myself, I was a plug railroad operator myself. At that time we didn't try so hard to keep from going to sleep as to keep from getting caught at it. I worked for one of the southwestern roads. It's a great system now but then it was a one-horse affair with only one passenger train each way a day and only a few freights. Night operators were few and far between and scarce as they were they had little to do. About the only risk involved then in going to sleep was that affecting the operator's job. When an operator's been at one station for a few weeks the train dispatcher's call will usually wake him and the greatest danger was in letting a train get by. You might think it funny that a certain sound from the telegraph instruments will arouse a man from sleep quicker than a moving freight train, but it's a fact that it will. A favorite trick in those days was to tie a string across the track and attach one end of it to a tin pan placed on a table or desk in the office. When a train struck the string the pan would come down with a crash, the operator would jump up and report and nobody would be the wiser. Sometimes he'd use a thread and tie one end to his finger, and that's how I got out of the railroad business. I was a pretty hard sleeper in those days and once or twice the tin pan had failed to work on me. Likewise the thread on my finger. So one Sunday night, after I'd been up all day with my best girl, I decided a more radical scheme would have to be tried. So I got a strong cord, one I couldn't break, and fastened it across the track in the usual way, but instead of tying the other end to a pan or my finger. I tied it to the leg of my chair. Then along about 11 o'clock I leaned back, put my feet on the table and went calmly to sleep."

"Did it work?" asked the red-headed man.

"Work!" exclaimed the ex-operator, "you bet your life it worked. A special carrying the general manager came along about midnight. It was running at the terrific speed of thirty miles an hour and when it hit that string something happened. The first I knew of the trouble I was laying sprawled on the floor and that blamed chair was scootin' through the open door like it was goin' for the doctor. It banged up against the side of the engine with a crash that scared the engineer out of a year's growth and he stopped the train so quick it sent the general manager turnin' flip-flops down the middle of his car. When the train backed up and they found out the cause of the rumpus the things that general manager said to me would have put a whole flock of Sunday schools to flight and I retired forever from the railroad business right there."

The Medical Jeames.

A friend of mine had occasion to go often to an eminent physician," and said to Jeames: "You will be tired of opening the door for me." "Not at all, sir," was the gracious reply; "you are but a hunit in the hocean." Another Jeames was accustomed to say during his master's occasional absences: "You had better try hopposite. There's a very respectable man hopposite as we often sends to when Sir William is habsent. His name is Jenner."—[Lancet.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

FICTION.

Romance.

MONTLIVET. By Alice Prescott Smith. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. (For sale by Cunningham, Curtis & Welch, Los Angeles.)

"Montlivet" is a historic romance of the end of the century—the century being the seventeenth—in New France, Cadillac in command at Machillimacimac, and an English prisoner brought in by Hurons from a raid for the torture. The alternative is the desertion of the Hurons to the English. Young Armand de Montlivet, present by accident, determins to rescue the white man, although Cadillac will not interfere. An Indian girl in love with Montlivet's serving man assists, and the three depart together into the wilderness, where the Frenchman discovers that his English prisoner is—a woman. The Frenchman marries the prisoner to protect her, and the usual play ensues, each thinking love unrequited and in vain. The outcome is the expected one of the romantic writer. There is nothing new in the plot, from beginning to end, but the scenes are fairly well managed, the interest sustained, the events possible.

Geraldine Bonner.

RICH MEN'S CHILDREN. By Geraldine Bonner. The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

Geraldine Bonner's first book showed remarkably good work in parts, for a beginner, but great inequalities, lack of power of even logical construction, lack of finish; and her later work, while steadily improving, has not yet eliminated these faults.

In her new book Mrs. Bonner gives us a picture of life in San Francisco, among the people who have won their own wealth in mines and real estate, and whose children are growing up under the advantages that large possessions give. Her studies include a young, effeminate wine bibbler, with "a mustache like an eyebrow," the scorn and amusement of his big, forceful, unscrupulous and yet warm-hearted father (a son who still further irritates the "old man" by winning his finest land, a ranch offered for a year's abstainence from drink,) the dainty, lovely daughter, on whom old "Bill" Cannon's affections are set; Dominick, son of "Con" Ryan, husband of an adventuress, who became his mistress with the deliberate intent of forcing him to marriage; Dominick's sister, Cornelia, a girl of white and gold, and their widowed mother, a waitress originally, who has done washing to keep the family when her husband was out of work, who was always the "man of the house," and is still dominant, even in old age. She refuses Dominick's scheming wife entree to her circle, and this leads to a rupture between the young couple, in consequence of which Dominick, now wholly disillusoined, goes off without a word into the country, is caught in a snowstorm walking up from Rocky Bar to Antelope, found unconscious, and snowed up in Antelope for some days, together with Cannon and his daughter. Rose Cannon makes herself useful in attending the sick man—and results are disastrous to the peace of mind of both. In an instant of weakness, Dominick reveals his love for Rose, and Bill Cannon, coming, upon the two unseen, finds his daughter in Dominick's arms. From that instant he is one with Mrs. Ryan in desiring the divorce of Dominick and his wife.

He therefore proposes to Mrs. Ryan that she offer money to Berenice Ryan if she will leave her husband, go abroad for a year, and at the end of that time ask him to get a divorce on the ground of desertion. Cannon makes the proposal—fifty thousand dollars; it is refused. Berenice will stay right there in San Francisco and be an eyesore to Mrs. Ryan, if she cannot be a recognized member of her family. Cannon increases the offer, and adds to it himself, until it has reached three hundred and fifty thousand. And still Berenice will not go.

In the meantime, Dominick Ryan has sought out Rose two or three times, has met her twice alone, by accident; but she has finely recalled him to his duty to his wife, and they believe that each is now to go his way. Berny Ryan, having witnessed a meeting between her husband and Rose, stops Rose in the street and taxes her with trying to win away Dominick, telling her of Cannon's part in the offer of money for a divorce. Rose is horrified; and her innocence, indignation and evident intention of right-doing open a new world to the eyes of the adventuress—a world of cleaner minds and high ideals. She recognizes that the girl is Dominick's natural mate, a finer type than herself. Still she will not yield her right.

But now another actor comes on the scene. An actor by profession he is, another of the party who were snowed up at Antelope. Some years back he was married in Chicago, to a girl stenographer, who left him after a few months, when he had lost his position in the midst of the terrible summer heat, and was unable to find money in any way. The deserted husband—Carter is his name—was helped to the Klondike by a friend who was going, and there, his friend and partner dying, was reported dead by mistake. He has now come to San Francisco to find his wife, who was a native of the city, and returned there on leaving him; and the strange fact is that he has seen her, followed her, and watcher her enter Dominick Ryan's flat. Ryan supposes it may be some friend of his wife, who is fortunately just coming in, and he expects her to explain. But when the wife enters, explanations are not needed. Berenice recognizes her former husband, and Ryan is free.

Here are the elements of a splendid plot, a plot that, in the hand of—say—Margaret Deland, would furnish a heart-thrilling story. Mrs. Bonner has handled it—not badly, but not with consummate art. One great defect, that is felt through three-fourths of the book, is that the oppression of association with vulgar and sordid characters is little relieved by contrast with elements. It is only in the latter part of the book that we have any guarantee except the word of the author for believing in the high-mindedness and selflessness of Rose Cannon; and as for the hero, he is a faint and colorless figure throughout the book. He does nothing very forceful in the whole story, plays on the contrary, a decidedly negative wondering, from time to time, at the high opinion of him cherished by Bill Cannon and his daughter. Here is opportunity lost—the opportunity of emphasizing character and attaining effects by contrasts. As it is, the character study is uneven and at its best only photographic. The story as a whole, if an improvement on Mrs. Bonners' earlier work, does not show her yet the master of her literary tools.

Problem Plot.

MADE IN HIS IMAGE. By Guy Thorne. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

The romance of this story—the love story in it—is of minor import, whether intended to be so or not; it does not appeal greatly to the interest, neither does it mix well with the other. The plot deals with the idea, more than once proposed in some seriousness, of removing criminals and paupers to a colony by themselves, away from the better population, feeding them, but compelling them to labor and guarding against their increase through self-propagation. The moral of the story is not entirely obvious; neither with or without the ministrations of religious teachers are the colonists affected in their life and character. In an uprising of them, the man who still believes in the efficacy of religion sacrifices himself to save the other to the woman both love, as in "The Tale of Two Cities;" and the other returns to the pale of religious belief. But beyond this, nothing is demonstrated except that the colony idea is not a good one—in practice—if this is demonstrated.

In style, the book is planned upon the imaginative lines of H. G. Wells's work, but is of far less literary skill, conveying rather the impression of melodramatic plot and grandiloquent style.

Slender Plot.

THE FACE IN THE GIRANDOLE. By William Frederick Dix. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price, $1.25.)

"The Face in the Girandole" has for sub-title, "A Romance of Old Furniture." It is distinctly a Christmas book, the plot of the slenderest, and the only end really likely to be attained by its reading is that the reader may, like the hero, catch the craze for old furniture. The story goes with the craze,; it is a parlor drama, with nothing very striking or exciting about it.

Reprints.

OLD CREOLE DAYS. By George W. Cable. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

ON NEWFOUND RIVER. By Thomas Nelson Page. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. (For sale by C. C. Parker, Los Angeles.)

Scribner's Sons reprint this season two notable books of southern life, George W. Cable's earlier short stories, known to us all under the general title "Old Creole Days," and Thomas Nelson Page's fine romance of the time 'befo' the wah,' "On Newfound River." The books are both finely suitable for holiday gifts, favorites of the people; they are reproduced in excellent form, and should find good sale.

JUVENILE BOOKS.

Life of Lincoln.

THE BOYS' LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN. By Helen Nicolay. The Century Company, New York. (Price, $1.50.)

The season brings two biographies of Abraham Lincoln—the study of him in his work as attorney by Frederick Trevor Hill, and Helen Nicolay's story of his life, written for young people. Of the two, the latter book is not only the more readable, but gives a clearer picture of the man. It appears a pity that it should come before the public as a juvenile book, so excellent and complete is its work, so broadly, calmly judicial are the views taken on moot questions. In distinction from this, Mr. Hill is often a special pleader, impatient with those who differ from his particular ideas, which do not strike the reader as always entirely unbiased.

The very modern character of Miss Nicolay's work may be gathered from her introduction, which adds as wise a word as has been spoken to the controversy over Lincoln's debt to ancestry. She says:

"Abraham Lincoln's forefathers were pioneers—men who left their homes to open up the wilderness and make the way plain for others to follow them. For one hundred and seventy years, ever since the first American Lincoln came from England to Massachusetts in 1638, they had been moving slowly westward as new settlements were made in the forest. They faced solitude, privation, and all the dangers and hardships that beset men who take their homes where only beasts and wild men have been before; but they continued to press steadily forward, though they lost fortune and sometimes life itself, in their westward progress. Back in Pennsylvania and New Jersey some of the Lincolns had been men of wealth and influence. In Kentucky, where the future President was born on February 12, 1809, his parents lived in deep poverty. Their home was a small log cabin of the rudest kind, and nothing seemed more unlikely than that their child coming into the world in such humble surroundings, was destined to be the greatest man of his time. True to his race, he also was to be a pioneer—not, indeed, like his ancestors, a leader into new fields, but a pioneer of a nobler sort."

Mr. Hill says, on the contrary: "One of his eulogists declares that 'Lincoln is not a type. He stands alone—no ancestors—no fellows—no successors.' The facts fully justify the tribute. . . . It is more than probable that Lincoln inherited many sterling qualities of mind and character from the worthy mechanics and farmers from whom he was descended, but there is very little on the face of the record to encourage any definite claims on their behalf for the shaping of his career." Miss Nicolay's viewpoint is the more recent, the viewpoint of modern scientific anthropology, which finds in the enterprise of the pioneer a quality offering probability of other high gifts.

The book is full of the little touches that make the man real to us, and Miss Nicolay has a way of reading into circumstances and environment the value in the life of Lincoln that common sense approves as probable—and no more; a wise restraint. This book should take its place not merely as a youth's history of Lincoln, but as a popular biography, read by all. It is finely illustrated with drawings.

A Good Story.

HARDING OF ST. TIMOTHY'S. By Arthur Stanwood Pier. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. (Price, $1.50. For sale by Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch, Los Angeles.)

This is an exceptionally good boys' story, dealing with life at a private school. The interest centers in the question of a secret society—its usefulness and desirability, and many parents will approve the lesson taught. The book is, moreover, excellently written, by one who knows boys and their aims and inclinations, and will appeal strongly to those for whom it is intended.

A Hero Out of History.

THE STORY OF GEN. RICHARD MONTGOMERY. By Percy K. Fitzhugh. McLoughlin Bros., No. 890 Broadway, New York.

Here is a hero story intended not for the older, but for younger boys; as one guesses from the careful crudity of its exposition, which is distinctly a "writing down" to its audience in matter, while the manner style remains often "grown up," stilted and pedantic and dry, somewhat on the Rollo-books order. The viewpoint is also often partisan, perhaps almost necessarily so, in the attempt to render great historic questions comprehensible to younger readers; and the question is whether the facts thus imparted atone for the bias thus instilled in young and plastic minds. It is time, in this twentieth century, that books written for the young should begin to take note of their responsibility for the impression they convey, the bent they give the mind of their youthful readers.

Christmas Books.

THE GOLDEN GOBLIN. Told in prose and verse by Curtis Dunham, author of "Two in a Zoo," and in pictures by George F. Kerr. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

THE JINGLE OF A JAP. By Clara Bell Thurston. The H. M. Caldwell Company, Boston.

MOTOR CAR PETER. By Archibald Williams. Illustrated by A. Wallis Mills. George W. Jacobs & Co., Philadelphia.

LAZY JOHN, THE BOY WHO WOULD NOT WORK. By Charles and Amy Steedman, after Heinrich Meise. Drawings by Gertrude Caspari. George W. Jacobs Company, Philadelphia.

"The Golden Goblin" is a beautiful production of the bookmaker's art, the text profusely illustrated and printed over illustrations, the pictures imaginative, the text large and clear, the cover an ideal child's book cover, strong and bright with color—the title showing under a large and charmingly drawn picture of two children soaring on a flying fish. The story is of fair value, imaginative, a fairy tale, and will please many little readers.

"The Jingle of a Jap" is a Christmas book for very little ones and of fascinating illustrations in color, portraying the adventures of a Japanese doll. It is one of the prettiest of the Christmas books for the very little ones, who delight in color. The two books named above from the press of George W. Jacobs are delightful imitations of German models. "Motor-car Peter" in particular, patterned after "our old friend Struwelpeter, is one of the most successful things of its kind that have been done, and may be strongly recommended to the adult, as well as the child, especially to the adult who owns a motor car, for his amusement and delectation. The drawings are admirable, the best possible imitations of the German ones that accompany the famous text. The sad and moral tales of the book concern Motor Peter, Cruel Adolphus, Headlong Henry, Disobedient Frederick, Willful William, and Flighty Michael. Motor Peter introduces the book:

"Motor Peter here you see—
What a spectacle is he.
Look, his hands are never clean—
'Tis a year since they have been;
And the oil has patched his clo'es
From his collar to his toes;
Any job is nicer far
Than to currycomb a car."

"Adolphus was as bad a man
As ever made a Panhard pan.
He dearly loved to blind and choke
In clouds of dust all passing folk;"

And the tale follows Adolphus through many misdeeds until he brings up in bed his delirious fancies haunted by a monster dog that

"Lolls its tongue and bids him try
Some liniment and humble pie."

To young and old this book is heartily commended.

BIOGRAPHY.

Henry Irving.

SIR HENRY IRVING. By Percy Fitzgerald. Revised edition. George W. Jacobs Company, Philadelphia. (Price, $3.)

"The present is practically the third issue of this life. It was written under Irving's hearty encouragement, and all the earlier sheets were corrected and revised by him. . . . It has been thoroughly revised, large additions have been made which cover a period of some ten years and bring the work practically down to his lamented death."

It is an excellent work of its kind—chatty, full of anecdotes, dealing with the man and his work from all sides. This latest edition contains upwards of 300 pages, large octavo.

Abraham Lincoln.

LINCOLN, THE LAWYER. By Frederick Trevor Hill. The Century Company, New York. (Price $2 net.)

Frederick Trevor Hill, believing that Lincoln's training in the law, in theory and practice, was his best preparation for the work of political leadership, has given us a large volume upon this subject, full of the result of much careful research and a valuable contribution to history. Some comments were made above on incidental moods of the author of this work; but the book as a whole is nevertheless excellent, and gives us many new glimpses of the great emancipation. It is finely illustrated with drawings and half-tones.

MUSIC.

History of Opera.

THE STANDARD OPERAS. By George P. Upton. New edition, revised and enlarged. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. (Price, $2 net.)

McClurg and Company issue a new and profusely illustrated edition of Upton's handbook of operas—a very complete compendium of short biographies of composers, with comment on their work, the chief fault of which is that they are arranged alphabetically in the text, whereas this arrangement should have been followed in the index and the historical sequence in the text. However, the book is convenient as small and compact, yet very full in its data. The present edition contains nearly 500 pages, small octavo.

DRAMA.

Captain Letterblair.

CAPT. LETTERBLAIR. By Marguerite Merington. Arranged from the prompt-book used in the original "Lyceum" production. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

This clever play is amusing reading, although it makes apparent the fact that that may please upon the stage which is both too light and too exaggerated in effects to satisfy when read—that the modern stage, at least, achieves success with plays that, even if fair as wholes, cannot stand detailed criticism. It is doubtful whether "Captain Letterblair" in book form will find a sufficient sale to pay for its publication; while the play has always an appreciative audience.

OTHER LANDS.

Panama.

PANAMA; THE ISTHMUS AND CANAL. By C. H. Forbes-Lindsay, author of "India, Past and Present;" "The Philippines Under Spanish and American Rules;" "America's Insular Possessions," etc. The John C. Winston Company, Philadelphia. (Price, $1 net.)

This appears to be a careful, conservative history of the canal project of Panama down very nearly to date—that is, bringing matters down to six months ago—with some added chapters on the influence of canals in general, and a survey of the trade effects of each of the great canals of the world. The volume is a handbook of information, not very detailed, but sufficiently so to meet the needs and desires of the average inquirer for information on this subject. It will doubtless have a good sale just at this time.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

William Dean Howells has returned from Maine, where he spent the summer and much of the fall, and will probably be in New York during the winter.

Prof. Louis Derr, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is an enthusiastic photographer as well as a professor of physics, and he has combined these two pursuits in the writing of his book on "Photography for Students of Physics and Chemistry," which is just published by The Macmillan Company. Prof. Derr describes this volume as an attempt to present a discussion of photographic processes, so that the photographic worker of ordinary scientific training may obtain a clear idea of the nature and purpose of his operations.

The Macmillan Company announces for early publication a book on "Freedom in the Church," by the Rev. Dr. Alexander V. G. Allen, professor of church history in the Episcopal Theological School at Harvard. In this important work Dr. Allen will treat such topics as: "Ruling Ideas of the Angelican Church in the Age of Reformation," "Variety of Interpretation, as the Condition on Which Creeds Are Held," "The Vows of the Clergy," "Clerical Honesty," "The Virgin Birth and the Apostle's Creed," "The Catholic Theory of the Incarnation," "The Angelican Theory of the Incarnation," "The Modern Sensitiveness About the Virgin Birth," etc.

The recent death of Mrs. Jefferson Davis gives a new interest to many chapters of Mrs. Myrta Lockett Avary's book, "Dixie After the War," which has much intimate, biographical detail and reminiscence of the entire Davis family. She tells, among other things, the story, little known, of how Mrs. Davis prevented her husband from escaping in his flight after the fall of the Confederacy. After leaving Washington, Ga., Mr. Davis had heard that marauders were in pursuit of his wife's cortege, and turning out of his course, he rode hard across country, found his family, conveyed them beyond the present danger, as he thought, and was about to renew his journey south. The party camped, when he was roused at dawn by his negro servant, who said troops were coming. Mrs. Davis begged her husband to leave. His horses and weapons were near the road down which the cavalry was coming. In the darkness of the tent, he caught up what he took to be his raglan, a sleeveless, waterproof garment. It was hers, she then threw a shawl over his head. He went out of the tent, she keeping near. "Halt!" cried a trooper, leveling a carbine at him. Mr. Davis dropped his wraps and hurried forward. Mrs. Davis say the carbine, cast her arms around her husband, and lost him his one chance of escape, for he might have slipped away in the dark.

NEW MAGAZINES.

The Engineering Magazine for December gives the leading place to O. M. Becker's article on "Modern Adaptations of the Apprenticeship System." The topic is one of great and increasing interest, under existing industrial conditions, and the information given concerning the methods and experience of many leading firms is of real importance and value. Henry W. Jacobs's study of organization and economy in the railway machine shop has a like claim on the attention of the advanced works manager; both are fully and effectively illustrated. A. E. Dixon continues his review of accepted practice in the planning and construction of the power plant, and his illustrations tell a story as significant as his text. Other features of the issue in which the pictures are most effective in illustrating the letter press are an account of the new tin region of the York Peninsula, Alaska, by Frank L. Hess, the official of the United States Geological Survey, who examined the region, and an analysis of the Peruvian water powers and their possibilities, by Emile Guarini, professor of engineering in the Lima University. Reginald Pelham Bolton, the well-known expert, discusses the prevention of elevator accidents in a manner likely to suggest much needed reforms in methods of inspection and regulation, and Edwin J. Prindle concludes his synopsis of patent law with an abstract of the patent relations of employer and employé.

"My Life—So Far," by Josiah Flynt, is an important autobiography, the first installment of which appears in Success Magazine for December. Mr. Flynt, who is the author of numerous stories dealing with tramps, pickpockets, and other denizens of the underworld, begins here the narration of his life-story, a tale of wandering through many countries, always seeking a will-o'-the-wisp, the treasure at the end of the rainbow. The route of this noted wanderer led him in his fruitless chase from the brakebeam of an American box car to the home of Tolstoi, to the University of Berlin, to mysterious cities of Asia, to the "open road" of the vagabond adventurer in half a dozen countries. Vance Thompson writes of some remarkable features of "The Dreyfus Affair," and its bearing upon the destinies of the French republic. Samuel Merwin tells of the first meeting of the People Lobby, the national legislative bureau for which Success Magazine is receiving contributions. This issue is strong in fiction.

It will be remembered that in 1903 G. Lowes Dickinson published anonymously a volume entitled "Letters from a Chinese Official," making use, as he says, of a familiar literary device to expose what appeared to him certain weak points of western civilization. The book called forth from William Jennings Bryan another, entitled "Letters to a Chinese Official, Being a Western View of Eastern Civilization," Mr. Bryan being unaware that the authorship had been avowed. Now Mr. Dickinson has written a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan, which will appear in the December Century under the title of "Eastern and Western Ideals." It confirms the idea put forth in the review of Mr. Bryan's book in these columns. "I do not propose to defend my representation of China against Mr. Bryan's," says Mr. Dickinson. "For my purpose I selected all the good, as he, for his, has selected all the evil; and a controversy carried on upon such lines as those can have no fruitful result. Nor would it be really interesting or relevant. Like Mr. Bryan, I am a westerner; it is western civilization with which we are both most nearly concerned; and if I differ with him, it is not, I think, upon the question of ultimate ideals, but upon the degree to which we have realized, or are in process of realizing, them."

The December number of Suburban Life carries out most successfully its policy of catering to the great and steadily-increasing number of our population who like to combine country life with city wage earning. Although this number starts off with an article by Miss Martha McCulloch-Williams called "An Old Plantation Christmas," which describes the joys of Christmas time in the South "before the war," and there is an editorial on suburban living and the Christmas spirit by the Rev. Charles F. Dole, the number is not entirely devoted to the Christmas literature, so to speak, as are many of the magazines. An interesting article is "Let's Have a Den," which describes briefly the sort of room that men like to have, and is admirably illustrated with photographs showing the greatest possible variety in furnishing this sort of room. Edward T. Hartman, secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League, writes up "The Boston Town Room," showing what an admirable institution this is, and indirectly advises other cities to take up the same movement. There is also a most practical and interesting article on "Buying a House With a Mortgage—Is It Cheaper than Paying Rent?" by Charles J. Fuess, well known as author of books on economy of householding. An illustrated article on "The Luxury of a Sun Room" tells how any one who has a piazza, or a porch, may inclose them with glass and add a fascinating room to the house.

She Was Relieved.

The big green automobile sped down the frosty road. Above the noisy "chug chug" of the machine he had proposed and had been refused.

"Life is not worth living," he sighed. "My heart is punctured." The beautiful girl smiled.

"Thank goodness!" she exclaimed in great relief.

"Thank goodness for what?"

"That it is your heart that is punctured and not a tire. We are twenty miles from a repair station."

Without a word he put on full speed and ran over a pig and two cows just to let his feelings out.—[Chicago News.

California Children on Spanking.

Prof. Barnes's returns from 3000 California children indicated overwhelmingly that they did not resent whippings as such; any punishment was resented if the child thought he had not had due notice of the consequences, or that his excuses had not been sufficiently considered, or other children had been let off more easily; but a scolding that did not satisfy these requirements left more bitterness than a whipping that did.—[Good Housekeeping.

INVESTIGATING IRISH MISERY.

Members of Parliament Are Properly Shocked.

Fifty Dollars a Year for Some Families.

Congested Districts Scene of Hopelessness

BY ARTHUR R. HINTON.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DUBLIN, Nov. 18.—An event that may have a very important effect upon Irish legislation before Parliament, is the visit of eight Liberal members, headed by Percy Alden, M.P., to what are known as the congested districts on the west coast of Erin. The party accompanied by a number of members of the Friends' Social Union, traveled through the parts of the island that are most distinctively Irish, the least known and least understood by Englishmen, and the poorest.

Commencing at the northwest corner of Ulster province in County Donegal the visitors went south through Sligo, Mayo, Galway, including the Connemara district lying west of the city of Galway, and through County Clare. Roscommon and adjoining counties in the interior were visited as well as a large part of the balance of the island. The report of the party, as stated by Mr. Alden in a newspaper interview at Liverpool, on his return, is anything but encouraging.

The writer made a tour of most of these same districts about two weeks before the band of legislators arrived on the scene. At that time the potato blight had begun to work sad havoc and the prospects were for great suffering among the people of these districts who are poverty-stricken at best. Mr. Alden confirms all this and adds even more. He furthermore states that his views are concurred in by his colleagues.

WILL NOT SELL.

Compulsory purchase of the huge grazing estates that now keep the peasantry in many places off the best lands, is frankly advocated by the legislators. Not even the liberal terms now offered them under the present land laws, even with bounties offered as an inducement, have been sufficient to bring about a sale of the lands that are often most desired. For years the Nationalists have demanded a law that will compel the landlords to do this and Mr. Alden frankly declared that the entire party is united in favor of this course. The effect of such a stand in Parliament may be very great. Next to home rule it is likely to prove the most important question to come up. If a bill for this is introduced it will be fought with determination by the opposition upon the ground, no doubt, that it is in effect a measure of confiscation of property. But then it will be by no means the first time that private property has been taken under the right of eminent domain when considered necessary for the public good, sometimes even without any compensation being given. The Dillon and De Freyne estates in Roscommon county are especially referred to by Mr. Alden as being subjects for compulsory sale.

The compulsory sale of the grazing lands to the tenants will not, however, as Mr. Alden points out, and as is self-evident to any casual observer in the country, solve the problem in the worst of the congested districts of Connemara and County Clare. For here there are scarcely any lands of practical value for farming available, nearly all are bog and rocks. To remove the people to another district is also a hard matter as where there is good land there are plenty already there to occupy it who feel they should have first choice. Another difficulty may be found in the unwillingness of the peasant to move, for few Irishmen move in their own country although they may go to England, America, Australia or South Africa willingly.

FRIGHTFUL POVERTY.

In some of these poorer districts there are cases of land being sold as low as one and half pence an acre on fourteen and a half years purchase. The terrible poverty of the people is shown by the fact that many families—not small families, either—have incomes only of from nine to ten pounds a year—less than $50. Their houses are often far inferior to the stables used by English and American farmers. Poverty, filth and misery are the chief characteristics of the people, who are often paying rent for land at the rate of a pound or thereabouts up that would appear to a visitor high at six pence.

In parts of the congested districts a gradual improvement is being effected. The Congested Districts Board, a commission appointed for the purpose of improving conditions, is building better homes for the people where the lands have passed from the hands of the landlords to the government and are being sold to the tenants. These buildings are of stone, with substantial roofs and floors, and several rooms instead of one room, with dirt floor and thatched roof.

The people have been induced to undertake the betterment of their own premises, too, and to build outbuildings for the chickens and pigs instead of keeping them in the family home. Strange as it may appear to a visitor, the people often must be shown and urged to this, although there are not wanting those who are possessed of some little means and could do it with ease. It seems as if they had been down so long and lived for so many generations in filth and poverty that they fail to realize that there is any better way to live.

DOING GOOD WORK.

The legislators pay high tribute to the work of the Congested Districts Board, saying that wherever it has been at work there is a marked change for the better. While concurring in this opinion, the writer must add that among the districts in Clare and Connemara, as well as some in other parts of Galway, Mayo and Donegal, there is the greatest need for such changes where there is no evidence that anything has yet been done.

A royal commission is at present inquiring into the conditions of the congested districts, and Mr. Alden declares that he believes that its report will be in favor of compulsory purchase and sale to tenants of the lands. From this it looks very much as though the days of the landlords are numbered. Already many of the big estates have been sold to the government, and then resold to the tenants, or rather the government has advanced the purchase money for the tenants, the latter repaying it in instalments covering many years, fifty or thereabouts being about the number usual, at the end of which time the property passes to the tenant and becomes his in fee. The terms of repayment make it virtually a question of a change of landlords until the amount is settled. The first benefit received by the farmer is in the form of a reduction of about 20 per cent. in his rent.

FARMERS FAVOR IT.

There is considerable fault found with the details of the workings of the Land Purchase Acts by political leaders and some others, the alleged high prices being a frequent cause of complaint. The farmers generally, however, appear to recognize the improvement over old conditions. Much remains to be done, and when the land is finally transferred to the people it is likely to take time before the full benefit is realized. The cessation of the years of strife over the land question will in itself, however, be a great boon. More industries are the crying need of Ireland, but where is the man who will invest his capital in any business in a country that is in a continual uproar and where agrarian strife is the rule.

It is likely also that Parliament will be called upon to establish relief works to furnish employment. The visiting members are of that opinion, and will probably recommend that it take the form of building piers and slips on the coast, the construction and improvement of roads and the extension of railways, all of which are badly needed. With better facilities for shipping a great improvement might be had in the sea commerce of several towns while there are large districts without railroad connections. As the Irish railways are paying but very badly at present the owners are not anxious to invest in many extensions. The Midland Great Western, which serves the west coast and congested districts, in particular, makes a very poor showing in its last annual report. The dividend was only 3 per cent., and this was paid by the use of moneys not generally so expended.

OF THINGS LITERARY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 21.—William Shakespeare is the hero of a new and striking novel by the Danish woman writer, Sophus Banditz. Moreover, British and American readers will probably soon have a chance to read this tale, for Queen Alexandra, who recently read it in the original, was so much impressed by its merits that she at once advised the authoress to have it translated into English. This translation is now proceeding, and the English version is to be dedicated to the Queen who is, of course, herself a Dane.

Sophus Banditz, who has thus ventured to put the "Bard" into a novel, is a comparatively recent recruit to the world of letters. But her work has shown such all-round brilliance that she is being spoken of everywhere as the coming novelist of Denmark. Among the Danish people, her books are extremely popular, and she has had much commendation and help from the royal family of Denmark, and especially from the Queen of England and the Dowager Empress of Russia.

In her new novel Miss Banditz takes Shakespeare to Denmark as one of the Earl of Leicester's company of players. He is, however, known simply as "Will." At Elsinore he meets with an accident and is nursed by Iver Kramm a schoolmaster, and his sister, Christence. During his convalescence he reads the Latin Chronicle of Saxo Grammaticus, and is deeply interested in the story of Prince Amlet. Christence learns to love "Will," and declares herself. When she finds he has a wife and children in England, like Ophelia, she drowns herself. Kramme does not know "Will's" surname until years afterward, when the captain of a ship presents the schoolmaster with a copy of the 1603 edition of Hamlet. Then "Will's" identity as Shakespeare is revealed.

Lady Troubridge, who wrote, "The Woman Thou Gavest," and whose other books are known in America, is hard at work on a four-act play. I doubt if there is another equally well-known writer in England who can claim to have started as young as did this beautiful society woman, who is sister to the Countess of Dudley. Lady Troubridge—then Laura Gurney—began writing fairy tales in the nursery, and at the age of 10 she had a story published and paid for. It was a simple but dramatic little tale called "The Death Card." The English Argosy published it and for many succeeding years Laura Gurney was one of the regular writers for this and other magazines.

She is still an indefatigable literary worker, although she has no need to write for any financial return it may bring her. She was born in the purple. When she came "out" in society and was presented at court, she instantly became known as the most beautiful of debutantes. Before the summer was over she was the beauty of the season. Noblemen of all degrees, great men of the service, money kings, and princes of art and letters were her attendant satellites.

Like many other fashionable and wealthy women of London, Lady Troubridge, before her marriage, worked among the poor children in the East End slums. She especially devoted tender care to the cripples. One of the sights of her wedding, a sight perhaps never before or since witnessed, was the presence of several score of crippled children at the church.

She was a great favorite with the late G. F. Watts, R. A., the famous artist. He painted many pictures of her as a girl and encouraged her greatly in her writing.

For the first few years after her marriage Lady Troubridge devoted herself exclusively to her home life. Then when her three children, two daughters and a son, became of a school age, she plunged once more into her literary work. Today she is perhaps the best-known woman of title in the literary world of the country.

Yet she is still noted also for her beauty and the beauty of her daughters. The most exquisite picture now on exhibition at the Grafton Galleries is one by Archibald Wortley depicting Lady Troubridge and her children. Her eldest, a girl of eleven, is considered the prettiest of Lo children.

Lady Troubridge's books are "The Woman Th and "The Millionaire." Her pla are "A Great Lady" and a serious play, "Mrs. produced three years ago at th Theater.

Mysterious Loss of Jewels.

Much mystery surrounds the loss by the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goelet of New York, of a beautiful turquoise and diamond pendant, which she prized more than any other of her jewels. It disappeared at Floors Castle, it is rumored, while a fashionable party was being entertained there, and sensational developments are hinted at.

The pendant contains a gigantic turquoise brought for her from Persia. Whether the gem was insured is not known.

May Pull Off King's Boots.

Lord Rothes has just been elected by the peers of Scotland, assembled for the purpose in the palace of Holyrood, at Edinburgh, under the presidency of the Duke of Montrose, to succeed the late Earl Leven and Melville, as one of the sixteen representatives of the Scottish peerage in the House of Lords at Westminster. These elections take place on the occasion of every general Parliamentary election, or else when the death of one of the representative peers renders necessary the filling of the vacancy caused by his demise. Inasmuch as the majority of the Scottish peers are Unionists, they invariably elect one of their own political creed as representative at Westminster, and the consequence is that whenever the Liberal party wishes to get one of its Scotch peers into the House of Lords it is compelled to secure for him from the crown a peerage of the United Kingdom, which carries with it a seat in the upper house of the imperial Legislature. Otherwise he remains excluded from Parliament. For whereas Irish peers (outside the twenty-six elected to represent the Irish peerage in the House of Lords,) may sit for English constituencies in the House of Commons, Scotch peers are debarred from this privilege.

Lord Rothes, who is the nineteenth Earl of his line, possesses, among a number of other queer hereditary prerogatives, the strange right of pulling off the sovereign's boots on the return of Their Majesties to their apartments on the conclusion of any state function or ceremony in Scotland, and is, therefore, sometimes styled the "Grand Boot Jack to the Scottish Crown." He is very good looking, a fact which many people are disposed to ascribe to the circumstances that, like the equally well-favored Marquis of Exeter, he has a strain of peasant blood in his veins.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

Glass Tile for Roofing.

Probably the greatest achievement of the present day in tile roofing from a practical point of view has been the development of glass tile for lighting purposes. Its advantages over the ordinary glass skylight are manifold. The glass tiles are of the same pattern as the clay tile, and in factory work, upon an open steel construction, the glass tile may be inserted just as a clay tile would be in any number or in any position desired.

As to durability, the doing away with the sheet metal work, or even of wired glass, plays an important part. Advocates of tile roofing contend that galvanized iron and tin yields quickly when it comes in contact with the gases that arise almost invariably from a factory. The life of this customary support to the skylight is three years, or four at the outside, and then it must be renewed or away goes the skylight. Moreover, the glass tile washes clean, while the glass surrounded by the sheet metal work never can be.

Oil Trust Rival Booms.

Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock gave his official indorsement of the project of Mellon & Co. of Pittsburgh for constructing a $7,000,000 pipe line from Bartelsville, I. T., to Port Arthur, Tex., for the purpose of competing with the Standard Oil Company in the Southwest. W. L. Mellon of Pittsburgh, head of the concern, said the public might rest assured that the Standard Oil Company would have nothing to do with the new pipe line. He said the ultimate object was to get at the Indian Territory oil, which has been found to be almost as good as the Pennsylvania product. The pipe will be an eight-inch one all the way, which will take care of a large territory.

Make Traction Engines.

The D. W. McLaughlin Company has secured four acres of land in Berkeley for the erection of a plant for the manufacture of traction engines. Over one hundred men will be employed. Plans are under way to break ground before the end of the year. Buildings will cover over half of the site. The engine to be manufactured is patented by the head of the firm, D. W. McLaughlin. The company has now a plant in San Francisco.

Paper from Papyrus.

A band of British capitalists propose to revive paper making from papyrus. The cultivation of this plant has been extinct for over 1000 years. The papyrus reeds, at first, will be brought to England and made into pulp in an English mill until sufficient trade has been worked up. Then the papyrus syndicate will build its own mills in Egypt and ship the pulp. Smedley Norton, the author and explorer, was commissioned to revive the seventh-century papyrus reed. The Nile grass, commonly known as papyrus, is not the real thing. Mr. Norton discovered some true papyrus seeds in remote parts of Syria and Palestine, near the River Jordan and Sea of Galilee, and cultivation was begun.

After exhaustive experiments, Dr. Querin Weirtz, consulting chemist and analyst of the Paper Makers' Association of Great Britain, has produced the most admirable pulp. A committee of experts has outlined all the methods for cultivation and paper manufacture and the company is going ahead. Papyrus grows in water from seven to ten feet high, and one can gather three crops a year. The land of the company is irrigated by the Nile and is only plowed every five years.

They will begin manufacture of paper in the spring, when they will have 100,000 tons of papyrus ready for the market.

Large Winery Being Built.

The California Wine Association has commenced work on the erection of its warehouse and winery, on Point Molita, Richmond Island. The association asserts that on its completion it will be the largest winery in the world and that the cost will be more than a half-million dollars.

The plant will be capable of crushing 25,000 tons of grapes annually and accommodation for 10,000,000 gallons of wine is to be provided. There are twenty-seven acres devoted to the plant and the wharf for the shipments by sea is already completed. Tracks are to be run to the main lines of the Santa Fé and Southern Pacific railroads for interior transportation.

The buildings are to be constructed of concrete and in connection with the winery proper there is to be established bottling works, a cooperage and tartaric-acid retorts. Cattle are to be fed from the grape refuse.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Miss Gladys Munroe, who has been for many years the leading violinist of Fruitvale, is soon to leave for Europe, where she will study music under European masters. She has given several recitals in Fruitvale and San Francisco, where she has attracted the attention of the music-loving people. She will fit herself for the concert stage.

Judge Henry McGinn, of Portland, a prominent attorney of the Oregon bar, was recently fined $150 by Judge Sears at Portland for ting a line of Shakespeare at the court. The quotation was "Not poppy nor mandragora, nor a'l the drowsy syrups of the world shall pass judgment upon me." The words were hurled at Judge Sears by the irate attorney, and the court imposed the fine for contempt.

E. Goucher, chief gardener at the National Plant and Introduction Garden at Chico, has severed his connection with the garden and departed for Washington, D. C., where he will enter the service of the Department of Agriculture in another department.

A. E. Nye, appointed State Controller by Gov. Pardee to fill the place left vacant by the death of Edward P. Colgan, has been a newspaper man practically all his life, his last journalistic venture being the Oakland Enquirer, which he assisted in establishing.

Clerk H. W. Wood of the Appellate Court at Sacramento will resume the practice of law with the advent of the new year.

Editor Vaughn of "The Californian" of Eureka has been found guilty of an assault with a deadly weapon as a result of firing three shots at Editor Hyatt, of the Eureka Herald. The latter alleged that Vaughn had been blackmailing saloonkeepers.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Electrical Farming.

Experiments in electrical farming which have been held by Prof. Lemsthoem of Helsingfors, have demonstrated some very interesting facts. In one experiment with carrots the yield was increased 30 per cent. the first year and 90 per cent. the second year over plants that were not treated electrically. In another experiment with potatoes, where the current was generated galvanically in the earth by means of copper and zinc plates connected by insulated wires strung above growing vines, an increased yield of from 60 per cent. to 100 per cent. was recorded. Some scientists now claim that the large harvests of Spitzbergen and Finland are due to the electrical influence of the aurora borealis

Indian Hemp and Catalepsy.

A single grain of the rosin of Indian hemp will produce catalepsy in a man. A few hours are required for the effects to reach a climax, when his limbs may be placed in almost any position without difficulty, and when once placed they remain in the given position indefinitely, although the natural influence of gravity would cause them to fall. During the catalepsy the body is usually insensible to all impressions.

A Narcotic from Lettuce.

The stem of the common lettuce when the plant is flowering will, when cut, exude a milky juice, which will turn brown in the air and dry to a friable mass. The smell of the dried juice resembles the smell of opium, and the effect on the brain is about the same—inducing sleep. The taste is bitter and remains in the mouth for a long time.

A Chemical Plant.

The French Academy of Sciences has heard Prof. d'Arsonval describe artificial vegetables, which he exhibited, that were produced by the methods of Prof. le Duc of the Nantes Medical School.

Prof. d'Arsonval interested his colleagues greatly, but unfortunately for the lay public, did not say whether these so-called vegetables are edible. Although they are described as vegetables, they have nothing of vegetables in their make-up. But they behave after their production as do the real vegetables they resemble under natural conditions.

Into the composition of these products nothing living enters. Prof. le Duc makes a seed in pill form of one part sulphate of copper and two parts glucose. This is deposited on a bouillon made of gelatine, to which are added 3 per cent. of ferro-cyanide of potassium and a little sea salt.

The seed develops sometimes on the surface of the liquid, sometimes in its depths, and finally gives birth to plants resembling seaweed and other marine plants.

Dust an Enemy to Long Life.

The eminent physician, Sir Lander Brunton of London in an article contending it ought to be the rule rather than the exception for men and women to retain their life activities from 90 to 100 years, cites dust among the life shorteners. Dust, he says, is one of the greatest enemies of advanced life, since it is the frequent cause of colds and respiratory diseases. He himself found that frequently in taking a dusty book from a library shelf he caught a cold in the head. This recurred so regularly that he now resorts to sponging the dusty edges of the books and shelves with a solution of carbolic acid before disturbing the dust deposit.

Sweets from Refuse.

The last place one would expect to find material wherewith to compound a toothsome sweetmeat would be a cotton mill. Yet the used-up pickers which have been discarded from the spinning looms form the basis of certain widely-popular jujubes or pastilles.

These pickers consist of long strips of hide studded with wire teeth, set like the wires of a metallic hair brush. After a time the pickers become clogged with fluff, dirt and grease and are then replaced by new ones. Until quite recently the discarded pickers were consigned to the waste heap; now they form the staple of a profitable industry. The hide is separated from the wire and freed from grease and dirt; the gelatine is then extracted and purified, combined with glucose or sugar coloring and flavoring, and sent forth to the lovers of sweetmeats in a variety of tasty confections. What left the mill for the waste heap returns as a dainty, tempting jujube. Verily, these confections, created out of the refuse of a cotton mill, may be regarded as the grub, chrysalis and butterfly of the work-a-day world.

Electricity and Food.

Electricity appears to have something in common with the forces of plant life, and it is just possible that some day the world's food supply will be furnished by its means. Already we know that when an intense electrical discharge occurs in air nitric acid is formed, which, when neutralized with soda, potash or lime, furnishes the indispensable nitrate for plant life.

But apparently electricity is capable of producing food substances in a much more direct way than this. Given carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, in the simple association existing in carbonic acid gas and water, the current under certain conditions will bring about, according to recent researches, a rearrangement of the elements until at length carbo-hydrates are obtained. It is stated that by merely passing a current of definite potential through soda water, or water impregnated with carbonic acid gas, a series of products is formed, culminating in sugars. First of all is formed oxalic acid, then tartaric acid, next citric acid, until at five volts and three amperes grape sugar appears. Should the process always work out correctly mankind will be face to face with a solution of the food problem.

Carbonic acid gas and water are abundant enough throughout the world, and to convert these simple substances into complex foodstuffs by simply manipulating them with the electric current surely promises to bring about the greatest revolution in the history of the world.

The final step would be the conversion of nitrogen into proteids, or the flesh-forming part of foods. Though at present proteids can not be constructed directly, yet the manufacture of nitrate by electricity is a source of stimulus to the synthesizing process of the plant, and, therefore, electricity comes again to our aid in the production of food. The mineral salts required are already a product of the electric current.

Doctoring Growing Wood.

According to Harper's Weekly, an official in the Department of Agriculture, in discussing the growing scarcity of the different woods in the United States, and the imitations being used by various manufacturing concerns, recently said:

'"The practice of impregnating wood with fluid substances has been practiced for a long time, and has been done for many economical purposes, but powerful forcing machines and prolonged action were necessary for practical results. Now a French authority comes to the front with a discovery whereby various fluids required are absorbed by the tree by the operations of nature itself. The effectiveness of the process can be easily demonstrated by sprinkling the soil in which a white hyacinth or other white flower is growing with the juice of the Phytolaca decandra, when the white blooms assume in a few hours a red color.

"For coloring purposes the method most practiced is to place the bottom of a trunk of a tree in the fluid you wish to have absorbed, and in a few days it will be found that the liquid has ascended to the highest point. The tree should be cut while full of sap, and the liquid you wish aspired will invade all the texture except the heart. The applicability of the method to many cases will be seen at once.

"It is not necessary that a cut tree should retain all its branches. A single branch with undisturbed leaves at the top is sufficient to produce the circulation and ascension of the fluid. Nor is it absolutely necessary to fell the tree. A cavity made with an ax, or dividing a large part of its substance with a saw, will suffice. In placing the fluid in contact with the cavity it will be rapidly absorbed.

"The ingredient for giving durability to wood and for preserving it from dry or wet rot is pyrolignite of iron. To render wood incombustible or to prevent shrinking or swelling from dryness and moisture, chloride of calcium and the mother water of salt marshes or works are used.

"Colors are given by preparations which will affect the wood directly, or the substances previously introduced. Thus the pyrolignite of iron having been used, the color of ebony is produced by saturating the tree with a tanning matter, which will dye the whole black. The first liquid is so affected as to be converted into what might be called ink."

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

Little Henry Finds Out.

His mother gets him to help her with the Christmas problem and he sleuths on pa and Uncle Bill.

Ma called me to her day before yesterday and sed she wanted me to help her do something.

She had a peece of pencil in her hand that was about a inch long and looked as if she had chewed it to sharpen it, and she had a lot of notes made on the back of a bill from the dressmaker.

Henry, she said, I am puzled to deth to kno what to giv your pa and your Unkel Willyum for Chrismus. I do wish you would kind of pump them and see what they would like to hav, and then tell me, without giving it away to them what you are trying to find out.

All right, ma, i told her, and tried to get a peek at her list to see if she had me down for the maggiezine revolver i want.

but she folded up the paper and put it away.

So that night when pa and Unkel Bill was sitting in the librarey talkin about the way senater Tillman had better look out or he will be playing in a dramma that has a press agent, or else he will be crackin a black snake whip aroun in Unkel Toms Cabin, i ast pa what he thot was the right kind of a Chrismus present.

You otto be satisfide with what you get, my yung man, he sed, without coming around and hintin.

I ain't hinting, I told him. I just wonderd what your idee would be about one for yourself.

Grate Scott! he sed. Has it come to this? it is bad enuff to hafto fork over for the fool things yure ma buys for me without havin to pay for something you get for me.

I dont want to get you anything, i sed. I just want to get yure idee about what you want.

Unkel Bill spoke up and sed most men could tell what they wanted better by telling what they dont want.

What would you like to hav, Unkle Bill? I ast him.

Well, now, he sed, thare is lots of things i would be glad to see in my stockin on Chrismus morning. If I was a woman of course i would yern for dimund bracelets and necklaces and rings and gold wotches that i could pin on me somewhare whare a pickpocket could get them without pickin my pocket. Thare never was a pickpocket that could pick a womans pocket, xcept one that lived in Noo York, and he had been marrid forty times, and he confessed that the reeson he got marrid so menny times was just becos he wanted to lurn whare a woman keeps her pocket. It was a matter of profeshnul pride with him, becas he sed there was no profit in pickin a womans pocket when all you got was a bunch of samples and a button hook and a powder rag and betwene thirty and forty sents.

But i dont see what pickin pockets has to do with Chrismus presents, I sed.

You wate till you get married, pa spoke up reel quick.

Finelly pa and Unkel Bill they got me to tell them about ma astin me to find out what they wanted, and then they laffed and laffed, and Unkel Bill sed it was a refreshin indication of the change that was takin place when a woman even thought of thinkin about what you wanted. He sed thay usually went ahed and got what they wanted you to want.

You tell your ma, pa sed, that as neer as you can lern what I want is more hair on my head, my wisdum tooth filled, and rokkin chares that i wont bump into with my legs when i get up in the morning.

And if she asts you what i want, unkel Bill sed, you tell her that i am noncomittal to a degre, but that you think i would prefer a tobacko pouch that has sashay powder inside the lining, a collar and cuff box with pink satin inside of it, a cigar cutter that i can hang on my watch chane whenever i want to feel pertickerly ashamed of myself, a silver handled pensil that she can borrow frum me the day after Chrismus and never giv back to me, and a smoking set made out of hammerd brass that i can sell to somebuddy for finger bowls.

That's rite, pa sed.

But the best Chrismus present for a man, unkel Bill sed, is to pick out a fifty dollar present for him, that he would hafto pay for when the bill comes in, and then not get it.

BITS OF VERSE.

"The Word."

Oh! A word is a gem or a stone or a song,
Or a flame, or a two-edged sword;
Or a rose in bloom, or a sweet perfume,
Or a drop of gall, is a word.

You may choose your word like a connoisseur,
And polish it up with art,
But the word that sways, and stirs, and stays,
Is the word that comes from the heart.

You may work on your word a thousand weeks,
But it will not glow like one
That, all unsought, leaps forth white hot,
When the fountains of feeling run.

You may hammer away on the anvil of thought,
And fashion your words with care,
But unless you are stirred to the depths that word
Shall die on the empty air.

For the word that comes from the brain alone,
Alone to the brain will speed;
But the word from the soul finds a broader goal,
And that is word men heed.

Heartache.

The heart that goes on laughing
And the lips that sing and sing
That the way before them's rosy
And the world is always spring,
And never half so merry
And never half so wise
As the heart that keeps on laughing
Though an ache within it lies!

[Exchange.

Said the Automobile.

"I think," said the automobile,
"The country's not treatin' me fair—
Sometimes, at a pitch,
Don't I run down the rich,
An' kill off a poor millionaire?

"It's true that I'm climbin' the trees,
An' playin' leap-frog with the wall
'Round a church, holdin' meetin'
Red-hot, an' still heatin'!
Oh, I take in the sinners and all!

"It's sad," said the automobile,
"The way they berate me around!
They curse me to kill—
But 'I'm fillin' the bill,'
An' I certainly cover the ground!"

See the Amber Autumn Go.

See the amber autumn go!
Fading flower
And falling leaf,
Glowing dower
Of garnered sheaf;
Every hour
Too golden brief
Till the coming of the snow!

Let the amber autumn go!
Although shine
Gives way to stress,
Chill wind's whine
And cold's duress.
Yet, divine,
Love's happiness
Still within our hearts we know.

Music in the Woods.

Ere I had put the strings in tune
I heard the strident bee's bassoon,
And on the wind before I played
There breathed a wand'ring music made
By the susurrus of the brook;
The breeze that closed my music book
Brought th' incommunicable note
Of morning in a thrush's throat.
And while I played each vibrant tree
Seemed singing imitatively
Till I could not but feel that now
The choric leaves, the aeolian bough
Took only what they gave me, in
The music of my violin,
Whose very soul of melody
Might in the sap of yonder tree
Have mounted upward from the sod
Seraphically pure to God.

If a colony is sneezing
At our laws and acts displeasing—

If we get into a rumpus
And a nation wants to thump us—
We send Taft.

If perchance we're badly mixed up,
Diplomatically we're fixed up
By our Taft.

When the Cubans with perfection
Pull off a big insurrection—
We send Taft.

If in Panama the workmen
Drop their picks and duty shirk. Then
We send Taft.

We'll send Taft.

The One Man Out of Ten.

Nine men toil while one man plays,
Nine men serve one all their days;
Nine men beg what one may give,
Nine men die that one may live.

One man laughs while nine men sigh;
One succeeds where nine men try;
One man wins the love he craves,
Nine men to pretense are slaves.

One man hopes while nine despair;
One usurps what nine should share;
"Some time," nine men weakly say,
Boldly one man says "Today!"

Midwinter Number of The Times

To Be Issued January 1, 1907

As usual, on the first day of the year, will be issued the MIDWINTER NUMBER of The Times, the great newspaper annual of the Southwest.

For twenty years this incomparable exponent of the resources and attractions of the Land of the Afternoon has carried its message to hundreds of thousands of readers in the East and in all parts of the world. It has been a steady and persistent, while conservative and reliable, missionary for this section. No other single agency has done more to swell the rapidly growing population of Southern California. During the past twenty years The Midwinter Times has been the direct means of bringing thousands of families to this section.

To promise that the forthcoming MIDWINTER NUMBER shall be better than that of last year would perhaps be promising too much. The Times has set a high standard in these special numbers. To excel further is something like asking a two-minute trotter to beat its own record. This, however, The Times promises—that the forthcoming number shall be, in every respect, as good as any that has preceded it—as interesting, as attractive, as reliable. There will be no frothy "write ups" of localities or freak illustrations, that need a chart to explain them. The MIDWINTER NUMBER, being specially intended for circulation among the millions east of the mountains, who are thirsting for reliable information about the Land of Promise, will be replete with such facts, set forth in readable, attractive form, masses of dry statistics, difficult of mental digestion and assimilation, being avoided as much as possible.

The Truth is Good Enough

Above all else, The Times prides itself that in these numbers no exaggerated statements of the advantages and attractions of Southern California are made, to lure unwary from their present places of residence. From the beginning, the motto of The Times has been "the truth is good enough about Southern California." Of the thousands who have been brought to this section by a perusal of the MIDWINTER NUMBER, not one can honestly say that he was deceived by delusive or exaggerated statments. Rather may these new arrivals say, with the Queen of Sheba, that the truth had not half been told them about the glories of he land where the sun goes down.

A Mammoth Number

The forthcoming MIDWINTER NUMBER will consist of six or seven bound magazine sections, of 32 pages each, similar in form to the Sunday Times Magazine, and aggregating about 200 pages. This, in addition to the regular news sheets. These 200 pages—there may be more—are equivalent in volume to seven ordinary books of 300 pages each, with 330 words to the page.

Illustrations

Those who saw the MIDWINTER NUMBER last year were specially enthusiastic over the fine illustrations. A prominent Eastern publisher declared that number to be the finest thing of the kind ever put forth from a fast printing press. In the forthcoming number special attention will again be given to the illustrative feature. There will be 50 full-page illustrations, executed in the highest style of the engraver's art, showing, at a glance, the leading features of Southern California, esthetic and material, so that the Easterner, who looks over this number, may feel himself, on arriving here, amid familiar surroundings.

Some of the Contents

Among the subjects discussed in the MIDWINTER NUMBER for 1907 are the following:

The Home Garden in the Land of Flowers.
Out of Door Amusements and Sports.
Wilmington Harbor; the Port of Los Angeles.
Our Great and Growing Manufacturing Industry.
Marvelous Development of Los Angeles City.
Striking Figures of Postoffice Growth.
Electrical Development in Southern California.
Housekeeping in the Land of Sunshine.
What Easterners Want to Know.
Our New Source of Water Supply.
Canning of Fruit and Vegetables in California.
The Eucalyptus Tree and Its Manifold Uses.
Profitable Products of a Fertile Soil.
Little Known Tropic and Semi-Tropic Fruits.
Land Values in Southern California.
The American Mining Investor in Mexico.
Wonderfully Rich Mining Region Trubutary to Los Angeles.
The Reclamation of the Desert.
Some Forgotten Industrial Ventures.
Climate and Health and the Out of Door Life.
Petroleum, that Furnishes Cheap Fuel.
The Culture of Citrus Fruits.
Breathing Places of Los Angeles.
Where Roses Are Grown by the Acre.
How Los Angeles Gets Its Fish Supply.
A Mountain that Yields Lime, Cement and Marble.
Benevolent Institutions of Los Angeles.
Manufacturing Fuel from Peat.
Where Boston Gets Its Baked Beans.
How the Busy Bee Helps Our Horticulturists.

In addition to the above, and many other special articles, an entire part will be devoted to the year's progress in the thirteen southern counties of California, and another part will be filled with authentic and down-to-date information regarding Arizona and Northern Mexico.

Advertising

It goes without saying that a publication of this kind, that will be read by a hundred thousand or more possible emigrants to Southern California, offers an exceptional inducement to those who wish to catch the attention of such people. All advertisements are attractively displayed, but to obtain preferential locations, it is absolutely necessary that copy should be received early. Those who send in their advertisements in the closing days of December must take their chance of being found "among those present." The latest date on which advertising of any kind can be accepted, for insertion in the MIDWINTER NUMBER, is December twentieth.

parent paper. The Times itself, was 25 readers already know. On Wednesday Illustrated Weekly Magazine, entered year of life. The occasion seems a fitting reference to the history of this magazine, and purpose.

Illustrated Weekly Magazine was started, on it entered upon pioneer work. Other be sure, had begun before that time to or Saturday supplements containing of the regular newspaper size, devoted and other special matter, but in its in the amount and character of the it contained, the Times Magazine has its first issue. Its success was prac- once by the popularity with which it was not long before other papers be- imitate this new idea in journalism. the form and not the substance and and all failed to acquire any great while some of them have entirely Most of the attempts of this kind popularity by the restricted charac- Some of them have relied almost presentation of handsome pictures, others typography and artistic, not to say ornate, on choice literary work, and so on. beautiful cover designs are attractive the attention, but their attraction is Delightful as they are, these alone specially useful or lasting impression. to a single class of matter, even if it fiction, the profoundest logic, the most scholarly science, the most beautiful poetry, or the most delightful humor, will fail of general appreciation among a constituency composed of readers of all classes, such as that to which the newspaper appeals. To meet the diversity of tastes and needs of the great masses of the people who patronize the newspaper, there must be a judicious combination of all these features. The attractive pictures must be there; likewise the choice fiction, the logical reasoning, the popular science, the beautiful verse, the pleasing humor, and descriptive matter, travel stories, and so on.

It has been and is still the aim of The Times Illustrated Weekly Magazine to present to its readers this judicious combination of features. Its size—more than twice that of most of the magazines that have sprung up in its wake—enables it to do this effectually, with the addition of a number of special departments, relating to physical health, agriculture, floriculture, horticulture, etc., in which special and expert information is given for persons especially interested in those subjects. In the choice of general matter used in this magazine much consideration has always been given to topics relating to Southern California. The special aim has been to reflect the attractions of the delightful land in which we live, this "little empire of health, wealth and beauty" of which Los Angeles is the metropolis, and to do this in such a manner as to interest the local reader as well as those "back East." In other words, we have aimed to do both home and foreign missionary work, to stimulate our immediate neighbors to a broader appreciation of their advantages and to bring to our friends beyond the Rockies, and even to those beyond the Tehachepi, a realizing knowledge of the opportunities for a happier and better life in this South Pacific Coast Paradise.

Every newspaper as well as every man has a moral as well as an intellectual character. It has been the aim of this magazine morally to be clean and pure and elevating in character. Its spirit is optimistic. It seeks for the good, the cheerful and the substantial, for that which is elevating morally and intellectually, believing the evil and the degrading are better left in oblivion than emphasized by unnecessary publicity. The many voluntary expressions of appreciation of this policy that come from our readers are at once an evidence of the elevated moral tone of the people who read this magazine and a most gratifying reward for their efforts to those who are responsible for its character.

It would be foolish to claim that the magazine is faultless. Few if any human products are without fault, certainly none that involve the variety of elements and conditions that enter into the production of this magazine. The reader must bear in mind that the amount of matter contained in a single issue of this publication is equivalent to that contained in a book of the average size of page containing almost or quite 300 pages, and that the magazine is issued not once a month but once a week. The material for its columns comes from nearly every known portion of the earth and in quantities sufficient to make a dozen, perhaps a score, of magazines of equal size every week. All this matter has to be examined and from it have to be made selections such as are deemed best suited to the purposes of the magazine. And it may be noted incidentally for the benefit of many whose manuscripts have to be returned to them, that it follows that much good material is necessarily rejected, for the reason either that it does not conform in character to the lines laid down for the conduct of the magazine or because of a surplus of matter of its kind already on hand.

In conclusion, The Times Illustrated Weekly Magazine desires to express to its hosts of readers its sincere gratitude for the evidences it has received of their appreciation and to assure them of its purpose to strive to become more and more worthy of such appreciation.

A CYCLE OF SONNETS.

VII.—IN CITY PENT.

Oh, sweet at this sweet hour to wander free,
Or follow some invisible beckoning hand,
Among the moody mountains, where they stand
Awed with the thought of their own majesty!
Sweet, at the folding-up of day, to be
Where, on the tattered finger of the land,
The uncourted flowers of the penurious sand
Are pale against the pale lips of the sea.
Sweetest to dream, on easeful earth reclined,
Far in some forest's ancient idleness,
Under the shadow of its bossy boles,
Beyond the world's pursuit and Care's access,
And hear the wild feet of the elfin wind
Dancing and prancing in mad caprioles.

—[William Watson.

THE TURKEY SUPPLY.

Ten fat turkeys standing in a line,
Along comes Thanksgiving—
Then there were but nine.

Nine fat turkeys weeping o'er their fate,
Along comes Christmas—
Then there were but eight.

One fat turkey-hen laying eggs galore,
Along comes an incubator—
Then there's plenty more.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

A SOCIAL DUTY.

HE was a wise young man who practiced an almost painful economy in order to lay aside sufficient from a meager salary to enable him to affiliate himself with certain organizations where he could hope to meet the people who filled a long and direfully-felt social want. When, therefore, his other-minded relatives remonstrated with him about this seemingly needless or superfluous expenditure, he calmly replied that from his standard of valuation of this world's goods, he was making a very profitable investment. It was a little hard to pay the comparatively high tax of membership, such as dues, assessments, and so forth, nevertheless, he felt assured that he was well paid for the original cost, and hence, despite the shaking of heads and vain entreaties of those who wished him well, but knew him not, the young man persisted in supplying the natural and legitimate demand of his social nature by providing opportunities for association with people who had power to affect in a most desirable manner the unfoldment of his manhood.

However true it be that "real companionship can exist only between two," and that no loneliness is quite so dismal as the loneliness felt in a crowd, yet it is an unassailable truism that in order to find the one or the few, we must mingle with the many. The same principle holds in the search for souls as that which we respect in the search for specimens in the study of natural science.

Uphill and down dale tramp the faithful disciples of Agassiz, across the seas and desert plains travel the evolutional seekers for the "missing link." The elements of earth, water and air are subjected to intent scrutiny under the microscope, to enable the investigators, aiming to fathom the mystery of life, to set forth more and ever more definite theories and perhaps to discover the final facts relating to the cause of being.

What a vast deal of material must be gathered and examined in the field and laboratory before we find the wee bit which alone is exactly the form of matter we have made the objective point of our inquiry! Where, oh where is the fragment that will help us to see that which we are studying, as a whole? is a question as pertinent in our quest for the people or social fragments that we need for the best development of ourselves as social beings, as it is applicable to the principles of biological science, to the research of the historian and to the analysis of the psychologist, in his examination and explanation of the phenomena of consciousness.

How many frequenters of society, so-called, reap the requisite social advantages, or, in other words, become thoroughly socialized? In a conventional social ring we may get at one another without approaching very closely to each other. We may extend the hand and withhold the heart, or we may work the head, as it were, mechanically, without proper moral or spiritual propulsion.

Again, society, what is it? Is it a something in which people meet, a place where they gather, or is it not the persons themselves? Why, of course, this is a self-evident fact, requiring no argument. True society, then, using the term in its restricted social sense, consists of a company of rational individuals, whose purpose is, pleasurable or profitable, intercourse. Every man who seeks another is a social being, and in so far as he contributes to the pleasure or profit of society, in so far is he more or less sociable.

Still society, whether taken in its restricted or in its larger and more extended sense, must mean socialization of the individual; that is, none can fulfill their social duties without permeating the social fabric, in the weaving of which they are engaged, with their own moral and spiritual essence. In other words, their mission, in order to insure social success, must be altruistic. They must think of and for others, and be for and to others and bring themselves and others to still others. To bring oneself is good, but to bring another self to himself, through himself and others, is the highest social duty.

In speaking of society as a whole, Blackstone says: "The true and natural foundations of society are the wants and fears of individuals." But this law applies with equal force to any part or phase of society. The "wants and fears of individuals" make men social as well as geographical explorers, the "wants and fears" of individuals impel them to seek other individuals who may allay their fears, or minister to their wants.

Hence society should be so constructed and perhaps still more, so constructed as to give nerve and steadiness to the fearful; to encourage the weak, to exercise the strong and to make memoranda of predominant wants and the possibilities of supplying them. Moreover, in such an order of society, who could be niggardly in the distribution of social benefits? For be it understood, there are social, as much as financial misers; there are men and women as selfishly inclined to stow away a valuable acquaintance as parsimonious individuals are wont to hoard their treasure rather than circulate their accumulated coin for the benefit of the community.

True society, then, should be productive of the spirit and grace of magnanimity. It should foster the largeness of heart and greatness of soul that would deem no social good a real gain until shared with others, and in this effort to share the intellectual joys, the esthetic delights, the moral strength and spiritual uplift that are to be derived from the companionship of superior men and women, whom to know is an inspiration, and whom to bring into touch with others who, like ourselves, are in need of the light and warmth that radiate from resplendent character and centrally-poised personality, is not only a high privilege, but the paramount social duty of every social and more particularly of every socialized human being.

By-Products Worth Millions. By Frank G. Carpenter.

SAVING THE WASTE.

LITTLE THINGS WHICH NOW BRING FORTUNES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON.—The Agricultural Department is Uncle Sam's Aladdin. It rubs its old lamp, and a horde of new genii go to work for the nation. It is now looking up the waste places of our country and making them blossom like the rose. It brought macaroni wheat from the edge of the Sahara, and out of it built up a farming industry on the deserts of the west. It has thrust its long arm into the swamps of the South, and in Japanese rice is pulling millions out. By its discoveries as to the inoculation of the soil it has made myriads of bacteria work for man, and is now gathering more fertilizer from the air than comes from the nitrate fields of Chile and Peru.

The latest discovery of the department is as to cheap potash. This forms an important element in our fruit, tobacco and grain crops. It is about as valuable as nitrogen, and the small percentage of it in our commercial fertilizers makes them cost many dollars a ton. Potash itself is worth about $100 a ton, and we are paying out millions of dollars for that which we bring in from abroad. By this discovery we know that potash lies all around us, and that we can have it for the grinding. It is on the edge of our orchards, and it is accessible to almost every farming district. It is mixed with the granite of the hills, and that in such a way that a rock-crushing machine can get it out. All that is needed is to grind the granite to powder and let the potash loose. By this means it may be secured at a cost of a little more than 1 cent per pound, or five or six times as cheap as the price we are now paying, and that without the addition of freight. Companies are now forming in New Jersey and Maryland to grind up granite for this purpose, and, if they are successful, other plants will probably be erected all over the country.

PUTTING UP BEEF EXTRACTS.

Uncle Sam Worth $125,000,000,000.

Many people imagine that the United States is at the maximum of its prosperity. The truth is we are at the beginning. We shall make more during the next generation out of what now goes to waste, than we made a generation ago out of our staple crops. Indeed the waste of today makes the fortunes of tomorrow. This is especially so in our country. In 1870 our national wealth amounted to about $30,000,000,000, and thirty years later it had almost reached the hundred-billion mark. We are probably worth $25,000,000,000 more today, and the great part of the increase comes from by-products once classed as waste. Take the beef trust. Its big dividends come from the saving of every scrap in the refuse. If the choice cuts of the meat alone were sold, the packing-houses could not exist. They have scores of products which our forefathers never thought of from potted meats to bouillon, liquid extracts and drugs.

Indeed, the by-products of these establishments bring in millions, and a small army of scientists are kept busy analyzing the waste and making new things for man. It is said that every bit of the hog is now saved, excepting the squeal and the kick, and that not an atom of the beef goes to waste. A few years ago I visited a packing factory in Buenos Ayres and saw the blood running away in a stream. In our factories in Chicago the blood is worth $40 a ton, and is used to make albumen and other things. It is sold to printers, tanners and sugar refiners, and, as a fertilizer, it brings a big price per ton. In some of the Australia and New Zealand factories I saw the bones thrown aside. At Chicago the bones are first cooked to extract the fat and gelatine. Certain kinds are saved to make umbrella, tooth brush and knife handles, and other things in which hard bone is needed. The hoofs of the cattle are molded into ornaments, and the tips of the horns are flattened out and eventually sold as combs and buttons. The backs of brushes are made of horn tips, and some of the finest hoofs are shipped to Japan to be made into notions which are again sold in the United States.

Drugs from the Slaughter-houses.

The packing-houses are now getting big money out of chemicals and drugs of various kinds. They produce pepsin from the stomachs of pigs, and pancreatine and other digestants as well. From the calves they get a gray brain matter which is now used for nervous diseases, and is especially valuable in neurasthenia, insanity and St. Vitus dance.

One of the most important of the chemical by-products of the slaughter-house is employed in gold mining. It is a poisonous stuff, known as cyanide of potassium, which looks like alum. It comes, I think, from the hoofs of certain animals and other such refuse. This stuff has a strong affinity for gold and a certain proportion of it, mixed with water, is used to take the gold out of ground quartz. The gold goes into the liquid just like salt, and the fluid is then drawn off and the gold caught again, by running it over zinc shavings.

The bristles of the hog are saved, cattle hair is used for camels'-hair pencils, and also to make shoddy. The bile goes to the bookbinder, and the stomachs of the young calves to the cheese manufacturers.

Fortunes in Cotton By-products.

We are now making millions out of what once formed the waste of our cotton fields, and we are likely to make many millions more. The latest discoveries there are as to the fiber of the cotton plant. It has been found that it will make the finest of book paper, and the scientists predict that the stalks will be gathered for this purpose, and that a great industry will grow up in so using them.

About a generation ago the cotton seed of the United States went to waste. Today it is ground up and the oil pressed out for food and for use in manufacture of various kinds. Much of our so-called Italian oil comes from cotton seed. Our sardines are packed in it, and it is taking the places of lard and butter in cooking. It is burned for light by miners and also in cathedrals. It is used in baking, it makes excellent soap, and it is manufactured into glycerine and candles. The value of the cotton seed is said to be about one-fifth of the total value of the cotton crop. The refuse from the grinding and pressing is made into cakes and sold to feed stock, while the hulls are ground up for the same purpose.

The Papers of the Future.

Many people are now deprecating the cutting down of our forests to make wood pulp, and are wondering where we shall get our newspapers when the trees have disappeared. It takes a number of acres of forest to supply the paper for the annual issues of a large daily journal, and the sheet you are now reading was once a part of some spruce, poplar or other soft-wood tree. The forests of Canada are still vast in extent, and it will be a long time before the supply of pulp wood is cut off.

We have little reason to worry, however. The Agricultural Department is investigating certain sources of paper supply which will furnish the world all it needs for the future. One of the most important of these investigations relates to paper as a by-prodct of crop. Indian corn stalks have a fiber which every kind of paper and cardboard, and I am will be but a short time before mills will be them for this purpose. I have seen samples and cards made from Indian-corn stalks. The per comes from the outside fibers, and a lower from those within. The pith itself is already make linoleum, and also as a packing for the our gunboats. The pith is spongy, and it swells upon touching water. If a shells breaks thro armor plate of a vessel so packed, the water and the packing is soon swollen enough to hole.

A great deal of paper is now made from found in Morocco and Algeria, and it is prob the papyrus swamps of the Upper Nile will be harvested for this purpose. Between Ug Khartoum there are vast tracts of swamps, with papyrus. They lie right along the line of to Cairo road, and it may be that this will valuable. Papyrus was used to make the pape ancient Egyptians. The many scrolls of the andrian Library were written on papyrus, and will, it is said, make some of the best paper man.

Where the Buttons Come From.

One of the great questions of mankind since gan to wear more than fig leaves has been " comes of all the pins?" Another interesting to where the buttons come from. They are from waste and by-products. The packing-ho ply many made of horn and bone, and the big and can factories furnish their share. In the tories there are many little pieces of tin left shoddy we manufacture comes from Ame while Great Britain gets its rags from all world.

Cotton rags are used largely in the ma paper, while the waste of the cotton mill, short for spinning, is employed for cotton wadding. We make about 10,000,000 pound stuff every year.

Some Chinese Economies.

There is probably less waste in China other country. There are no big factories, less everything finds a use. Cloth of all kin fully saved. Old clothing is sold to seconders, and it goes from one class to another and then pasted one upon another to make

All kinds of metals are saved. There is business in China in old tin and old iron.

Why the French Are Rich.

It is similar economies which largely aid in making the French one of the richest nations of the world. Every one thought they would become bankrupt when, in 1871, the Germans compelled them to pay $1,000,000,000 in the way of indemnity. Since then they have spent millions on the Panama Canal, and are today about the wealthiest of all European nations. It is said that the French loaned about $1,500,000,000 to our capitalists during the year 1905, as well as $250,000,000 to Germany, and an even greater sum to Russia. They now hold foreign securities to the amount of $14,000,000, and more than one-fourth of this is in Russian bonds and industrials. France is said to have an annual saving of $500,000,000, and she is gradually placing this in various investments throughout the world. If she goes to war, she will soon have an interest in every national enterprise and be the world's chief creditor.

All this comes from saving the pennies and watching the waste. The average breakfast of the Frenchman costs about 2 cents, while that of the American is at least 10 cents, or five times as much. France has 40,000,000 people, and at this rate she daily spents $800,000 for breakfast, whereas at 10 cents our breakfasts cost $8,000,000. Had we the same population as France our morning meal would cost us $3,000,000 more every day than it does her, or more than $1,000,000,000 every year. A similar saving goes on as to other things, and the common people are always saving and investing. We could live on what we throw away and still, with their knowledge of cooking, have better eating than we have.

Waste.

In the matter of fuel saving also, the French are making great strides. They are using the dust of their coal mines, and making it up into bricks, or briquettes, about the size of our building bricks. Many of their railroad trains are run with such bricks, and one sees piles of them near the larger stations. In St. Etienne they are now making briquettes which are half coal dust and half petroleum, and also some which contain 97 per cent of petroleum. Petroleum bricks sell for about $15 a ton, but they have three times as much heating power as coal, and they weigh only one-third as much. They burn without odor or smoke, and will keep a long time without deteriorating.

Such briquettes are largely used in Germany and also in Belgium and Holland. The Germans make such bricks of a lignite, so poor that it would be regarded as of no value here in the United States.

HOW LINCOLN WORKED.

In Harper's for December, W. H. Crook, who was Lincoln's body guard, gives a dramatic picture of Lincoln at that time. He pictures one of the levees at the White House and then:

The levee was supposed to be over at 11, but some remained until nearly 12. After they had all left, Lincoln wrapped himself in the rough gray shawl he wore out-of-doors, put on his tall beaver hat, and went out of the White House through the basement. According to my orders I followed him, and was alone with President Lincoln for the first time.

We crossed the garden, which lay where the executive offices are now. Mr. Lincoln was bent on his nightly visit to Secretary Stanton at the War Department. I could glance up at him, at the homely face rising so far above me. The strength of it is not lessened in my memory by what would seem to me now the grotesque combination of rough shawl and silk hat.

That night, as I said, I was a little nervous. The President noticed it. He seemed to know how I felt, too. I had fallen into line behind him, but he motioned me to walk by his side. He began to talk to me in a kindly way, as though I were a bashful boy whom he wanted to put at his ease, instead of a man appointed to guard him. In part, of course, his motive must have been the dislike of seeming to be guarded, of which I have spoken; but his manner was due to the intuitive sympathy for every one, of which I afterward saw so many instances. It was shown particularly toward those who were subordinate to him. The statesmen who came to see him, those who had it in their power to influence the policy of the party which had chosen him, never had more consideration from Mr. Lincoln that he gave the humblest of those who served him.

A few strides of the President's long legs—a few of mine—brought us to the old-fashioned turnstile that divided the White House grounds from the enclosure of the War Department. Mr. Lincoln talked, in his quiet voice, chiefly about the reception through which he had just gone.

'I am glad it is over,' he said.

I ventured to ask if he was tired.

'Yes, it does tire me to shake hands with so many people,' he answered. 'Especially now when there is so much other work to do. And most of the guests come from mere curiosity.'

After these words and the half sigh which followed, we reached the east door of the War Department. In those days that was a small, mean, two-story building, like that of the Navy Department. We went immediately to Mr. Stanton's office, which was on the second floor on the north front, and overlooked Pennsylvania avenue and the White House. There, at the door, I waited for him until his conference with Secretary Stanton was over. Then I accompanied him back to the White House. From the moment Mr. Lincoln spoke to me so kindly, I felt at home in my new duties. I never lost the feeling which came then that while the President was my master he was my friend. Managing a Woman.

The Widow Tells the Bachelor How It Is Done.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHAT ought I to do," asked the widow, carefully licking all the gum off the flap of a violet envelope and then trying to make it stick, "to a silly boy, who—asked me for a kiss?"

"What ought you to do?" repeated the bachelor, laying down his cigar and regarding the widow severely. "Refuse him, of course."

"Oh, of course," agreed the widow, rubbing the envelope spasmodically with the end of her handkerchief, "but what ought I do to teach him better?"

"I can't think of anything—better," replied the bachelor, charitably reaching for the violet envelope and closing it firmly with his fist.

"How about just taking the kiss—without asking for it?" inquired the widow naively, as she leaned luxuriously back among the cushions of the divan. "Wouldn't that have been better—for him, I mean?"

"Would it?" The bachelor looked the widow straight in the eye.

"Well," replied the [illegible] kly, toying with some fringe on a satin sofa pillow and carefully avoiding the bachelor's gaze; "he would have gotten it."

"And now he never will," rejoined the bachelor with a confidence he did not feel.

"Oh, I don't know." The widow became suddenly interested in the arrangement of the fringe on the satin sofa pillow. "But it isn't the man who asks a woman for a kiss or—or anything—who gets it. It's the man who takes for granted."

"Takes—what?"

"Takes her by surprise, Mr. Travers," explained the widow, "and doesn't give her time to think or to say no. The short cut to managing a woman is not argument or reason. It's action. She may like to be coaxed, but it's the man who orders her about whom she admires—and obeys. Eve has never forgotten that she is only a rib, and when Adam forgets it, she——"

"Makes him feel like a small part of the vertebrae," interpolated the bachelor tentatively.

"Naturally," returned the widow, tying the sofa pillow fringe in a hard knot and then untying it again, "when a man comes to her on his knees she is clever enough to keep him there; but when he comes to her with a scepter in his hand and determination in his eye, she has a wholesome respect for him. It's not the man who begs but the one who demands that receives. It's not the man who asks a girl to marry him, but the one who tells her that she is going to marry him, who gets her. It's not the husband who requests the privilege of carrying a latch key or staying downtown at night who can do so without fear and trembling, but the one who calmly takes the latch key and telephones his wife that he is going to stay downtown and then rings off as though the matter were settled. The question of who's going to have the whip hand in love or matrimony is decided the very first time a man looks at a woman and lets her know who's master."

The bachelor flicked the ashes off his cigar and regarded the widow curiously.

"Are you talking Christian Science or hypnotism?" he inquired patiently.

"Neither," replied the widow, "I'm talking facts, Mr. Travers. Haven't you ever seen a little short-legged man with a snub nose married to a beautiful, queenly creature, whom he ordered about as if she were the original Greek slave and who obeyed him as if he were Nero himself, and adored him in proportion to his overbearing qualities? And have you never seen a magnificent, six-foot-two specimen of masculine humanity, who was first in war and first everywhere but in his own home, where he was afraid to put his feet on a chair or light a pipe or make an original remark, because some little dried-up runt of a woman had him hypnotized into believing that he was the thirty-second vertebrae and she all the rest of the bones and sinew of the human race? A woman is like a darky, who fancies that 'freedom' means three-quarters of the sidewalk, or a small boy who imagines that doing as he pleases means smashing his sister's toys and stealing sweets from the pantry. Put her in her place and she will stay there; but give her an inch of power and she'll take an ell of liberty and boss you off your own door sill. The biggest, boldest woman that ever lived is built like a barge, to be towed; and any little man who puffs up enough steam and makes a loud enough noise can attach her to himself and tow her all the way up the river of life."

The bachelor laid down his cigar and gazed at the widow in awe.

"And I never knew it," he whispered huskily.

"I suppose," said the widow, beginning to toy with the fringe again, "that you've been asking girls to kiss you, all this time."

"Not all the time," protested the bachelor.

"And, of course," continued the widow maliciously, "they've all refused you."

"Not at all," repeated the bachelor, pensively.

"What?" The widow glanced up quickly.

"Once," explained the bachelor apologetically, "I didn't have a bald spot."

"When a man asks for a kiss," pursued the widow, thoughtfully, "a girl has to refuse him; but when he takes it——"

"She has to take it, too," said the bachelor, chuckling.

"Would you mind," asked the widow, ignoring the last flippant bit of persiflage and picking up the violet envelope, "posting a letter for me?"

"May I look at the address?" demanded the bachelor.

"It's to the boy," began the widow, "who—who——"

"Took the roundabout way?" finished the bachelor, helpfully.

The widow nodded.

"I have written him," she explained, "that he mustn't—that it would be best if he wouldn't come here any more. That will keep him in his place, I think."

"On his knees?" inquired the bachelor sarcastically.

"And I told him," proceeded the widow, with a reproachful glance at the bachelor, "how very rude and foolish——"

"Did you explain," interrupted the bachelor, "that the foolishness consisted in not taking the kiss?"

"Mr. Travers!"

"And that the rudeness lay entirely in assuming that you might not want to be——"

"How dare you!" cried the widow, flaming as red as the scarlet satin sofa pillow behind her head. "I gave him a dreadful scolding!" she added, looking pensively at the sealed note and toying with the edge of the flap, as though she half wished it would come open again.

"In other words," remarked the bachelor laconically, "having him down, you proceeded to wipe your feet on him. Since he had turned the left cheek, you made him turn all the way round, so that you could stick pins in his back and make him feel like the thirty-second vertebrae and——"

"I had to, Mr. Travers," cried the widow pleadingly. "It was my duty."

"Your—what?"

"To teach him a lesson," explained the widow promptly. "He's got to learn that in the situation between man and woman there's only one throne, and that whoever gets up on it first wields the scepter. He's got to learn that the conquest of woman is not like the Battle of Waterloo, an affair of strategy, but like the Battle of Bunker Hill or Sennacherib——"

"Or the Boston Tea Party or the Massacre of the Innocents," broke in the bachelor. "But aren't you a little hard on the girl? If you get him too well trained he'll beat her."

"Well," replied the widow promptly, "if he does she'll adore him. Besides, it's much better to have the matrimonial medicine administered in allopathic doses than in the little homeopathic pellets of caution and deceit, and lies and arguments which end in the divorce court, and a woman enjoys being bossed and bullied and ordered about by the man she loves quite as much as he enjoys the bossing and bullying. It's her natural instinct to look up, but she can't look up to a man who is figuratively at her feet. She may struggle against the man who attempts to conquer her by main force, but she enjoys being conquered just the same, and it takes a great burden off her soul to be able to lay her head on a broad, masculine shoulder and to know that every affair in life is going to be settled and decided for her.

"She may talk about thinking for herself and voting and all that, but she is always glad enough to sit back and be thought for and voted for by some man who has magnetized her into believing him the incarnation of intelligence. And any man can do it. If the average husband only had a little more nerve and fewer nerves, he could master his wife with one hand and his eyes shut. The heathen Turk can get along better with a whole harem full of women than the civilized man gets along with one lone, lorn wife. It isn't because he's any wiser or clever or kinder, but because the first Turk learned the short cut to managing a woman and passed the secret down in the family. They don't ask them to marry them over there, they order them; they don't request them to run an errand or sew on a button, they merely wave their hands and the women fight for the privilege of obeying. They have known for ages what the white man never seems to have learned, that the way to take a woman is by storm and the way to hold her is by force and that any man can manage any woman if he only knows how and has the audacity and the courage——What are you trying to do, Mr. Travers?"

"I'm taking a short cut to the divan," replied the bachelor, sitting down beside the widow, "and I've got the courage at last——"

"How dare you, Billy Travers!"

"And the audacity——"

"Stop! Stop!"

"And the nerve——"

"Mr. Taylor," announced the maid, appearing suddenly between the portieres at this critical moment.

"Oh, mercy!" cried the widow, "and my hair is just——

"Am I intruding?" asked a fresh-faced young man, entering briskly between the portieres.

"Not at all, Bobby," said the widow sweetly, holding out one hand and feeling her back hair with the other. "You arrived just at the—psychological moment. We have been talking about you for the last half hour."

HELEN ROWLAND.

OLD POINT COMFORT.

On a line due north from the Jamestown Exposition grounds, about five miles distant across Hampton Roads, lies Old Point Comfort. It derives its name from the fact that the storm-beaten voyagers of the Susan Constant, the Godspeed and the Discovery, having put in at Cape Henry, met with a reception by the Indians which was only a variation of their troubles, and being impelled to return to their boats, they speedily reached the point of jutting land to which they gave the name Point Comfort. Here they were free from the dangers of the deep as well as from the menace of the savages, and hence the appropriateness of the name they bestowed on their asylum.

But the phase to which particularity of attention is now directed came in after years—the world-wide fame of this resort as a scene of gay festivity. The Point Comfort of the year of grace 1607 became in the latter half of the nineteenth century Old Point Comfort through the endearing associations of social revelry with historic tradition.

Philippine Development.

THIRTY-EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS TO BE USED IN THREE YEARS.

By a Special Contributor.

THIRTY-EIGHT million dollars of foreign capital will be turned loose in developing the Philippine Islands in the next three years. A vast amount of government money will also be spent in local improvements, harbor dredging, building of jetties and docks, in road-building, and in municipal and sanitary advancements.

This is not "newspaper talk." The invasion of foreign capital from concerns now interested in the islands may be summarized from official information obtained from the engineers or managers as follows:

The J. G. White Company, a constructing company, which has contracted with the insular government for 400 miles of railway on the islands of Cebu, Negros and Panay, has work now being terminated and under way aggregating $20,000,000.

There are associated with the J. G. White Company in the building of these railroads in Negros, Panay and Cebu Islands, Cornelius Vanderbilt, William Salmon & Co., and Heidelback, Ickleheimer Company, all of New York, and C. M. Swift of Detroit, Mich.

Speyer Bros., the New York bankers, who have contracted with the Philippine government for 400 miles of railway on the Island of Luzon, and who will take over and improve the existing Manila and Dagupan Railway, comprising with its branches a length of 200 miles, will spend $14,000,000.

Mr. Schuster, the Philippine manager of Speyer Bros., states that the work will proceed rapidly.

A number of mining companies on the islands of Masbata and Luzon, chief of which are the Philippine Mining Company and the Oriental Masbate Company, have already installed four stamp mills and several gold dredges of the Oroville type, and will spend $1,000,000 in developing their properties. While the Philippines are not strictly a mining country, yet in certain regions there is abundance of low-grade ore which is being profitably worked.

Among agricultural undertakings are the Philippine Plantation Company, a large tobacco and sugar concern which has already made extensive purchases of property; the International Harvester Company, which, though strictly not a planting concern, is making many improvements for the storage and shipment of the hemp it mostly buys, for binding twine, etc.; and several smaller concerns will probably spend, in the aggregate, $2,000,000.

A French company (I met the managers on the Island of Mindoro, and would be glad to give the name for the sake of definiteness if I could) and several American companies will put about $1,000,000 in modern lumbering devices to get out the valuable hardwoods.

The sum total of all these expenditures aggregates $38,000,000. This computation gets down to hardpan; it includes only a few of the larger undertakings; it does not comprise the investments constantly being made on a small scale, but which would perhaps make a decent aggregate to swell the sum total. Of course it could not include the additional capital that will doubtless be attracted by this activity, nor a number of companies whose promoters are now in the United States raising capital. It does not include the sum projected by the army in road and barrack improvements, the amount to be expended by the insular government, nor the capital that is constantly being invested by such big concerns as the Atlantic Gulf and Pacific Company. The International Harvester Company has, it is said, already spent about $5,000,000 in the archipelago. It has a large plantation on the Island of Cebu. The Atlantic Gulf and Pacific Company, a great engineering and constructing concern, has, it is believed, expended even more. The government has spent $3,000,000 in harbor work and will spend $6,000,000 more. The work of the insular government in different provinces for municipal and road improvements has already run away up in the millions, and more ambitious plans are now under way.

The significance of the investment of this large amount of capital in the Philippines rises above and beyond that of an industrial undertaking; it assumes the proportions of a huge sociological lever. If we take care not to lose sight of the ideal side of the Philippine question in a discussion of its commercial opportunities and development, and if we inquire what would be the effect of this wide distribution of money among thousands of Philippine laborers in return for useful industrial employment, we will find that, not only will the railways do more to advance the condition of the people of the Philippines than anything done by the Spanish government in their 300 years of occupancy, but they will probably be the greatest teacher toward a higher standard of living our little brown neighbors have ever had.

Some wonderful country will be developed by the Philippine railroads. The work on the lines has already commenced. In the early part of May last fifty engineers arrived in Manila to undertake the building of the 400 miles of line on the Islands of Negros, Panay and Cebu. A first shipment of 8000 tons of rails for three lines is on its way to the Philippines. This constitutes the nucleus of the surveying corps. The white men fill only the skilled positions, all minor positions being filled, to the number of several hundred, by natives. It is expected that, when the construction work is under full swing by the first of the year, from 5000 to 10,000 natives will be engaged. Negros, Panay, and Cebu, which are almost parallel and lie half way between Luzon and Mindanao, will be traversed almost their entire length by railroads. The line on Cebu will be about eighty miles long and those on Negros and Panay about 150 miles long each. These roads will open up some of the richest plantation regions in the world, where Nature has placed a veritable garden spot for the production of raw material and staple products of the tropics. Incidentally they will afford transportation facilities to more than half the people of the Philippines.

Negros is noted for its sugar, about three-fourths of the sugar output of the archipelago being raised on a narrow strip of coast extending fifty miles south of the town of Bacalod.

In Negros, also there stand vast virgin forests of commercial hardwoods. Red Lauan is the "softest hardwood" and most abundant commercial timber in the islands, which, by the way, reaches an enormous size, and is especially plentiful. The giant narra, or Philippine mahogany, and other valuable species are here found. Cebu is the most densely-populated island of the Philippines; and, if the Filipinos patronize this line as they do the electric railways in Manila and the Manila and Dagupan steam railroad, the trains generally will be crowded to standing-room only.

The line of Panay will run from the modern city of Iloilo, on the southern coast, straight through the interior of the island to Port Batan, on the north coast. Altogether the railroads will change the face of these islands as rapidly as any single industrial project undertaken by the Japanese has brought the Flowery Kingdom among the forefront of industrial nations. Even more wonderful, because vaster and more diverse in resources, is the rich territory that will be opened up by the railroad lines on the Island of Luzon. The 400 miles to be built on that island and the 200 miles of line to be improved will be links in a great chain of railroads planned to run the length of the entire island, not only with a branch extending along the northwest coast, but one extending through the rich and almost unknown interior of and down the great Cagayon Valley to Aparri.
these lines are all constructed, one will be able the "Luzon Limited" at Albay, in the southern of Luzon, and ride 1000 miles, as the road will the train pulls in to Aparri or Laoag.

One of the most important branches of the road that running from Pascacao, on the Gulf of Ragay, and across the peninsula of Luzon to Albay, on ern coast. This branch will probably include or so of line; not only will it tap an enormous belt containing the most valuable of the many of hardwoods in the islands, including Narra or pine mahogany, Tindalo, Acli, ironwood, other rare cabinet and construction woods, but open up what is without any doubt the greatest cordage-producing region in the world. The three inces to be tapped by this road, Ambos Camarines and Sorsogon, produce the greater part of the worth of Manila hemp that is annually raised Philippines, and which indeed is superior to all cordages and can be raised nowhere else than archipelago. Twenty-seven out of the thirty-five in Ambos Camarines are supported by this industry have probably no section in the United States limited an area yields so valuable a product, even the primitive method by which this product is taken into consideration. There are enormous nities for hemp-growing in this section, and it is recommended to anybody who does not mind the and who will not hit the whisky bottle too o

Other important lines are those which are Lucena and Batangas north to Manila. This tap a region producing about $2,000,000 worth nuts a year—rich in bananas, aceite (oil) and tive products. The line running north from along the west coast to Laoag will traverse the where live the Yankees of the Philippines, and industrious Ilocanos, whose soil is shallow and not producing so well as some other parts of the but from which has sprung a thrifty race.

The road projected through the interior of open up a vast mountain plateau country, whose ful possibilities and fine climate are scarce even in the Philippines. Crossing the interior to the Cagayon River, the line will enter the bacco section of the islands. As the river transportation, the railroad will be of great bringing the products of the interior to the shipment to all parts of the world.

The companies undertaking the building of roads anticipate no difficulty in securing satisfactory labor. The J. G. White Company vested about $4,000,000 in Manila street railway tric-light plants. These plants, comprising miles of street railroads in which 100 cars ation, are operated entirely by Filipino conductors. The enterprise, set in operation gan to pay dividends in 1906, on $5,000,000 stock and interest on $5,000,000 worth of success of the road is largely due to the the Filipino operatives throughout the sys membered that to operate a modern electric car in crowded streets of an oriental city, where the traffic and pedestrians are absolutely at variance and unaccustomed to so foreign an element, calls for a full measure of readiness and resourcefulness to avoid accidents. Filipino motormen have demonstrated that they possess those very qualities that cursory investigators have declared to be lacking. Mr. L. E. Bennett, right-of-way agent for the steam railroads in the Visayan Islands, who has had large experience in the Philippines, is confident that he will get all the labor he needs, although there is a good demand for skilled labor. Down on the island of Masbate there is a Philippine mining company, which has one gold dredge on the ground and two on the way. This represents the expenditure of $325,000. F. N. [illegible], engineer in charge, is working 1200 yards of [illegible] a day, averaging 42 cents per cubic yard. Through buying up deeds and titles, this company has [illegible] 400 acres of land.

The Oriental and Masbate Mining Company, a Pittsburg concern, has a dredge working that probably cost $120,000. The Eastern Mining Company has already expended $68,000 in Masbate, where they are working [illegible] quartz claims and 800 acres of placer ground. They have a five-stamp mill running, and an eighteen-stamp mill ordered. The ore is free-milling amalgamating and averages $11.40 a ton. They expect soon to have a forty-stamp mill. A twenty-seven-days average run gave $2186.

The Philippine Mining, Power and Development Company are now building a ten-stamp mill, while the Cog[illegible] Mining Company have a ten-stamp mill in process of erection. The Gold Bug Mining Company have ordered a [illegible]-stamp mill and 200 Huntington rolling mills. The [illegible] Vista Mining Company have ordered a twenty-stamp mill.

[illegible] McCoy and Capt. Sleeper have a mining lead 11½ miles, averaging $23 a ton of free-milling ore.

The Eastern Mining Company have four villages, and [illegible] eighty-seven men.

The Philippine Plantation Company have 44,000 acres in the Cagayon Valley, to which they have sent traction engines, various gang plows, improved machines, and a number of modern agricultural [illegible] that will make the natives sit up and look [illegible].

[illegible] who thinks the Philippine Islands away out of [illegible] had better sit up and take notice, because there were in the Philippines, on January 1, 1905, 22,348 miles of telephone line extending all over the archipelago and [illegible] the efficient Philippines constabulary. The government is improving Manila Harbor so that vessels drawing eighteen feet of water will soon be able to go up the Pasig River. They are putting wharves [illegible] so that vessels can tie to docks. When this is done Manila will be the only port in all the Orient where ocean-going vessels can tie up. Everywhere else cargo, [illegible] or merchandise, is dumped into sampans and carried ashore by natives.

[illegible] hundred thousand dollars is being spent in improving the harbor of Cebu, and $250,000 in the harbor of Iloilo. It is hard to get at the amount that is spent in the different provinces of the islands in improvement and building of bridges and culverts, erection of [illegible], but it probably averages close to $500,000 a year.

Manila is building up rapidly. The Building Department has issued permits for the erection of 1041 houses, constructed of strong materials, at an estimated cost of nearly $1,750,000; and for the rebuilding of 642 houses of strong materials, at an estimated cost of [illegible].

In these great works which are being undertaken in the Philippines, there are hundreds of Americans who have gone into various industries, such as hemp-raising, on a small scale through the islands. These men are not capitalists, but are recruited from former enlisted men of the army and former government employés. It is probable that the Americans who have engaged in industries in the Philippines are doing more to advance the islands industrially than any other factor. They are introducing the mills, sawmills, electric power plants, plows, steam harrows, American mules, American wagons, American wheels, American shoes and print goods, axes, rakes, spades, power plants, telegraphs, telephones, electric light, good roads, sanitation, modern methods of trade, commerce, business and everything that the inventive Anglo-Saxon would naturally introduce to civilize the frontier. The Filipino appreciates it, and the Filipino Chamber of Commerce, composed entirely of Filipinos, took the initiative recently in organizing the Philippine Commercial Progress League, which advertises the islands for tourists, capitalists, etc., and advertises their resources. Maj. William H. Anderson, a prominent merchant in Manila, is an executive officer of the League.

Concerning the coming of Americans and American capital to the Philippines, under wise and reasonable conditions, Gen. Leonard Wood told me the following, carefully authenticated interview:

"There are certainly few problems, if any, which will not disappear once the development of the Philippines is well under way and the people are at work. The problem of the Philippines is not so much one of administration as of agricultural development. The people are peaceful, quiet and easy-going; and, with an opportunity to labor and a fair market for their products, most of the so-called problems which are, in my opinion, largely due to lack of occupation, will disappear. Nothing will do more to this end than free trade with the United States. I think that the greatest benefits that we could confer on the Filipino people throughout the length and breadth of the archipelago would be to scatter through the islands a number of immigrant farmers of a desirable class, good, intelligent settlers; get them to come here and aid to develop the country. The native is intelligent and especially apt in imitating others. Let him see an American planter with American machinery; let him see the way the wife and children of the American planter live, he would quickly want many of the comforts possessed by the white man. He would see that machinery helped the other fellow and he would get it. He would see the comforts enjoyed by his white neighbor and his family, and demand that he should get the wherewithal to furnish them with a fair measure of the same. He would not be contented with the conditions heretofore known. The neepa shack and the primitive methods of cooking would disappear. It is already passing in the large towns. We want capital here in agriculture; we want it in anything that will develop the Philippine Islands. All the prosperity must come from what is grown; everything must come out of the ground or the sea."

A great era for the Philippines is at hand. Capital is going into the islands, and undoubtedly will get a good interest on investment. It will, too, help the natives; and it may here be taken, for it is a fact, that only those concerns in the Philippines which deal sympathetically and conscientiously with the people are successful in getting satisfactory labor. The American concerns which have done this have had success, where the Spanish government monopolies persecuted the people till the rifle and bolo put a mutual end to the oppression.

With the increase of money in circulation among the Filipinos as a whole, and the consequent increase in their purchasing ability, the Philippine Islands should become enormous consumers of American goods. Not only that, but the archipelago should afford a wedge for American goods into the enormous commerce of the Orient. Today we have not gotten our share of the oriental trade. Europe sells to that portion of the Orient which is in the tropics $600,000,000 worth of manufactured articles and goods annually, while the United States sells but $10,000,000 worth. Out of a possible commerce of $3,000,000,000, it is estimated that from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 could be supplied by the United States and Europe.

Coming back to the Philippines, we find 8,000,000 of people who would eat our canned fruits, wear our American shoes (the best in the world), adorn themselves with our watches and jewelry, and till their fields with our modern agricultural implements, which are nowhere surpassed. The Filipino people all wear cotton, print goods. These goods wear out rapidly, and the native is careful to have many suits of clothes or dresses so that he or she may appear clean and spotless. You seldom see a Filipino in a dirty white suit. When these people have the money and learn to use American print goods, there will never be the need to burn cotton bales, as was done several years ago in Atlanta, Ga.

Postage Stamps.

How They Are Made, How Handled and Disposed Of.

By a Special Contributor.

OF late years, the United States has dropped into the fashion of changing the designs of its marking franks more frequently than any other nation, and gradually the first republic of the new world has come to the proud position of possessing postage stamps that are more artistic than those sent out from any other country.

It is not easy to understand what an immense amount of work is necessitated by the advent of new styles in this postal currency—what with the men who manufacture the paper, the two or three thousand men and women who assist in printing and gumming the stamps, the toilers who help in transporting the new products of the printing presses, and the 80,000 postmasters and clerks who sell the stamps to the public, it is estimated that fully 100,000 persons have a hand in preparing for a postage stamp "opening."

For upward of a decade the national government has been printing its own postage stamps—that is, the work has been done at the big institution at Washington known as the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, which is a branch of the Treasury Department, and designed primarily for the printing of national currency; but the gigantic task may at any time revert to private individuals or a corporation, if a disposition is shown to do the work more cheaply than the government can do it.

Every year, the Postoffice Department advertises for bids for furnishing the postage stamps, and the Treasury Department submits a proposition in exactly the same manner as the other bidders, but the plant of the big money factory at the national capital is so perfectly equipped that the manufacture of stamps can be carried on at a cost of less than 5 cents a thousand, and apparently the bank-note companies which formerly supplied stamps have concluded that there would be no profit in the transaction at such a price.

Engraving the plates which are used in the production of postage stamps is a delicate operation. Perhaps a dozen different engravers, each an expert in his particular line, contribute to a design for a stamp that is not an inch square. One supplies the vignette, a second cuts the delicate scroll work, a third furnishes the artistic lettering, and so on. The original plate bearing a stamp design, although baked until it is almost as hard as a diamond, is never employed in the actual printing. It is much too precious for that, since, were it distroyed, it would, in all probability, be impossible to engrave a new plate that would be an exact duplicate in every delicate detail. Accordingly, the original plate constitutes a steel die, with which impressions are made on soft steel, and these latter, termed replicas, are used, after hardening, for the actual printing.

Postage stamps are printed in sheets of 400, and all the printing is done in an immense room, known as the "bee hive," containing over 300 hand presses, each requiring for its manipulation the service of two operators—one, an expert plate printer, and the other his woman assistant, whose duty it is to feed to the press the blank sheets of paper and remove them after receiving the impression. The ink is applied by means of a hand roller, and, inasmuch as the varied hues inevitably tinge the hands and faces and clothing of the workers, the immense pressroom presents a picturesque spectacle of kaleidoscopic color.

Gumming the stamps is an important process, and those persons who never moisten a postage stamp without momentary uneasiness regarding the possible presence of germs or other evils, would doubtless be reassured, could they realize the many precautions surrounding the preparation and application of the sticky stuff most familiar to the American tongue. The gumming is done by an electrical machine, and each sheet of stamps after receiving the baptism of mucilage, is carried by an endless chain, operating like a miniature moving sidewalk, through a long wooden tunnel, where the temperature is 130 degrees Fahrenheit, and from which the sheets emerge with the mucilage perfectly dry.

To meet the different conditions of the seasons of the year, the quality of the gum is changed quarterly. In winter soft gum is used, while in summer a harder grade is applied to the postage stamps, and it is highly important always to keep a sharp watch on the mucilage to insure a quality least likely to cause the sheets to stick together by reason of the dampness in the atmosphere. The mucilage is prepared in accordance with a time-honored formula, and for boiling the strange concoction there are installed in the basement of the Bureau of Engraving three giant kettles, each of which will hold fully 100 gallons.

If placed end to end, the stamps printed for the use of the American people each year would gird the globe nearly four times. Under normal conditions, between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 stamps are printed at the building during an ordinary working day of eight hours, but under stress of unusual conditions, when the great print shop has been in operation night and day, an average of over 40,000,000 stamps has been produced every twenty-four hours. Inasmuch as the average consumption of stamps at the present time is about 16,000,000 a day, the Bureau can usually more than keep pace with the transient demand; but the law requires that there shall be kept on hand, in the storage vaults at the Bureau, 100,000,000 1-cent stamps, and twice as many of the 2-cent denomination, and some care is required to see to it that this measure is not depleted.

The same manifold precautions surround the manufacture of postage stamps that characterize the printing of currency. Each sheet of stamps is counted dozens of times, during the process of manufacture, and if a single sheet is missing when the hour arrives for ceasing work, every employé of the division where it has disappeared is compelled to remain in the building until the misplaced bit of paper is found. At night the plates from which the stamps are printed are carefully checked off and locked up in great vaults fitted with time locks, the doors of which cannot be opened, the next morning unless all three of the men in charge be present, it being necessary for each to manipulate a lock of which he alone knows the combination.

Strange as it may appear, Uncle Sam, in the case of stamp manufacture, has installed an official whose duty it is to see to it that one department of the government performs properly the work intrusted to it by another branch of the government. This official is known as the stamp agent, and the United States stamp agency is, probably, in so far as the public is concerned, the least known of all the great Bureaus of the national government.

With his assistants this official exercises constant supervision to insure the proper performance, in the Treasury Department, of the big job of printing intrusted to it by the Postoffice Department. He sees to it that the paper used is of the proper quality, that the mucilage has not been spread on too thinly, that the perforations are straight, and that the dress of each new consignment of stamps is of exactly the same tint as on those which have gone before. Finally, an army of clerks in the institution attend to dispatching consignments of stamps to the American postoffices.

When an old issue of postage stamps is retired and a new series comes to take its place, there is a great conflagration in a specially-prepared furnace in the basement of the general postoffice at Washington, for here all the "left-over" stamps are cremated. Many preliminaries are gone through with, before the burning can take place; the chief task is, of course, the accounting. Uncle Sam maintains a book-keeping account with every postmaster in his service, and when an issue of stamps is called in for retirement, every bit of paper received at the postal headquarters must be counted and credited to the postmaster who returned it. Occasionally the government finds itself with a heavy stock of superannuated stamps on hand, and no chance to get rid of them. Thus, after the close of the Pan-American Exposition the "condemned" stamps which had been issued in commemoration of that show but remained unsold and were fed to the flames, had a value of over $1,000,0000.

COSTLIEST OF ALL FISH.

The fish was no bigger than a silver dollar. Its color was bright gold, and it had a beautiful bushy golden tail.

"That," said the pet-stock dealer, "is the finest aquarium fish in the world, a Chinese brush-tailed goldfish. It is handsome, healthy and long-lived, and if you were a trust magnate I'd advise you to give one to your little girl for a Christmas present.

"A good brush-tailed goldfish," he concluded, "costs $250 or $300, and some fine specimens have sold for as much as $700 apiece."

"Good gracious!" said the lady chauffeur, "that bull seems awfuly angry, doesn't he?"

"It's your red automobile, ma'am," explained the farmer.

She flushed and bit her lip.

"I know it is an old-fashioned 1904 model," she murmured, "but who'd have thought a stupid old country bull would notice that?"

Live "Missing Link."

FEMALE SPECIMEN SAID TO HAVE BEEN FOUND IN AUSTRALIA.

From a Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, December, 1906.—The recent cable from Melbourne stating that a real, live "missing link"—or perhaps we should say "missing linkess," for it is a she—has been bagged by Prof. Klaatsch at Port Darwin, Northern Australia, has been noted by government anthropologists. The discoverer is evidently Prof. Hermann Klaatsch, the German anthropologist of Heidelberg, who has come into international notice within the past few years. The only descriptive details as to the creature received here are that she is "the missing link between man and ape," and that "she has feet like hands." Prof. Klaatsch is said to have taken plaster casts and photographs of this individual, intermediate between the anthropoid ape and Homo sapiens.

If the creature really proves to be the missing link, Prof. Klaatsch is assured immortal fame, and will become more celebrated than if he had discovered the North Pole, squared the circle, found the philosopher's stone or perpetual motion. Scientists have been in earch of the missing link ever since Darwin launched his theory of evolution. They have not, however, seriously hoped to capture a live specimen. It has been generally agreed among them that when the creature is found it will be seen only in the form of fossilized bones. Dr. Theodore Gill, the eminent biologist of the Smithsonian, takes this view. When questioned on the subject, he denied the possibility of a live missing link's ever being discovered.

"The evolution from ape to man is not now in progress," said he. "The struggle for existence has crowded out all intermediate links between ape and man. The pithecanthropus, or missing link, which originally occupied the same ground with early man, did not have the intellligence to successfullly compete with man in the struggle for existence. But the ape proper continued to live in the regions hostile to man. Had the ape occupied territory necessary or favorable to man it would have long been out of existence."

However, there are some biologists who believe that a missing link might now appear on earth as a result of the phenomenon of reversion, or turning back to a primitive ancestral stock. This phenomenon is encountered in breeding experiments with both animals and plants. At any rate the region of Prof. Klaatsch's researches is regarded as a fertile field for discovering very primitive human beings. Port Darwin lies at the northernmost edge of that wild central strip of largely unexplored Australia known as northern territory. Its black heart is now penetrated by a telegraph line stretching from Adelaide, on the south coast, up to Port Darwin. If the creature was discovered at the latter port it doubtless had drifted up from the wild lands below. The aborigines living here are among the lowest order of human beings. They build no permanent dwellings, but live only in hovels. Their sole dress is a single garment, when they wear anything at all. Their hatchets are of stone, and their spears and axes of hard wood. Some of them practice cannibalism. They have no religion beyond fear of a giant believed to have been sleeping for ages and expected to some day awake and eat up the world.

Collecting Missing Link Casts.

The National Museum will endeavor to obtain facsimiles of Prof. Klaatsch's casts, unless his alleged discovery proves to be altogether the hoax of some yellow journalist of Melbourne.

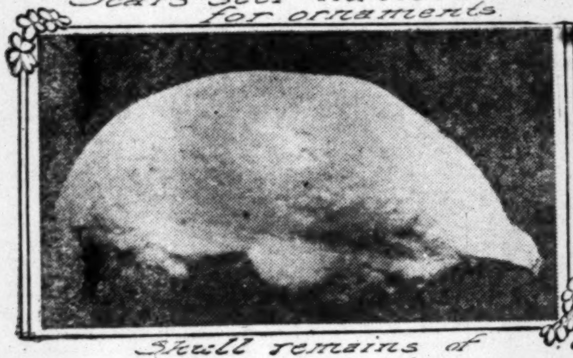
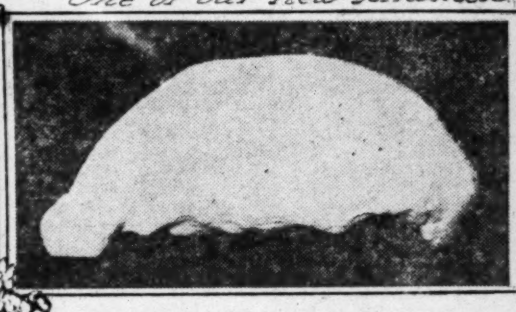
Skull-remains of man of Spy.

Anthorpoid Ape.



Skull remains of "Pithecanthropus Erectus" (Erect Ape-man)



Skull remains Neanderthal man.

The museum has been collecting casts of the skulls of creatures most nearly approaching the hypothetical missing link. One of these, in fact, is accepted by many anthropologists as being the remains of an actual missing link. This is a skull found about ten years ago by Dr. Eugene Dubois, a Dutch army surgeon and paleontologist, who dug it out of the bank of the river Bangawan, near Trinil, in the central part of Java. Only the top portion of the skull was preserved, but sufficient remained to indicate to Prof. O. C. Marsh and other anthropolgists that the original skull capacity of the creature was about two-thirds that of the average man. Yet it was considerably greater than that of the highest type of ape ever known. The arching of the top of the head is much higher and more rounded than that of any ape. While this skull has the narrowness and smoothness of man's it yet has the ape's ridges of bone ("supraorbital ridges") which hold in place the strong muscles of a jaw used in combat. Along with the skull fragment were two molar teeth and a whole thigh bone The teeth are man-like at the crown, but ape-like at the roots. The thigh bone proves by its shape that the animal walked in an upright position. Hence Dr. Dubois named the creature "Pithecanthropus erectus" or erect ape-man. The cast of this skull has been installed in the great collection of crania in the National Museum's new division of physical anthropology, in charge of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, an anthropologist, formerly of Bohemia.

Other Missing Links.

The skull of Pithecanthropus is ranked as about intermediate between that of the chimpanzee and that of man. Near its cast, in the collection, are those of the most ape-like of human skulls known to science. Two are reproductions of the skulls of the "Man of Spy," forming the nearest links to Pithecanthropus in the chain binding that creature and man. The originals were found in a cavern at Spy, Belgium, in 1886. The next most apelike skull is that of "Neanderthal Man." The cast in Dr. Hrdlicka's collection is from the original found in a cave in the Neander Valley, near Dusseldorf, in 1856. Some anthropologists have expressed doubt as to the ancient character of this skull, while others have denied that it was that of a normal human being of its period. Deformity has occasionally reproduced very similar skulls in modern times. However, at the time of its discovery it was considered less human and more apelike than any other known skull.

The links connecting this chain with prehistoric man as finally evolved are, notably, the "Man of Brux," the "Man of Podbaba," and the "Man of Cannstatt." The skull of the first was found in Brux, Bohemia, in 1871, together with an ax which seemed to belong to a later date. There has been some question as to this skull's antiquity. The second was found at Podbaba, in the neighborhood of Prague, by workingmen who said that they dug it from about two yards below the loam. As there was no scientist present to note the geologic layer in which it was found there has been some doubt as to its antiquity. The third skull mentioned was found at Cannstatt, near Stuttgart, Wurtemburg, in 1700, together with bones of animals belonging to the quarternary period of geology, in which man has generally been supposed to have first evolved from the ape form. This skull remained in the museum of Stuttgart for more than a century and a third before it was described, in 1835, and some doubt has therefore been attached to its authenticity.

When Man First Came.

By such finds as these light is thrown on the problem as to how long ago man was created, as well as upon other problems of evolution. In their study of the glacial epoch, or great ice age, naturalists have classified the earth's crust according to a time scale, denoting successively older periods the deeper the earth is dug into. The two latest great periods are known as the tertiary and quaternary, the former being the older.

Before Dr. Dubois dug up his Pithecanthrop neo, human-like skulls, including those in the above given, were found only in the quaterna latest period. In the middle of that period the glacial epoch, or great ice age, and naturalis been in a quandary as to whether man appeare during or after that time. Dr. Dubois, however, his Pithecanthropus in the dust of the tertiary which, as stated, was earlier than the quaternary

From these finds it would seem that man fi peared on earth at about the time of the dawn quaternary period and just before the great ice a when you ask geologists how long ago this was their estimates vary to a puzzling degree. a Dutch traveler of the seventeenth century, this specimen had a tail more than a yard long and exactly like that of a red cow. Dr. R. Granville Harri-[illegible] associate professor of anatomy, Johns Hopkins University, lately stated that there now inhabits the earth a tailed species of humans which he terms "homo caudatus." He counts five such cases reported from the United States and 116 cases from countries outside. He says that a child so adorned was exhibited before the Johns Hopkins Medical Society five years ago. Some opponents of the Darwinian theory regard such cases as reversions to a monkey ancestor. But this reversion extends beyond our father ape, who had no tail.

"The fact is that the larger apes have even less of a tail than man," the writer was told by Dr. Theodore Gill, above quoted: "If we ranked ourselves by the tail we would have to take a place second to that of the apes. We have four caudal vertebrae, those of these apes being broader and less defined as tail pieces than those of men."

The discovery of hairy men has, at times, given rise to report of the discovery of "missing links." In Burma there live men whose faces even are covered with hair, after the manner of Barnum's "Jo Jo, the Dog-faced Boy." But no evolutionist has ever related them [illegible] to the ape.

Missing Link Would Look.

The "missing link" was once sketched by Huxley, and the drawing was lately reproduced in his "Life and Letters." It shows a hairy, stooped creature walking by aid of a crude staff. For a vivid word picture of a typical missing link I am, however, indebted to Dr. Gill:

"In the early stage he would be bow-legged, with short [illegible] and long upper limbs. In the later stage, his [illegible] would be straighter and better developed; his arms [illegible] as short as man's. He would have considerable [illegible] on his body and between it would be seen black [illegible]. His brain cavity would be larger and deeper than the ape's, but smaller and narrower than man's. [illegible] would be more prominent than those of the average man, but less so than those of the ape, and the size of his teeth, the gaps between them and the skull ridges which hold the jaw muscles would likewise be less than in the ape, and greater than in man. [illegible] would be bridgeless and lie flat on his face. [illegible] would roll in large orbits. Over each he would probably have a prominence from which his low forehead would slope suddenly backward to form the beginning of a shallow semicircle."

In Nazareth.

A Tale of Christ When He Was Seventeen.

By a Special Contributor.

THE old Rabbi Jehudah sat at the gate of his house looking down the road. The sun had almost finished its day's work, just now gilding the western hilltops and throwing a magical color over the fertile valley. The quiet street of Nazareth did not offer much to attract the old man's attention, but he watched everything with the keen interest of one who knows that life is ebbing out and that he soon may have to leave behind him all that makes life rich and beautiful.

From the half-naked children playing in the dust his attention was drawn to the women with water jars on their shoulders going to fill them at the well.

For each one, as she passed, he had a kind word and a fatherly smile of approval, as he noticed their erect bearing and happy, contented faces. He knew them all by name. First came Martha, the wife of the sandal maker; then the old Hannah, with her handsome daughter Rebecca; Sarah and Rachel, chattering in girlish fashion, to their own mortification almost forgetting to salute the venerable old teacher.

A little later came Mary, the widow of Joseph the carpenter. Although her toga was made of the same coarse material as the other women's, she yet appeared different. The old observer could not tell just why she impressed him as superior to the others. A mysterious halo seemed to encircle her as she passed along, greeting the old man humbly and yet with a queenly air.

Rabbi Jehudah stopped her with a gentle motion.

"Still the same?" he asked.

Mary nodded her head affirmatively and a peculiar triumphant expression flashed from her generally dreaming eyes.

Meditatingly the rabbi stroked his long gray beard.

"And what is he making now?" he asked.

"A table, Master."

"But what about the scroll I lent him?"

"He knows it already by heart, Master. He said he would return it today."

"Yes, he learns quickly, thy son. I noticed that when I taught him reading and writing. He learns very quickly. Had he taken my advice he would now be sitting at the feet of the learned and wise men in Jerusalem. They would have made something great of him, but here among the Galilean hills, here will he forever remain a carpenter and nothing else."

"Master," said Mary hesitatingly, "I understand him not. At times it seems as if he thought of nothing but his work, but at other times some words of his or a look recall most vividly all the remarkable incidents connected with his birth."

The rabbi shook his head with disapproval.

"Remarkable incidents!" he said. "I am too old to believe in such tales. Also, I am waiting for Messiahs to come, but in glory and power I expect him to appear. However, I do not fail to perceive that thy son is remarkably gifted—too much so to be allowed to waste his talents in this remote corner. Where is he now?"

"I do not know, Master. At sunset he always disappears, sometimes not to return till the shadow of the night drives him home."

"Dreamer!" said the old man. And bidding Mary good evening, he walked up the street heavily leaning on his staff.

An uneven and narrow path led up to a small house surrounded by flowers and shaded by fig and olive trees. This was once the house of Joseph the carpenter, and at present was occupied by his widow and her son and his sons of an earlier marriage.

Rabbi Jehudah stopped at the gate, in order not to disturb a young man who, kneeling and turned toward Jerusalem, was absorbed in prayer. It was Jacob, the oldest of Mary's stepsons. When he at length arose, the old man greeted him with much fervor:

"God be with thee, my son! Dost thou know where thy young brother is?" came his anxious question.

"Ask the wind," said Jacob, after reverently saluting the old man. "Ask the clouds. Here he is not. As soon as the day's work is finished, he disappears, I know not where. It is not with my approval that he spends his evenings in this way, neglecting prayers and meditation. The last few evenings, however, he carried with him the scroll thou gavest him."

"It is natural at his age to dream," said the old man gently. "Remember thy brother is young, not yet 20 years old."

"He is only 17 and some months," corrected Jacob.

"Seventeen! Is that all? The age at which life is full of play and joy."

"But not for him. In tears I have seen him often, but laughing or even smiling, never."

"Hast thou never seen him smile?" asked the rabbi, astonished. "What burden weighs on his mind, thinkest thou?"

"I know not," said Jacob. "Oh, Master, ask me not about my brother! We love each other greatly, and me, the head of the family, he obeys, but I do not understand his inner being."

"What way did he go this evening?"

"As usual, up into the mountains. But do not try to find him—the path is steep and dangerous."

With a courteous greeting, Rabbi Jehudah crossed the road and, without heeding the warning, climbed the rough hill with uncommon vigor for a man of his age.

From the top he enjoyed the extensive view of the valley—on the south slope, Nazareth; to the east, Tabor in solemn majesty; to the west, the top of Mount Carmel; and still further west, a glimpse of the Mediterranean, just now absorbing the last rays of the sun. At the eastern horizon, the full moon rose simultaneously.

Disappointed in not finding the one for whom he was looking, Rabbi Jehudah sat down, meditating, as his custom was, over his people's uncertain future.

"Oh, Jehovah," he whispered, "have pity on Israel's need and oppression! Thou Eternal, send the promised Savior from on high, the King, the Messiah who is to lead our armies, and with sword and fire conquer our enemies and reign over them! Oh, Jehovah, hearken to my prayer!"

From his absorbing thoughts he was suddenly awakened by a young and sonorous voice. The song came nearer and nearer. Clearly it sounded now the Psalmist's words:

"The Lord is my Shepherd,
I shall not want."

There he came, the youthful figure. Slowly, but with light steps, he moved forward, kingly but reverent in his bearing. In one hand he carried the scroll, in the other some lilies. As he came in view, the old man rose and, stepping forward, said:

"Well met, my son. I rejoice to hear thee sing the holy words. Song is becoming to young lips—in times of joy as well as in times of sorrow."

The youth answered with a reverent bow.

"I see thou carryist the scroll. Hast thou read it?"

"From beginning to end, Master."

"And hast thou understood the prophecies?"

No answer came, but a glance from the deep, dark eyes seemed to say: "I know their meaning, but not as thou dost."

"My son, the twilight has overtaken us. Wilt thou help thy old friend down the steep path?"

The old rabbi rested his hand on the shoulder of the youth, who turned aside the branches, carefully leading the way.

"Thou art sure-footed, and thy arm is strong, though thou seemest frail and of little strength."

"Those who lean on me shall not stumble," came the answer, in a mild but majestic voice, which the old rabbi did not understand. Jehudah tried again to persuade his former pupil to go to the Holy City, there in the temple to listen to the words of wisdom from the learned men of Jehovah.

"Venerable Master," said the youth, "my time has not yet come."

With a noticeable tone of irritation Jehudah said:

"For what art thou waiting? The days slip by, year is added to year; soon youth is gone, and with it the time for studies."

No answer came, only the sudden support by the strong arm just in time to save the old man from stumbling.

"Thanks, my son. The road is even now, thy house is near by, and I shall find my way alone. Thanks, and farewell."

"At thy gate I will leave thee, Master, and return the scroll."

Quietly they walked through the city, approaching the children still playing at the roadside. Forgetting to salute the old man, the children surrounded the youth, clinging to his garment, happy to feel the touch of his hand on their heads.

"Oh, is this flower for me?" said a little girl, receiving from his hand a beautiful lily. "I thank thee so much!"

For all of them he had something—stones bright in color, quills in many hues, delicately-tinted shells, different kinds of fruits and berries. "Where does he carry it all?" mused the children, between themselves.

"Hast thou not anything for me?" asked a little pale boy who stood behind the others. And in answer a cluster of mountain grapes dropped in his outstretched hand.

With glee and thanks the children hastened home to show the mothers their treasures. Only the little pale boy lingered, as if waiting for something.

"Art thou not satisfied?" asked the youth.

"Oh, yes, yes! I thank thee. But I cannot eat the grapes. I am ill and cannot play." The child caught the hand of his benefactor, looking up to him in childish admiration.

"What is thy wish?" asked the youth, drawing the child closer to him.

"Nothing—only let me stay with thee," came the whispered answer.

At this a smile spread over Jesus's face, a smile that, to the old rabbi, seemed like a burst of sunshine, encircling and overspreading the whole universe in the stillness of the falling night. It seemed to him the light of moon and stars faded in this smile, the brightness of which gave him a vision of eternity.

"Take my gift," said the youth, gently kissing the child. "Not now, but later on, thou shalt be with me."

A warm color spread over the child's face. The lusterless eyes glowed with a brightness reflected from Jesus's smile.

"I feel quite well now," said the boy. "Was it not so late, I would like to play."

"Go home speedily, child. Chilly winds sweep from the mountains. No doubt thy mother is anxiously waiting for thy return."

At the gate of Jehudah's home, the young man returned the scroll with many thanks.

"Some day I shall be able to show my gratitude for thy kindness, Master."

"Jehovah's blessings rest upon thee, my son," were the old man's parting words.

Long after the slender figure had disappeared up the road, Rabbi Jehudah was still standing at the gate saying to himself:

"What a smile! Did it signify anything? It was like sunshine, only much brighter. Not that he can be the Promised One—but such must be the smile of the Lord's Anointed when He comes." SIGRID RUTH.

A Pest of Bears.

THE MOUNTAIN STATES SUFFERING FROM TOO MUCH BRUIN.

By a Special Contributor.

"WANTED—a bear hunter." This is the call that is going up from the Rocky Mountain States. From New Mexico to Montana have come reports of unprecedented depredations of bears this fall. Stockmen and ranchers have lost many thousands of dollars owing to the boldness of bears in breaking into corrals and making way with the choice of flocks and herds. Cattle and horses have been struck down and devoured on the open range, and Mr. Bruin has gone fat and well fed to his long sleep during the winter of 1906-7.

In some localities there are giant grizzlies whose death will bring down the blessings of the community on the head of the slayer. An instance is that part of the Rocky Mountain range where Idaho, Montana and Wyoming meet. Here, on the edge of Yellowstone National Park, dwells a giant grizzly called "Old Boxer," who not only spreads death and destruction among flocks and herds every year, but who has a record as a man-killer. Three men have fallen before the fierce attack of this giant grizzly—Bob White, a cowboy, who was killed seven years ago, and John Jorgenson and Charles E. Smith, who were killed a year ago.

"Old Boxer" has chosen his retreat with a cunning that seems something more than mere animal instinct. After making a raid he retreats into Yellowstone Park. No game can be killed in the government's great game preserve, so "Old Boxer" is safe from pursuit. Then he returns to some ranch bordering on the park, and the despairing farmer finds bloody evidences of the great bear's visit. "Old Boxer" is one of the mightest of grizzlies, and has been shot at times without number. He has been hunted with dogs, but bowls the hounds over like nine-pins. The three human victims on his list have all been terribly mangled, showing how mighty are the muscles of this giant grizzly. Every bone in the bodies of the hunters was crushed, either by terrific hugs or by blows from the great paws, any one of which would have broken the neck of a bull.

A little while ago a wealthy Englishman, Robert Tregarthen, whose favorite pastime is bear hunting, announced that next season he would return to the hunting ground where "Old Boxer" holds forth, and would devote months, if necessary, to running down and slaying the man-killer. The residents in that wild part of the country, used as they are to killing all kinds of big game, hesitate to follow the spoor of "Old Boxer." The great grizzly has come unscathed through so many combats, and has wreaked such terrible vengeance on hunters whose first shot fails to find a mortal spot, that the most hardened guide and hunter gives "Old Boxer" a wide berth.

John Goff, probably the greatest bear and mountain lion hunter in the country, who won fame by guiding President Roosevelt through the big game section of Colorado, has moved to Gardiner, Mont., the entrance to Yellowstone Park. Goff has a contract with the government to clear the park of mountain lions, which have been declared a nuisance owing to their killing of deer. It is possible that Goff will also be given a contract to rid the park of some of its most troublesome bears, including "Old Boxer." Bears have increased more rapidly than any other animals in the park, and they are growing to be a menace to tourists. If Goff is told to rid the park of its troublesome bears, "Old Boxer" may as well consider his death warrant signed. Goff has the greatest pack of dogs in the country and is a hunter who has emerged victorious from many contests with man-killing bears. In the meantime, unless Tregarthen kills him, "Old Boxer" will continue to leave death and destruction in his wake.

Ranchers in Central Colorado have not yet ceased rejoicing over the killing of "Old Mose" a year ago. This grizzly was the largest ever killed in Colorado. He had lived a life of slaughter and carnage for many years. He would kill a steer with one blow of his paw and then drag the animal to some convenient place, where he would finish his meal. He carried many bullets in his body, but they never seemed to bother him in the least. Although he had no men on his list of victims, "Old Mose" had given many a hunter a great scare and had kept several treed all night. Finally, he was laid low by a well-directed shot that pierced his heart, and ranchers for miles around wanted to decorate the bear hunter with a medal of honor. It is estimated that "Old Mose" alone had caused $5000 worth of damage among stockmen and ranchers.

The increase of bears in the western country is explained by the fact that bear hunting is not a sport to be taken up by anybody who is stout enough to "pack" a rifle. It requires considerable courage to face an oncoming bear and plant a bullet in exactly the right spot. The average bear is inclined to go his way and let the men go theirs, but if he is wounded he will never stop until the fight has gone to a finish. This is true, especially of grizzlies. The grizzly bears of Colorado and New Mexico are of a smaller type than the genuine old "hump-back and shovel-nose" of Montana and Northern Wyoming. Only occasionally do they grow to tremendous size. But the Montana grizzly is the mightiest of his kind. One of these bears will run for rods with a bullet in his heart, and, even when mortally wounded, will retain enough strength to kill his antagonist or chase him to a friendly tree.

This fall the best record at bear hunting, made by an outsider, was that of "Charley" Gates, son of John W. Gates. In a few days' hunting near Creede, Colo., Mr. Gates got five great bears. His guides unite in pronouncing him the best bear hunter that has struck the West in recent years, not even excepting President Roosevelt. But while a few hunters display courage and coolness, to say nothing of the necessary skill with the rifle, the majority of them will go all to pieces when facing a bear. Men who hunt all other kinds of game without a trace of "buck fever" will get a veritable ague of nervousness when it comes to the critical moment in a bear hunt. That is the reason there are so few hunters trying their luck in the Rocky Mountain States, and why the bears have shown such a r increase.

It is believed that, if the destruction of prope tinues, the Rocky Mountain States will have bounties for bears and mountain lions, as in the coyotes and wolves. The coyote and wolf b resulted in the creation of a class of professio hunters, known as "wolfers," who spend all th trapping and shooting these pests. A bear bounty create a similar class of bear hunters and w decrease the number of grizzlies that are now despair to western ranchmen.

STRANGE SCENES AT MIDNIGHT IN A BURMESE JUNGLE.

By William Edgar Geil, F.R.G.S.

AFTER a journey of 3300 miles across China from Shanghai to Bhamo, which means "the city of pots," I made my way down the Irrewaddy River to Mandalay and thence to Rangoon. On reaching Burman territory, I began to hear strange stories of one San Ye, a native-born Karen prophet, who was alleged to have been converted to Christianity and to have performed almost unbelievable feats in building great structures in the jungle. That he had actually been given a grant of 30,000 acres of land by the government I early learned was true. This made me think it would be worth while to gratify my curiosity, which it was great and growing, and to plan a visit to this wonderful man; for I reasoned that if all reports of his doings were true he must be one of the greatest men of the age among dark-skinned native races.

I started on the trip from Rangoon, which is the metropolis of Burma. It is a typical oriental city, although it shows traces of the transforming influence of the British. Many oriental religions are represented among the people, as are several Christian sects. Of all Protestant bodies, the American Baptists have been longest on the ground, and have their work best in hand. They have a college with over 500 students, mostly intelligent young people. As to the sacred pagoda which the traveler sees when approaching on steamer, it is unnecessary for me to write. When I was there it was being recovered with gold at fabulous expense. It is expensive, and sacks its devotees of much-needed rupees.

The train to take us the first stage of our journey to San Ye left Rangoon at 6:20 a.m. Soon after leaving the station we passed a Burmese graveyard, where several Slaves of the Dead. They are the grave-diggers and are outcasts. They are not permitted to marry with others, and their children are not allowed to attend school with other children. This is the approach to the caste system I have seen in Burma. When a body is burned these people perform the gruesome task. Their support is derived from the of the dead and the priests. For clothing they the bodies, and sometimes they have been known to take a body out of its coffin, clean the boards and sell them. The underlying reason for burning a body is to witchcraft. During the process an interesting prevails. When the legs are gone and the in the skull it is stirred with a bamboo. If the burns completely, the conclusion is that no witchcraft has been practiced, but that the deceased died a death.

o'clock we left the train to start into the jungle, for a place where we had heard San Ye was then found. After dinner at the village of Four Holy Fig Trees I visited a large mill owned by San Ye and hulling rice with which to feed the vast crowds, many thousands, who sometimes remain for at his meetings. I here learned that when the prophet gave up his necromancy, soothsaying and other antics belonging to the profession of false among the Karens he changed his name, making it San Ye. His earlier name meant "Money," and accounts he made the heathen pay well for his when he also was heathen. But the new name "Living Water," which every Bible student will as having a sacred significance. I may say that San Ye owns nothing but a yacht which is at the disposal of the missionaries. Everything is held in trust by native Karen trustees for work.

Four Holy Fig Trees we took ox carts and had a weary, dusty ride. I walked and rode until 9 at stopping for tea at a miserable shanty. The who waited upon us was a heathen, and wore . She had a solitary garment about twelve . Here we prepared our firearms, for tigers numerous and active.

The ox-cart jaunt was continued, we not knowing that we were then off the track. For two more hours we wandered about, lost at midnight in the jungle. The tigers scented us, but we were not molested. I suggested that as we did not know the road we stand still. The driver of my cart shouted into the jungle, and imagine our surprise when there came an answer. Two ox carts drove up, manned by natives who directed us on our way. I was almost dying of thirst and looked into the strange cart in hope of finding water. Instead, I received from the active ox a terrific kick on my left knee joint. It pained dreadfully. A native began to doctor me, native fashion, by pulling the sore leg and making the pain all the worse. Fortunately, we were carrying two dozen bottles of linament as a present for San Ye. This helped me amazingly. It was after midnight when we reached the prophet's place, and I was carried into the house and dropped on a mat on the floor. In the dim moonlight I could descry the outlines of the prophet's monster building in the jungle. Now my faith in the man increased. To find such structures in the jungle compelled one to consider their building as a man of gifts.

At half past 5 I awoke, because the prophet had come to have a talk with me before the gathering of the multitudes, for when we had arrived at midnight he had dispatched runners calling the people together for a service at 9 o'clock. San Ye is of medium height, rather light weight, a vegetarian and an intense man. He impressed me as one likely to have influence with an audience. An intelligent face on which emotions played rapidly. Modest in manner, and dressed in white with a white handkerchief about his neck. We shook hands and sat on the floor. A man entered with soda water. This is made on the place to give to the crowds at the monster missionary meetings. Then the prophet, lest he forget it, gave each of us ten rupees to pay our expenses, because three missionaries had come with me. He is so pleased to see them that he invariably pays their expenses. I noticed hundreds of doves flying about. These the prophet likes because in the scriptures they are the emblem of the Holy Spirit. The heathen natives say he understands the language of the doves, and that they tell him secrets.

A BURMESE OX CART.

At 9 o'clock a crowd had gathered that seemed to have sprung by magic out of the waste of the jungle. The men and women attending were well dressed. San Ye would not sit on the platform, but on the lower step. He is a humble man. This was no shoddy building in the jungle. It was built of timber, contained rooms for day schools and Sunday-schools, and cost 60,000 rupees. There are teaching and religious services every day. A fine upright piano occupied a place on the platform.

The speaker told the hearers that they might have their sins forgiven and their hearts made white. The word "white" powerfully moved them. The Karens have a legend in which they all believe. They call it a prophecy. They, as heathen, have no literature. The nations about them have books, but the Karens none. On one side were the Chinese with their works of Confucius; around about the Burmese with the Pali writings of the Buddhists; beyond them the Vedas. Other people jeered at the Karens for having no sacred books. In reply they would say that their book was to come, and it would be a "white book." They were to hear of a black book, but that would not be for them. A red book would come, but not for them. But when the white book came they must accept it. They now believe that the Bible is the white book.

The prophet was asked to speak to the audience, and made a few remarks about these three books. He had a mighty grip on the audience. The people listened breathlessly, and when he ended there was a sigh as of relief from severe tension. He then placed a silver vessel on the platform, filled it half full of water, and told the people that if they wanted to give anything for the gospel to come forward and put it in the water. To my amazement, they literally crowded forward, putting 125 rupees in the silver vessel. I afterward asked San Ye why he took the collection in water. He made the shrewd reply that "money is hot and needs cooling off." He has built several of these huge buildings, and has raised close to 500,000 rupees from heathen sources for Christian purposes. At 12 o'clock there was another meeting, larger than the first, and when it became very warm the prophet took off his shirt!

I had an interview with San Ye, and here are some of the things he told me. "In the beginning I was a black-headed man—heathen. My understanding was slight. I sought a way in Gaudama. Whatever the priests told me to do I did with all my might. I built a monastery, several pagodas—one of brass still stands. While building the pagodas I fasted six days, but got no peace. I gave up Buddhism when I heard the teaching of the 'White Book;' then I got peace. For two years I pulled both sides. I was measuring things. I lived in a tree house twenty feet above the ground, for no other reason than that it was cooler. Then I gave myself entirely to the Lord. Put it down that I am working for the Lord, and that is enough for any man." The prophet owns no land, and is humble. But when he announces two weeks of meetings more than 10,000 will gather to hear him. A day with San Ye in the jungles of Burma is worth while.

THE KAISER'S FAMILY AT CHRISTMAS TIME.

Christmas is always celebrated by the Kaiser strictly en famille, says Wolf von Schierbrand in the December number of Lippincott's. The Empress keeps a special memorandum book in which, year after year, are noted down the presents made to every member of the imperial household (no matter how high or humble), as well as to friends and relatives. The careful study of this little book causes Her Majesty, for weeks before the actual festival season, no little thought and anxiety; for duplication must be avoided at all hazards, and the special wishes of each consulted, as far as possible, while valued old servitors must, of course, be specialy considered. In her small, dark, brougham the Empress nearly every day drives from store to store, making individual purchases.

For the higher officials, relatives, etc., jewelry, watches, sleeve links, and other trinkets serving for personal adornment are presented, for the Kaiser believes in things of permanent value and capable of constant use. In this connection it may be said that it has occasioned some sarcastic comment that of late years he has quasi-established a rule by which a large percentage of the above-named category of gifts has taken the form of twenty-mark gold pieces set in diamonds in the shape of a brooch (for ladies), and ten-mark gold pieces similarly encrusted for sleeve links (for gentlemen), but it is to be presumed that there were good reasons for making such an innovation.

Then there is a medium-sized tree for the Kaiser and the Kaiserin, and a small one for each of their children—all in a row, with a plethora of gifts beneath. For days previous the Muschelsaal has been forbidden ground for the children, even for the darling of the family, Princess Victoria Louise, now a tall, slender girl of 13. They, the brothers and sister, have been playing hide-and-seek with their own gifts (all purchased out of their by no means extravagant allowance of pocket money), and now the happy moment has arrived to bring them out.

The Kaiser makes it a rule always to include in his gifts to his family some article (generally of slight intrinsic value) which contain a lesson or adorn a tale; often these are whimsical and give rise afterward to pleasantries within the imperial family. The sons of the Kaiser are: Crown Prince William, born May 6, 1882; Eitel Fritz, born July 7, 1883; Adelbert, July 14, 1884; Augustus William, born January 29, 1887; Oscar, born July 27, 1888; Joachim, born December 17, 1890; and the only daughter, Victoria Louise, was born September 13, 1892; thus all of them are fast getting beyond the childish stage, to the intense vexation of their mother. Nevertheless, the Christmas traditions of their childhood are still kept up, and even the Crown Prince, though now a young benedict, at the Bescheerung is treated and behaves like a youngster.

THE BEREAVEMENT.

Pallid and trembling, the grief-stricken wife met her husband at the door.

"She is gone!" came the wail from her set lips.

The man's face blanched, and he reeled as if from a heavy blow. Half dazed, he sank into a chair.

"Gone!" he echoed vaguely.

"Gone," repeated the wife, with a brave effort at self-control. "Oh, what shall I do without her! I had learned to lean upon her so, she was so much to me, and now——" Her courage forsook her quite, and she burst into tears.

Her husband drew her to him.

"Don't weep, dear heart," he said tenderly. "Tell me about it. I had feared that it might happen, but the blow has fallen so suddenly."

The wife raised her head, her eyes flashed fire.

"How did it happen?" she reiterated in a changed voice. "Why, that cat of a Mrs. Jenkins offered her $5 a week and no washing or ironing. So of course Bridget jumped at it, and left without notice."

And the man sighed heavily, for he knew that for him it meant a weary round of intelligence offices.—[Lippincott's.

EXORBITANT PREMIUMS.

"What would you think of a 99 per cent. premium?" said an insurance agent. "A premium of $99,000 on a $100,000 policy. Hardly worth taking out, eh?

"Such a policy was once taken out, though, on a ship thought to be lost. It is a common thing, on overdue ships, to take out policies at 80 or 85 or 90 per cent.

"On the Bulgaria and the Croft, in 1899, policies at 90 per cent. were taken out, and on the Adelaide Mary, even after two of her lifeboats had been picked up, a policy of 92 per cent. was issued.

"Insurance is gambling, and there is no risk the companies won't take if you'll give them odds enough."

A CHRISTMAS COMPLIMENT.

"I am looking," she said, "for a really nice Christmas present for a young man."

The jeweler held a silver mirror up to her pretty face.

"You couldn't do better than this," he murmured, with a significant smile.

Passing of Pontchartrain.

DESOLATION NOW WHERE WAS ONCE A RESORT FOR THE RICH.

By a Special Contributor.

GONE with the other attractions of the Crescent City that have failed to attract since Miami and Palm Beach, and more latterly, Southern California have come upon the scene, is Lake Pontchartrain.

Desolate today are the wharves and the levees about this little waterway; stilled is the voice of the canoeist, gone is the water lover, to pastures new.

Away back in the days of that South of which Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote, Pontchartrain was famous for its villas. The rich, the ultra-fashionable, hied them to its shore. Now, in the summer, still there are villas, but they are poor, indeed, in comparison. In fact, one who takes the jaunt today to Pontchartrain is forced to recall again and again, how its glories have vanished.

There is one car for negroes, and another, with open-back seats only, for whites. The horse car of a Lexington turf man is attached, for variety's sake. Three little creole boys, 8, 10 and 11, going to spend the afternoon at ball, out at the Lake, are your only companions en route. The fare is cheap—only 15 cents 'round—so that, judging from the talk of the boys, the very poorest make it their excursion place. French-like, the youngsters exhibit the sou mother has given them to spend, and the little bottle of claret for "refraishment."

You pass out through the old part of the town, and, meantime, you interview the conductor. Today there are camps all along the Lake in the summer; but the campers, are they the élite? He shrugs his shoulders.

The old Southern places along the route are giving way to smaller, prettier, cheaper ones. Ladies are sewing on a bench in the gardens, children are playing about. The railroad takes the center of the street, and to right and left, are cheap homes in more gardens. Once this section was the famous Elysian Fields. Even now there are fig orchards in some of the gardens that recall the car ride to Versailles.

After that, the way is as it was in the olden time. Out French name, is it not? There are a few shops fishermen, and one great long pier, with the track built out on it. To right and left of this piers, set upon piles, which, in their turn, stand great iron pipes in the Lake. Little camp-houses built on these piers, out over the water, these in numbers. One and all of them are of frame, has been given a fanciful name. Below, in the skiffs repose. Everything is closed now for the ter. A lone fisherman, mending his nets, is the tige of life here.

The piers in Lake Pontchartrain.

Along the shore.

You take the car—Carondelet is the name—as of yore out through the old French quarter, now sadly fallen to decay. On the overhanging iron galleries negresses squat, their sunbonnets sheltering them from the warm mid-winter rays. One-story houses wear an air of neglect, and there, too, the darky's bandanna is ubiquitous. Doors and windows have modern wood shutters now, and only here and there, behind French-looking walls, is there left a bit of garden. More and more foreign does the section become, and then, of a sudden, the car is in a lawn, in the street center, riding through an aisle of sycamore trees, with the street of old-fashioned wooden blocks each side, and then old homes, typically Southern. You are going back a half century with each square on this route.

Even the heavy, old-fashioned walls are left about the gardens here, for the wistaria to climb about. Stately Southern dames are superintending the spring planting, while a darky does the work. It makes you think of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," again and again, and then again, in turn, of France. Somehow or other you have seen just such galleries, looking into just such gardens between Bordeaux and Paris or Boulogne. Here and there, too, there is a burying ground, walled about, as in France, and even the mint, down in this section, has a rather foreign air.

Narrow streets are bending off at angles as in the city, and laundry is hanging thick from the lines drawn to protruding poles. Old wooden pumps stand at the curb, with water gushing free, and there are signs "sold by auction" that indicate foreign make.

By and by you are at the end of the car line, the depot for the Pontchartrain trains. Once you might have found gathered here all the élite of the South. Today the place is lone and deserted.

through the swamps, where the blue iris rises from the dark brown water, and there are clumps of fan palms and sedges. Occasionally there is a dead, bearded tree out here, or else some young fresh fern, grown to three heights. Endless and weird are these swamps, and you recall once more "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Here and there there are fishermen in these swamps, catching the crayfish, or placing outstands (marked by red ribbons, to enable them to find them.) and on these, then, at night, fires are set to attract the frogs.

Here and there there is drained land, between the swamps, and one sees pretty homesteads. In the gardens are wells, with the toll-pole arrangement, that takes you back to Normandy and Gaulios. Then fields of the fleabane and similar flowers, intersperse. At one place there is a crowd of girls, one and all wearing sunbonnets, off on a day's lark. The Jewish cemetery is not far beyond, with a wall as around the graveyards of France. Then there are more of the slow, rippling swamps, with the occasional dead snake, and, by and by, you are at the end, the old "park," reminiscent of other days, at New Orleans. A great two-story summer resort this, now, with shutters at the doors and verandas about, but given over to frog catchers and fishermen.

Just beyond is the Lake, almost silent. You do not want to be disillusioned just yet. You back-track perhaps a mile to get some pictures of the bayous, and the track in the heart of the swamp. They, at least, are as was the way to Lake Pontchartrain in ante-bellum times.

Then, slowly, you plod back to the Lake. From the beach you can make out the very dim opposite shores. Here on this bank some summer cottages peer out among the trees. Closed, however, they now are, one and all.

Hereabouts was what is known as Muhleburg—old waters. This is connected by a side pier to the home, which is likewise built out in the water.

The whole prospect is desolate and lone. regretfully, a moment—then pass on.

It isn't the same old Pontchartrain you find.

PEDRO ALVARADO AND HIS RAPID RISE TO WEALTH.

By a Special Contributor.

DURING a recent trip through Europe, I was surprised to see articles in magazines and papers everywhere regarding Pedro Alvarado—even in remote Norway. All these articles were for the most part greatly exaggerated; and when I visited Parral recently it was my privilege to meet the famous peon multi-millionaire and inspect his palace. From himself and others who have known him for a lifetime I learned the true story of his romantic rise from poverty to great wealth.

Pedro Alvarado was born in Parral, about thirty-six years ago, of hard-working and honest parents, of very moderate means. Like many others of his class, Pedro's father came into possession of mining claims, which could be had at that time for the small cost of denouncing them, in the vicinity of Parral, where today it is all but impossible to find any virgin territory within a radius of many miles of the great mining camp. The claims denounced by the elder Alvarado had been worked from time to time by the antiguas, and later by the Spaniards, and deserted again and again before they came into possession of the present owner by inheritance from his father.

Pedro passed his childhood in and about Parral, and acquired some education from the common schools, which he used to good advantage. He is by no means the ignoramus that he has been painted. He worked in various mines, like others of his class, and no more than seven years ago his name was entered on the payroll of a Parral mine for 75 cents a day. After the death of his father he continued to work in the shaft of the Palmilla mine, taking out a little low grade ore and selling it to the local buyers for money with which to prosecute work in the mine, full of faith in the future of the little hole in the ground. It was through no special knowledge of the geological formation of the ground that caused the elder Alvarado to denounce the Palmilla. It was luck, pure luck, that intangible something the "success" magazines scoff at, and the existence of which the financial writers tell us does not exist. But here is the living truth of the old maxim that "better to be born lucky than rich," for had Alvarado been born rich, he might, like so many of his class, have dissipated his wealth and passed his old age in poverty. No, he has worked for his fortune, first of all, and then the luck came in the shape of a great bonanza just when he was almost discouraged and had offered the mine to his creditors for a sum of about [illegible] Mexican money, over the amount of the indebtedness.

The first few tons of ore that were sold from the strike paid off his debts and left a handsome balance with which to prosecute work; and the ore grew richer and richer as depth was obtained, until Pedro Alvarado, the peon, had more money than he knew what to do with. He enriched the members of his family, and the family of his wife, for whose brother he built a very beautiful house, and whom he made the manager of the Palmilla mine. But there was soon an open rupture between the brothers-in-law, due to the extravagance of Griensen; and after the death, about two years ago, of Pedro's wife, her brother was ousted from the management of the mine. Since that time Pedro has given the property his personal attention, and the profits have been enormous, despite the fact that the pumps were inadequate to handle the large volume of water in the lower levels, and the mine was not worked to its full capacity of ore production. Under the management of a good American engineer the Palmilla would undoubtedly double its output. In the year 1905 Pedro Alvarado sold to one ore-buying company alone ore amounting to $2,200,000, of which it is said that at least one-third was clear profit. Really no one but the owner knows what the annual output amounts to, and he is extremely reticent. Although the great wealth-producing mine has always been the subject of gross exaggeration, it is certain that the Palmilla has paid its owner a clear profit of over two million dollars a year for the past five years, and that is enough for anybody. He has refused to sell it for [illegible] millions, gold.

Though generous to his old friends to a fault, and giving largely to various charities, Alvarado is no spendthrift. He has invested large sums of money in real estate in Parral, and now owns probably one-fourth of the thriving town. He has erected a fine hotel of marble and stone, which he is furnishing magnificently, and he owns several large and well paying ranches. He has established a free hospital for the poor, and remodeled and enlarged a church building, and it is here that all the fashionable weddings are celebrated. He is a very quiet, unassuming man, and one of his near neighbors told me that he had seen Alvarado but twice in three years. He lives happily in the great house, with his three children, two boys and a girl, going to the mine two or three times in the week, at an early hour and avoiding publicity as much as possible.

The Palmilla mine is situated about five miles north of Parral, and is only about four pertenencias, or ten English acres, in extent. It is a "blow-out," or core of an ancient volcano, probably, and the ore is fabulously rich, whereas the ore of other adjacent mines has not proved to be above the average grade of the Parral district. The property is well equipped with improvements, with large pumps, and an aërial tram is being built to deliver ore to the agency in Parral. This would have been done long ago by an enterprising American miner, but Alvarado has hitherto been content to have the ore packed by burros, in order to give work to many poor people, at a cost of transportation far more expensive than delivering by tram would be.

It is a sight worth traveling far to see, when, as on every Saturday morning, hundreds of mendicants gather around the palatial home of the peon multi-millionaire to receive alms, which are distributed to all who ask. Large sums are spent, too, by the benevolent mine-owner on feast days for fireworks and other amusements for the common people.

Don Pedro's house is built of marble and stone, and stands on the left bank of the Parral River. The approach is through narrow streets, and small houses stand cheek by jowl with the palace. On the spot where the great house stands, it is said, Pedro first saw the light of day, and it was here and no place else that he would build his palace, as is customary with Mexicans of his class. The facade is simple but elegant, and well proportioned. The stone carving is very beautiful and harmonious. The central door opens into a spacious pátio, the most beautiful feature of any Mexican house. The stone pillars and Corinthian capitals, and the keystones of the arches are exquisitely carved. This is the work of native laborers, who have an unerring taste for the beautiful in such material; but alas, one cannot say so much for many of the paintings in the corridors, which are impossible landscapes, silly milkmaids, incongruous angels, etc., in the worst possible taste, by "artists" from various parts of Mexico. The onyx stairway and the iron railing are handsome, and the carving in the upper corridor is as beautiful as that below. The dining-room is at the back of the second story, and furnished in light oak, all made in San Luis Potosi, as is most of the furniture in the other rooms. There are several cabinets full of lovely crystal, and two full dinner services of massive silver, costing over $25,000. Even the soup plates are solid silver. Rich damask curtains hang at the carved windows but alack and alas, a piece of worn oilcloth covered the handsome oak table!

A large room to the left is the chapel. In the windows are figures of angels, between which is the richly decorated altar, a marvel of gold and silver tissue and lace and satin. In the center of the chapel is a catafalque of black velvet and silver, in memory of the late mistress of the mansion. On the walls are many paintings of saints and the stations of the cross, and there is an elaborate throne for the bishop, when he comes to celebrate mass in the gorgeous chapel. There is a small organ, and many other accessories usual in such places.

Farther on are the office of the owner, a series of bedrooms, all magnificently furnished, and each having a bathroom, a nursery, and then comes the suite of drawing-rooms that occupy the front of the second story. Here are gorgeous rugs, heavy crimson velvet curtains, brocaded furniture, silver vases, many mirrors, and bronze clocks. Family portraits adorn the walls.

The first story of the house contains other drawing-rooms, bedrooms, and rooms for other purposes, for the entertainment of Don Pedro's many friends.

The pátio is full of flowers, vines, ferns, and small flowering trees, all of which are well tended by a small army of servants, who are devoted to their kind master. There are many cages full of birds—in fact, the place looks like a bird store, and all were singing at once, that fine sunny morning when I inspected the house. A small turtle padded about, eating the fallen leaves, and all was happiness and contentment within the palace walls.

While no special style of architecture has been followed in building the house, and some of the furniture, paintings, and hangings are in atrocious taste, the beautiful wrought-iron work, the stone carving, and the spacious pátio redeem all else.

Don Pedro is a diminutive man, not more than five feet five inches in stature, not at all dark, and with fine, sparkling black eyes, beaming with good humor. He is proud of his house, of his children, of his wonderful mine; but no one could be more simple-hearted, more kind and charitable, and he gives himself no airs, such as are usually indulged in by the newly-rich. He has a good library, a fine pianola, which he manipulates with skill, as well as several other pianos; and reading and music occupy much of his time. His little boys are modest, well-behaved children, and the youngest, a pretty girl, one of the richest heiresses in Mexico, is being brought up in a simple, healthful fashion.

It is safe to say that few of his countrymen envy Pedro Alvarado the good fortune that has come to him, for he is honest, charitable, and progressive, and has helped many of his compatriots to comparative affluence.

"Viva Don Pedro" is often heard in Parral from all classes of people, foreigners and natives.

SKATE FACTS.

The skate salesman, while the patron waited for his change, talked.

"Skates originally were made of bone," he said. "In and around 1100, men skated on the thigh bones of cows helping themselves along with pointed sticks. Steel skates was invented by the Hollanders in the seventeenth century.

"The Russians skate the best of all nations, and the nobility uses very costly skates. Some of the grand-dukes and ballet girls of Russia have gold-mounted skates, with jewels set here and there. In the Swiss winter resorts also, like Davos and St. Moritz, the skating and the skates are very fine. Pittsburgh, too, has some grand skaters and some very handsome jeweled skates.

"Balls have been given on skates, and games of cricket and baseball and football have been played on the ice. Once a battle was fought on skates. When the Spanish fleet, under Alma, was froze up in the Zuyder Zee, it was attacked by a Dutch army of 7000 men, all with skates strapped to their feet. But Alma had anticipated that kind of an attack, and his men sallied out to meet the enemy on skates themselves. A good many fell in that engagement."

The salesman smiled, and to drive home the feeble joke, he repeated:

"Many fell."

MONEY TO BURN.

The big touring car had just whizzed by with a roar like a gigantic rocket, and Pat and Mike turned to watch it disappear in a cloud of dust.

"Thim chug wagons must cost a hape av cash," said Mike. "The rich is fairly burnin' money."

"An' be the smell av it," sniffed Pat, "it must be thot tainted money we do be hearin' so much aboot."—[Success Magazine.

The old boyhood name; the unwonted tears in his brother's eyes; the lifelong loyalty which had almost faltered a few moments since, all fought against his inherent hatred of a falsehood. The fight was sharp but short. Love and loyalty triumphed in the end. Although in his carefully-worded explanation he did not actually acknowledge having written the ill-fated letter, it served the purpose, as he intended it should, to divert the blame from his brother to himself. Perhaps he felt rewarded, later, at the happy termination of his brother's love affair, at any rate he was best man at a dazzling December wedding where, in place of the conventional flower girls, there were tiny frost sprites who scattered snowdrops, and the whole church was a-glitter and a-glisten with fairylike frost effects, relieved by the dark green of holly leaves and brightened with the crimson berries. Her soft, shimmering gown gave to the bride an ethereal beauty of form which matched the tender look of love and confidence which seemed to have descended upon her from Paradise itself and lighted her lovely face.

Not one whit less lovely than the bride was the winsome maid of honor, Helen's dearest friend, Dorris Rhodene, and there were a number of their friends who predicted that these dear friends would some day become sisters, for Dan's devotion was no secret.

After the wedding, Dorris was a frequent visitor in Helen's cosy home, which gave Dan an opportunity that he was not slow to improve. Their friendship grew apace. Dorris grew absent-minded, and Helen noticed that she often blushed quite unnecessarily. At times she was gay, witty, and altogether bewitching, and again it was evidently with an effort that she took part in the conversation at all, much preferring to steal out into the moonlight and swing gently to and fro in the hammock, dreaming—who shall say what dreams?

All this was very unlike Dorris's usual calm self-possession, and Helen was wondering just what it might mean as she knocked softly at Dorris's door one morning during one of her frequent visits. Receiving no reply, she pushed open the door and started to cross the room, when she spied Dorris seated before the low, white-curtained window, too absorbed in her own thoughts to notice the interruption. She was never more charming than in the privacy of her own boudoir, dressed in the coolest conceivable pale-blue negligée, with her softly-rounded bare arms and throat showing the faintest tinge of pink in the firm, white flesh, her hands clasped behind her loosely-coiled hair, and her dainty-slippered feet stretched at a comfortable and graceful elevation. Helen simply adored Dorris. She revelled in her warm, clear beauty, which needed not one single careful touch of art to make it more perfect, and she thought, with a jealous twinge, of the time when a mere man would have the right to feast his eyes on Dorris's perfect grace in such a moment of careless abandon.

It showed the closeness of their friendship, that Dorris did not move as she became aware of Helen's presence, except to slip her hand confidingly into the hand of her friend as Helen drew up a low rocker and seated herself, while she held a letter aloft just out of reach of Dorris's hand.

"It's for you, Dearie, but you must promise you'll read it to me before you can have it." Helen seldom had a chance to tease Dorris, and wished to make the most of the present opportunity.

Instead of laughing, however, as her friend expected, Dorris whitened a little, and her dark eyes grew darker still in contrast with her pale face as she reached for the letter.

"He should not have written!" Dorris tried to speak coldly, but instead of anger and scorn in her eyes, there was a wistful look.

Helen rose hastily, and handed her the letter.

"I hope you didn't think I really cared, dear!" she said, with a blush and a little haughty air which she had never used with Dorris before in all their acquaintance.

Dorris rose also, and faced her in amazement.

"What do you mean, and who do you imagine wrote the letter?" she asked, in a puzzled way.

"Why, don't you suppose I know Max's writing by this time?" she answered, trying to speak lightly and telling herself that she did not care the least bit in the world.

"Max!" Dorris echoed in surprise. "I only wish it was from Max! Or rather, I wish Dan was as much like Max in other things as he is in his writing. I wish I could trust him!"

"Dorris, dear, tell me what in the world you mean!" It was Helen's turn to be surprised now.

Dorris had seated herself again listlessly, and now spoke in a hopeless sort of a tone.

"Well, you know, yourself, that if a man would do one mean thing and call it a joke, he would do another if he happened to feel like it." Suddenly she sprang up and commenced pacing the room restlessly, as she went on. "Why did you tell me about that letter he wrote another girl and signed Max's name and sent to you? I can't help what any of you say, it wasn't right to treat his brother's love for you so lightly! I can't see anything funny about it. If it had been any one else but his brother, it wouldn't have been quite so bad, but he always seems so fond of Max, and he says he is true to those he loves. He told me that only last night! And oh, I believed him just for a minute! I was so very, very happy, and then, all at once I remembered about that letter, and I turned numb all over. I said I wished I could believe that. It hurt me to say it to him, but I had to tell him. 'Tell me what you mean, please,' he said, and his voice sounded hurt as though I had stabbed him with a dagger, but the tenderness of it broke my heart. 'I mean the letter you wrote and sent to Helen,' I said. 'Why did you do it? You knew Max loved her, and you pretend to care for your brother so much. They laugh and say it was a boy's prank, but it nearly spoiled their lives! It wasn't a joke, it was almost a tragedy. And then you say you are true to those you love! Why don't you answer me?' I said. I felt as though it was all a desperate mistake. It was so hard not to trust him. But he only said: 'I have nothing to say, Dorris;' and he went away.

As Dorris ceased speaking, she sank beside Helen, who was sobbing as though her heart would break, and took her in her arms.

"Oh, Dorris," Helen sobbed, "why did I tell you?"

"Never mind, dear! I'd really rather know! I didn't mean quite what I said!" Dorris patted her lovingly. "Don't cry so!"

Gradually the sobbing grew more subdued. Dorris smiled to herself, a sudden, half-bitter smile that it should be she who was comforting Helen, instead of being comforted.

"Hold me tight in your arms just a minute longer," Helen begged. "I want to tell you something I never meant to tell any one, but I don't want you to suffer as I have suffered. Max sometimes tells what is not true. It doesn't make any difference in my love for him—I mean I love him in spite of it; yet it hurts every time he does it and, while I have never known Dan to do anything of the kind, I wouldn't want the girl I love better than my life to marry a man she couldn't trust with all her soul!"

"Thank you, dear," Dorris said, brokenly.

Helen kissed her, and left the room, and Dorris rose slowly. All her fierce passion had died out, but she opened the note with trembling fingers, and with blurred eyes she read the message.

"Dear Little Girl: What I said last night was true, but until you can believe in me in spite of what any one says, I will not ask for your love, or even for your friendship. Can't you guess what I must never tell even you?

"God bless you always! Good-by!

"DAN."

"P. S.—You need not be afraid of meeting me. I leave the city at 10:30."

All at once she knew what he had done. He had not written that letter. He had let Helen think so to shield his brother. "True to those he loved?" Ah yes, she knew, now, that he was true to the very verge of falsehood! Why had she ever doubted? It had been a battle between reason and intuition, between her brain and her heart. Why had she not trusted her own intuition, instead of listening to the cold reasoning of her brain?

She seized the letter and kissed it, and as she did so, her eyes caught the words: "I leave at 10:30." In an instant she had snatched her watch from the dresser. It was twenty-five minutes to 11! Oh, she couldn't let him go like that, thinking that she didn't trust him! Then she remembered that her watch was fast. She slipped down the broad stairway and glanced at the big clock in the hall. It was 10:27. Three minutes! What could she do in three minutes? Oh, yes! the telephone!

"Hello!"

"Hello! Give me the Union depot, please!"

"Hello! Is this the Union depot?"

"No, this is Blair's drug store."

"Central, hurry and give me the Union depot. Please be quick!"

"Union depot!"

"Please have some one find Dan Martin. It's very important!"

"Yes'm. What train was he going on?"

"Oh, I don't know! Yes, it's the one leaving at 10:30."

"But there are two trains that leave at 10:30, and it's 10:28 now."

"Try them both, can't you?"

"All right! I'll send a boy through both. Tell him it's important?"

"Oh yes, and please hurry!"

Oh, the triple torture of waiting and hoping and fearing! At first the clock raced through the seconds too fast, and she wished it would stop and give them time to find him. Then it seemed to drag interminably, as she watched and listened. She imagined she could hear the train pulling out. The last moment was gone! They had failed to find him! She would wait one more minute. But she had to catch at a chair to steady herself. It was no use! Reluctantly she started to hang the receiver up.

"Hello!" Dan's voice came steady and clear over the wire.

Dorris trembled so she could scarcely speak.

"Oh, Dan! It's Dorris! I want you!" she managed to say.

The receiver at the other end of the line was slammed into place, and she could just imagine him striding through the depot. She sank on the lower step of the broad stairway, and waited. She laughed, and then she cried and laughed again. She would not even go up to her room to change her dress, but waited breathless, with her great dark eyes fixed on the open door and the color coming and going in her cheeks.

When she saw him coming up the walk with great, swinging strides, every nerve in her body tingled with a new, rapturous life, which seemed to bear her to him in spirit while she still sat motionless on the stair. There was no one about, and she called his name softly through the open door.

"Dan!"

The look in his eyes, as he caught sight of her, lit his face with a holy flame of love, and Dorris, adorable, irresistible, glided into his arms without another word.

But Helen never guessed who wrote the letter.

WHEN DOGS WERE COOKS.

The turkey, roasting before the open fire, revolved slowly and regularly on the spit. An antiquary, regarding it, said:

"There was a time when dogs did our roasting for us—at least they kept the meat turning, so it would not burn. 'Spit dogs' they were called, and we call their descendants 'spitz' to this day.

"Spit dogs were trained to turn the spits on which roasted chickens, beef, ducks and turkeys. The little fellows did their work well. They were never known to let a fowl burn or to snatch a mouthful or two from it.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

THE GLADIOLUS.

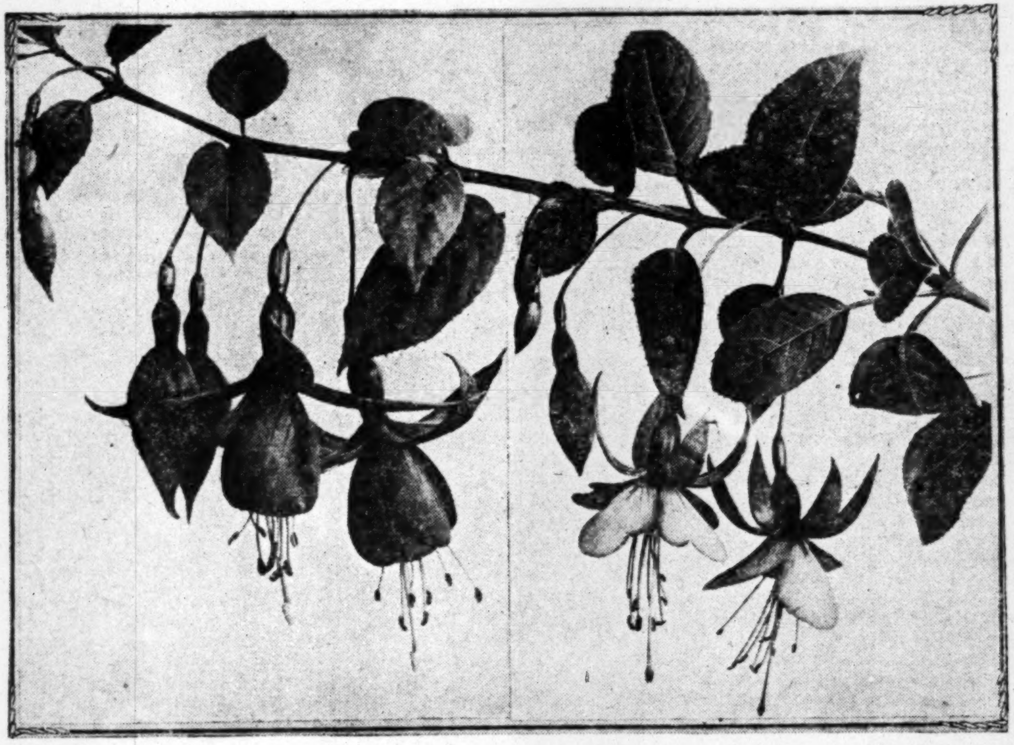
BEST OF ALL FOR FURNISHING CUT FLOWERS IN SUMMER AND FALL.

By Ernest Braunton.

IT will soon be time to plant spring and summer flowering bulbs; and of the great array that it is possible to marshal, none will prove a better choice than Gladiolus. It is, by all odds, the best plant we have for furnishing cut flowers from the open ground during the summer and fall months. It commences to bloom about the first of July and continues until November. It is just beginning to be grown extensively for cut flowers for market, and it has undoubtedly a great future. No flower blooms in water better than the Gladiolus. Indeed, it does better in water than on the plant. It is apt to wilt in the hottest part of the day if left on the plant, but if put in water it reaches great perfection.

The best soil for the Gladiolus is a sandy loam, containing a trace of clay, but only enough to assist in retaining moisture. Careful preparation of the soil is preferable, and fertilizing should be given with thoroughly rotted manure, and care should be exercised that the bulbs do not come in contact with it. Careful selection of soil best adapted to the different strains is most important, and the correct amount of proper food to use, and shallow or deep cultivation are among the many details which enable the grower to produce strong, healthy bulbs that will withstand the climatic conditions under which they must be planted. A thousand first-size bulbs will produce over two thousand spikes; of second size, say, 1500; of third size, say, 1000—4500 in all—and as many bulbs which should, under first-class conditions, be of first size. By planting the three sizes at the same time, one gets a succession of bloom, the large bulbs blooming first and the small ones last.

No particular skill is required, and the bulbs can be put into the ground from now to February and March, or later for late flowering. If for cutting, plant in rows three feet apart, and twice the diameter of the bulbs apart in the row, covering from four to six inches in depth. Cutting the spikes as soon as the first flower opens prevents the bulb from being exhausted by producing seed. It also prevents damage from blowing over, and does away with the necessity of support. We get better results from the same amount than is the case in the Eastern States, for most of the sorts come from climes similar to ours. They are native of Central Europe, the Mediterranean region, West Asia, and Africa. The headquarters of the genus are, however, in South Africa. The different species are too numerous to mention. Most of them produce very small flowers compared with the modern hybrids, and few of them are of much value to the successful hybridizer of today. No risk is run, however, in buying the bulbs from any responsible dealer, for all in cultivation are worthy of a place, though some are better than others.



TYPES OF FUSCHIAS.

The Mexican Poppy.

Hunnemannia fumariaefolia for cutting beats all other members of the poppy family. Seed pods should be gathered and laid away in a cool dry place for sowing in early spring and the vacant spots in the garden sown with them. The only difficulty attending the cultivation of this poppy is the seeding stage. The young plants are difficult to transfer from the seed pan to small pots so that in our land they should be sown just where they are to grow. The flowers resemble those of the Eschscholtzias, to which genus it is closely allied; but there is much more substance to the flowers of the Hunnemannia and also to the flower stems. They can be cut and kept in excellent condition for several days. It stands the winters in all parts of California without the slightest harm from cold.

Proper Planting of Clematis.

Careless planters often cause the death of many clematis by not spreading the roots. The roots are generally very numerous and fleshy, and should be so disposed that all come in direct contact with the soil which must be well settled all around them. A good plan is to use sand to cover the roots, as it is easily worked in among them, and if this is not done will close in of its own volition. It is also best not to plant them until the coldest weather is past, or until the frosts are just over. This is quite necessary in California, where we have to plant clematis on the north side of buildings; just where the roots are most apt to rot during a long wet winter, though since our nurserymen have grafted them on native stock we hear no complaints of winter rot. The above admonition about getting the soil thoroughly worked in among the roots will, of course, hold good with all plants.

For Saline and Alkali Lands.

Melaeuca leucadendron, the paper-barked Tea Tree, is a large tree eighty feet high and four feet in diameter; fine for planting in low places; will grow on tidal lands and salty swamps where no eucalypt will live—a handsome tree for seaside streets. Young leaves bruised in water and drunk for colds, general sickness, and especially headaches—hence the common name of "Tea Tree." This tree has been in California nurseries in limited quantities for many years, but is not as yet appreciated, though its many good points would recommend it for very general planting.

The Cocoanut Palm.

An investigation was inaugurated by the Horticultural Department in the Philippines to determine, through a study of physiology of the cocoanut palm, results that would be available for improving existing methods of the cultivation of the plant. The investigations are reported upon in the following order. The root, its structure of growth, and the absorption of water; the leaf, its structure, the activity of the stomata, and transpiration; with final conclusions as to the fitness of the plant for its characteristic habitat and suggestions as to its most advantageous cultivation.

Among the practical conclusions, the author states that a considerable supply of water must constantly be at the disposal of the tree, or it will protect itself against injurious desiccation by a partial suspense of its vitality. The quantity of mineral food which the tree takes is roughly proportional to the amount of water which it absorbs, and by increasing the plants transpiration the same results are obtained as would follow the application of fertilizers to the ground. The amount of transpiration can be increased either by increasing the amount of water at the disposal of the roots or by improving the conditions for its evaporation from the leaves. The transpiration of the cocoanut is accelerated by the action of the wind, and to still a greater extent by increase of illumination. In order to secure increased yield, the author suggests better cultural methods and improvement through the selection of the seed used in planting.

GRIFFITH PARK.

WHEN this great park was first offered to Los Angeles there was considerable hesitancy about accepting it, many claiming that it would prove a white elephant on our hands; that it was too far removed from the city, was useless for park or other purposes, and to accept it with an agreement to improve it would be sheer folly.

Time, which levels all things in a most wondrous manner, has vindicated the claims of its few stanch friends that it would yet prove the most valuable of all the city's holdings, and folks are beginning to sit up and take notice. Little by little the park has been improved without destruction of any of its great natural beauty, principally by the building of roads and paths, until now nearly all parts are available to the sightseer without enduring long walks through underbrush or climbs over never-ending piles of rocks.

There are, of course, a few who continue to proclaim the fancied worthlessness of Griffith Park, and will continue to do so to the end of time; but no one not a confirmed pessimist could have watched the development of the past two years and the ever and rapidly increasing number of visitors without becoming enthused over the possibilities certain to be realized here at no distant date, of having one of the grandest parks, of the most varied and beautiful topography, that the world has seen. Angeles stands sorely in need of better connections our several parks—broad highways that are so that all may find pleasure in riding or driving the element of danger entering. Of the desirability of developing a first-class park system through boulevards, even from a commercial standpoint, be no question, and we can have no real park until the proper connections are completed. The park boulevards of the East, constructed at vast have paid for themselves over and over again, enhancement of real estate values that has taken in their vicinity. Value.

landscapes prove a strong attraction to trav- the beauty of city and country outside the is a valuable asset in which all are interested. It is not mere sentiment that prompts the rail- to advertise the attractions along their lines. Beauty to them represents cash, and each year they spend immense sums calling attention to the attractions of the sections through which they pass. If people choose a line of travel because of its natural and acquired beauties, how much more eagerly will they seek such a place for residence. That both are eagerly sought for is undisputed. Landscape beauty is capital, whether it lies in private or public property. If any exceptional advantage accrues to the public, it comes from the City Beautiful rather than from private improvements.

Trees Bring Health.

Street trees add greatly to the healthfulness of any city by cooling and purifying the air; the foliage evaporates large quantities of water, and the reduction of temperature in this way is greatest during the hottest and dryest weather. The foliage also absorbs impure and therefore harmful gases. Trees also promote circulation of air, due principally to unequal temperature.

Los Angeles Plaza.

The people of Los Angeles, in common with all the English-speaking races, are strongly imbued with a love for public parks. When the City of Mexico was a Mexican pueblo, only the plaza admitted to the designation of a park. It was fashioned, not after the English idea, but from the Spanish. Its designs was more of a promenade than a park; more of a thoroughfare than recreation grounds. It was under the Anglo-Saxon régime that even this small area of surface came to take on the distinct characteristic of a park; the only area of the sort of which the early Angeleños could boast.

Bamboo Hedges.

Of late years the demand for bamboos to be used for hedges and screens, mostly between city lots, is constantly increasing, as no better plant can be found for such purpose. The only drawback is that the varieties generally employed, Chinese and Japanese Phyllostachys, have a tendency to send out runners in every direction, which in many cases soon become a positive nuisance. There are also two species of arundinaria, from the Himalayas (A. Falcata and A. Falconeri.) which always grow compact and in clumps, but, on account of not being easily propagated, they have always remained scarce and too high priced for general use. We have been fortunate to obtain from Darjeeling, 7000 feet altitude in the Himalayas, a new species, Arundinaria Hookeraiana, which is much superior to the above named because it grows much more rapidly and has richer foliage, which keeps better in winter. Those who have tried it claim many points of superiority for this plant for use as a hedge.

The Douglas Spruce.

It is rather strange but true that many of the very best trees and plants are unappreciated, in their natural home, and a very marked case of such inference is that of the Douglas spruce, Pseudo-tsuga Douglasii. (The local one seems properly to be P. Macrocarpa.) In the Eastern States the Rocky Mountain variety is everywhere grown, and our own California is common throughout the South, not being hardy in the North. On the other hand, the one chiefly grown in England, and very extensively grown, is that from the Pacific Coast. It is found everywhere in abundance throughout this State.

A Hopeless Bachelor.

AND THE BOY WHO BROUGHT THE ONE GIRL TO HIM.

By a Special Contributor.

WARREN SYKES, American millionaire, globe trotter, high-class sport, owner of four of the largest newspapers in the world, and the intimate of kings, lords and ladies in all the courts of Europe, had taken a sudden and unaccountable notion to go South—from New York via the Mallory line to Key West, thence, by fruit steamer, to Havana. The idea was prompted by a desperate desire to escape, at least for one short weeek, from the glare of public notice in which he was constantly basking. If he gave a large dinner to notables in Paris, if he ordered a new yacht, if he suddenly cabled home to have all the reporters on the daily discharged at once, if he merely drank ice water instead of champagne, the incident was heralded in all the newspapers in all the lands as the most interesting piece of news outside the diplomatic corps. Warren Sykes was never allowed to escape from the public's observation, and he repaid its attention with interest; for he was always sure to achieve some remarkable and unexpected feat of social skill just when the public had begun to think him an ordinary man. However, there was one interesting performance with which Warren Sykes had never chosen to enliven the public, and that was marriage. Warren Sykes was a hopeless bachelor. He had been angled for in all the drawing-rooms of all the societies of all the countries that he had visited; had been discussed and weighed in the private offices of diplomats and financiers, anxious to make an alliance with an American billionaire. With consummate skill he had been able to evade them all. He sailed the calm sea of personal comfort without the shadow or savor of even a love affair hanging to him.

He had sailed many seas for many years. As he remarked to a group of disheveled half-sick women in the steamer saloon: "I've traveled in English ships, French ships, Dutch ships, Swedish ships, Chinese ships, African ships—but they all speak the same language when it comes to being seasick. They all say 'Oh!—oh—ow—ow—ow!' " He groaned long and feelingly, to the immense disgust of the unhappy ladies, and limped out on his stick to the deck.

It was the second day out, and Warren Sykes was enjoying the unusual experience of being among people who did not know who he was. His friends and the public, who saw him usuallly as a morose, indifferent man, subject to fits of caprice and sudden anger, followed by wild spells of lavish and foolish generosity, would not have recognized the bland, jovial, talkative fellow who kept the entire ship's company alive and delighted with his witty remarks, his stories, his tricks and stunts of all kinds. He went from group to group, and consorted with all classes. Among a crowd of college boys just out from Sheffield, he was the joker and best fellow. They hung on to him devotedly, as young men will to a man older and cleverer than they. With another group of men and women—shop girls on a summer's vacation, and drummers with time to spare going to Texas—he made himself most agreeable, inaugurating games, lending books, exchanging repartee, even descending to light flirtation. From one company to another he fitted, happy and gracious, leaving behind always an air of mystery and interest in his personality. Who was the well-dressed stranger, and what was his business in traveling on a slow tub of a boat to regions remote from the earth?

To all on board "the man in the checked suit" was the main object of speculation. Yet he never revealed aught for a clue, though one girl noted with a smile that, when the gay crowd of drummers and shop girls gathered in the bow for a snap-shot group, he escaped with alacrity.

The only other person not of the merry-makers was this girl. She sat apart during the first two days of the voyage. It was her first sea trip, and she was beginning to feel desperately lonesome. The women aboard were manifestly not "her kind," and she withdrew herself a little haughtily from their amusements. On the evening of the second day out, one of the college boys approached and introduced himself. "I'm Worth Trask, from El Paso," he said, "and the captain told me you were from San Antonio. I thought you must know some people that I know there. Do you know the Van Tynes?"

"Of course," said the girl delightedly. "Mary Van Tyne is one of my best friends. I'm so glad to meet you, Mr. Trask. Won't you sit down?"

The boy sat down beside her with the trace of a flush on his handsome face, and glanced with a smile of triumph and the faintest suggestion of a wink at the group across the deck, where sat his college friends and Warren Sykes. Some hours later, when they had become better acquainted, he told the girl that he had spoken to her on a wager. "The other fellows were afraid to," he admitted; "you were so dignified and so cold."

The girl laughed. "I'm glad you did," she said. "I was just beginning to think I couldn't stand the interminable silence much longer. I haven't spoken to a soul on board except that man in the checked suit. He is very pleasant and entertaining. Who is he?"

"My stateroom mate," replied the boy. "He's lots of fun. But he's a queer fellow—close-mouthed about himself. He has traveled a good deal, though. Can tell the dandiest tales about the inhabitants of the South Sea Islands. You ought to see his luggage. He's a swell. Has his valet with him, too."

The girl looked over at Sykes and caught the eyes of the man in the checked suit fixed upon her. They were good eyes—blue, keen, close together over a large nose. A light mustache drooped over the mouth, while the sharp, delicate-looking chin moved ever as if seeking to repress a smile. He might have been 32 or 33 years old; he might have been 45—one was undecided which; but on the days when rheumatism kept him to his room his face showed lined with pain, and one was inclined to the latter age.

"He seems to be creating more interest than any one on board," said the girl, with a half smile of amusement.

"He—and yourself," answered the boy.

"I! Why, what is there unusual about me?"

"You don't associate with the other people—you haven't told them all your business—your past and future history—in other words, you aren't an open book. Naturally, you pique their curiosity."

"And has every one else on board except myself and the checked-suit man related his or her biography?"

"Pretty much so. They usually do aboard ship, you know, especially on a slow tub like this, when there is a small crowd and nothing else to do."

"How funny people are!" she said. "It reminds me of the time I went to a country town to hunt for a certain plant in botany. I stayed two weeks and never informed the natives why I had come, and they resented it as a personal insult, and said all manner of hateful things about me."

"Why didn't you tell them?" asked the boy, scanning the girl's face with frank amazement.

"Why should I? They wouldn't have understood any better, and would probably have thought me an escaped lunatic. Young girls in small country towns—in the North or South—seldom go straying off solitary and alone after botanical specimens."

The boy was interested, slightly astonished, a little awed. "Are you a scientist?" he asked reverently.

"No, not now." She smiled at the impression she had created. "I thought I was once. I'm a medical student. I've just finished my senior year at the New York Medical School. I'm coming down here to study yellow fever."

"Oh! I thought you were coming home."

"To San Antonio? Not yet. I've my name to make. You see, I secured this appointment—it's really a government appointment through the New York college—to investigate the yellow fever germ, with a view to exterminating the disease in the United States. I shall have a year in Cuba and a year in Mexico."

"By Jove! You're a stunner!" exclaimed the boy in honest admiration. "But you're awfully young to be doing this sort of thing—and—and—too——" He stopped abruptly, blushing furiously. The girl thought best to interrupt.

"I have cousins in Cuba, with whom I shall stay while there. And in Mexico I shall be in the city of Monterey most of the time. So I shall be quite safe." She smiled calmly into the boy's eyes. "And yourself?" she asked. "What of you?"

"Oh, I? I'm going home. This is just my junior year, you know, in Shef. But those fellows over there—all of them—are going down into Mexico—way down into Durango, where it's beastly hot and awfully dangerous, to help build a new spur on the Mexican Central. They're awfully interesting fellows—wouldn't you like to meet them?"

"Yes, indeed—of course," the girl assented cheerfully, and young Trask lost no time in bringing the bunch over, one at a time, and giving them a formal introduction.

Mr. Warren Sykes allowed himself to be introduced, while he laughingly contended that he ought to be allowed first place, since he was the oldest acquaintance.

"I consider that I kept Miss Wallace from getting seasick by telling her interesting stories the first night—did I not, Miss Wallace?"

"Indeed you did, Mr. Sykes. I was so busy all night, working out that puzzle of the Hindoo and the disappearing robe, that I quite forgot to be worried by the pound of the engine, or even those colored glasses over the table in the dining-room—oh, those hideous green and yellow things! Don't you wish they'd dispense with them! How they wobble and swim before your eyes!"

A shout went up from the company. "I'll bet you were seasick, Miss Wallace. That's why you've been so dignified—you didn't feel well."

"People aren't usually dignified when they are seasick," answered the girl promptly. "At least, that hasn't been my observation." She surveyed the company with a smile. "I didn't see any of you on deck the first day out, except Mr. Sykes."

"That's because we were so busy opening our steamer letters," said a curly-headed youth, who was reported engaged and desperately in love.

"I opened mine on deck and threw them overboard afterward," said little Trask with a sniff. "Say, can we mail letters at Key West?"

"Yes, but they'll be punched full of fumigation holes. The place is epidemic with yellow jack, you know. You can't send any souvenirs."

"Who cares about souvenirs? I'd like to get off and see the town, though," said Trask. "Do you leave us there, Miss Wallace?" Miss Wallace answered that she did, and little Trask regarded her with the great sorrow of a great love just dawning. Attachments are quickly formed on shipboard.

The night was coming on, and in the dusk Miss Wallace did not see the expression. She was looking at Warren Sykes, who was contemplating the huge red sun on the horizon, as it was being sucked down into the hot, oily sea. The girl's eyes followed the man's eyes, and were held, too by the glory of the sunset. Silence fell upon the company, and the witchery of a summer night on the southern sea possessed them. Gradually the group fell apart, the men straggling away, overcome by the infinite longing that the sea makes for solitude and meditation. Only Sykes and Trask lingered beside the girl. The boy had wished that the man would go, and leaned over the rail waiting, while he watched the masses of phosphorescent spray spin off from the ship and scatter into bright drops over the black sea, that undulated waveless and heavy far, far away to the west.

But the older man had no intention of moving. He w filled with content, a vast content, that no experience i life—surely not his former ocean trips on great, crowde noisy palace steamers—had been able to infuse into hi He would like to go on forever thus to eternity, with th boy and the girl beside him—the fresh, wholesome bo clever and sweet-mannered; the girl, pretty, sensibl graceful. He snuggled into his content as a cat snuggl into warm rug before a bright fire, and dreamed.

The boy grew impatient, kicked the rail, frowned, sp into the water, and otherwise marred and jarred th quiet beauty of the scene. The man came out of hi reverie to remark that it was time youngsters were i bed. The boy scowled and bit his lip. He looked at th girl, who was laughing. A momentary desire came ove him to seize the man by the collar and cast him overboard into the molten lead below. A few momen however, convinced him of the fruitlessness of the situation, and he retreated to the stern, where he hung ove the rudder for a while, and finally took himself off to th smoking-room.

The deck was deserted save for the two. No soun broke the stillness but the regular thud, thud of th screw. Overhead the stars flamed big and bright an close enough to touch. The Scorpion sprawled its brilliant length across the southern heavens. The man wa the first to speak.

"On just such a night as this I experienced the greatest grief of my life," he said, quietly, "and isn't i strange, instead of feeling again the pain, as I ough when the same chord is struck, I am feeling the utmos happiness and content? Is it a sign of callousness tha a man forgets his deepest sorrows?"

The girl answered placidly, without a trace of surpris or wonder—so great is the magic of the sea that bare men's souls to a perfect understanding: "You have no forgotten. We do not forget our great sorrows. W merely grow around them. The wounds close up an leave us better men and women for having undergone th pain." Her voice floated out gently and soft and mingled with the calm beauty of the night.

"It was at Palm Beach," he continued, in a low voic gazing absently before him, "eleven—twelve—thirtee years ago. We were on the water in a small sailin yacht, one of those narrow-beamed little race boats tha turn over with a breath if they are not handled rightly She was sitting on the rail holding on to the ropes a the side and laughing. I was beside her, and teasin her by pretending to fall over and catching myself ju in time. But I tried it once too often. 'Here I go!' I cried suddenly, and sprawled over the side. With a scream—she thought I had really fallen—she let go an snatched at me to save me. At that moment the bo lunged, and before I could move she was overboard. A gust of wind caught the sail and drove us thirty fe ahead. The night was pitch black—like tonight—exce for the stars, and the water was ink. One of the sailors jumped over after me, and together we struck o for the place where she had gone down. For hours w hunted—oh, God, the agony!—and we did not find he . . . They hauled me out of the water—the two sailors—but first they had to stun me with a boat hoo Then they took me to shore. I must have wande about in the brush all night, utterly mad, though I re member nothing, except that in the morning, a little gi —a child of nine or ten—took me by the hand and l me to the hotel. And the baby tried to comfort me. remember she said, 'Don't cry, big man,' with as m womanly pity as if she had been talking to a little ba brother. I've often wondered what ever became of th child. Sometimes I think I'd like to thank her fo for——"

"For saving your life," interposed the girl, solem "You were standing on the tip end of the board landi with four iron boat hooks tied to your feet when s found you, and you begged her piteously to let them One did stay; you dragged it after you through th sand to the hotel; and when the men saw it they un stood and patted the little girl on the head and sa 'You saved his life, sissy; now run tell Mrs. Lord we found him—she'll know what you mean—just th words, we've found him.' "

The man raised his head and looked at the girl lo and tenderly. "You?" he said. And then again, softly—"You?" After a long pause he continued: remember now; you were the little girl who lived in th white house across from the hotel. You used to fi with the small son of the major because he called y 'little rebel,' and your father had been a general in th Confederate army. You wore your hair in two red p tails—it was red then," he laughed—"it's darker n isn't it?"

"Shall I go on with the reminiscences?" she s "You were the young man who wore such loud clothes that the boys said the hotel needn't keep a b who bought so many polo horses and rode them so that they scarcely lived a week; who, one time, a check on the bank for $40,000 and spent it the night on a dinner dance at which the favors were mond bracelets for the ladies and gold watches fo men——"

"Oh, don't—please don't!" he pleaded. "You a hard on me. I am not such a fool now—believ That night made the difference. It sobered me. are right, I shall never forget it. "You suffer much from it?"

"So itnensely at times that I get superstitio fancy it comes upon me for atonement. But, nonsense—I'm getting silly—isn't it a glorious He sprang briskly from his steamer chair and himself as if to get rid of melancholy recollectio

"Will you walk?"

"No, thank you. I think I will retire; it is late. We shall have a fine day for the Florid and I want to be up early."

"You love to think of your life there?"

"Oh—yes."

He held out his hand to retain her as she was moving away. "You have not let me thank you," he said, referring to the subject reluctantly. Was it more the desire to thank her than the depth of feeling for what had happened that caused him to dwell upon their former relation? "These long deferred thanks," he continued. "The first five years, I assure you, I was anything but thankful." He turned his head away and spoke in a very low tone. "You know I loved her very much—I have never loved any other woman. . . . But now—will you take it?" He turned upon the girl with both hands outstretched. She put her hands into them and he clasped them warmly, looking straight into her eyes, for she was as tall as he.

"The general's daughter!" he said with a beautiful smile. "Ah! why didn't I meet you six years ago?"

"Aren't you glad to know me now?" asked the girl, with some amazement.

"Oh, yes—yes indeed," he hastened to reply. "I was only counting six years lost." He watched her swing briskly down the deck and disappear into the cabin. Then he went to the smoking-room, where he found little Trask looking the picture of despair. Alone, he sat with his head pulled down between his shoulders, his eyes staring straight ahead, his arms hanging limply over the sides of the chair, and his feet wide apart sprawled in front of him. Sykes put his hand gently on the boy's shoulder.

"What's the matter, old man—sick?"

"No."

"Sleepy?"

"No."

"In love?"

"NO!" Trask fairly howled.

"Sure thing! Nothing plainer," said Sykes provokingly. "Now, see here, my son. This is too bad. One of that kind in your crowd is enough. Cheer up and be jolly."

"I say, don't run a fellow like that. I'm not such a kid as I look. I'm thinking, I tell you—working out a problem."

"Mighty despondent attitude for a problem—must be a case. Funds got low?"

"Yes, something like that. You see, I don't want to go home yet. I'd like to loaf about down here in the tropics awhile—see Havana, you know, while I'm so near. But, deuce take it, I haven't the tin!"

"I see. Sensible father supplies little Willie with a ticket and just enough money to pass the lines from Boston to El Paso—eh?"

"That's it exactly. And I want to get off at Key West."

"And catch the yellow fever and be quarantined for ten days."

"I don't care. It'll be good experience."

"Not this time. Take the advice of an old man, my son. Profit by the having of a sensible father, and run no risk of yellow fever—or any other fever. Go straight home and in five years marry the nice girl who wrote that fat steamer letter."

"Oh, I say, your remarks are too bald."

"You'll thank me all the same."

He laid his hand affectionately on the boy's and settled himself for a silent smoke. In the wreaths that curled up two faces mingled, one dim, shadowy, vague, the face of a long-ago dream, the most beautiful one of his life; the other, vivid, distinct, strong, crowding the dream face and smiling into his own with clear, honest eyes that spoke of health and courage and sympathy. The first was a girl, the second was a woman—and yet not a woman—not like the women he knew trailing spangled robes, with courtly manners and smart repartee—but just a simple, straightforward, wholesome boy-girl, redolent with health and strength and happiness, honest and independent, yet gentle and strong and full of womanly tenderness. Then he remembered with surprise that her hands were hard—strong and hard. But—what a companion.

As he passed through the saloon, later, on his way to his stateroom, he encountered the girl emerging from the room with a small medical case. She had on a blue dressing gown, heavily encrusted with Japanese embroidery and delicately scented. He fell back to let her pass.

"There's a very ill baby in the steerage. I'm going to see what I can do," she said, as she swept past.

Warren Sykes noted the burnished glory of her hair in the lamplight. The perfume of the Japanese embroidery lingered in the air. Suddenly, the man reeled and gave a cry of pain, so sudden and so sharp that a sailor passing outside heard and ran to his assistance.

"Call my valet at once—tell him to hurry," he said, staggering to his stateroom and falling in a heap on the bed. The boy returned in a moment with a message: "He's sick, sir, awful sick, and he says will you please excuse him, sir, but he can't come."

"Damn the man! Am I to lie here like this all night? Tell him he's got to come—dead or alive! He's got to come. Oh, Lord!" He clutched his side madly. "Is there a doctor on board? Fetch him, boy."

"Nobody but the lady, sir."

"What lady?"

"Miss Wallace—she's a doctor, sir."

"Good Lord!" The man was conscious of an inward groan as great as his pain.

The boy was retreating with a frightened face when little Trask bolted in. "What's the matter, partner?" he sang out, cheerily, "in a bad way?"

"Your man's sick and says he can't come."

"Is that all? Why, I'll look after you, old man. I'm a [illegible]—football experience, you know. Here, you, tell James—Jack—whatever his name is—that he's to stay in bed. I'll tend to the gentleman."

"It's awfully good of you, old fellow," Sykes answered [illegible], "but I'm afraid I'm worse than usual. I must have a hypodermic."

"A morphine? Well—let's see—why, Miss Wallace is the very one. I'll go for her at once."

"Here! Come back, you young cub. Wait a minute!" But the boy was out of hearing and speeding on his way.

Sykes was lying in a knotted heap, his face showing the agony of his suffering, when the girl entered calmly, her eyes full of anxious pity. She adjusted her instrument, measured the dose carefully, and bade Trask roll up the sleeve. Then she leaned over and swiftly and surely thrust the needle into the skin.

"I'm not giving you morphine. It is only chloral." She answered the question in the man's eyes. "In just a minute you will be easier. Afterward, Mr. Trask must follow my directions." She turned to the boy and instructed him about the rubbing and the hot applications. Fainter and fainter came the voice to the man. He was conscious of the hateful phrase, "woman doctor," surging through his brain. Then the bright glow of her hair—of "the general's daughter"—faded from his sight and he slept.

It was not till the morning of the fourth day, when the steamer was docking at Key West, that Sykes came again on deck. The passengers gathered in the bow observing the comical actions of a group of pickaninnies, who were diving into the clear water for coins thrown from the ship. Trask was nowhere to be seen. Miss Wallace and Sykes stood together talking in low tones.

"Only four days," he said, "and I lost one yesterday—what did you do?"

"Mr. Trask and I sat all alone admiring the beautiful vari-colored water along the coast, and picking out the hotels through the glass, and wishing very much that you could enjoy it with us."

"Little Trask did? I doubt it. For him the day was extremely happy as it was, I fancy."

The girl laughed. "He said he wished something would happen to get him docked at Key West. He doesn't want to go on."

"Without you, he means," added Sykes.

The gangway had been lowered, the great hole into the freight opened, and the squeak of pulleys, the clamor of truck and the shouts of negro foremen made the air hideous.

Suddenly, in the midst of the roar there was a muffled shout and a scurrying of feet—then a general alarm—"man hurt!" The captain and the first officer were seen hurrying below. The negro longshoremen with one accord dropped their trucks and made for the hold, falling over one another in their eagerness to see. A negro with a powerful bass voice shouted to the crowd outside: "He fell offen de deck into de hol'—he's a passenger." Then confused cries arose. "Is he dead?" "No, he ain't. Get away there! Give him air."

The passengers swarmed aft where the main opening into the hold of the ship yawned wide with a drop of forty feet to the deck reserved for the Key West freight. There in the midst of the trucks, surrounded by the pushing gangs of gaping negroes, lay the body of little Trask, apparently lifeless.

They lifted him carefully and bore him to his stateroom. There was a bad cut on his head and one arm hung limp. His college friends clustered about, scared and silent. Sykes, Miss Wallace and the captain conferred apart with grave faces.

"It is impossible for him to leave the ship," said the captain firmly. "My orders are strict to allow no one to debark at Key West except those having tickets and passports for this point. The hospitals are full of yellow fever, and it would be risking the young man's life to take him there."

"You are taking a far greater risk, sir, in keeping him away from medical attention. You are becoming personally responsible for his death," said the girl, excitedly. "You do not realize what you are doing."

"I realize that I have my orders to obey, young lady, and I repeat again—the young man cannot leave the ship."

Warren Sykes cut in with quiet authority: "I consider the boy my personal charge, captain, and I will assume all risks in the matter. I will see that he has the best attention and my guardianship until he is able to travel. This is no time to quibble over orders. We must save the boy's life. I assure you it will be all right with the company." He handed the captain his card graciously.

The captain looked at the card and his face changed. "Very well," he said, "if you are willing to assume all responsibility in the matter, Mr. Sykes, I shall be more than glad, and grateful to you."

Thus it was decided, and little Trask was conveyed as quickly as possible to the city hospital, where Miss Wallace had previously decided to stop for a week before taking her steamer to Cuba. The week was prolonged to three weeks, and Sykes and the girl met constantly at the bedside of their charge. The man learned to look forward to the daily meetings with hungry eagerness. To walk, to talk with her, was all that the day held for him. Gradually, all the rest of the world faded away into insignificance—the past and the future—there was nothing but this little tropical island and they three, sitting in the quiet sunshine.

When it was over and the boy was well enough to travel, they said good-by to him. As he stood, holding a hand of each and smiling up at them, he said: "It hurt awfully—the fall; but I'm glad it happened—I wanted to get docked, you know—and it has given me the happiest three weeks of my life." Involuntarily the eyes of the man sought those of the girl, and the words of the boy spoke through them again and were answered, and in that look the boy was forgotten altogether.

Noted Woman Scientist.

ROYAL SOCIETY PRESENTS MEDAL TO A FAIR JEWESS.

From a Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Mrs. Hertha Ayrton, who is already known to some extent in America, can now claim recognition as England's foremost woman scientist. She is the first woman in the world to be awarded the Royal Society's medal for her own unaided efforts in scientific research. Madam Curie has the medal, it is true, but it was awarded to her jointly with her late husband for their renowned discovery of radium.

Oddly enough, Mrs. Ayrton is also the wife of a renowned scientist; her husband being Prof. W. E. Ayrton, the distinguished electrical engineer and inventor. She is to receive the Royal Society's coveted medal on the last day of this month, the occasion being the annual banquet of this world-famous body. It was awarded to her at a recent meeting of the society's council because of her investigations on the electric arc and also as to the nature of sand-ripples.

Mrs. Ayrton enjoys two other enviable distinctions. She is the only woman member of the Institute of Electrical Engineers, and four years ago was nominated a Fellow of the Royal Society. This was the first time the highest tribunal of English science had nominated a woman. It was such an honor that it attracted immense attention everywhere, and opinion was expressed that the election of a woman was illegal. The Royal Society thereupon took the highest judicial opinion, which was that the council had no power to elect a woman. Therefore, Mrs. Ayrton cannot put the magical letters of "F. R.S." behind her name.

She is well known in the United States, for she visited there six years ago, and at the Electrical Congress in Chicago read one of the most interesting of the papers.

MRS. HERTHA AYRTON.

At sixteen, Mrs. Ayrton had graduated and began to earn her living as a professor at Girton College, Cambridge, then in its infancy as a college for women. She was surely the youngest teacher in the history of Girton. It was there that she took up her first researches into mathematics and physics. She invented a sphymograph for recording the pulse beats, but finding something similar on the market, abandoned her's and patented a line divider—an instrument for immediately diving up a line into any number of equal parts.

For nine years Mrs. Ayrton devoted herself to her family life. Then in 1893 her husband was summoned to the United States on business. His services have often been asked as an expert by India, Japan, the United States, in fact, all parts of the world. In his absence, Mrs. Ayrton continued his work, his investigations and experiments on the electric arc. Seven years later, when his paper on the subject, read before the International Electrical Congress, was unfortunately burned in Chicago, Mrs. Ayrton surprised her husband by writing a substitute on the points he had noticed, which he declared was better than the original.

From that time on, she continued her investigations on her own account. For the past six years she has given the electric arc her continued attention. Now having completed her work and solved the knotty problems, she will publish her results in book form. It is partly for this that the Hughes medal of the Royal Society was awarded her. Her other achievement is establishing the cause and effect of sand ripples by the tides. This is invaluable in the charting, navigation, and ultimate straightening of winding rivers. It was her first hobby as a child on the seaside. Now she has a score of huge tanks, with sand and pebbly bottoms. Sets of rollers move the waters, and the looker-on can see the sand gradually forming into ripples.

Cast-Out Indian Child.

QUARREL CONCERNING THE LAND BELONGING TO A BOY.

By a Special Contributor.

PREPARING patents for the allotment of the lands of the Crow Indians that will make each owner an American citizen is bringing out some of the real bits of Indian life. Agent Reynolds must give each Indian a perfect title to his land, as, during the coming winter, all of the inherited land may be sold and it is probable it will be bought as fast as it can be had by the land company that bought the last allotment and is building a town at Fort Custer, Mont.

The bitterness over the inheritance of the lands of Bull-Looks-Around has caused the Department of the Interior much diplomatic exercise, and it is still unsettled, so far as the Indians are concerned.

Bull-Looks-Around is an old man, childless. His brother, Plenty Enemies, is also a childless old man. They are the only heirs of a family that numbered ten when the last allotment was made, so that the accumulated inheritance now amounts to some thousands of acres of valuable irrigated farm land.

Under the old usage of the Indians, all of the land would go to the little adopted son of Bull-Looks-Around, Sam Bull-Looks-Around. Under the rule of the Department of the Interior, Sam cannot inherit from his adopted father, but must be recorded with his legal father, Medicine Eagle, who wants none of him, for Sam was "cast out," according to an Indian custom, when he was born, making him no more a member of Medicine Eagle's family.

Medicine Eagle, the father of Sam, seven years ago married Elizabeth Pretty Crow, a Sioux girl, and brought her to his father's tepee, near the St. Xavier Mission. The Indian loves with all the primitive strength of a simple nature, and it was with great sorrow that Medicine Eagle, three months after marrying the little Sioux girl, went away to fulfill a contract for a season with the Wild West Show of Buffalo Bill, leaving the girl at home with his parents, who were angered that their only son had brought home, instead of one of his own people, a daughter of their inherited enemies, the Sioux.

The girl's home life was not different from what a white girl's might have been under the same conditions. When the Crows made their feasts and their festival dances, Elizabeth, as one in mourning, remained at home, sharing nothing but the work and a necessary shelter. At the end of the show season, Medicine Eagle returned to the girl. A few days later, little Sam was born.

"She has not been true," Medicine Eagle's people sneered in the presence of the girl, who could prove nothing by her weeping protesting. The baby became an occasion of family quarrels, which are a serious matter with the peace-loving Crows.

Elizabeth, as the youngest of the women, had little voice in family matters as the Indians reverence the old ones, and the grandmother ruled in the tepee, in which the family lived beside the house they must build, but will not occupy.

Medicine Eagle tried to take the part of his wife, but the family overruled him, and it was decided that the little baby must be "cast out."

This ceremony no white man has probably ever seen, for it is held in secret. The medicine man is called in and he makes powerful medicine, incantations and charms, which it is expected will cause the death of the unwanted baby. Little Sam did not die, probably because his mother managed to feed him in secret. After a week of medicine-making, had the Indians been free to follow their custom entirely, little Sam would have been rolled up in his blanket and put in his above-ground scaffold grave without waiting any longer for the medicine that ought to work. Instead, it was made known to childless families that the baby of Elizabeth would be carried out of the tepee where it was born and exposed after 9 o'clock on a given night. Any one who wanted a baby might go and take him in.

Medicine Eagle consoled the mother by promising that she should accompany him when he went again with the show, if she would learn to ride with him well enough to please the great Ogallala, Bill McCune, who signs all the Indians for the show. Ogallala accepted her, and, with Medicine Eagle, she went with the show to Europe, and, nearly two years ago, another baby was born to them in Paris, little St. Peter Pretty Crow, as he is known by the tribe, taking his name from his mother; St. Peter Medicine Eagle, as he is enrolled by Agent Reynolds.

When the first baby was carried out of tepee at night, an old man was watching. He was old and rich and childless. With him, waiting for the medicine man to come out into the night with the baby, naked in token that he had no possessions with the family that cast him out, the old woman who like Sara was childless, like Sara had gone mourning under her reproach, took him in her arms and wrapped him in her blanket. They carried him to the tepee nearly three miles away, where the family, all old people, were waiting. The old squaw displayed the little naked baby and he laughed his way into the hearts of the simple Indian folk who had no heir. Sam grew up, riding his ponies and racing and casting the arrow, till he was six, when he was taken, as all Indian children are, and sent to the government school at the agency.

St. Peter whom his family want.

Sam and his adopted father and uncle.

When the lands were being allotted, each child in the school, in order to be included with his right family, was given the name of his own father, instead of that of his mother or his adopted father. Sam's name was changed, and he was told that he belonged to the family of Medicine Eagle, and was not the son of the mother who had loved him and petted him and brought him presents on "big Saturday," as all the children's parents did. He flew into a great rage, and wept and swore that he would have none of the lands of Medicine Eagle. He will not allow the children to call him by the new name.

Little St. Peter has been allotted only half of his father's land, Sam's share being held in trust. All the lands of Sam's adopted family—and it is one of the richest in the tribe—must go to a distant cousin who refuses to accept them, as all the tribe would look upon him as a thief. When the industrial fair of the Crows was held this fall, Sam, with the other boys, was allowed to stay with his people during the week's encampment. He went to the home of his adopted family, and none of his own people ever alluded to him, for to them he is as if he had never been.

HELEN GRAY.

MEN WITH GREEN HAIR.

"Copper is scarce," said a broker, "but there is still enough of it left to turn the copper worker's hair green."

"His hair green?"

"Precisely. In those copper districts where the ore is of a low grade, it is roasted in open furnaces to refine it and make it more marketable. A gas emanates from the furnaces that turns the firemen's hair a bright green. This gas contains arsenic; it is a fine arsenic green that the firemen's hair takes on.

"So, if you ever see a man with green hair, you can say, à la Sherlock Holmes:

"'There, my dear Watson, is a copper-furnace tender.'"

HE KNEW.

"Well, madam?" inquired the floorwalker.

"I wish," she said, "to get a Christmas present for my husband."

"How long married?" the man asked.

"Eleven years," was the reply.

He pointed to the left.

"Bargains down that aisle," he said.

WAMSLEY'S SCHEME FOR RELIGIOU SERVICE ON A BUSINESS BASIS.

By Frank Crane,

Author of "A Literary Vaudeville," Etc.

"YES, sir," said the short, chunky man, a leaned back against the gorgeous upholstery his seat in the smoking compartment of sleeping-car; "yes, sir, I knew you was a preacher minute I laid eyes on you. You don't wear your c buttoned behind, nor a black thingumbob over your front, nor Presbyterian whiskers, nor a little gold on a black string watch chain; them's the usual ma I know, and you hain't got any of 'em. But I knew just the same. You can't fool J. P. Wamsley. You there's a peculiar air about a man that's accustomed handle any particular line of goods. You can tell all, if you'll just notice—any of 'em—white-goods ter, lawyer, doctor, travelin' man, politician, railro every one of 'em's got his sign out, and it don't ta Sherlock Holmes to read it, neither. unwearied sun from day to day, as the feller says. Nobody neglected, all pleased. You remember the last pastor wasn't sociable enough, and there was considerable complaint because he didn't hike right down after the benediction and jolly the flock as they passed out. We'll have a wire run the length of the meetin'-house, with a gentle slant from the pulpit to the front door, and as soon as meetin's over, up goes John Henry and slides down to the front exit, and there he stands, gyratin' and handin' out pleasant greeting to all—merry Christmas and happy New Year to beat the band.

"'Now as for preachin',' I continued, 'you see all you have to do is to raise up the coat tails and insert a record on the phonograph concealed here in the back of the chest, with a speakin' tube runnin' up to the mouth. John Henry bein' a regular minister, he can get the Homiletic Review at $1.50 a year; we can subscribe for that, get the up-to-datest sermons by the most distinguished divines, get some gent that's afflicted with elocution to say 'em into a record, and on Sunday our friend and pastor here will reel 'em off fine. You press the button—he does the rest, as the feller says.'

"'How about callin' on the members?' inquires Andy Robinson.

"'Easy,' says I. 'Hire a buggy of Brother Jinks here, who keeps a livery stable, at $1 per p.m. Get a nigger to chauffeur the pastor at 50 cents per same. There you are. Let the boy be provided with an assortment of records to suit the people—pleasant and sad, consolatory and gay, encouragin' or reprovin', and so forth. The man drives up, puts in a cartridge, sets the pastor in the [illegible], and when the family gets through with him they [illegible] him out again.

"'There are, say about 300 callin' days in the year. [illegible] can easy make fifteen calls a day on an average—[illegible] 4500 calls a year, at $450. Of course, there's the records, but they won't cost over $50 at the outside—you can shave 'em off and use 'em over again, you know.'

"'But there's the personality of the pastor,' somebody [illegible] up. 'It's that which attracts folks and fills the [illegible].'

"'Personality shucks!' says I. 'Haven't we had personality enough? For every man it attracts it repels [illegible]. Your last preacher was one of the best fellers that ever struck this town. He was a plum brick, and had lots o' horse sense, to boot. He could preach, too, like a house afire. But you kicked him out because he wasn't sociable enough. You're askin' an impossibility. No man can be a student and get up the rattlin' sermons he did and put in his time trottin' around callin' on the [illegible].

"'Now, let's apply business sense to this problem. That's the way I run my store. Find out what the people want, and give it to 'em, is my motto. Now, people ain't comin' to church unless there's somethin' to draw 'em. We've tried preachin', and it won't draw. They say they want sociability, so let's give it to 'em strong. They want attention paid to 'em. You turn my friend loose in the community, and he'll make each and every man, woman and child think they're It in less'n a month. If anybody gets disgruntled, you sic John Henry here on 'em, and you'll have 'em come right back smilin', and payin' their pew rent in advance.

"'Then,' I continued, 'that ain't all. There's another [illegible] I propose, to go along with the pastor, as a sort of side line. That's tradin' stamps. Simple, ain't it? Wonder why you never thought of it yourselves, don't you? That's the way with all bright ideas. People drink soda [illegible] all their lives, and along comes a genius and [illegible] the fizz, and goes and invents a Westinghouse [illegible]. Same as Newton and the apple, and Columbus and the egg.

"'All you have to do is to give tradin' stamps for attendance, and your church fills right up, and John Henry is happy. Stamps can be redeemed at any store. So many stamps gets, say a parlor lamp or a masterpiece of Italian art in a gilt frame; so many more draws a [illegible] cooker or an oil stove; so many more and you get a bicycle or a hair mattress or a what-not; and so on up to where a hat full of 'em gets an automobile.

"'I tell you when a family has a what-not in their [illegible] they ain't goin' to let a little rain keep 'em home from church. If they're all really too sick to go they'll send a substitute. And I opine these here stamps will have a powerful alleviatin' effect on Sunday-sickness.

"'And then,' I went on, waxin' eloquent, and leanin' the pastor against the wall, so I could put one hand in my pocket and gesture with the other and make it more impressive—'and then,' I says, 'just think of them other churches. We won't do a thing to 'em. That Baptist preacher thinks he's a whizz because he makes 600 calls a year. You jist wait till the nigger gets to handlin' John Henry here around town and loadin' him up with [illegible] conversations. We know they ain't no human bein' can come up to our reqirements, so let's take a fall out of science, and have enterprise and business sense.'"

Wamsley reached for a match.

"Did they accept your offer?" asks his companion. "I am curious to know how your plan worked. It has something in its favor, I confess."

"Nope," replied J. P. Wamsley, as he meditatively lit his cigar and seemed to be lovingly reviewing the scheme, "they didn't. I'm kind o' sorry, too. I'd like to have seen the thing tried myself. But," he added, with a slow and solemn wink, "they passed a unanimous resolution callin' back the old pastor at an increased salary."

"I should say, then, that your invention was a success."

"Well, I didn't lose out on it, anyhow. I've got John Henry stuffed up with a bunch of pillows, and posin' in my show window as Bill Taft, signin' the Cuban treaty, in an elegant suit of all-wool at $11.50."

Journey's End.

STORY OF LITTLE CURLY HEAD, THE MAN AND ONE OTHER.

By a Special Contributor.

THE train was pulling out from Ventura when Little Curly Head entered the door and walked down the aisle—a charming little miss of some six or seven years. She came slowly on past well-filled seats till she stood at the elbow of the Man.

"Please, sir, may I sit with you?" she said hesitatingly.

"Most assuredly, my little one." And as he said it he gently lifted her up beside him. She settled herself comfortably in the window corner with her face turned toward the moving landscape without. The Man soon seemed lost in troublesome thought and paid no attention to his little seatmate.

Now I was sitting next the window in the seat just behind these two, and I found that since the Man had changed to the aisle side of his seat, his face was plainly in view. It was a truly good face to look at, but I soon awoke to a realization that I had been steadily watching it for fully five minutes. I became possessed of a fear lest such an unwavering gaze might impel the Man to glance around. In nervous haste I bent over my traveling bag and found my veil. It was a tight-woven chiffon affair that I heartily disliked, and the car was miserably stuffy—yet I was thankful that I had brought it with me. As I tied it in place, I caught the glance of the old gentleman across the car, the one who had removed his coat and was fanning himself with his newspaper. That glance plainly said: "The ways of woman in hot weather are past understanding," but I smiled a ghost of a smile in his direction, and turned again to the Man in the front seat.

Something was wrong. He had Little Curly Head in his arms and was trying to comfort her. I leaned a little forward, well knowing that his voice was wonderfully sweet to hear when he was acting the part of comforter. His whole attitude reminded me painfully of a scene of a year ago, just after the first sorrow had come into my life.

"There, there, my little dear, surely you are not tired of the train so soon."

"I'll—I'll—not see Freddie for a long, long time, and I'll have to play all by myself."

"And who is Freddie, my sweet?"

"Why, my Freddie. He lives in the next yard to Aunt Nellie, and we love each other better than anything, and play together all day long."

"But surely you'll go back and see your Freddie some fine day soon."

"No, no, I'm going back home to grandma in Santa Barbara, and I won't see Freddie again." And the face of Little Curly Head went down on the broad shoulder of the Man.

"There, little girl, don't cry. I understand all about it. You see, I have to play all alone now, too, and I know how hard it is."

"You have to play all alone?" she said in a puzzled way as she raised her face from his shoulder and sat up in his arms. The idea that the Man should have to play all alone aroused her sympathy and made her forget her own trouble.

"Yes. I used to have a playmate, a lovely little girl with curly hair just like yours, but she won't play with me any more." And his wistful eyes were looking out of the window, but I was certain he saw none of the scenery. I was sure it was Santa Barbara with its moonlit drives and shady walks that held his attention.

Little Curly Head would not remain long unnoticed. "But why won't she play with you any more?" she persisted.

The Man came back with an effort. "Oh, her folks wanted her to play with another little boy, so one day she told me I would have to find some other little girl to play with." The voice still held that far-away tone.

"Well, why don't you play with that other little girl, then?" she asked.

"See here, little friend, could you ever like to play with any one so well as with Freddie?"

"No," stoutly replied the child.

"So it is with me. There will never be any one I'll want to play with again except my own little girl."

He had apparently forgotten that she was not his own little girl any more.

Little Curly Head could not resist showing more sympathetic interest. "Where are you going to play by yourself?" she inquired most earnestly.

A grim smile played over the Man's face for a moment as he said: "Oh, to Santa Barbara for several days, and then on to the Philippines. Perhaps I'll play with some little boys over there who are playing soldier."

The Man turned abruptly at the sound of the little gasp I gave right behind his ear, and I leaned forward precipitately to tie my shoestring that had not even thought of coming untied. It took me so long with that string that the conductor had called "Santa Barbara" before I raised my head. I picked up my traveling bag and rushed to the rear end of the car long before the fleshy gentleman with the newspaper had gotten into his coat.

The train had barely stopped before I was off and into the arms of Cousin Jim. I raised my veil to kiss him, but his look of surprise made me wish that I had not done so. "Why, cousin mine, what is the trouble? You have been crying, and your eyes are even now full of tears!"

I most earnestly assured him that it was all caused by a nervous headache brought on by traveling, and taking his arm, I fairly dragged him from the station, protesting meanwhile that I was all eagerness to see Cousin Alice and the babies.

That evening, at sunset, I sat in the garden. It was an evening in May in Santa Barbara—an irresistible combining of time and place for one who enjoys the beauties of a closing day. The sea breeze gently fanned the profusion of blooms as they stood golden-tipped in the slanting rays of the sun. A year ago there had been evenings and evenings like this, and I had lived in them and drunk deep of their thrilling joy. But tonight the beauty around me made me restless, and I felt that my heart was not attuned to the note of the evening. "I will walk and find other things to think about," I said, and, taking Baby May by the hand I passed through the gate and down the shady street. In front of a little house under the shadow of a great oak a child was leaning on the gate, and as I came close I stopped in surprise as I recognized Little Curly Head. Impulsively I leaned down and passionately kissed her cheek. "I cannot take the walk tonight," I said, and so we went back along the shady street and through the gate.

The next afternoon found us on the beach beyond the pleasure wharf. Cousin Alice took a nap in the shade of the bluff while the children busied themselves in the sand with their shovels. I sat a little apart under my great umbrella. There was a book in my lap, but I had forgotten it and was thinking, thinking hard and fast—thinking that next week I was to marry the one for whom my aunt had induced me to give up the chum of my childhood, girlhood, and college days. There was to be an elaborate church wedding, a social event. Everything was ready, and I had been sent away for a few days' rest.

I had been led to believe that my chum had quickly forgotten me, and I had thought that I was happy with the other man. But now I read myself so differently. I knew whom my heart wanted, but I tried not to heed its calling. To listen could only bring me hopeless anguish. "The date is set—my aunt is stern—my family pride is too strong," I repeated brokenly to myself.

Hurriedly I wiped away the tears, for some one had sat down near me on the sand. As I started to raise one corner of my umbrella I heard the voice of the Man. I shrank back and dared not peep. Soon came the prattle of Little Curly Head. Evidently he had found her on the beach and had renewed their acquaintance.

He told her story after story; of the beautiful princess who was cruel to the lonely prince, of the bewitching mermaiden who broke the heart of the sailor, of the silver fairy who teased and tormented the golden elf, and the child and I listened breathlessly.

At last he had no more stories to tell. Only then did it come to me that many minutes had passed and that Cousin Alice might soon wake and look for me. I would not dare answer her, and I was afraid to rise and walk away. Oh, if the two beside me would only leave!

Soon came the voice of Little Curly Head giving her verdict. "They were all naughty," she said, "and I hate the princess, and the mermaid, and the fairy, and your little girl."

"My little girl! Oh, so you remembered, did you? Well, you can hate all the others if you wish, but you must not hate my little girl, because, you see, I like her very much."

I was listening—not breathing—only listening.

The umbrella felt my hold relax and it flew away at the invitation of the breeze, and I was left facing the Man. He went pale with surprise and emotion. I could see that he was fighting for the self-control to treat me with formal politeness. I remembered dully that I had resolved never to speak to him again, well knowing that my strength to resist lay in fleeing from temptation. But that seemed years ago, and now I felt that I was drifting—drifting even beyond a desire to remember.

"Little Curly Head, tell the Man that I sat behind him on the train yesterday, and heard all you both said. I listened just now. Ask him if he will forgive his little girl and play with her as of old."

"But the other man?" came in incredulous tones.

"He would not want my hand without the heart I lost yesterday on the train," I murmured; and Little Curly Head must truly have marveled that these few words could so arouse the Man.

A little later he remembered that he knew my pride of old. "Ah, but your wedding next week—I am afraid your aunt and your pride will take you from me yet."

"So am I," I answered tremblingly.

For several minutes he sat in gloomy thought, then his face suddenly brightened and he whispered a plan so wild that it took my breath away. No, no, it would never do—I would not listen—but that masterful way of his—it was something new with him—it made my refusal grow weaker every time. At last it was so desperately weak that he said it was as good as a consent, and that we would take Little Curly Head and start at once to carry out that plan.

Of course the plan was all a secret, a whispered secret, too, and I hesitate about telling it. But it was responsible for the note Cousin Alice found upon awakening—a note telling her not to wait on the beach for me. Then, too, it had something to do with the impromptu wedding that afternoon in one of the city parsonages, the one in which a golden-haired little girl was the only witness other than the minister's family.

It was also responsible for the wrath of a certain aunt and the consternation of a certain bridal party and a certain circle of friends.

Then, too, it was the last link in the chain that has bound Little Curly Head to the hearts of the Man and One other ever since that day on the train.

Compiled for The Times.

A Give-Away.

REAR-ADMIRAL F. W. DICKINS told in Philadelphia the other day a good story about a very rich and very economical financier.

"The old gentleman—let us call him Gobsa Golde"—he said "was making preparations for a Christmas ball some years ago, and at his wine merchant's discovered a cheap brand of champagne.

" 'This,' he said, 'is a good brand of champagne. It is quite good enough for those young people who will come to my Christmas ball. They couldn't tell the difference, anyway.'

"And accordingly he ordered a dozen cases of the cheap wine.

"A day or two before Christmas, picking up his newspaper, he noticed that his wine merchant had a half-page advertisement. He ran his eye over it, and saw in big black letters the paragraph:

" 'Try our celebrated champagne at $1.25 a quart, as ordered by the eminent financier, Gobsa Golde, Es., for his forthcoming Christmas ball.' "

A Christmas Bath.

AT the world's convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Boston, Sidney Dallas of Melbourne told a group of reporters in Tremont Temple a temperance story.

"My wife," said Mr. Dallas, "is one of the most earnest temperance workers in Australia. In the course of her missionary work she hears many a strange tale.

"A Melbourne woman told her last Christmas time how one night, during the holidays, her husband stayed out till about 3 a.m. We all know what that means, especially during the holidays, don't we?

"Well, this man, when he got home, thought that he would go boldly to the bathroom and take a bath. That would remove from his wife's mind any suspicions as to his condition. It would show her, in a word, that he was all right.

"So he undressed, filled the tub, and plunged in. Hot and enfevered as he was, he enjoyed the bath. As he splashed and scrubbed and puffed, he heard a slight noise, and, looking up, saw his wife in the doorway.

"His wife was regarding him with an expression of unspeakable contempt. He was rather amazed at that. But he said nothing. He lowered his head and went on scrubbing.

" 'Well, what are you doing?' she asked.

" 'Can't you see what I'm doing?' he answered. He rubbed up some more lather. 'I'm taking a bath.'

"She sniffed and said as she turned to go:

" 'Why don't you take off your underclothes, then?' "

Keen and Quick.

PIERCE JAY, the commissioner of banks of Massachusetts, at the American Bankers' Association's convention in St. Louis, advocated a better accounting system.

"But above all," said Mr. Jay, in a discussion of his idea, "we want intelligence, if embezzlement is to be thoroughly put down. Systems are good, but intelligence is better, and in cashiers and tellers and book-keepers and note clerks we want the same keen, quick intelligence that characterized old Capt. Hiram Cack of Gloucester.

"Cack lay very ill. One day he got down-hearted, feeling that his case was hopeless.

" 'I fear, doctor,' he said, 'there isn't much hope for me.'

" 'Oh, yes, there is,' the doctor answered. 'Three years ago I was in your condition precisely, and look at me now.'

"Cack, intelligent and alert, said quickly:

" 'What doctor did you have?' "

Auntie's Memory.

AN old colored woman down in Alabama was reported to be of great age, and was extremely proud of the distinction. The proprietor of a museum, on hearing of her, sent one of his agents to make an investigation, as she would be a valuable acquisition to his museum. The agent plied her with questions regarding her age. He asked her:

"Auntie, do you remember George Washington?"

"Does I remember George Washington? Laws a massy, mistah, I reckon I does, for I done nussed him when he was a chile."

"Well, I suppose you remember the Revolutionary War?"

"Yes, indeed, I does, honey. I stood dar lots of times an' seen de bullets flyin' round as thick as hailstones."

"Well, auntie, how about the fall of the Roman empire? Do you recollect anything about that?"

"De fact is, honey, I was pretty young about dat time, but I does 'member, now you speaks ob it, dat I did hear de white folks tell 'bout hearing som'pin' drop 'bout dat time."—[Harper's Weekly.

On Their Last Legs.

THE late Richard Toomes, who, dying at 99, was the oldest Odd Fellow in America, used to be very proud of his great age. At the Odd Fellows' Home in Philadelphia, he liked to discuss longevity.

"I am a nonagenarian," he said one day to a visitor. "In my youth I never thought I'd become even a septuagenarian or an octogenarian

"Speaking of octogenarians, I remember a conversation that I overheard, when I was a young man, between two little relatives of mine.

"The younger, a boy, said to his sister:

" 'Mary, what is an octogenarian?'

" 'Well, I don't know just what they are,' said the little girl; 'but they must be awfully sickly creatures. You never hear of 'em but what they're dying.' "

A Large Order.

MRS. S. T. RORER, the noted cooking expert, told at a dinner in Wilmington of a young housekeeper's misadventure.

"This housekeeper," she said, "got her sister to do part of her marketing for her one Saturday morning. On the sister's return she said:

" 'And Laura, did you order me a leg of lamb at the butcher's?'

" 'The butcher was out of legs of lamb,' Miss Laura replied, 'and so I told him to send you up a leg of beef instead.' "

The Ignorant Farmer.

D. H. MORRIS, the president of the Automobile Club America, has on his handsome Long Island estate one of the finest chicken farms in the world.

At a dinner in New York Mr. Morris, in response to some compliments on the success of his farm and on his knowledge of chickens, said with a laugh:

"And yet I was as ignorant of chickens a few years ago as—as a farmer on his first visit to New York was ignorant of city ways.

" 'Everything was fine,' this farmer said, when he got back home from New York. 'Everything was fine except the light. They kept the light burning in my room all night long—a thing I ain't used to, and I couldn't sleep on account of it.'

" 'Well, Hi, why didn't you blow it out?' said his wife.

" 'Blow it out? How could I?' said the farmer. 'The blame thing was inside a bottle.' "

A Bad Boy in Sunday-school.

PETER C. MILLER, the Sunday-school organizer of Detroit, discussed the other day the Rev. G. W. Bailey's striking idea for a Sunday-school wherein the "saved" should be kept apart from the "unsaved" pupils.

"Mr. Bailey holds," said Mr. Miller, "that in the Sunday-school of today one bad boy is capable of demoralizing a whole class of good ones. He holds that his segregation idea, if it were put in operation, would shame the 'unsaved'—shame, that is, those who were not church members—causing them to work and strive diligently in order to become a part of the 'saved.'

"I think this idea is a good one. I have seen Sunday-schools where bad boys did a lot of harm. Anything that would lessen the bad boy's influence appeals to me.

"Speaking of bad boys and the harm they do, I remember an address that I once made in a Detroit school. I begun my address by questioning the children.

" 'Children,' I said, 'as I look at your bright, happy faces this afternoon, I wonder what I can talk to you about that will interest you most. Maybe you can suggest what I should talk about. Can't one of these clean, smiling boys, one of these red-cheeked, chubby girls, tell me what to talk about?'

"There was no response.

"I pointed my finger toward a lad in a distant corner.

" 'You, my child,' I said, 'you tell me what I shall say to you tonight.

"The boy in a high, thin voice replied:

" 'Say nothing and sit down.' "

Art in Humble Things.

OSCAR S. STRAUS, the new Secretary of Commerce and Labor, is a connoisseur of pottery and porcelains.

In conversation with a reporter in New York, Mr. Straus one day praised the useful arts—wood-carving, tapestry weaving, cabinet-making, and the like.

"Machinery," he said, "has robbed us of our useful arts to a great extent. In machine-made things there can be no artistic quality, no individual expression. In hand-made things, even the humblest, there is always an opportunity for art to show itself.

"Two street sweepers were quarreling one day about their talent in street sweeping.

" 'Well, Bill,' said one, 'I admit that you can clean up the middle of a street all right, but you ain't capable of doing an ornamental piece of work, like sweeping around a trolley pole.' "

He Knew.

THE late Judge M. Russell Thayer of Philadelphia used to tell a good story about a brother jurist who was an enthusiastic golfer.

The golfing judge, according to the story, had occasion to interrogate in a criminal suit a boy witness from Bala.

"Now, my lad," he said, "I want to know if you are acquainted with the nature and significance of an oath?"

The boy, raising his brows in surprise, answered:

"Of course I am, sir. Don't I caddy for you at the country Club?"

When You're in Rome.

AT a dinner given by Eugene Higgins on his yacht Varuna, Harry Lehr said of the burglaries in high life that have recently startled the public:

"I suppose our American morals are pretty bad. They are better than the Italian morals to be found in Rome, though.

"Watching the sunset from the Pincio one winter evening in Rome, a prince approached and invited me to dance at his palace.

"I attended the dance in the prince's grim, cold palace on the Corso, and at about 2 o'clock in the morni bade my host good-night, and went to the cloakroo my coat and hat.

"The attendant brought me a rusty hat and an old with a torn lining.

" 'Here,' said I, 'these are not mine. Mine are new'

"The attendant shrugged his shoulders.

" 'They are the best that are left, signor,' he said. ' new ones were all gone three hours ago.' "

Self-seekers.

BERNARD K. GREEN, the well-known consulting gineer of Washington, said the other day, in a disc sion of the new Pennsylvania Capitol, which he help to build:

"The trouble with every question is that self-seek enters into it. Were there no self-seekers, the w would be a very Utopia. But as it is——"

He smiled.

"Why, yesterday," he said, "in a talk about filtr in a café, I heard a well-dressed man say earnestly:

A Jacobs Story.

A MAGAZINE editor was talking about W. W. Ja the famous humorist.

"I went abroad this summer," he said, "to try to Mr. Jacobs to write for me; but I found that he ha he could do for six or seven years to come.

"He is a quiet, modest chap. When I praised his w derful skill in the writing of short stories, he said th was only their surprises that made his stories take.

"Then, to illustrate what he meant, he told me a s wherein the surprises came fast and furious.

"He said that a lawyer, defending a man accus housebreaking, spoke like this:

" 'Your Honor, I submit that my client did not into the house at all. He found the parlor window and merely inserted his right arm and removed a few fling articles. Now, gentlemen, my client's arm is himself, and I fail to see how you can punish the w individual for an offence committed only by one of limbs.'

"SO you are ready for your returns on that last shipment of lemons, Mr. Sturgeon?"

The manager of the San Limonera Fruit Exchange smiled expansively, as he asked the question.

"Yes—I thought there might be something coming to me—after the freight and commissions was paid;" and Uncle Bobby grinned responsively.

"Yes, yes,—a trifle," the manager returned, and, after rapidly whirling the leaves of a big book and making a few figures, he wrote out a check. He handed it over with a look of delighted expectancy.

The old man slowly drew out his spectacle case, untangled the bows, and mounted the glasses upon his nose, then he held the bit of paper up before his eyes. His first casual glance changed to a frowning peer and then to an incredulous stare, as he studied the figures.

"How's that, Mr. Sturgeon? how's that?" chuckled the manager.

"What did those lemons bring, anyway?" the old man demanded breathlessly.

"Three dollars and twenty-five cents a box—clear—best job we ever made!" was the satisfied rejoinder.

"And to think of the times I've been on the p'int of diggin' them lemon trees up—root and branch!" ejaculated their owner. "If it hadn't been for Becky, I'd had those ten acres in alfalfy, or corn, or beets, or some other old thing, long ago!"

Uncle Bobby carefully deposited the precious check in his big wallet and went outside. He hesitated, as he stood by the door, between his desire to return home and tell his wife of their good fortune and his intention, carefully planned before leaving home, of going into the city.

He and Becky had discussed the possibility of this shipment paying off the last installment on their mortgage, but they had hardly dared hope for such a piece of luck. And now the check in his pocket would not only clear the place, but leave a snug little balance to put in the bank.

"I wish Becky was with me," the husband thought, "but she says it always makes her sick to go to the city. So I reckon I better go on alone, and get the biz-ness straightened out as quick's I can."

And he boarded the next trolley car and was whizzed away. When the mortgage business was finally ended, the banks were closed. And so Uncle Bobby strolled down the street with money in his pocket.

"I'll get Becky a nice present," decided. "It's all due to her that we have that lemon orchard now. It'll make her happy to be appreciated, and that's the best thing I could do with the money."

The shop windows were bewildering. He looked critically through the glass at laces and silks and feminine falderols; but he did not venture within.

"She can buy her own dresses better'n I can," he wisely concluded.

He stopped before a jewelry store for a long time, and at last went inside. When he came out his face was beaming, and he hurried recklessly toward the station.

It was almost dark when he drove up to the little cottage that nestled in the midst of the lemon trees. Becky was waiting for him, and came through the soft gloom with the welcoming smile that had cheered him through years of toil and discouragement.

He climbed out of the buckboard with surprising agility, considering his weight and his whitened head, and in answer to her questioning, "Well, Bobby?" he kissed her plump cheek resoundingly.

She laughed, with a pleasant, deep-throated gurgle, "you silly!"

"What do you think those last lemons brought?" he demanded, seating himself upon the edge of the porch to enjoy to the full his disclosures.

"Why—I don't know;" a thrill of anxiety came into her voice; "I did hope there'd be enough to finish paying of the mortgage——"

"They brought exackly $3.24 a box, and there was 202 boxes of 'em."

"You don't mean it, Bobby!" she gasped.

"I've cashed the check and paid off the mortgage," he returned.

"Oh, Bobby!" she cried; and then—being a woman—she added: "Aren't you glad, now, that you didn't dig up those lemon trees?"

"Yes," he admitted, "but it's been a long, hard pull—dry years and black scale and fumigating and fertilizing, and freight bills bigger than the returns——"

"Yes, and years when lemons wasn't worth 3 cents a box—let alone $3," she continued.

"But they've done well, the last two years, and there's more a-coming;" and he peered through the darkness at the faintly yellowing balls among the glossy leaves.

"And now, Becky," he turned to her, "come in the house and light the lamp and see what I've brought you."

"A bag of lemon drops," she guessed, as she followed him in.

He watched with all the eagerness of a boy while she turned the package over and over; then she undid the wrappings and drew out the dainty white case.

"Land! what ever is it?" she cried as she fumbled with the spring. The lid flew back suddenly, disclosing a gold bracelet, set with a big yellow topaz.

"Oh, Bobby, Bobby! Oh, how beautiful! Why, I never had anything so beautiful, before, in my life!" Tears mingled with her laughter.

He took the bracelet from her and clasped it on her arm, which was still round and smooth, though discolored and hardened.

"There! It is a beauty, ain't it?" he cried exultantly; while she turned it about with a girlish admiration that obliterated years and wrinkles from her face.

"It was beautiful of you, Bobby, to think of it," and she kissed him tenderly. "And it was like you; you always think of me."

"You see," he confided half shamefacedly, "I never could give you anything nice enough, before, and you deserve the best there is, Becky!"

And then her glance fell from the gleaming thing on her arm to her old calico dress and gingham apron.

"But, Bobby," she asked in sudden dismay, "what'll I ever do with such a costly thing? Where'll I wear it to?"

"Wear it?" he echoed, "why, wear it anywhere." For a moment his face was crestfallen but then it cleared.

"Honey," he said, earnestly, "the thing has given us both a few moments of happiness. It's made you laugh like a girl, and your eyes are as bright as ever they was under that old Shaker bunnet, when I kissed you the first time—do you remember, eh? That's what I bought it for, and it's been well worth the money. Wear it here to home—wear it in the washtub, if you want to. It's already paid for itself!"

He went outside to take care of his horse; and his wife, before she set the bacon on the fire, lifted her arm and laid her lips to the gold bracelet.

ROSE ELLERBE.

The Man With the Ax.

SHOWING THAT COURAGE MAY BE FOUND IN BROADCLOTH.

By a Special Contributor.

"OF course Billy is tremendously nice, but——"

"My dear Avery," scolded Mrs. Teddie Benson, "don't get into the 'but' habit! It's a more complete give-away of age than white hair, and not half so becoming!"

Before tying on its nightcap, the seaside cottage was indulging in what Mrs. Teddie called the "kimono" hour; for the evenings that business kept Mr. Teddie in town the ladies, in coming home from the hotel dinner, quickly divested themselves of furbelows and formality, that they might enjoy to the full the intimate chat that two women and an open fire always revel in.

Avery clicked her rocker to a more confidential angle. "Billy is all right as far as he goes, b-u-t——" she laugh roguishly as the contraband word slipped from her lips. "You must admit, Chummie," she began again, "that he doesn't go very far."

"Six feet two in his socks," retorted Mrs. Teddie, perversely literal, "broad-shouldered, athletic and——"

"And wastes the power of his strong right arm on a golf ball!" scornfully flashed Avery. "Think what blows it could sweep with an ax!"

"My dear child, don't be absurd! Since Billy has a snug little fortune, and incidentally a budding law practice, wouldn't it be more wasteful for him to chop wood for a living than to frivol occasionally after an innocent little ball?"

"You don't understand!" A log fell apart in the fireplace, and the burst of flame illumined Avery's earnest face and the wistful depths of eyes blue as the sea. "I don't want Billy to fell forests—I only want to know that he's got wood-chopping in him!" She gave a little laugh, but there was a heartache not tucked away in its corner. "When a man had to blaze his own trail and build his own log cabin, Chummie, life was simple and straightforward. Every day duties brought out his strength—or branded him a weakling. But now! I'm tired and sick of the paper-doll type that goes no farther than good clothes and good form. And what more do I know about Billy? That he can sail a boat, run an automobile, dance, flirt—play golf."

Avery rose, scorn adding a cubit of imperiousness to her little figure, a defiant light in her blue eyes.

"I might as well tell you, Chummie, that when Billy left Sunday we said good-by for keeps. His trotting down to Seabright every few days is over. He sails day after tomorrow at noon—is going round the world by way of Japan."

The latter announcement she flung over her shoulder while crossing the room, and before Mrs. Benson could answer she flurriedly attached a forced exclamation over the loud booming of the surf.

The window sash creaked up and a soft laugh floated back to the fireplace.

"There's nothing like imagination, Chummie. The noise was only the rumble of the city express—it's stopping at the hotel station now. The ocean's as calm as a mill pond, and—listen!"

A bell clanged uproariously, and as the two women faced each other both gasped the same word—"Fire!" Then, snatching up their coats tossed on chairs, they darted from the house.

The country darkness sucking down upon them seemed impenetrable to city eyes until they were conscious of blacker blotches of men, women and children scurrying past; the instinct that guides the wings of birds leading them on into the heart of the little town.

The alarm bell had ceased, but round a nearby corner swung the important clatter of the yoke of cowbells on the new hose reel bumping over the rain-washed road, some ten pairs of hands wildly tugging at the ropes.

At last Main street stretched before them; the reflectors and transparencies hung in front of Seabright's leading saloons and dance hall, lighting up its short length, at the end of which columns of dense smoke piled heavily.

"The Rookery!" panted Mrs. Benson. "That old frame lodging-house—it will burn like kindling!"

They hastened their hurried steps.

At the beginning of the next block a clumsily-tied clothes line across street and sidewalk forced the crowd back from dangerous curiosity. Beyond the rope, old furniture and bundled treasure from the burning building blurred upon the curb, while in the middle of the street shadowy forms of volunteer firemen ran to and fro—a futile effort to unreel the hose; an excited disputing as to which of two water plugs it should be attached; a jangle of a dozen voices yelling directions and misdirections.

Avery pointed upward. A sharp-edged flame cut through the smoke.

"Why don't they hurry!" exclaimed Mrs. Benson. "It will burn to the ground before they begin!"

Out from the alley in front of the Rookery now sprang a dark figure, taller than the other shadows, an ax swung on his shoulder. The tumult of the street drowned the sound of his voice, but his gestures hinted at his quick words of command; the instant obedience of the demoralized men flashed proof of his compelling force of leadership. In one masterful moment he gathered the tangled threads of confusion into a strand of order, and having set each man about his own definite business, he led a swift climb up a ladder to the burning roof.

A downpour of blinding smoke blotted him from view of the watching crowd, until the wind rent the curtain into parted folds, revealing glimpses of darting tongues of fire and the leaping flash of an ax.

Then came a spurt, a gush of water; a steady, well-directed stream flooding out the flame. The situation was under control.

. . . .

"Lucky the chap that bossed the job through arrived when he did," said a bystander at Mrs. Teddie Benson's elbow, half an hour later as the spectators began to turn away. "Ten minutes more, and the back buildings of the drug store would have caught; there would have been explosions and——" (laughing, he snapped his fingers)——"the whole town would have gone like that."

Avery's hand trembled on Mrs. Benson's arm. "He's the kind of man that I was talking about tonight," she said in a low voice. "One who can snatch an emergency and hold it in the hollow of his hand—who can think, and dare, and do! He even had an ax, Chummie!"

Mrs. Teddie answered with an indulgent smile. "Come, it's over—they're winding up the hose. Let's get back to the cottage. I'm sleepy."

"Not till he passes by," whispered Avery. "I must see him face to face."

"Romantic little goose! How disappointed you'll be when you discover Seabright's baker, butcher or candlestick maker."

"He's coming toward us now. There, in the crowd—where are you, Chummie?"

But Mrs. Teddie Benson's glance had outrun Avery's, and wise in her generation of understanding, she had stepped aside, her twinkling eyes preoccupied.

The man with the ax strode forward; out from the crowd to pause in front of Avery; hat in hand, a smile on the face scorched and blistered in the fight.

"Quite a little blaze," he said casually. "Glad I got down in time for the excitement."

"B-i-l-l-y!" cried Avery, both little hands impulsively outstretched.

MAY C. RINGWALT.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS GIFT.

A great many people think that because they are not able to give Christmas gifts, because they cannot give money or what it will buy, they can give nothing. How little we realize that the best thing anybody can ever give in this world is not money, not clothing, fuel, or provisions, but himself.

I know a lady who is very poor. She has no money to give to the poor at Christmas. But she goes around for days before Christmas, visiting every person she hears of being sick or crippled or unfortunate, every one who has any trouble, whether she knows him or not. And she gives out such a wealth of love, of sympathy, of encouragement, good cheer, and sunshine, that these people feel enriched for a whole year. The material things they receive are cold and unsympathetic in comparison with what this poor woman gives them. On the other hand, I know a man, wealthy but selfish, whose conscience begins to trouble him just before Christmas, and he sends out checks, coal, clothing, provisions to the poor people. Then he feels a sort of relief; he has eased his conscience, which prodded him. But he rarely, if ever, goes to see these poor people—never gives them anything of himself, his encouragement, or good cheer.

This is not the spirit of Christmas. The spirit of Christmas is the Christ spirit, the helpful spirit. It is the giving of what Christ gave. He had no money to give—He was the poorest of the poor—but did ever any Croesus have so much to give? Did any millionaire ever radiate so much power and hope to the discouraged, so much good cheer to the disheartened, or so much comfort to the sick and the sorrowing?—[O. S. Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

POPULAR FOWLS.

THE SILVER-PENCILED WYANDOTTES HAVE MUCH TO COMMEND THEM.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

AMONG Wyandotte fowls the Silver Penciled has much to commend it alike to the favor of the fancier and of the utility breeder, being handsome in appearance and a good layer of brown eggs and a desirable consideration for table purposes. And, though a comparatively new introduction, it has gained a foothold in nearly every State in the Union, and has during the past few years been a marked feature of the poultry exhibitions in this State. When bred to standard conditions it is one of the handsomest fowls we know of. The plumage on head is a silvery white, that of the neck of the same color with a distinct stripe extending through the feather, tapering to a point; again, that of the back should be of the same color—saddle silvery white, with black stripe; under color, dark slate; breast, black; body and fluff of the same color; wings, primaries black, lower edge white; wing coverts, glossy greenish black; bows silvery white; tail black; legs and thighs grayish black; beak a dark horn, shading to yellow; eyes, bright red or bay; face, wattles, ear lobes, bright red. The standard weights are cock 8½ pounds, cockerel 7½ pounds, hen 6½ pounds, pullet 5½ pounds.

are the least of the careless in observing things which make for them, and commercial centers are mute, reliable witnesses. But they deal with the average. An expert breeder of any standard breed gets expert results. If one would start an egg farm, an egg producing community ought to assure him what standard breed to start with. Petaluma, for instance, ought to speak impartially of Leghorns, of White Leghorns. An expert with Leghorns can make an egg farm most assuredly, but that is not saying it is a "best breed." It is only a best breed for an egg farm. As a table product it is far from luxury, is merely a bird bit of meat. Many a man is positive Black Minorcas are without equal as egg producers. They lay a larger egg than the Leghorn, and probably are the equal in eggs by the pound. They are a larger fowl, better for the table than Leghorns, but a most unpleasant thing to prepare on account of the black pin feathers. The black pigment-like juice in the pin feather spills and discolors the body skin, yet the breed is so grand one would not stop for this failing. The Black Langshan is a winter layer of big eggs. The White Wyandotte is a most beautiful bird, and the bred-to-lay hen often makes the two-hundred-egg record. The Orpingtons are big fowls with big egg records. Plymouth Rocks are big, heavy fowls, and he who thinks their egg records not up to modern figures has been misled. They are the best all around bird for family flocks, I quite believe, though I like a more ambitious bird. They are great eaters, but special feeding makes them the equal of the Leghorn as layers, and in the ultimate some of the best eating to be found. The Dorking is a most wonderful bird, but not much bred in this southern country. It is of the Leghorn family, but large and active. It is a great winter layer, and as a family fowl has but one failing. As an early fryer it is "nit," has no meat on it until six or eight months old. The year old fowl has no peer as a table fowl, the dark, wild looking meat being most juicy. It is the table fowl of England. It lays a big white egg and the hens lay more eggs than the pullets up to six years. They are a grand breed, but who shall say which is the best breed?

SILVER PENCILED WYANDOTTE.

From Feathered World, London.

As already said, the Penciled Wyandottes are good layers and furnish a fine carcass, either as broilers, fryers or roasters. Like many of the breeds, they seem to make a strong appeal to the English fanciers and breeders, who seem to have readily done more with them than their native country. The Partridge, the Columbia and Silver Penciled, have "caught on" in good shape across the water, where their beauty and utility qualities have won the first place among the rank and file of the breeders. We doubt if any sketch of the breed ever published in this country can equal that which The Times presents to its readers, taken from the Feathered World of London. The artist has certainly "caught" all the admirable features of the variety, and offered a drawing which must make a strong appeal to every breeder of the Wyandotte fowl.

About "Best Breeds."

Relation enters more fully into the breeding of poultry than in any other industry. It is quite safe to assert that there are no "best breeds." A breed is what one makes it, and a hen what one makes her. The hen laying two hundred eggs for one man, being bought, removed to another environment and fed by other hands, may lay no better than the ordinary hen. It is a mistake to think one can buy "two-hundred-egg" hens and have a flock of them for money. All the standard-bred breeds are good in good environment. Each breed needs special attention to bring it up to best conditions. One must decide which he prefers. If he prefers an egg-laying breed, he must expect lighter table fowls. The heavy breeds, those adapted to table service, are not as a rule the best layers. A commercial poultry center is a responsible witness to certain facts. An egg-producing section on purely commercial lines breeds White Leghorns. It must be that a Leghorn has exclusive capacities as an egg producer. Commercial men

There is no best breed. One must study the environment and decide which breed best fits it, or if one is going to choose environment adapt it to the chosen breed. High flying fowls must have a wire topped yard, if in confinement. Plymouth Rocks stand confinement well and do not fly much, are too heavy. Leghorns fly like pigeons, but a commercial breeder cuts the wing flights and makes them cripples in low wire runs. The fancier shudders at cripples and likes to furnish a high run. A Dorking hen weighing eight pounds has energy enough to fly to a ten-foot shed to lay and steal a nest and breed. It is genuine fun to let one think she is stealing a march on you, to let her hatch out ten or twelve chicks on a shed roof and see her get them to terra firma. She pushes them off the roof, one by one, and they flutter down with a make-the-best-of-it hope of landing somewhere in a nice green patch. I never knew one to be injured in landing.

The breed of one's choice is how much a matter of relation. If one likes white fowls and wants a heavy one to confine in a low run, nothing can beat a White Plymouth Rock. The proper self effort can make her lay as many pounds of eggs as a Leghorn, and he can easily learn what that effort should be. If he likes black fowls for a low run, can Orpingtons be beaten? Among fanciers nervous men like slow-going big fowls, and slow-going big men like quick nervous fowls. The quick nervous fowls are supposed to be better layers, but it is only supposition. Like humanity they seldom have the flesh of the slow going. If one wants hens

What Readers Want to Know.

Mary M. McGillen of Hollywood writes for a remedy for incipient roup, complaining that her fowls have a thick coating on the tongue and a hacking noise, as though breathing with difficulty. If your birds have a rattling in the throat they are suffering from a cold with bronchitis. Give aconite in the drinking water, a dozen homeopathic pellets to a quart of water. Robinson, in his book on "Poultry Craft," recommends the following in case of colds: Equal parts of cayenne pepper, ginger and mustard mixed as stiffly as possible in lard, then flour worked in to make a stiff dough; form in pills or pellets about the size of a small hazelnut; give by opening the mouth and dropping down the throat. A single treatment often cures; if not, repeat in twenty-four hours.

E. Aquirore, Bairdstown, writes as follows:

"1—I have forty-five chicks, Barred Plymouth Rocks, weeks old, well feathered; they like to run outside when raining. Will rain hurt them?

"2—I have used the dry-hopper method of feeding, since they were four weeks old, with satisfactory results. Could I put them on dry-hopper feed at an earlier age?

"3—What kind of fowls would you advise for winter layers?

"4—Do hens remain in the trap nests after laying?"

(1) There is no especial harm in allowing chicks to run in the rain, provided they have clean quarters and are kept active. At night, however, they should be in dry, warm, draught-proof houses, and it would be best to provide them access to sheltered quarters during a prolonged rainy spell. As a usual thing rains are cold and chilly in Southern California.

(2) Many feeders feed dry chick feed, properly balanced, when about two weeks of age.

(3) The breed and variety that strikes your fancy. Strictly speaking there are no exclusive winter layers, though it is said some breeds lay better in winter than others, but that is after all a matter of management and feeding. Hatch so that your pullets will "come in" commencing to lay in the early winter months.

(4) Arrange your trap nest so that the hen can leave but not return to the general flock until you can give her credit for one egg.

J. D. Bradbeer, an experienced breeder at Norwalk, this State, writes as follows bearing on Mrs. Dr. Reed's query of a few weeks ago concerning poultry parasites: The first is the common wood tick, the same kind of insect that causes fever in cattle (commonly called tick fever.) To eradicate moisten four quarts of sand or ashes, mix one-half an ounce of carbolic acid, sprinkle around the feathers. It is a thorough vermin exterminator. The second is a miniature flea. Melt one pound of vaseline and mix with one pound of coal oil, add one-half ounce of carbolic acid, stir, and when cool dip the head of the chick in the solution. This same remedy will cure scaley leg and scabby head. Spray coal oil, or distillate on the floor, and two or three feet up the outside of the houses.

Caught on the Wing.

A European writer expresses the opinion that pullets of a strain producing cockerels which crow early in life will beget early and precocious layers.

This town will be a lively place next January with two poultry shows in the field. Besides that of the Los Angeles Poultry Association, the Breeders' Society will have a show.

Among Wyandotte breeders it is indeed a mooted question as to which variety will lay the most eggs. In a recent egg-laying test in Australia, the Whites made a record of 213 eggs per hen, the Silvers under same conditions ran 202 and 204.

The Nebraska Egg Buyers' Association will in the future grade all eggs it handles, and pay according to quality. The farmers and country storekeepers will of course "take notice," and the quality of hen fruit in that State will be correspondingly improved.

If you expect to "do things" in the poultry business you will have to take a live interest in your work. Watch what your successful competitor is doing, particularly so, long about show time.

Do not negative the boy's or the girl's ambition to keep a few hens. A fancy for poultry is a beautiful and stimulating hobby, worthy of encouragement, and will lead young people to habits of thrift.

Familiarity with your birds makes them tame and enables you to detect the presence of disease and abnormal conditions much more readily than in flocks that are subjected to loud talking and constant worry.

W. Latta, proprietor of the Broadway Department Store, and of the Holmby Poultry Farm at Hollywood, has been rather fortunate in his winnings at two recent poultry shows. At the San José fixture, he won eleven firsts and several seconds. While at Fresno he won the $20 special on the best bird in the show, ten firsts on the pigeons, and a few smalls

HEROES OF THE TUNNELS.

DARING DEEDS OF THE "SAND HOGS" THAT ARE UNKNOWN AND UNSUNG.

Tunnel laborers are a high grade of workmen, and among them are scores of potential heroes, although they would laugh if told so, says Arthur B. Reeve, in the World's Work for December. Every time there is a "blow-out" this fact is dramatically demonstrated. An example of this occurred last June in one of the East River tunnels. After a blast had been exploded, the thirteen men who were working 500 feet out under the river and perhaps seventy-five feet below it, hastened forward, only to be confronted by a rush of swirling water and mud. The dreaded "blow-out" had occurred. Part of the roof formed by the river bed had given away and water was rushing in while the protecting "air" was rushing out.

The lights grew dim and the tunnel filled with fog, as it always does under a "blow-out." Stumbling and groping, the men turned and rushed frantically back to the air lock. The big air lock was closed. The foreman tugged at the door, but it did not budge. The only thing left to do was to scramble up to the small emergency lock above. The men were in a panic. Action must be quick if they were to be saved. If two men got wedged in the door, big enough only for one, a precious minute might be lost, and with it the lives of all.

That was just exactly what was about to happen when the foreman seized a pick handle lying on the floor. With this weapon in his resolute hands, he lined up the panic-stricken men and made them crawl one by one through the narrow opening to safety. Then he crawled through himself, not a minute too late, for the water was already entering the lock as he banged the door leading into the tunnel. Safe in the lock, one of them not yet recovered from his fright turned on the valve so hard that they would all probably have had "the "bends" if the heroic foreman had not guarded the valve with the pick handle until he had brought the whole party out without the loss of a man.

A few days later, in another tunnel, thirty men were working out about 120 feet from the lock when a "blow-out" occurred. "Danger!" shouted some one, and the whole gang made for the air lock. They made it easily and closed the door—all except two men who had volunteered to stay and see if the hole in the river could not be stopped up. Often it is possible to plug a small hole with a coat or shirt, and the river bed will close the whole made by the "air."

CHRISTMAS IN THE FROZEN NORTH.

A universal robe of white had long covered our country-side, hiding every vestige of our rocky soil, and every trace of the great summer fishery. The mail steamer had paid its last visit for six months, and thus the last link with civilization was broken. Even the loitering sea ducks and lesser auks had left us. The iron grip of winter lay on sea and shore.

At its best, the land here scarcely suggests the word "country" to a Southerner—scarcely even the word "moors." For the rock is everywhere close to the surface, and mosses and lichens are its chief products. The larger part of the country we call "barrens." Few of the houses deserve even to be called cottages, for all are of light, rough wood. Most are of only one story, and contain but two rooms. The word "huts" would convey a more accurate idea of these humble abodes. The settlements themselves are small and scattered, and at this time the empty tilts of the summer fishermen give a still more desolate aspect to these lonely habitations.

Early in December we had been dumped from the little mail steamer on the harbor ice about half a mile from shore, and hauled up to the little Mission hospital, where we were to make our headquarters for the winter. The name of our harbor was St. Anthony. Christmas was close upon us. The prospect of enjoying the conventional pleasures of the season was not bright. Not unnaturally our thoughts went over the sea to the family gathering at home, at which our places would be vacant. We should miss the holly and mistletoe, the roast beef and plum pudding, the inevitable crackers, and the giving and receiving of presents which had always seemed essential to a full enjoyment of the Christmas holiday.

We soon found that few of the children here had ever possessed a toy; and that there was scarcely a single girl that owned a doll. Now and again one would see, nailed high up on the wall, well out of reach of the children, a flimsy, cheaply-painted doll; and the mother would explain that her "Pa had got un from a trader, sir, for 30 cents. No, us don't allow Nellie to have it, 'feared lest she might spoil un"—a fear I found to be only too well grounded, when I came to examine its anatomy more closely.

Christmas trees in plenty grew near the hospital; and we could easily arrange for a "Father Christmas." The only question was, whether our stock of toys would justify us in inviting so many children as would want to come. It is easy to satisfy children like these, however, and so we announced that we expected Santa Claus on a certain day. There was great talk about the affair. Whispers reached us that Aunt Mary thought her Joe weren't too big to come; sure, he'd be only 16. May White was only going 18, and she would so like to come. Old Daddy Gilliam would like to sit in a corner. He'd never seen a Christmas tree, and he was nigh on 80. We were obliged to yield, and with guilty consciences expected twice as many as the room would hold. All through the day before the event the Sister was busy making buns; and it was even whispered that a barrel of apples had been carried over to the "room."—[Wilfred T. Grenfell, in Putnam's

FIELD NOTES.

Arrival of New Parasites.

WHEN State Insectarian Carnes was in Los Angeles two weeks ago he received notice of the arrival at San Francisco of another lot of trees from China, bearing several species of parasites of the purple and red scale. This lot of trees had been sent to the Orient from California several months ago. It contained plenty of these scales to be exposed to their Chinese enemies and sent back when the latter had taken hold, to multiply on the way and to be bred out at the Sacramento insectary for distribution throughout the State. Notice will be given in due time if this last attempt to establish these beneficial insects does not prove abortive. Compere writes that there are five species of parasites for the purple, and three for the red upon this shipment of trees. It is too early to base any hope whatever upon the success of this effort, and citrus fruit growers will have to be content with the assurance that these trials are still being made.

Commercial Scalecides.

EVERY year one or more manufacturers of insecticides sends agents to Southern California with instructions to establish a depot for the remedies in Los Angeles. They have heard that our people are the greatest bug fighters in the world, and expect much revenue from the sale of these usually meritorious remedies. This is altogether legitimate and commendable, but disappointment usually follows because the eastern firms and their agents understand nothing whatever about the conditions to be encountered here. The latest agent called with an excellent preparation for destroying the San José scale. He had a bottle of "scalecide" and a bottle of water, prepared to demonstrate how well the materials emulsify when turned together. But he soon learned that there could not be enough of this scale remedy sold in a year here to pay car fare. I asked him to go out and try to find a San José scale before renting an office; to investigate the work of the parasites if he succeeded in locating the scale; to see how the growers were wedded to other remedies equally as good as his, and how thoroughly the State, the University and the horticultural officers had studied this insect and established methods of control. This straight talk induced the agent to save money and time by advising his principals that there was no field here for selling this remedy or any other for that particular pest. Free remedies and insect destroyers offered in this way are often good, and useful where there is an insect or malady to attack.

Peach Blight Progressing.

ALL the larger peach-producing counties of California are facing a new peach disease. The malady was noticed along the Feather River twelve years ago, but it is only within the last two or three years that general alarm has been felt concerning this visitation. This disease was first described in the Netherlands in 1883, and has no doubt been gradually working westward for many years, falling with heavy destruction wherever the winter conditions were favorable to the growth of the fungus and there remaining to grow worse with each succeeding year. Following the success with peaches in Southern California in yield and profit last season the appearance of this blight here means another backset to a promising industry. Fortunately, after 12 years of location in the State this malady has not yet appeared in San Diego, Orange, Riverside, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Ventura or Santa Barbara counties. Whether this delay is caused by the isolation of our orchards from the original point of infection, or from climatic causes, or from some other cause no one knows, but it will probably break out somewhere before long and our growers will have to meet it.

The fungus causing peach blight was first described in Europe about twenty-three years ago, under the botanical name of Coryneum beyerinkii. It is a true parasite, living only on the live tissues of the host plant. The spores of this great-named fungus winter over at the base of the buds, germinates during the midwinter rains and are ready to attack the new growth as soon as it starts. Hence remedial measures must be applied from December 15 to January 1. The best remedy found so far is a strong Bordeaux mixture, using sixteen pounds of bluestone and twenty-five pounds quicklime to 100 gallons of water. The results of this application in the north, so far have been uniformly good, in many cases entirely destroying the blight. Peach growers should be ready to meet this malady should it appear in this part of the State.

Resistant Vines.

FREDERIC T. BIOLETTI, the vine expert of the University of California, says, in referring to the use of different resistant stocks for grafting the grape:

"Many of the first resistant vineyards started in California were planted with cuttings of wild Riparia vines collected in Nebraska and other native habitats of the species. Wild vines are nearly always seedlings and, therefore, vary very much. Each vine, though of the same wild species, is in fact a different variety of the species (using the word variety in the horticultural sense). For this reason, wild vines differ greatly in many respects, and especially in the important character of vigor. Though a few of them may be sufficiently vigorous to make good grafting stock, many of them are much too weak or slender, and none of them are likely to be as good as the best-named varieties which have been selected from a vast number of seedlings on account of their exceptional vigor and the possession of the greatest number of those characteristics which are desirable in a grafting stock. Most of the earlier resistant vineyards show great variation in the vigor and bearing of the vines due to this use of wild cuttings, and none of them give as good results as they would have given if grafted on a good selected variety of stock. This variation in vigor, bearing and longevity is often found in more modern vineyards, and is due to a mixing of varieties by the nurseryman or the grower of resistant cuttings.

Crop Estimate.

BUT one estimate of a crop in the course of a season is made by Orange Judd Farmer, but it does point out during the latter period of growth the crop possibilities as indicated by the conditional figures. Last month it was stated that the corn crop gave promise of being the largest on record and that it would probably be above 2,750,000,000 bushels. This month our correspondents, after securing results of husking in sufficient volume to warrant an estimate of the local rate of yield in each county, furnish the estimate which when consolidated into State averages show an average rate of yield for the whole corn belt of 31.1 bushels per acre, making a total crop of 2,963,000,000 bushels. The rate last year was decidedly above the average for a series of years, but it only reached 28.7 bushels.

The high rate of yield this year is reported in practically all districts where corn is an important crop, so that the bumper crop is practically universal. The crop was secured in excellent condition, frost which had at one time threatened to shorten the yield and effect the quality, holding off until the grain was thoroughly matured and gathered.

About Fruit Boxes.

IN view of the growing scarcity of sugar pine for box shooks, fruit packers are ndeavoring to devise pack-eggs i nan egg crate. A ring of apples is laid against these is a special barrel in which apples are to be packed as follows, as described by the Watsonville Register:

"The apples are packed in the barrel something like eggs in an egg crate. A ring o f apples is laid against the wall of the receptacle and then a ring of pasteboard. Another ring of apples is laid and then another ring of pasteboard, until the first layer is ready. Between the apples are placed squares of pasteboard. When this is completed a disk of pasteboard is placed over the whole layer. The layer being done, the next is started. So the process of packing goes on until half the barrel is filled, when a disk of wood is nailed in. Allowing a skip of an inch of wood, another disk of wood is nailed and the process of packing apples begins over again until the top is reached. In this manner it is possible for the consignee to saw the barrel in two and sell a half barrel if he wishes.

"Apples packed in this manner are secure from vibration or secure from being jarred in the handling. The argument against the present style of box is that apples are bruised on the top row when the covers are nailed on and also that all the apples through the box are bruised when stacked one upon another or moved about in handling or loading."

Sam's Harvest.

FOR years the agricultural production of the United States has been steadily increasing, and during the past three or four years this increase has been by leaps and bounds. Last year it was announced that our farms had yielded the almost unthinkable value of $415,000,000 as compared with $4,900,000,00 for 1904 and $4,480,000,000 for 1903. This enormous production has called forth many pessimistic statements. We have been repeatedly told that such a pace could not long be maintained, that diminished yields and agricultural depression must soon come. But the end is not yet. Farm production was thought to have reached its highest point in 1905, but this year has far eclipsed all others and rolled up a total which now promises to reach the stupendous sum of $7,000,000.—[Farming.

Need for Rural Mounted Police.

PETTY lawlessness is too common in many rural sections, and this often results in serious crime. The local constable can seldom be notified in time to stop such depredations. In occasional townships in our Western States conditions are so serious that the selectmen or town authorities are really afraid to invoke the law against malefactors for fear that the accused will burn their buildings. At times petty crimes seem to be actually encouraged by the law here and there locally met, which obliges the town to pay the costs of criminal prosecutions.

The Pennsylvania Legislature, at its last session, provided for a rural mounted police to be under the pay, direction and jurisdiction of State authority. The result of this experiment will be watched with intense interest, and it may prove to be the simplest, cheapest and best way of dealing with the difficulty. Certainly that will be the result if the Pennsylvania constabulary prove anywhere near as efficient as is the famous northwest mounted police of Canada.

It is a fact that the family in the rural districts of the Canadian northwest lives in greater safety and se- curity against not only petty crimes, but those of a more serious nature than is true in many parts of this coun- try. The State of Texas has long had its famous Texas rangers or police, and is about to enlarge that body. The public and their officers in township and county should of course do their full duty in restraining crime and dealing with offenders, but certain it is that the co- operation of a rural mounted police, paid by the State would be of great assistance. Such police need not be numerous, for the fact that they are within telephone call of every rfural home will in itself prove a terror to evil doers.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Dry Farming.

THE sum and substance of the dry farming propo- sition is to so prepare the upper eight or ten inches of the soil as to absorb and retain for the use of the plants all the moisture which falls during the season and to use the varieties that are most drouth-resisting. There is nothing complicated about it nor is there any- thing mysterious. The way to prepare the land so it will hold the greatest available amount of moisture has often been described in these columns, and will be re- ferred to again. The method is simple, and any one can adopt it. The selection of drouth-resisting varie- ties is also simple. There are now many classes of plants that are distinctly suited to semi-arid conditions some of the notable being durum or macaroni wheat Kershon oats, alfalfa, kafir corn, etc. The exercise of good common sense will accomplish great results.

Pruning Walnut Trees.

WALNUT trees are usualy left unpruned from the time they are planted until it is necessary to trim up the lower branches that bend to the ground and in- terfere with cultivation. There are a few exceptions however, where young trees have been topped and shaped during the first two or three years. There seems to be no particular advantage if there is any, judging from the appearance of young trees that have been well handled and no pruning done on them with the excep- tion of cutting off decumbant branches that prevent proper cultivation. There is a walnut grove in La Ha- bra Valley, however, which had part of its trees pruned while young with the idea of making the top more dense. This gave the young trees a fine appearance, but the ad- vantage gained is a doubtful quantity.

When the tops of walnut trees begin to die, the dead branches should be removed down to the healthy wood. When old walnut trees begin to decline they seldom ever regain near their former vigor. They seem to be like the human race in that respect. The chief advan- tage gained by pruning out the dead and "torpid" branches is in the appearance of the tree, and at the same time it has a tendency to force out new growth which will improve the circulation of sap and thus bene- fit the entire tree.—[J. M., in Cultivator.

Moth Parasites.

SECRETARY JOHN ISAAC of the State Horticul- ral Commission is quoted as follows in relation to the parasite of the codling moth imported from Europe: "During the two years the insect has been bred by the Horticultural Commission and distributed in the differ- ent localities of the State where the codling moth has established itself, J. R. Banks of Laughlin, who received a colony of the parasites and placed them in his twenty- acre apple orchard, reports that his crop this year was almost entirely free from worms. Clyde M. manager of the Shade farm at Anderson, had trouble with the moth last year, and since placing the para- sites in the orchard he says that but few of the apples and pears have had worms in them. Like reports have been received from a large number of fruit growers over the State, and from these accounts—the first the commission has received—Mr. Isaac says he is positive that at last the true enemy to the moth has been found. In two years' time the little fly that preys upon the cod- ling moth has saved entire orchards to the fruit growers said Mr. Isaac, but the limited number of the parasites has made it impossible to distribute them all over the fruit districts. The work up to this time has been largely of an experimental nature, but now that the value of the insect is definitely known, it will be bred in larger numbers and placed in every orchard in the State.

Apples.

COMPARED with a year ago the apple crop of shows excellent recovery. According to Orange Judd Farmer's report, published November 3, the yield of apples is 36,120,000 barrels. This may be com- pared with the short crop of 1905 of less than barrels. But it is less than the average of three pre- ceding years, this being something like bar- rels, and growers have secured some of the advantage in the way of better prices for sound stock, good to place in storage for winter markets. While the has thus been exceeded a number of times, the good in important surplus States, particularly New England, and large quantities of apples are in ter storage. The yield in the West and South proved less than at one time appeared probable to ravages of insect pests, bitter rot, etc.—[

Potatoes Failing.

CONSUMERS of California potatoes have noticed for some time that the quality of the tubers has not been high. In fact there has been complaint this season that should convince potato growers of the necessity of producing better stock. Few other commodities for cooking sustain a greater loss than blighted tomatoes. Tubers more or less rotting from this vine disease must be pared to small proportions to remove the damaged fiber. California truckmen are not doing much to prevent this loss to their customers. If the average supply was equal to the demand poor potatoes would not be purchased at any price, at least when the offerings of clean stock were ample. This state of the industry could be easily improved by the use of the simplest remedy—Bordeaux mixture. This germicide is cheap and easily made. It is coming to be the main protection against blight and is freely used late in the season to combat this most destructive enemy of the potato grower. Scarcely an agricultural paper or potato bulletin that has not given plain directions for the preparation of this remedy, and every truckman who has followed the formula and used good material has increased his potato yield and the quality of the tubers from 25 to 100 per cent. as compared with those of fields where no attempts were made to stay this malady. Few consumers know the causes that produce the scruffy, [illegible] potatoes that are found in every market, and the producers do not use any remedies whatever to improve the quality of the output. No Limit to Crops.

There is practically no limit to the crops that are grown in this most fertile section. According to statistics wheat averages forty to sixty bushels per acre. Kaffir and Egyptian corn is grown with abundance. Irish and sweet potatoes and yellow yams and melons are singularly profitable.

Beets, beans, cabbage and tomatoes also flourish luxuriantly under the hands of careful farmers. Cantaloupes, fruits and berries mature so early that they reach the market in ample time to secure the highest prices.

Much of the productive power of the soil is due to the fact that there is a very rich loam underlying the surface, and this joined to the ideal weather conditions is a never-to-be-forgotten boon to the agriculturist.

Nor is the farmer altogether dependent upon the rainfall. Be it remembered that the artesian well supply is practically inexhaustible. Naturally these conditions are very encouraging to the settlers who engage in stock raising or other farm products.

The water supply is plentiful, the native grasses are very nutritious, the stock grazes all winter long without hay, grain or shelter. It follows that the number of hogs, sheep, cattle and horses raised in the country run into the thousands, and with convenient shipping facilities and a ready market prove a lucrative source of income to those who raise them.

The central location, or Corcoran, 220 miles from Los Angeles, gives an advantage to shippers of live stock and poultry which makes it a desirable shipping point.—[California Cultivator.

Cabbage Palm.

AUSTRALIA has a type of palm that rejoices in the botanical name of Liviston Australis (Mart.,) but is commonly known as the cabbage palm, so called because the early Australian settlers used to eat the growing center or heart of the tree as a vegetable. It is really an excellent vegetable, with a peculiar walnut-like flavor, but a tree must be destroyed to supply a single dish of the so-called "cabbage." It is the most common of the Australian palms, and the only one that extends from tropical Queensland down southward into Victoria. The average height is below eighty feet, but single individuals may attain a much greater height.—[The Sphere.

The Lantana.

THE Lantana is one of those bright ever-bloomers which always give an added attraction to both outdoor and window gardens, and will stand more abuse than almost any other flower that grows, and give you more blossoms, on an average, from one year's end to another, than anything else you can plant in the same space. And yet, many say: "I just can't make Lantanas grow," or "my Lantana won't bloom."

Well, my Lantanas always grow, and they always bloom. If I get cuttings I stick them down in the sand box for eight or ten days—at which time the roots will begin to grow—if I want them for the house or porch. I then fill a pot or keg with some poor, sandy soil, plant them and set them in the shade out of the wind for a few days, then bring them into the sunshine, and in less than two weeks they will show buds for the blossoms soon to come. If I want them outdoors I hunt the poorest spot in the yard, add a little sand and gravel—if there is not some already there—put out my plants, and the flowers are sure to reward me for my labor of love. So all you who love the Lantana remember that it loves poor, sandy, or gravelly soil, and given such will thrive in either sun or shade and give you blossoms galore.—[Virgie C. Moon, in the Gentlewoman.

Happy Imperialists.

"EVERYBODY is jubilant and happy over the final closing of the gap in the river. We will celebrate the event in proper style soon—probably about the middle of December. It will take some time to make all the arrangements. But we will have a big time, I think.

"We are learning what we can grow to the best advantage," said Mr. Lienay, when asked about the crops, "and will soon have quite a different class of products to put upon the market. We have been growing alfalfa and hogs, and will continue to raise these crops, as they pay well. You see, we cut our alfalfa from seven to nine times a year, while in other places they cut only from three to seven times. We get from nine to twelve tons of it per acre. We raise our hogs on this alfalfa in the field, and finish them on barley, which is another staple crop with us.

"But we are finding out a number of other crops to grow. Bermuda onions is another of the crops, and this will be a big thing with us, as there is but one other place in this country where they grow anything like as well, and that is on a small strip of country in Texas. This is a crop easy to irrigate, as the fields may be flooded, and they take lots of water. We have grown enough of these to bring $200 an acre for the crop. Asparagus is another crop we can grow to perfection, and we will soon be shipping this in quantities. The farming will thus become more diversified in time, and make the community a more independent one than it is."—[Imperial Correspondence Redlands Facts.

Philippine Pals.

IN many provinces of the Philippines the cocoanut palm is cultivated for its oil only. This, when exported to more temperate climates, forms a solid cake and is made into soap and candles, but on the islands the tropical heat keeps it in a liquid state, and it is principally used for oiling machinery, and for cooking and lighting purposes. In these regions the nightly terror is a possible earthquake, so in every habitation, large or small, a tiny light burns from nightfall to dawn. The lamp that holds this light is a glass half filled with water, on the top of which is poured a small quantity of cocoanut oil; in this floats a wick protected by a little strip of tin. The light is a mere firefly, but it is enough, and in case of alarm other lights soon make an illumination sufficient to be of service in the emergency.

The sap of the cocoanut palm tree forms a delightful beverage which is known as tuba. To procure it incisions are made high up in the flowering stalk of the tree, and underneath these cuts vessels are hung to catch the juice, just as when we gather the sap of the sugar maple in the spring. These are renewed at sunrise and set, the sap being served fresh by carriers at the houses along a regular route. A distilled cocoa wine is also made of this juice. Trees used for gathering tuba are never of any value for fruit production, as the loss of sap takes from the trees the power of bringing its fruit to any degree of maturity. Tuba gathering is in itself a dangerous occupation. The natives must climb the tall trees to place their vessels for collecting the sap and bring them down again, and a single false step would mean a fall to the ground below and almost a certainty of instant death.—[Gentlewoman.

"Free Seed" Abuse.

THE National Grange, in session at Denver, adds its voice to the universal chorus of denunciation of the sneaking methods of Congressmen in advertising themselves at the expense of the public by the distribution of garden seeds under their franks. It is rather a petty abuse—wasting only about half a million dollars annually, we believe—and for that reason the more contemptible in the Congressmen who vote for it and practice it. We say "wasted" deliberately, for we do not believe that one package in twenty of those sent out is ever planted. In Brooklyn recently there was a bonfire of those seeds contributed by residents of that city who had received them by mail and did not know what else to do with them. We expect such waste at the hands of Representatives from the wicked city of Greater New York, but one should hope for better things from California Congressmen; and yet we venture to say that if all the Congressional garden seeds sent to this city through the mails to dwellers in flats could be collected they would in the aggregate keep several poor families warm for a long time. Nor do those sent to actual farmers in the country do much more good. They are not what are wanted or they do not come at the right time. Formerly a great part of the seeds would not grow and, although they are now rigidly inspected, their former reputation sticks by them and farmers will not plant them.

Morally, there is no difference between actual embezzlement of money for advertising purposes and brazenly "appropriating" by those who have power to steal under the forms of law. And the plunder is deliberate. For years successive Secretaries of Agriculture have denounced it. The late Secretary Morton one year refused to defile the departmental hands with the stolen property, and covered the entire appropriation back into the Treasury, for which patriotic defiance of law he was threatened with impeachment. Secretary Wilson despises the guilty Congressmen as heartily as his predecessors, but, as he is always after big appropriations for useful objects, he is careful not to enrage Congressmen by exposing them. At the last session of Congress the House Committee on Agriculture—by a majority only—struck the free-seed iniquity out of the bill, but the rascally majority of the House rallied and put it back in committee of the whole, where aye and no votes are taken. Since that, denunciation of the practice has been continuous from organized farmers throughout the country, and we are inclined to think that that particular steal will stop. At any rate, all that is necessary to end it is an aye and no vote on the paragraph in the House.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

A CURIOUS CUSTOM IN PHILADELPHIA.

The present-day parade of "Shooters," numbered now only by its thousands, is a result of slow growth. While the aforetime villages of Darby and Kensington and their ilk were separate and distinct from the greater center about which they clustered, the New Year's Day fetes were largely, if not wholly, confined each to its own bailiwick. Then the merrymakers banded themselves into local clubs, and the good American spirit of competition led their parades to stretch out little by little into the territories of their neighbors. At last, and so recently as to be remembered by most of those who now line Broad street to watch courtier and cupid, tinker and Turk, dance past like so many crazy human butterflies, these lesser processions became merged into a greater one. The one-time prizes offered by local business men's associations have been generously supplemented, if not supplanted, by cash awards totaling as high as $10,000, offered by the city councils. And these same councilmanic worthies stand for hours shivering on a reviewing stand that they may fitly decide which individuals and which clubs are to divide the financial spoils.

How they do spend the money, these New Year Shooters! Their giddy get-ups may be ever so laughable, but they represent usually hundreds and often thousands of dollars, when one reckons them up club by club. These men are earners of wages, not salaries; their homes are in the poorer parts of the city, even the slums, so nearly as Philadelphia may properly be said to hold such within her homey limits. For three hundred and sixty-four days they are used to close economy, if not actual poverty, and lo! on the three hundred and sixty-fifth they flaunt forth in a prodigal pomp which would put to shame Solomon in all his glory.—[Warwick James Price, in The World Today, for December.

Ventilation of Rooms.

F. A. BINNEY of San Diego contributes the following good suggestion on the much neglected subject of ventilating houses. Our architects have done much to make houses beautiful and convenient, but from a hygienic point of view, there is still much to be accomplished:

"No subject is more pertinent to the subject 'Care of the Body' than the ventilation of our rooms. I think it is a great reflection on the intelligence of both architects and builders that a little attention is paid to it. In fact, not one room in ten has any ventilation at all except through an open window. Now, windows are made to admit light, not air. An open window usually causes a draught, and that is the horror of most Americans. Very often when I open the window at the free library reading-room some man or woman promptly gets up and closes it. I pass hundreds of cottages daily and see people within, every window closed, breathing each other's breath; and this in the finest climate on earth, where health and happiness almost require and justify us to live out of doors all the time.

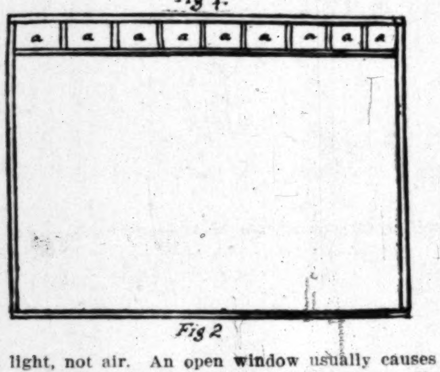

Fig 2

"I beg to inclose sketches of a simple and effective method of ventilation which, if adopted, would render the air of every room as fresh as if we were living in the open. Every window can remain closed and there will be no draughts. Along each outer wall I would have openings three inches deep between the studding the whole length of the room, to be closed in with wire screen against flies. Inside will be a slanting board as shown in Fig. 1. This will prevent the rain beating in, and at the same time divert the stream of air upward and prevent a down draught. I shall be glad to hear of these suggestions being adopted and to hear that they are found to answer the purpose. I intend to adopt them myself in the next house I build."

Lives Growing Shorter.

IN the Reader Magazine for November Dr. John B. Shoemaker, president of the faculty of the Medico Chirurgical College of Philadelphia had an article entitled "Why Our Lives Are Growing Shorter." He shows that contrary to the general impression, we are not living so long as our grandfathers and grandmothers did. More babies grow up nowadays than formerly, but people in later life die faster than they did. Not only this, but the decrease in longevity is progressive. He gives the following census statistics, from 1890 to 1900, and brought down to date, for all ages, from 60 up. It shows the rise in the death rate during that period:

"For people of ages from 60 to 64, 7 per cent.
"For people of ages from 65 to 69, 6½ per cent.
"For people of ages from 70 to 74, 16½ per cent.
"For people of ages from 75 to 79, 7 per cent.
"For people of ages from 80 to 84, 15 per cent.
"For people of ages from 85 to 89, 12 per cent.
"For people of ages from 90 to 94, 30½ per cent.
"For people of ages from 95 and up, 20½ per cent."

These figures are certainly significant. As the author says, they show that, notwithstanding improved medical knowledge, and the benefits of modern sanitation, people are dying earlier than our grandparents did. Sudden deaths are much more common than they were.

As to the cause—or causes—the author mentions the high pressure of modern life, with its keen competition and intense strain, as the chief cause. The conditions of luxury under which most of us live have a tendency to weaken our constitutions and impair our vitality. Our houses are overheated, and even the vehicles in which we ride are often warmed almost to suffocation. Thus we have become like hot-house plants, and easily catch cold.

Worry the author also refers to as being not only distressing, but positively dangerous. He might have added that for every one who dies from hard work, a thousand are killed by worry.

The census figures for 1900 show that people in rural districts live longer than in the cities. Dr. Shoemaker concludes his article as follows:

"We have more amusements, travel faster, are more daintily fed, wear finer clothes, and are surrounded by more comfort and luxury than any generation that has preceded us; but we pay for all these things literally with our lives, which, as if by the working out of some inexorable law of compensation, have been considerably shortened already, and seemingly show a tendency to become progressively shorter and shorter still."

Ptomaine Poisoning.

THE recent sudden death of an esteemed and highly valued member of the editorial staff of The Times is attributed, it is said, to ptomaine poisoning following the eating of fish, at a restaurant. One frequently sees reports of deaths from this cause. For every one so reported, there are hundreds that are never heard of by the general public.

Those who eat dead things take many chances that non-flesh eaters avoid. Not the least chance is the risk of being poisoned by decomposed or decomposing animal food. Those who eat canned meat, or preserved meat in the shape of sausage, after the disclosures that have been made of late, deserve little sympathy. Ptomaine poisoning may, however, arise from the eating of animal food that is not canned, or preserved. Poisons are commonly attended by germs growing in the colon. These germs feed especially upon the fragments of meat, fish, chicken and dead bodies of various kinds. This is the common but unrecognized cause of a vast number of ailments that afflict flesh eaters.

Fish is especially subject to rapid putrefaction, owing, doubtless, to the large percentage of phosphorus which it contains. In some parts of Europe nobody would think of purchasing fish, except alive, the fish being brought to the houses in small tanks of water. It is a risky thing to eat fish, unless you are sure that it is fresh. When you do eat fish, you should choose the deep sea fish, as the cleanest. Fish that feed in shallow waters, especially shell fish, are scavengers, and therefore particularly dangerous as an article of food. A man must have a strong stomach—or a short memory—if, after he has seen several ripe corpses pulled out of a harbor, he can enjoy a dish of shrimps, or crabs.

A physician was recently quoted in these columns, on the subject of poisons in food, in which quotation he devoted most of his attention to fruits. On the contrary, fruits are the most wholesome of all foods—fruits and greens, such as salads. If people would eat freely of fresh sub-acid fruits and salads, there would be little danger of ptomaine poisoning. The wealthy class in France, who eat much meat, always have a salad with it. Indeed, everywhere in France, even among the humblest, you will invariably find two items of food at a meal—soup and salad. The acids of fruit and the organic salts in the salad tend to neutralize the evil effects that may arise from the eating of animal foods, in the formation of toxins.

It is quite true that toxins may be formed from the most wholesome kind of food—grains, or pulse, or even fruit—if the fruit does not digest in the stomach, or lies too long in the bowels, and consequently ferments. Such toxins are, however, while inconvenient and troublesome, vastly less dangerous than the virulent toxins that are formed by taking nitrogenous flesh food which often cause sudden death, in the shape of ptomaine poisoning.

In case of an attack of ptomaine poisoning, the best ready means of relief are first to cause vomiting—which may usually be done by drinking freely of warm water and putting a finger in the throat. Then take a full injection of warm water into the bowels, and drink freely of olive oil. If there is pain in the abdomen or bowels, apply hot cloths, frequently changed.

In the Magazines.

A LARGE part of the space in the department is devoted this week to commenting upon articles on hygiene appearing in the monthly magazines for November. It is interesting and encouraging to note how increasingly popular the discussion of health and disease has become, in what our medical friends would call "lay publications." It is true that one often encounters erroneous and misleading statements in these articles. Still, it is an excellent thing to arouse public attention on the subject, and we are justified in believing that out of the multitude of counsellors much good may come.

and director of physical training in the public schools of New York City. In this article, Dr. Gulick deals with the bore of exercise, as a duty, or as a fad, the interesting games and large body movements that make for good condition, the laws of eating that modern life imposes, and the supreme value of a cheerful dinner table. The editor has previously had occasion in this department to commend the excellent hygienic advice given by this physician, and to congratulate the public schools of New York in having so sensible a man at the head of their physical training work. The article under discussion is especially praiseworthy.

The writer opens with the following truthful remark, which teachers of what our friend Warman calls "physical straining" might with advantage heed:

"Not one man in a thousand has time to keep himself in the best possible physical condition. To do so would consume the largest part of his waking day. People who write books on hygiene have a way of overlooking this."

Among other good points by Dr. Gulick are the following: Enough exercise to keep the muscles of the body n and sensitive is what we should aim at. The kind of exercise that hits the mark is the kind a man likes r its own sake. This is in accordance with what the tor has frequently said, namely, that exercise without object, either in the shape of work or play, is of very le use. A city man with a conscience is in danger of ing too hard work with his exercise when he takes it all. In regard to tennis, Dr. Gulick says:

"Tennis is a game that nervous, excitable, overworked le like to play. They ought to avoid it. It works too hard, and too fast. Instead of resting them, it s them out."

The author declares there is no better outdoor exercise a city man than a game of golf. Rowing, paddling, ing and tramping he also indorses.

Under the heading of "Digestion" Dr. Gulick properly attention to the great importance of thorough mastion. The use of "digestives," in the shape of tab- or otherwise, is strongly condemned. The natural ly for faulty digestion, as the writer says, is often y to chew the food slower. The drinking of water, y to wash down solid food, is a thoroughly bad referred to, the writer notes the vast dif- of sleep required outdoors, as compared doors. She says that seven hours is now quite enough for her, whereas formerly she always supposed she needed nine hours. It is an undoubted fact that most of the late sleeping in the morning, indulged in by some people, is more of a stupor, due to overeating or foul air, than a wholesome sleep, and consequently is little recuperative or strengthening, as sleep should be.

Railroad Wrecks.

THE president of a large railroad company, together with six other persons, recently met with a terrible death in a train wreck, in the Southern States. Possibly, this may lead the railroads to "sit up and take notice," in regard to the constant massacre on the rails. Many years ago, in England, where a railroad accident is more than a nine days' wonder, Punch suggested that the only way to prevent railroad accidents would be to tie a director on the front of each engine.

The most aggravating feature of it is that a large proportion of these wrecks are easily preventible. S. A. Pope, assistant general manager of the Great Western Railway, of England, after a three months' tour of railroad inspection in the United States and Canada, recently said:

"Americans are a long-suffering people. Since I have been here, ten persons have been killed in one wreck and fifty in another. It made a stir in the papers for one or two days, and then it seemed to be forgotten. Under the English system, two trains are never allowed to be in the same section at the same time."

It won't do for the railroad companies to plead that the people will have rapid transit, at whatever cost. The same argument would apply to the indiscriminate sale of poisons by druggists.

Don't Worry.

THE editor has frequently emphasized the necessity of avoiding worry, which is, undoubtedly, one of the most fertile causes of disease. If analyzed, it will be found that another name for worry is fear. For every one that is made sick or killed by hard work, a thousand are killed by worry. An article from the Chicago Chronicle was recently printed in The Times, in which the effects of worry on the physical functions of the body were set forth. The writer said:

"One of the chief reasons why a mule can stand more work than a man is that the mule lives in the present. He never laments the past nor dreads the future. Even when he has to stand in the broiling sun six hours at a time it never occurs to him that he has been standing there a long time, and he never speculates on the probable time of relief. When comfortable in his stable he never ruminates on the hardships of the day past and never looks forward with sadness to the toils of the day coming. This is one thing in the brute creation which human beings should imitate. Substitute sparrows for mules and the principle has divine sanction. Worry is the price that human beings pay for human intelligence, and it ought to be overcome by reason. There is really no sense or reason in worry."

In Smith's Magazine for December Dr. C. A. Saleeby, a clever writer on health topics, has the second of a series of articles on "Worry, Its Consequences, Cure and Causation." He shows that worry is able to weaken the bodily defences, and consequently to make a person a more easy prey to disease. Worry about sleeping, as distinguished from worrying about one's affairs, is in itself sufficient only too often to cause a sleepless night. The case is the same with many other nervous functions as, for instance, digestion.

Dr. Saleeby takes up the question of the fear of death, which he shows has little foundation, normal death being a painless occurrence, usually preceded by gradual loss of consciousness, entailing no more suffering than going to sleep.

Referring to faith cures, Dr. Saleeby acknowledges the undoubted fact that such cures are expected. He adds, however, "these are scientific facts, as certain and as important as the infectiousness of cholera, the germ causation of tuberculosis, or the triumphs of Listerian surgery." Here Dr. Saleeby's premises are wrong. Neither cholera, nor any other disease, is infectious, as generally understood, nor are germs the cause, but an effect of tuberculosis. If deadly diseases were infectious, as the doctors teach, and if the inhaling of consumption germs could cause tuberculosis—except where the soil is prepared for them—then we should all have been very, very dead, very long ago. It is also true that antisepsis in surgery has been pushed to an absurd extent and that of late there has been a reaction.

Otherwise, Dr. Saleeby gives us some interesting suggestions in regard to this most important subject of worry, which is today, as never before, one of the greatest curses of the human race. Once more the editor would say: "Don't hurry; don't worry, keep your feet warm, and your bowels open."

Care of the Body.

practice them. The only way to do is to keep on aiming at the goal, and not to become discouraged by failures, nor to allow one's enthusiasm to diminish. It is in this direction that the danger of taking pledges to abstain from alcohol or nicotine, or anything else of that kind, lies. When a person has taken a solemn pledge, and breaks it—as is often the case—he thinks to himself: "Well, now I have gone and done it, so I might just as well hark back to the old mode of life again. And like the hog, he returns to his wallow. Don't make any pledges at all, to yourself, or to any one else. But make up your mind to follow out a sensible mode of living, as near as you can, and to get a little nearer to it all the time.

Don't try to do too much at once, but keep it up. Meantime, the editor will "keep on rubing it in."

* * *

Consumption and Climate.

A SAN DIEGO correspondent sends the following: "Can you advise, through the Care of the Body, what will be best to do for a mother of three children, without means to change climate (if climate is any good) who is troubled with consumption, and lives in Toledo, Ohio."

Let her live as much as possible in the open air, day and night, sleeping on a screen porch, or at least in a room with all the windows open, the body being well covered. She should not seek to go off to another climate, unless she can do so conveniently. The main thing is to get fresh, pure air, and plenty of it, with plain nourishing diet, avoiding stimulants, and eating little or no meat.

Legalized Poisoning.

A DISPATCH from Manila announces that, as a result of experiments with cholera virus, in a prison, ten prisoners out of twenty-four who were inoculated have died. The doctor was "exonerated." Such happenings as this are usually covered up. It wouldn't do to shock the public too much, with the direct results of the profitable practice of inoculation of poison into the blood. Could the public see the indirect results of this practice, doctors would have to call on the militia to enforce their operations.

A hundred years hence, people of that day will read of such unnatural and absurd operations as the injection of filthy animal poisons into the blood of healthy people with the same astonishment, mingled with incredulity, that now attends a perusal of the medical methods of the Middle Ages, many of which, by the way, are far less dangerous than this inoculation fad.

* * *

A Doctor on Drugs.

THE editor finds the following paragraph, under the heading "Therapeutic Hints," in the Southern California Practitioner, for November, edited by Dr. Walter Lindley:

"To sufferers from indigestion who wish to be cured, it is recommended to eat meat once a day only, chew up completely every mouthful of food, drink eight tumblers of water every day, and no intoxicants—and take as much walking exercise as possible in the open air. This advice has cured many men and women who have given it a fair trial. It is much more efficacious than too much dosing with medicines or pepsin."

Good advice, this. When medicos begin to warn people against the too frequent use of drugs, there is yet hope for the profession. Perhaps, before long, they will come out boldly, and abandon the drug superstition altogether.

Hygienic Board.

A YOUNG woman who is a medical student in a Los Angeles college asks if the editor can recommend a home with a pleasant family, where food is served in accordance with hygienic methods. (No, the the editor cannot furnish her address.) The correspondent was recommended to insert a small advertisement in the classified columns of The Times, which would doubtless bring results. It might also be suggested that any family willing to take a boarder of this kind might also do well to advertise the fact, as there are many nowadays seeking for an opportunity to board where they will not be obliged to eat pork, meat twice a day, lard, and other unwholesome things.

There are several hygienic restaurants in Los Angeles. Perhaps a hygienic boarding-house might do well, except for the fact that almost every food reformer is cranky on some particular article of diet, so that a woman, who tried to pleace a crowd of them, would be in danger of going insane.

* * *

Deep Breathing.

THE following funny inquiry comes from a Los Angeles correspondent, who lives in the General Delivery of the postoffice—or, at least, dates from there:

"I am about to leave the sunny Southern California for the cold eastern State of New York. It has been my habit to take here every morning and evening, deep breathing exercises. May I do the same in the State of New York, without incurring the danger of catching a cold by breathing in the frosty air?"

Sure! Strange as it may appear, people breathe in every country and climate of the globe, even in New Jersey! And the only proper way to breathe is to breathe deeply. That is to say, moderately deep, not overstraining yourself. Also, remember this. Natural, deep breathing must be the result of exercise that tends to bring forth such breathing. Otherwise, it is unnatural, and consequently not to be recommended. To breathe when you don't feel like it is as unnatural as to eat when you don't feel like eating, or to drink when you don't feel like drinking, or to bathe when you don't feel like bathing. Take exercise that will compel you to breathe deeply, and naturally.

Unrecognized Insanity.

IN the Arena for November Dr. Henrik Petersen had an article on "Unrecognized Insanity a Public and Individual Danger." Dr. Petersen emphasizes a fact the editor has frequently referred to, namely, that it is as foolish to refer to a person as being "sane" or "insane" as it would be to refer to a person is being "sick" or "well," for the reason that not one person in a thousand is absolutely well or absolutely sane. There is as great a dividing line between absolute, robust physical health and chronic invalidism as there is between perfect, level-headed sanity and jabbering idiocy. Almost every one is mentally unbalanced, on some point. At the least, a man will have leaning toward a certain subject that is out of proportion to the value of such subject.

The writer shows that insanity increases at a high rate all over the civilized world. He might have added that recent reports from this and other countries are indeed alarming.

Here is a true statement, that "a cerebral mediocrity, in full enjoyment of vigorous health, and well-balanced development, brings better material to the social building than the sickly savant, or a disgruntled person of attainments."

Dr. Petersen thinks that psychical infection is possible. There is, indeed, little doubt of this. We often see such infection in wild outbreaks of religious enthusiasm.

Dr. Petersen discusses the question of whether one who has been mentally diseased should marry. This is a difficult subject, considering, as above, that there are so few people who are absolutely sane. Certainly the editor would say that it is a crime for two people who are both flighty in the upper story to contract marriage. If one is inclined to undue cerebral activity, the other should be a healthy, phlegmatic person. Dr. Petersen acknowledges the shortcomings of the medical fraternity in regard to knowledge of this important subject. He says:

"We have efficient alienists and psychologists, but as a body medical men cannot lay claim to such knowledge of mental disease that by timely detection and practical measures their services become valable."

The writer suggests that every home, rich or poor, should be open to "benevolent but strict scrutiny," for the purpose of ascertaining who are mentally unsound. It is not at all probable that the American people would ever submit to such an inquisition.

In conclusion, the writer points out the evil effect of herding a lot of mentally unbalanced people together, in sanatoria or asylums, and recommends the cottage plan, which has been introduced of late in most sanatoria, and in a few insane asylums.

Dr. Petersen might have gone further and added that the proper treatment of the insane is a subject of which the medical fraternity is as yet woefully ignorant. It is true that unfortunates who have lost their reason, are no longer chained and flogged and treated as wild beasts, as they were a few centuries ago. Still, from disclosures that occasionally crop out in the press, it is evident that the scientific treatment and cure of insanity is still an almost unoccupied field.

Diet—Hygiene Cook Book.

A LONG BEACH correspondent sends the following inquiries:

"(1) Can you suggest where one could purchase a cook book, based on hygienic laws, as you understand them? Is the Battle Creek cook book better in that respect than most others? (2) How much food, in kind and quantity ought men who combine mental and physical labor eat? (3) Ought anaemics who are also of a neurasthenic temperament, to limit themselves to two meals a day when they feel they could relish five?"

Replies. (1) The editor knows of no cook book that fully comes up to his ideas of what a hygienic cook book should be. He has not seen the Battle Creek cook book referred to—written by Mrs. Kellogg—but it is doubtless as good as any. As frequently stated, the Battle Creek dietary, in common with almost all other vegetarian dietaries, is to some extent unbalanced, containing too large a proportion of starches and sweets, which easily tend to fermentation and gastric disturbances. A cook book that contains many excellent recipes, and may be strongly recommended is the "Mazdaznan Encyclopedia of Dietetics and Home Cook Book," by Dr. O. Z. Hanish, published by the Mazdaznan Publishing Co., Chicago. It contains recipes for dishes containing wines and liquors, but these may readily be omitted by those who do not approve of them. Many of the recipes given in magazines are ridiculous. Perhaps some of them may have been all right when they were first written but, by frequent copying and recopying they have become so muddled up as to be entirely out of proportion.

(2) About ten ounces of water-free food, of which about one and a half ounces should be proteid, the rest carbohydrates, including fat.

(3) Yes; when a person has a craving for five meals a day—unless he is recovering from a wasting disease—it is not a sign of healthy hunger, but of morbid appetite, due probably to an inflamed condition of the lining of the abdomen. In such cases, it would be well to try a short fast, lasting from three days to a week, and after that adopt the two-meal plan, eating the meals dry. An hour after rising in the morning, if there is some natural desire for food, one may consume a glass of warm milk, a glass of unfermented fruit juice, a cup of cereal coffee, a little fresh fruit, or something light, of that kind.

THE WETHERBY-KAYSER SHOE CO. was first established in Pasadena 22 years ago. The business was conducted after a certain definite policy—the idea being to develop the selling of the higher grades of shoes. The reputation of the house grew until it began to be the correct thing for Los Angeles people to go to Pasadena to buy their shoes.

In 1902 it was determined to close out the Pasadena store and obtain a location in Los Angeles. And in December of that year the company started business at its present location, 215-217 South Broadway. The new Shop gave employment to seven people, and so far as fixtures and general appearance was concerned, proved an innovation. The same business policy followed in Pasadena was continued in Los Angeles so successfully that the firm outgrew its facilities and within the last six months the Wetherby-Kayser Shop has been remodeled and enlarged.

The change doubles the capacity of the Shop, and admits of a system well-nigh perfect in attending to the needs of patrons. The Shop contains a Women's Department, fitted with every convenience that the most exacting patron could desire—a Men's Department with smoking room and den—and a department for fitting children's shoes, in which the Shop has always made a specialty.

Forty-one people are today employed by the Wetherby-Kayser Shoe Co., and besides the direct patronage from Los Angeles and vicinity, this firm has developed a large mail order business. Wetherby-Kayser shoes are sold, and worn, in all parts of the world. The difficult problem of serving customers satisfactorily at a distance has been overcome. Every sort of footwear from riding boots to evening slippers and specially made-to-order shoes, are sold through the mails.

The Wetherby-Kayser Shop is well worth visiting. It is one of the finest retail shoe houses in the country. Wetherby-Kayser shoes are in keeping with it—exclusive, of the finest quality, satisfactory in every way.
